Adventure, including a host of thrills, characterizes the first release announced by General Film. It is "The Mainspring," with Henry King as featured lead.

The narrative of "The Mainspring" grows in interest from the beginning. It relates to the fortunes of Ned Gillett, whose father, a banker, slays himself after speculating with trust funds. This tragedy interrupts the engagement of Ned to Frances Hardor, and he slips away to begin life over again in the West. There the story develops. Tramping about he is thrown in with a typical old miner whom he manages to befriend. The first thrill is when Ned whips a western bully with his bare fists. The next thrill comes when the defeated antagonist tries to kill both Ned and the miner by dragging their shack down the mountainside with horse and lariat. Ned escaping death, goes to Calvert City where the old man had an abandoned shaft, later called "The Mainspring." Ned files upon this in time to secure it before his old enemy can do so. His fiance's brother from the East is enticed into buying it by the sharpers, however, and in a dramatic scene Ned forces restitution of the money. He meets his sweetheart pouting at his abrupt departure from the East and she will not speak to him. However, the brother is grateful and backs Ned in the operation of the mine, which turns out a success. In a spectacular mine fire Ned saves his former sweetheart and her brother and the latter's fiancee, after which follows a pitched battle with striking miners led by the hero's nemesis, the outcome of which is a final victory in war and love for Ned.

The heroine is played by Ethel Peprell, one of the most appealing of the younger leads. Bert Ensminger is the "heavy" and other members of the cast are Charles Blaisdell, J. Cullen Landis and Arma Jacobsen.

Mutt and Jeff Enlist in Navy

Mutt and Jeff have entered the United States Navy. The effort of the government to obtain as many recruits as possible for service at this time has succeeded in mustering a large number of famous characters to the colors, but it is doubtful if any enjoy the popularity of these two, who are recognized as "The Mirth of the Nation."

They have entered the navy to do actual service. Of course, they will not man any of the guns; in fact they will probably be found tucked away in a can when the big guns are roaring. But, this is not due to their cowardice, for they are not there to fight. They are there to amuse the "jackies" when there isn't any big "muss." They're there through the special permission of Bud Fisher who conceived the idea of cheering up our boys in blue at the end of a hard day with the foolishness of this duo. To this end he is donating his Mutt and Jeff comedies.

George Walsh In "Yankee Way"

George Walsh's new production under the direction of Richard Stanton, work on which was begun a short time since, will screen its way to fame under the title of "The Yankee Way." The picture is a breezy, star-spangled comedy of thrills. Seena Owen will make her debut as a William Fox filmite in this feature.

Goldwyn Trade Showings Please

EXHIBITORS SEE FIRST PRODUCTIONS—"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS" FINISHED

SIMULTANEOUS trade showings were held last week in Philadelphia and Boston and the same scenes of enthusiasm that marked the initial presentation in Chicago were repeated.

Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, and Alfred Weiss, vice-president, were in charge of the Boston showing which was held in the morning at the Fenway Theater, which had been obtained by Harry F. Campbell, manager of Goldwyn's Boston offices. "Baby Mine" was the first picture that won the applause of the Boston audience. After a luncheon the exhibitors present from all over New England saw Maxine Elliott in "Fighting Odds," a powerful new play by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb.

The Philadelphia showing was held in the Palace Theater on Market street. The showing was under the auspices of Stanley V. Mastbaum, George T. Ames, manager of Goldwyn's Philadelphia offices, and F. B. Warren, one of the Goldwyn vice-presidents from New York.

"Baby Mine" was one picture seen by the Philadelphia exhibitors, who pronounced it the most striking farce comedy they had ever seen on the screen.

Among the important contracts announced by Goldwyn this week is the Boston Theater, owned by the Keith interests in Boston. This gives Goldwyn its first run on Washington street in the very heart of the downtown district. Manager R. G. Larsen is making pretentious plans for the introduction of the productions to his house.

"Polly of Circus" Finished

Samuel Baxter's Isis Theater, Denver, has signed for the Goldwyn productions which gives them an advantageous setting in Colorado's chief city. Mr. Baxter is noted for his showmanship and informs Goldwyn that he will present its productions under conditions never before attained in Denver.

The high-water mark in elaborate and spectacular production within the metropolitan district has been reached in the staging of "Polly of the Circus." It took ten weeks of photography, by day and night, in addition to months of preparatory effort to complete this production. In it are nine separate photo-spectacle scenes which will make this classic of the big tops stand out among its contemporary field for magnitude alone. There were, in total, 1,164 scenes made with an average of five takes to each scene. From the 89,000 feet of film that have been sent to the laboratories from six to eight thousand feet will be finally elected to tell the gripping and pathetic story.

In the arrangement of lighting and artistic embellishment George W. Hill, head cameraman, and his staff have turned out new effects prominent among which is an episode in the story that is told entirely in photographic-silhouette. Part of the plot action calls for a fire in which the circus is burned, and to accomplish the desired effect a section of the "big top" was in reality fired and the ensuing stampede of animals and spectators photographed. In this scene entire sections of occupied bleacher seats are seen to fall.

Mae Marsh accomplished prodigies of work during the filming of "Polly." For days at a stretch she worked 14 and 15 hours a day and to the amazement of her directors she stood the strain better than they. Director Horan and one of his assistants were blinded by the high-powered Kleigls and others of the principals came near "cracking" under the sustained strain, but two days ago Miss Marsh was already preparing for her next Goldwyn Picture.

Widely Known Players in Circus Play

While at times as many as two thousand people were photographed in scenes of "Polly of the Circus," including members of the American Press Humorists of whom 1,000 feet of film were made while they were acting as spectators in the circus scene, the bulk of the acting was done by less than a half dozen well known artists.

Vernon Steele, the young English actor, well known to screen fans, plays John Douglas, the minister, and Wellington Playter portrays Big Jim, the Boss Canvassman, two of the more important parts in support of Miss Marsh.

Lucile Satterthwaite, the Carolina beauty, plays Julia, the daughter of Deacon Strong, while Isabel Vernon, an artist who has won an enviable niche in eccentric comedy, portrays Sallie. Viola Compton, also widely known to screen audiences, is Jane, the widow, while Helen Salinger plays Mrs. Elverson. Charles Eldridge, the clever pantomimist, plays Toby, the Clown.

Mabel Normand to Do American Comedy Plays

A deluge of congratulatory letters and telegrams has followed the announcement that Mabel Normand, comedienne, will begin production under the direction of Goldwyn Pictures.

In answer to the question of the kind of literary materials that are to be furnished for Miss Normand, Samuel Goldfish says:

"The Goldwyn Advisory Board has now under consideration a half dozen light comedies by well known authors that are suited to Miss Normand's faculty for comic and artistic expression. It is the opinion of our board that Miss Normand can do comedy plays that convey an interesting story in contra-distinction to the comedies that are built upon an unusual situation alone. She is a typical American girl and as such she has built up not only a huge American but an international following as well. We want to star her in typical American comedies. And these comedies must tell a story."

FILM LETTER FOR SOLDIERS

Bluebird Photoplays Originates and Completes Big "Letter of Cheer" for American "Sammies" in France—Presented to Pershing

The American "Sammies" in France, who will be the first to go into the trenches for the United States, will receive a pleasurable thrill of cheer and hope when they receive the remarkable "Letter of Cheer" which has been compiled for them by Bluebird Photoplays.

Exhibitors throughout the country are displaying the letter in their lobbies and it is being signed by patrons and men in prominent public positions. Among the signers are also Ex-President Taft, Governor Whitman of New York, and the governors of practically all of the other states, also most of the United States senators.

A "War Luncheon" was given by Bluebird Photoplays, in New York, at the Hotel Astor, August 2, to aid in the promotion of the work. Sixty film men were present and many telegrams of congratulation on the project were read. Joe Brandt, who originated the letter album, was in charge. The guests of honor were Major Ewing E. Booth, chief of staff of the Department of the East, and Capt. Creswell Darlington, assistant chief of staff. The remainder of the guests represented all branches of the industry and the newspapers of the city.

Mayer Silverman, president of the Liberty Film Renting Company, which has its offices at 938 Pennsylvania avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has taken over the franchise for Mutt and Jeff comedies for Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Sheldon Heads Empire All Star

James M. Sheldon was elected president of the Empire All Star Corporation, at a meeting of the board of directors of that company, held July 27.

Mr. Sheldon was formerly president of the Syndicate Film Corporation, which brought out "The Million Dollar Mystery," the serial that established a record for continued photoplay productions.

James M. Sheldon, president Empire All Star Corporation.

Recently Mr. Sheldon, as president of the Randolph Film Corporation, succeeded in securing Billie Burke for a serial made by George Kleine. Mr. Sheldon, in the trade, is frequently referred to as "the man who put the serial on the map," owing to his unusual talent for exploiting the kind of entertainment that has grown to be so popular. At a time when serials were scoffed at by certain exhibitors, Mr. Sheldon's faith in their box-office possibilities was so steadfast that he launched "The Million Dollar Mystery."

For twelve years prior to entering the film industry, Mr. Sheldon was engaged in the practice of law in Chicago.

In discussing the forthcoming activities of the Empire All Star Corporation, Mr. Sheldon said:

As has been announced in the trade journals, the Empire All Star Corporation was organized especially to produce the Charles Frohman Successes in pictures. In undertaking the filing of these subjects, we have some of the really big stars—such box-office magnets as Julia Sanderson, Ann Murdock, Olive Tell, and William Gillette. We have at our command all the unlimited resources of the Charles Frohman organization, including a wealth of scenery, costumes, properties and rights to the famous Charles Frohman successes.

Already completed are such subjects as Ann Murdock in "Outcast," "The Impostor," and "The Beautiful Adventure," and Julia Sanderson in "The Runaway," all directed by Dell Henderson. Director Albert Capellani has also completed "The Richest Girl," starring Ann Murdock.

The above list of Charles Frohman Successes in pictures should clearly indicate to exhibitors the high class of offerings that will shortly be ready for release through the Mutual Film Exchanges. From time to time we shall have other announcements of importance to make. Surely no exhibitor can afford to arrange his Fall bookings until he has at least witnessed the screening of the first offerings of the Empire All Star Corporation. The pictures can be seen shortly at any of the Mutual Exchanges; and the manager of each exchange will gladly give all exhibitors, who so desire, a chance to see the films before booking them.

Circuit Books Pathe Film

The Pathe Gold Rooster play, "The On-the-Square-Girl," featuring Mollie King, has been booked for ten of the Marcus Loew houses in New York—the National, Greeley, 7th Avenue, Lincoln, 42nd Street, West End, Royal, 116th Street, the Broadway in Brooklyn and the 86th Street.

Program Features vs the "Special"

BY Y. F. FREEMAN, TRIANGLE

I HAVE been making an investigation among exchanges and exhibitors as to the relative box office merits of regular program features and the open booking "specials," and have gathered some interesting views from the exhibitor's angle. The following expression, coming from E. J. Sparks, general manager of several large theaters in the south, may be offered as a valuable pointer to other exhibitors:

"I have learned from experience," states Mr. Sparks, "that a production may draw patronage without drawing profits. This may seem a contradiction at first thought, but as a matter of fact, it is a point that many exhibitors overlook today.

"For instance, I have shown special features for extended engagements at my theater and found that they drew excellently. But when I paid the rental charge and the extra advertising bills, I found that I had not realized the profits that I did on regular program features, nor were my patrons any more pleased. Sometimes they registered violent 'kicks' because I had raised prices without giving them a proportionate improvement in entertainment. That was not my fault. I had been beguiled by the stories of 'extended runs' on Broadway, the 'drawing power' of a big star, or the 'wonderful director' who had produced the affair. After showing some of these de luxe specials I finally decided that I was becoming a goat for the gentlemen who were throwing the sand of 'big names' in my eyes, so I tried an experiment.

"When a competitor started advertising a big 'special' attraction for which he was paying four or five times as much per day as for a program picture, I selected one of the best regular features from my program, arranged with the exchange to book on the same days as my competitor exhibited his special, and prepared to herald it, just as lustily as though I were paying more money for it. I found that my percentage of pleased patronage was oftentimes higher than his, and my profits were in far greater proportion. The reason for it was simply that the competitor's picture did not warrant excess advertising or excess rentals any more than the program feature that I booked. In many instances the star of the production which I played was more genuinely popular than the one for which he had paid extra money. Usually his plays were a reel or two longer, but I found that the public came to be entertained, not to waste time.

"The outcome of my experiment was this: A good program feature advertised as well and as extensively as the special will bring as much patronage and a great deal more profits. From then on I made it a point to watch the trade paper reviews and the advance notices from the program producers in order to ascertain which plays would warrant extra advertising. When I found one that seemed to have the earmarks of box office success I proceeded to herald it in advance, give it more space in the papers and feature it with as much care as I would a higher priced feature. Thus I gave my patrons a 'special' and obtained the profits for myself.

"I do not depreciate the value of stars. I believe in stars of genuine ability. I like to exhibit their pictures, but not if I have to give them all the money I make, for I am not running theaters as civic institutions of charity. Furthermore, stars are like mushrooms. They spring up over night. Some come from the stage, only to fizzle on the screen. Others are press made. Still others actually earn reputations by excellent work and pleasing screen personalities."

This shrewd experiment made by Mr. Sparks seems to me to be worth a trial by other exhibitors. Every exhibitor knows that the market is being wildcatted by certain speculators who by advertising and forced runs on Broadway, have managed to give certain inferior productions the guise of super-releases. I know of one case at the present moment where a speculator purchased a program feature that was rejected by the company's board of critics because of its inferiority. This promoter bought some twenty-four sheets, took several pages of advertising in the trade papers and proceeded to sell a special to the exhibitor for extended runs at advanced prices. This is a more palpable hoax than the general run. There are others who engage a star whose name is supposed to mesmerize the public. They surround this divine personage with a mediocre caste, a tawdry production, and then prepare to go after the coin.

The very word "star" is becoming a joke, for it is being applied promiscuously to little girls of no ability, to stage veterans who have no place on the screen, and to others who are merely personal favorites of producers, who have invested their money in the companies. If good stories were as common as stars, pictures would be in a more advanced stage.

On the left is a Dutch set used in Triangle's new feature, "Wooden Shoes," in which Bessie Barriscale is starred. The captivating Alma Reuben, one of Triangle's bright gleamers, is in the center, and the other picture is Miss Reuben and William Desmond in "Master of His Home."

IRWIN TO VISIT EXCHANGES

General Manager of V. L. S. E. to Pay Visit to Every Distributing Branch in Organization—Doesn't Want to Oversell Exhibitor

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of V. L. S. E., and a director of the Greater Vitagraph Company, on August 3 started on a trip, the itinerary of which will include every branch exchange of V. L. S. E. throughout the country.

This is the first time in the history of the film industry that the highest authority of a distributing company has planned such a trip in order to become acquainted with the personnel of the entire organization he directs and to discuss intimate business with exhibitors.

Mr. Irwin will visit Minneapolis, Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh immediately. The itinerary for the balance of the trip has not been arranged as yet.

Many of the prominent exhibitors in each of the cities to be visited already have made plans to entertain Mr. Irwin. Just what the form of this entertainment will be has not been mentioned, but the chances are that most of them will be regular get together meetings at which the problems of exhibitor, producer and distributor will be discussed thoroughly.

Any producing or distributing plan that contemplates a charge to exhibitors in excess of the amount the box office can stand, according to Mr. Irwin, is inequitable and therefore unbusinesslike.

It is his contention that an exhibitor should figure the seating capacity of his house at an admission figure he knows by past experience he will be able to obtain and comfortably fill his house. Mr. Irwin also contends that any exhibitor who has made a thorough study of his field and knows conditions surrounding his house makes a vital business error when he allows a distributing company representative to talk him into paying a film rental price that he cannot hope to cover, with his overhead, by the money received from admissions.

Mr. Irwin feels that any distributor or producer who sends out a representative with instructions to oversell an exhibitor is doing a gross injustice to the entire industry. By overselling Mr. Irwin means persuading the exhibitor to pay a greater rental price than the exhibitor can justly afford to pay.

That there is a prevalence of this very method of doing business in the industry at the present time cannot be disputed, but the distributors advocating such a policy are not building for permanency but rather to make a fortune in a few months at the expense of the exhibitors and then retire from the business.

Mary Pickford Packs Theater

When Mary Pickford consented to appear in person on the opening night of "The Little American," at Clune's Auditorium, in Los Angeles, she had little idea of the commotion she was going to create in the business center of that flourishing California city.

It was announced in the newspapers that "America's Sweetheart" would greet the audience on that opening night. Certainly everyone in Los Angeles must read the newspapers, for at six o'clock an assault in force on the box office began. By seven it was a siege, and within half an hour after that time the vicinity of the theater resembled a mob scene in a super-production. All the seats in the theater had been filled, the lobby was stuffed with people, and for a block east and a block west of the building traffic was well-nigh impeded.

When the little Artcraft star stepped out upon the stage, there was an ovation such as a victorious general might expect to receive from a frenzied populace. For ten minutes the house shook with a storm of applause. At last "Our Mary" was able to make herself heard, and she made a very brief address that brought forth another tumult. In it she told the audience that no greater joy could come to her than to know that "The Little American" was stirring the hearts of the nation's picture patrons to a higher realization of their duty, and a stronger sense of patriotism.

ARTCRAFT WINS HART SUIT

Judge Holds Contract Specifying Ince Supervision Justified Hart in Leaving Former Employers When Ince Joined Artcraft

Judge Martin T. Manton, in United States District Court, New York, has refused to grant the application of the Triangle Film Corporation for a preliminary injunction restraining Artcraft Pictures Corporation from making or distributing pictures featuring William S. Hart.

The noted star's contract with Triangle provided that productions in which he appeared were to have the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince. Some weeks ago Ince severed his connection with Triangle and became affiliated with Artcraft. Shortly thereafter it was announced that Hart would produce his own pictures under the supervision of Ince. This meant, it was announced by Artcraft, that under the arrangements between that company and Ince, the Hart productions would be distributed by Artcraft.

Neither Ince nor Hart was made a party to the action brought by Triangle, although it was alleged that the clause in Hart's contract providing for Ince's supervision of pictures made by Hart was inserted by Ince in his own interest. Commenting on this fact, Judge Manton said:

> The parties to the contract have deliberately stated that Hart is relieved if he no longer has the advantages of Ince's supervision. The reasons therefor are stated at considerable length in the opposing affidavits, and in substance are that Hart owes his success largely to the management of Ince, his counsel, advice and experience in managing and directing his work as an actor. The bill admits that Ince no longer works for the plaintiff, therefore Hart can no longer have the supervision of Ince, and the supervisory clause of the contract protects Hart's withdrawing from the plaintiff's service.
> The complaint does not sufficiently state a cause of action for equitable relief. There are no specific acts for which the defendant can be held responsible in such an action.

New Pathe Serial

Pathe will release on September 2, "The Seven Pearls," a serial of thrills featuring Mollie King, Creighton Hale and Leon Bary.

Pathe is planning an advertising campaign that will bring "The Seven Pearls" and the stars of the cast to the attention of every serial fan in America. Over three score of the larger newspapers will carry large display ads and publicity stories, the novelization of the screen version together with feature stories of the principals and the interesting details of "The Seven Pearls."

Patrons Become Players

CHICAGO EXHIBITOR DIRECTS CINDERELLA PAGEANT

By Genevieve Harris

THE almost universal desire of photoplay devotees to see themselves in motion pictures has been used by various "fan" publications to promote contests, et cetera, but it remained for a Chicago exhibitor to take advantage of it to advertise his theater and at the same time please everybody concerned. Bruce Godshaw, manager of the Cosmopolitan Theater, one of the Ascher Brothers' houses, turned his children-patrons into photoplay actors and actresses, to the immense delight of the children and their relatives and friends and the benefit of his theater.

Fairy Story Chosen

Mr. Godshaw decided that his youthful patrons, of which he has a great many, should have a chance really to enter "the movies," and each fond parent should have an opportunity to see just how much like Mary Pickford or Charlie Chaplin the youngster would look on the screen of his favorite picture house, all without expense or danger. So he planned and executed this "Cinderella" pageant.

As we have said in a previous article, Mr. Godshaw makes a success of things because he gives his entire attention to the business at hand and plans each detail carefuly. This was true in the case of his latest undertaking. And he further carried out his "neighborhood idea" by making all his patrons participants in the contest, for they were the judges and critics as well as the players.

With the aid of a woman writer, interested in children's theatricals, Mr. Godshaw arranged and directed the production. A version of the "Cinderella" story was used and proved especially well adapted for the purpose, since a large number of children could be used, and the story was generally known. The fact that a real motion picture play was to be made under the management of the Cosmopolitan Theater was widely advertised, and that the cast was to be composed of children chosen from and by the audience at the theater at a certain performance. You need not be told that every child who had or could obtain the price of admission was in the theater that day, accompanied by his relatives and that every mother of a boy or girl had her youngster present when the doors opened.

Audience Chooses Players

The audience itself became the casting committee. "Cinderella" of course was properly chosen through her ability to wear the "Cinderella" slipper, which was provided by a neighborhood shoe store. Announcement had been made that Cinderella's slipper would be on display at this store throughout the week and the little girls were invited to try it on. At the theater, on the day of the decision, a number of small girls proved able to wear the slipper. From this number, one was selected, by means of the applause of the audience, for the title role. The one ranking next in popularity was appointed Fairy Godmother.

In a similar manner, with the approval of the audience, other leading feminine roles were filled. On another day the fairy prince was selected and other masculine players. So cleverly did Mr. Godshaw arrange the affair that the maximum of children were used in the production, in fairy dances, court scenes, etc., and a large proportion of these were "name roles," so that no one could feel left out. "Moon Fairy," "Prince Joyous," and a dozen similiar roles were created and named by the resourceful manager, the names and the players being duly recorded in his note book.

Production Cost Met by Advertisers

The actual filming of the picture took place about an old "castle," a beautiful location not far out in the country. Mr. Godshaw, when first describing the filming of the picture, before it had been completed, stated that the cost, while considerable, would be fully met by the increased number of admissions to the Cosmopolitan during the production. But later a number of merchants in the neighborhood, realizing the great advertising value of the feature, wished representation. Therefore additional scenes were taken which showed Cinderella and her prince, after their marriage, riding to their new home in an automobile purchased at Blank's garage, living in a house built by Jones and Company, furnished by local merchants, the various articles and stores handling them being mentioned. This advertising revenue was enough to meet the expense of making the entire picture and the increased patronage brought to the theater, the advertising and the many friends won for Mr. Godshaw and the Cosmopolitan were clear gain.

Interests the Entire Community

A "stunt" of this sort of course requires energy and resourcefulness on the part of its manager. Mr. Godshaw possesses unusual tact and diplomacy, especially in dealing with children and young people, and his stage training enabled him to handle the production details himself. But exhibitors in certain communities, even in small towns, could find school and dramatic club societies who would co-operate with him gladly. In fact, an energetic exhibitor might win the whole town to an interest in his theater through the filming of a "local talent" picture. It is an ambitious project, but according to Manager Godshaw, a very worth-while one.

Thirty-Part Paramount Serial

Paramount will issue a serial of thirty parts, fifteen episodes, in September.

This is the first serial that this organization, or any of the producing companies making Paramount Pictures, has ever issued since their inception four years ago, and the picture is said to be one of the most wonderful serials that has ever been produced, the cast containing the largest number of high-priced stars that have ever been brought together in a single series of pictures, playing in a production the story of which is thrilling in its every detail.

Paramount will issue their first serial to all exhibitors and special departments will be established in each of the Paramount exchanges for the handling of this new product.

Jack Wells is producing the eighth episode of "The Perils of the Secret Service" at Universal City.

BRENON CHAMPIONS SCREEN

Resents Slur at Silent Drama—Takes Issue with Arthur Hopkins

By Herbert Brenon

In Arthur Hopkins' delightful recital of a play producer's adventure in the cinema printed in the New York Times of July 20, the author, with characteristic modesty, does himself injustice. He appears to think himself a casual wanderer among the cameras, an excursionist with a round-trip ticket, a Cook's tourist in celluloid.

Mr. Hopkins is, it seems to me, a sort of specialized Messiah, and we can best serve him, and assist the artistic salvation of us all by eliminating a few false verses in his suave gospel.

In the first place, he must be congratulated on the speed with which he acclimated himself to a new artistic civilization, assimilated it, and, upon its ruins, built a new edifice more worthy of Mr. Hopkins and his fellow demi-gods. He had been told, he says, that once he set foot in the celluloid domain, he never again would turn back to the theater. That was in February. At the beginning of August he declares he found himself deep in play rehearsals, with the din and clamor, heat and hysteria of the glass inferno only a memory. Less than six months is swift time to take the old movie machine to pieces and build a new contraption of its nuts and bolts and springs.

It is perhaps fortunate that Mr. Hopkins has a round-trip ticket, for it enabled him to get back for his one, two or three theatrical productions for the year, intended mainly for Manhattan consumption, or possibly for exclusive appreciation in Chicago, Boston and San Francisco; whereas if he had remained in the humble gelatines, he would have been limited to eight or ten productions, at least half of which would have appeared before the inhabitants of every city from Tampa to Sitka.

Mr. Hopkins recounts that his first days were a nightmare—thus every extra man finds them—but at length he discovered that "the movies are not mere reproductions. They are appropriation. They feed upon life." Positively the only other people who have discovered that the movies "feed upon life" are the people who pay to see the movies. Thus, Mr. Hopkins came upon this obscure secret almost as quickly as the public.

"As a chance patron of the movies," he continues "I had almost invariably carried away one impression—bad taste.....there seemed to be a sustained drive against all who were even slightly fastidious. There seemed an absence of everything but money.....spectables were heralded on the basis of cost. But all the money in the world will not keep a baby's chin dry, and the movie baby's chin was invariably a slippery sight."

I would like to ask Mr. Hopkins what nickelodeons were honored by his "casual patronage." I will admit the heralding of spectacles on a basis of cost; that is a trick we were weak enough to borrow from the theater. I agree, too, that the movie baby had a slippery chin, but the infant has been lusty enough to crow from twenty thousand thresholds in America, and is as legitimate a baby as ever lived.

But I cannot agree at all with his next statement, for he says: "In seeking some place to take hold it seemed to me that the quickest and most decisive improvement could be made in the settings, for the very best pictures offered an amazing procession of goulash backgrounds on which were thrown everything that the property-man could lay his hands." In the name of Cecil DeMille, in the name of D. W. Griffith, gentlemen and artists, I protest. I insist that Mr. DeMille, the son of a man who is a great tradition of the American theater, is just as much of an artist as Mr. Hopkins or any who may sit in his private assemblage of genius. Mr. Griffith, a creator whom the brain-poor theater would be glad to claim, needs no advance notice from me. There are plenty of wretched things on the screen, just as there are vile and dull plays upon the stage, but could Mr. Hopkins exercise no power of selection? Choosing to patronize the drama of an evening, would he be drown irresistibly into cheap burlesque?

The trouble with the successes upon the stage is that the speculators quickly put them beyond the reach of the public. The better a play, the less chance has the average man to see it. Exactly the reverse is true concerning a motion picture.

Mr. Hopkins knows as well as I that Mr. Griffith invented the close-up and that for years his dramas were mostly played close to the camera—tremendous figures, great faces, with backgrounds wholly or nearly absorbed. My first lessons were taught me by Mr. Griffith, and there I learned to do just as he did—to practically eliminate my backgrounds for magnified human expression. But as there are no new things in the world we cannot of course blame Mr. Hopkins for making the same background discovery that Mr. Griffith made, and exploiting the idea, if not the same actual practice, as his own.

Being a student, as I have said, I was filled with the student's notion of finding something new, so I went to Europe and studied the motion pictures of France and Italy. Here I found an opposite condition: the Latin picture-makers were taking "long shots," and playing beautiful backgrounds. It seemed to me—and it still seems—that the ideal condition is a combination of the American and European schemes. In my pictures I endeavor to start every new sequence with a glimpse of a beautiful exterior or a well-appointed interior—then, if my story demands it, rushing to the close figures which blur out every suggestion of mere scenery.

"It seems to me," goes on Mr. Hopkins, "that acting for the pictures is equally infantile." And he pursues this shallow thought at length. As a matter of fact, the best acting today is being registered on the screen. I ask Mr. Hopkins a pair of questions: Are not even the finest performances of the stage mechanical repetitions, night after night? Is it possible for the camera to register an emotion which the actor does not feel? Mr. Hopkins knows very well that the emotional stress, the physical strain and actual loss in nervous force undergone in recording a photodramatic role could not be repeated day after day, in the theater. Fortunately, the camera is keyed to catch and preserve indelibly the supreme effort of a man or woman; once caught, this supreme effort is held changeless for an indefinite number of repetitions.

Finally, let me agree with Mr. Hopkins that there is no rivalry between screen and stage. Our close affinities are painting, sculpture and literature; our ally and friend, music.

New Chicago Film Company

Chicago has a new film concern. It has been organized under the title of The Educators' Film Company, which will produce and distribute nothing but educational subjects.

A large number of these will be aimed particularly at children and will be very carefully and scientifically produced, to attain a maximum of interest and value. A number of children's stories will be put into film form. For this purpose Miss Georgine Foulkner, of the Ladies Home Journal, a professional story teller, has been secured. She will also write all scenarios and O. K. all of the films produced. Cleanliness, educational value and accuracy will be the aims of the company in all of its productions.

H. Paul Juergens is president and treasurer of the company; W. C. Kirby, secretary; H. C. Hoagland, formerly of Pathe and Selig, vice-president and general manager, and Wm. A. Lenarz is in general charge of promotion.

The company is planning on beginning a production soon and it is to be hoped its pictures win the success and laudable aims their purposes deserve.

Invents Anti-U-Boat Device

United States government engineers are now hard at work testing an anti-U-boat device for merchant vessels recently patented by William Bach, technical director of the William Fox studios, and John D. Braddon, an assistant technical man.

The two inventors have received letters from H. A. Rousseau of the U. S. Shipping Board, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and from W. H. Hopkins of the Submarine Defense Association, 49 Wall street, saying that their engineers also have been assigned to examine and report on the device.

New Harold Lockwood Play

Harold Lockwood in his newest Metro-Yorke play, "Under Handicap."

the direction of F. J. Balshofer, is announced as the next Metro-Yorke release, ready for showing in August. This feature is Harold Lockwood's first Western photoplay under the Metro banner. Harold Lockwood plays the part of Greek Conniston, the scion of wealth who, after disinheritance, makes good by putting through a reclamation project in the West. Supporting Harold Lockwood are: Anna Little, playing the daughter of John Crawford, owner of the Half Moon Ranch and promoter of the irrigation enterprise, portrayed by W. H. Bainbridge; and Lester Cuneo as Brayley, the ranch foreman who fought Conniston in the early part of the story and later becomes his friend and ally.

Hilda Moore in Strong Play

On August 6, Greater Vitagraph released one of the strongest dramatic stories transmitted to the screen in the form of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." This is a screen version of the famous play of the same name in which Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the renowned actress, scored heavily.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" is a story of the eternal triangle, but in treatment it is a radical deviation from the stereotyped situations developed from this theme. It portrays with gripping intensity the efforts of a woman to live down a past of sin and infamy, and depicts how the unrelenting law of compensation invades even the sanctity of her home where she has at last found happiness, to extract its grim toll of retribution. How she ultimately does pay—with her life, makes for a drama of unflagging interest and tense dramatic action, culminating in a powerful climax.

In the stellar roles are Hilda Moore and Sir George Alexander, two of the most artistic players of the present generation. Miss Moore, in the title role, is afforded unlimited scope for the display of her rare histrionic ability. In the course of her interpretation she runs the gamut of human emotions; first as the frivolous, unconventional woman, then as the devoted wife of a reputable citizen, and finally as the grief-racked woman whose tortured soul drives her to self-destruction.

Sir George Alexander gives a sterling performance in the role of Tanqueray, whose love for the notorious woman leads him to defy convention by marrying her.

GENERAL ADDS FOUR-REELERS

"The Mainspring" by Louis Joseph Vance to be First Offering — Henry King Featured — More Productions Already Secured

General Film's new series of four-reel dramatic features are now definitely announced. The forthcoming productions are the Falcon Features, all big subjects chosen for strength of story under General Film's policy of prime attention to play value.

Every Falcon feature will have story of first importance. Already a great many productions that have stood the General Film management's searching review for completeness of story interest have been passed and selected. The first release will be available about August 17, with a new release to follow each week. From the date named onward, consequently, General Film exhibitors will be able to book their whole show from this company, making up a bill from the four reel features and its many two-reel features and one-reel comedies.

"The Mainspring" will be the first of the Falcon Features to be released. This is an impressive adventure story by that master of adventure plot, Louis Joseph Vance, and in fact is a picturization of a great magazine story of that name by this author.

Well known authors and well known stars will be featured in all the following Falcon Features, with value in story, however, as the fundamental attraction. Most of the stories would ordinarily be presented in five reel form, it is stated, but to insure dramatic value they have been restricted by General Film to the four-reel length. General Film is also seeing to it that paper and all sorts of advertising matter is prepared in the most artistic form, plentifully and promptly. Every logical merchandising aid will be given exhibitors in connection wth Falcon Features.

F. B. Chase has recently been engaged by Manager Wessling as city salesman at Pathe's Cincinnati office.

COMING MUTUALS

"Bab, the Fixer," Sixth of Jackie Saunders' Series Leads Mutual Release Schedule for August 13—Other Attractions Also

Jackie Saunders in "Bab, the Fixer," sixth of her series of star productions for Mutual, tops the Mutual release schedule for the week of August 13.

"Bab, the Fixer" was produced by E. D. Horkheimer, under the direction of Sherwood McDonald from the story by Lee Arthur in which Miss Saunders herself collaborated.

The production is a five-reel comedy drama, laid principally on a western ranch, but the first of the first act is laid on Wall Street and there are a few scenes in a Fifth Avenue finishing school.

Jackie Saunders herself is an advertising asset and the exhibitor who books "Bab, the Fixer" can get a large part of his crowd on her name alone. The fact that she plays a tomboy role is another point to emphasize in advertising. Exhibitors can get effective advertising by dressing their ticket sellers in typical western garb.

The Mutual schedule for the week of August 13 includes two comedies, "The Widow's Might," a one-reel La Salle and "Beach Nuts," a one-reel Cub starring George Ovey. "The Widow's Might" is based on a conspiracy to acquire the fortune of a stingy old woman, by fair means or foul, marriage being selected as the most effective. George Ovey disports himself amid a bevy of beautiful girls at the seashore in "Beach Nuts," gets into their dressing room, where all varieties of complications ensue and closes his laugh-making journey by smashing his flivver into a gasoline filling station.

Reel Life No. 68, the weekly screen magazine, which is released August 16, shows the work of the Y.M.C.A. in various sections of the world, pictures the various phases of militay training through which army recruits are placed and contains as the animated drawing from Life, "The Absent Minded Dentist."

Mutual Tours Around the World, No. 41, released August 14, takes the audience through Southern Corsica, down the Houyoux, a river in Belgium, and thence to picturesque Tripoli.

Mutual Weekly, the one-reel of current events released August 15, carries the latest news of importance up to within a few hourse of its release. The Weekly is made up of pictures which in many instances beat the newspaper illustrations of big events.

"Double Trouble" First Re-issue

"Double Trouble" has been selected as the first Douglas Fairbanks play to be re-issued by Triangle on September 1. It presents the star in the role of Florian Amidon, an effeminate Sabbath school teacher who goes wrong, becoming a crooked politician and a breaker of hearts.

The play is a screen version of the novel by Herbert Quick, published by Bobbs-Merrill Company. The production was directed by W. Christy Cabanne under the supervision of David Wark Griffith. In the cast appear such well-known stars as Margery Wilson, Gladys Brockwell, Olga Grey, supported by Richard Cummings, Monroe Salisbury, Tom Kennedy, Kate Toncray, Lillian Langdon and V. E. Lowery.

The play is said to differ from most of the Fairbanks vehicles in that is gives the star many opportunities for genuine acting rather than confining him entirely to the "stunts" for which he is now famous.

Margery Wilson, who has recently been elevated to stardom by Triangle, has the leading feminine role.

New prints of this feature are now being made at the Triangle laboratories, and the supply department is preparing new posters, lobby displays and slides. There has been a constant demand for these pictures, it is stated, and as they are to be offered with a complete set of new accessories at a low program price this demand will undoubtedly be increased.

FACE RACE PROBLEM

Big Influx of Negroes Into Chicago Brings Questions of Race Discrimination—Houses Being Bought by Blacks

Heretofore it has been only the theaters in the southern states that have been bothered to any extent with the problem of catering to both whites and blacks.

The situation has now become acute in some of the northern cities, due to extensive exodus of negroes from the south into large northern cities. Chicago is particularly affected by this movement, although this situation in that city is limited to the south side where the negroes congregate. It is said that 100,000 new blacks have entered the city during the past year.

Many theaters in the black district are now divided into white and black sections, while other houses have been sold outright to negroes for exclusive colored patronage. The Pickford, formerly a Hamburger house, and the Owl, are examples of the latter.

The distinct loss of patronage is felt by the theaters that run in the invaded white districts. It is estimated that the colored attendance in the south side Hamburger houses is 10 per cent. In the Michigan Theater, a Lubliner Trinz house, at Fifty-fifth street and Michigan avenue, near the black belt, is honored by over 20 per cent blacks. The Ascher houses on the south side are so located as to receive but a small percentage of colored attendance.

Among the houses who will shortly reserve separate sections for black and white patronage are the Alhambra, Avenue, Wabash, Franklin, Indiana, and Apollo.

It is expected that all of the companies and managers connected with the south side theaters affected by the spread of the colored population will co-operate, determining ways and means to meet the new situation which is growing more acute every week.

Triangle Growing in South

Charles D. Touchon is at present manager of the Southern Triangle Pictures Company of Dallas, Texas. He has been connected with the film business in Dallas for the past twelve years.

Among his associates in the office are J. L. Lyne, H. R. Binford, G. H. Tipton, Herbert C. Allen, Charles M. Tetrick and W. B. Britton.

Mr. Touchon has opened a branch at Amarillo in charge of L. M. Cobb.

Marcia Harris with Fox

Marcia Harris, who played in George Broadhurst's "Rich Man, Poor Man" last season on Broadway, has joined the William Fox forces for a picture now in work in the Eastern studios.

The Brilliancy of Projection

BY DR. H. GAGE

Discussion before the New York section of the Illuminating Engineering Society.

FOR motion picture projection one must take into consideration the fact that the arc light can not be considered as a point source, but as an extended source, and that in moving picture projection it is necessary to illuminate an object slightly less than one inch wide and three-quarters of an inch high, the illumination over the entire surface being even, in order to prevent streaks.

With all forms of projection, the direct current carbon arc is the best, but other light sources can be used, such, for example, as the tungsten, lime light, or acetylene.

Motion picture projection uses directed light, and the area and intrinsic brilliancy of the light source and the arc of the objective play an important part. The objectives are big enough so that it is possible to operate successfully with tungsten lamps of special type. Intrinsic brilliancy of arc and tungsten sources are given in Tables I, II and III.

TABLE I.—INTRINSIC BRILLIANCY OF SOURCES.

| | | Intrinsic Brilliancy Candle-power Per Square Centimeter. |
|---|---|---|
| Direct current arc. ..... | Solid carbons | 15,800 |
| | Cored carbons | 13,000 |
| Tungsten (Langmuir formula) | Absolute Temperatures. | |
| Highest temperature usable... | 3,250° | 3,750 |
| Temperature of 20-ampere, gas-filled lamps ..... | 2,850° | 1,225 |

This table shows that with the gas-filled lamps operating at highest efficiency practicable, the intrinsic brilliancy is less than one-tenth that of the direct current carbon arc.

The intensity of screen illumination is a matter to which I have seen no reference in any illuminating engineering papers. The results of some experiments made in Cornell several years ago are given below and may be taken for what they are worth, i. e., first approximations.

In a dark room with clear lantern slides 2.5 foot-candles would answer, while 5 foot-candles gave entirely satisfactory results. In a room lighted from the back with incandescent lamps enough to take notes, 0.7 foot-candle on the screen from the lights, and 6 foot-candles from the lantern gave good projection, that is, during a lecture to students, and there was plenty of light to spare. For moving picture films about 3 foot-candles are required.

TABLE II.—INTENSITY OF SCREEN ILLUMINATION.

| | | Foot-Candles. |
|---|---|---|
| (1) In a perfectly dark room an illumination of 1-foot-candle is satisfactory for transparent microscopic specimens stained red..... | | 1 |
| (2) Dark room—lantern slides—2.5 foot-candles will do with reasonably clear slides..... | | 2.5 |
| (3) Dark room—five foot-candles entirely satisfactory... | | 5 |
| (4) Room lighted from back with incandescent lamps enough to take notes..... | screen | 0.7 |
| | lantern | 6 |
| (5) Room lighted from window at sides..... | | 0.85 |
| Room lighted from entire incandescents..... | | 1.5 |
| Fair results secured from lantern..... | | 5.04 |

| | | Foot-Candles. |
| 1. | Tinted film..... | 2.7 |
| | | 3.9 |
| 2. | Yellow tinted film..... | 5.6 |
| | | 8.5 |
| | | 3.3 |
| | | 3.3 |
| 3. | Black and white dark film..... | 6.0 |
| 4. | Blue colored dark film..... | 26.2 |
| 5. | Black and white dark film..... | 25.5 |
| 6. | Hand colored film..... | 3.1 |
| 7. | Hand colored different part..... | 16.0 |
| | | 8.5 |
| 8. | Black and white dark film..... | 30.0 |
| | Maximum Illumination. | |
| 9. | Dark room and light film, too much screen illumination at ..... | 75.0 |

The values for the average screen illumination are taken with the film removed and the shutter revolving.

I should like to see similar studies made of the conditions necessary for good projection, but made with greater thoroughness, in order that the illuminating engineer could be of greater service in planning the lighting of theaters and lecture rooms, and the installation of projection apparatus.

Teach Medicine with Films

Medical science is the newest field for commercial motion pictures, according to William A. Lochren, president of the $1,000,000 Lochren Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, which is engaged in making motion pictures of surgical operations for a member of the faculty of the University of Minnesota medical college. This newest development of motion pictures was made by a professor of surgery who wanted to use motion pictures for demonstrating rare or exceptionally difficult operations to students in the medical clinics.

The first of the pictures shows a patient, a young woman, suffering from a derangement of the muscles of the eye that made it impossible for her to control the movement of the eyeball. The picture, properly titled, exhibits the symptoms, then shows the surgeon operating, and finally shows the patient recovered, with the muscular control completely restored.

These motion pictures are the first of a series to be used for demonstrations before students and lectures before meetings of medical men. The possibilities of utilizing motion pictures in medical science are just beginning to be realized, according to the Minnesota surgeon who is having the pictures made.

The Elm Theater, Camden, New Jersey, recently had an entire Pathe week. On Monday, "The Girl with the Green Eyes" and the Pathe News were presented; on Tuesday, "The Menace of the Mute"; on Wednesday, "The Precious Packet"; on Thursday, "An Affair of Three Nations" and the Pathe News; on Friday, "The Spender" and the fifteenth episode of "The Iron Claw"; on Saturday, Ruth Roland in "The Matrimonial Martyr."

Coming Art Dramas Have Variety

Advance notices on Art Dramas for the months of August and September promise much in the way of variety of releases. No two productions are of the same type, and exhibitors using the program regularly can be sure of showing their patrons something totally unique each week.

In "Eye of Envy," for instance, which is scheduled for release in the near future, patrons will see a dramatic allegory, something which has never before been done on the screen, although on the spoken stage the type has attained considerable popularity. Possessing all the pictorial and symbolic beauty of an allegory, with the intensity and realism of a drama, this Horsley-Art Drama marks a step in the development of the motion picture.

In this production audiences will have an opportunity to see Crane Wilbur, the world renowned star, in a role especially written for him, and in which his versatility is displayed to an unusual extent. Harrish Ingraham, who directed "Eye of Envy," is said to have made of it a masterpiece, both as to pictorial beauty and dramatic effect. It is taken from the story by J. Francis Dunbar.

Immediately following "Eye of Envy" will be the U. S. Amusement-Art Drama, "Think It Over," which is best described as an amazing drama.

A comedy-drama of unusual appeal follows this. "The Little Samaritan" is its title, and it proceeds from the Erbograph studios. Marian Swayne, who has won thousands of admirers for her work in "Little Miss Fortune" and "The Road Between," is starred.

"Behind the Mask," the Apollo picture in which Alma Hanlon makes her next Art Dramas appearance, is, as its title would indicate, a strong drama of a serious nature, affording a vivid contrast to its predecessors. In it Miss Hanlon has the role of a girl whose father's life has been ruined by an enemy, and who takes it upon herself to gain revenge. The novelty of the plot comes in the form which her revenge takes, and the consequences which follow upon her daring act.

As far as is known, the next Art Drama after this will be the Van Dyke "Peg O' The Sea," in which Jean Sothern is starred. She plays the role of a girl in a sea coast town, daughter of a fisherman. When her father is ill, she takes charge of his men and boats, which she handles with the skill of an old salt. It is from this aptitude that she is given the nickname which forms the title of the picture.

Eugene Nowland directed this, and a competent cast was selected for the supporting roles. Its originality of theme and setting makes it a photodrama of distinction, and the producers are confident that it will be a worthy addition to the imposing list of productions now completed for future release.

Herbert Blache Writes Play

"Think It Over," the U. S. Amusement Corporation Art Drama in which Catherine Calvert and Richard Tucker are starred, promises to be a photoplay of distinction and originiality in more ways than one.

Herbert Blache, president of the U. S. Amusement Corporation, wrote and directed the production himself. Around the two stars he gathered an exceptionally competent cast, with such prominent persons in it as A. Lloyd Luck, Auguste Burmester, and Eugene Borden.

In "Think It Over" the principal complications are brought about by the unconventionality of the heroine, played by Miss Calvert, who keeps her friends and associates in constant surprise as to her actions and thoughts. At the climax of the story she makes an amazing decision which has the effect of nearly prostrating with astonishment her guardians and relatives, but which at the same time wins her happiness.

Southern Theaters Book Serial

In addition to seven theaters in the City of Atlanta, the following well-known southern theaters and showmen have booked Pathe's new serial, "The Fatal Ring," starring Pearl White:

Queen Theater, Knoxville; Dowler Interests, Chattanooga; Odeon, Birmingham; The Strand Amusement Co., Montgomery; Max L. Wolff Interests, Savannah; Strand Interests, Miami; Tony Dukekum, Nashville; Tano's Rialto, West Palm Beach; Juan Carbonell, Key West; Beacham's Grand, Orlando; Don Williamson, Jackson, Tenn.; Louis Kalbfield, Palatka; E. G. Gidley's Strand, Athens; H. J. Hury, Birmingham.

Stars in "The Moth"

Notable casts have come to be accepted by the public generally as the rule, not the exception, in Norma Talmadge productions, yet in the entire list of that young star's successes there has been no more remarkable group of talent than that which supports her in her newest Selznick-Picture "The Moth," a production which will equal in every way the recent sensation, "Poppy."

Opposite Miss Talmadge in "The Moth" as in "Poppy" will appear Eugene O'Brien, who is already well-known for his excellent work in support of many stars of the first magnitude, among them Ethel Barrymore, Margaret Illington, Kyrle Bellew, Irene Fenwick, Frances Starr, Elsie Janis and Fritzi Scheff. The most artistic work of his career before the camera has been done with Miss Talmadge.

Minter in War Play

"Lovey Mary" (Mary Miles Minter) is engaged in a war play bearing the working title of "The Call to Arms." It deals with the ammunition smugglers and bootleggers of the border country and is the first to be written for the American Film Company, Inc., by Charles Turner Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky." It is the second to be directed by Lloyd Ingraham in Santa Barbara, the first being "Charity Castle," already completed. A Mexican village will be built on the studio lot; several hundred extras will be engaged in the fight scenes; regulation army machines guns will be fired.

New Gail Kane Play

Gail Kane, "The Unafraid," her fifth photodrama for the American, completed, has begun on "Southern Pride," written by Julian Louis Lamothe. Lewis J. Cody, her leading man in both; Jack Vosburgh, who returns to the American studios after a brief engagement elsewhere; Spottiswoode Aitken, who needs no introduction; George Periolat, of whom the same may be said; and Robert Klein, an old American player, comprise the important cast for the new play.

American Soldiers in New Helmets

The Hearst-Pathe News of Uncle Sam's soldiers in France shows the soldiers in steel shrapnel helmets of the new design. The films were taken somewhere on the River Aisne, where the Americans are already in camp behind the firing line.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

Trailer for "Parentage"

If further proof were required that Frank J. Seng has gone to a great deal of trouble and expense to provide exceptional advertising helps for his states rights picture, "Parentage," it is to be found in the advertising trailer that accompanies every booking and is intended to be used the week previous to the run of the feature.

This trailer, beautifully tinted in a rich orange, is 125 feet in length and contains the excellent "baby stuff" which has drawn such spontaneous applause at all of the showings.

It opens with a fade-in of the main title, which is artistically done in plastique letters. Then the happy infant appears, and further on the startling question: "Would You Welcome One Like This?" is superimposed upon the scene. This is followed by about fifty feet of the author and director, Hobert Henley, in his role of the happy father holding the infant in his arms and administering its milk in the conventional way. This scene invariably provokes genuine approving laughter. Then follows the announcement, "Coming to This Theater."

Such national institutions as the Rialto and Strand Theaters, New York, have used the advance trailer with excellent results. In fact, in these and other magnificent photoplay theaters, the trailer has entirely supplanted the announcement slide.

Every states rights buyer handling "Parentage" will have these trailers on hand, and this is to advise exhibitors that they should make a request for them when booking "Parentage."

Warner Buys Art Dramas

On his return from a hurried trip to Cleveland, Ohio, Harry Raver, president of Art Dramas, Incorporated, gave out the following announcement:

"The franchise rights for the Art Dramas program, for the territories embracing Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, have been sold to A. Warner, known throughout the country as one of the foremost distributors in the film industry. This transaction means that beginning September 1 exhibitors in these three large states will have an opportunity to book Art Dramas."

At the present time Mr. Warner controls the franchise for Clara Kimball Young and Selznick pictures for Ohio and several other middle western states, with a chain of offices located in Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati.

Sherman Reports Good Business

In spite of the reported dullness in the state right market, Harry A. Sherman, of the Sherman Pictures Corporation, reports continued big interest in the George Loane Tucker's production, "I Believe."

Sherman says he is receiving daily inquiries from the most successful independent exchange men all over the country. Among the buyers who have viewed "I Believe," there is a consensus of opinion that this is the most unique feature that has been offered for some time, and are of the opinion that it is an offering, the want of which has long been felt by exhibitors throughout the country.

Mr. Sherman will announce in the next few days several important territorial right transactions involving several territories.

Canadian Rights for Wharton Film

John V. Green, the veteran showman, exhibitor and exploiter of Galt, Canada, has purchased all the Canadian and Alaskan rights for the new Wharton superfeature of the North, "The Great White Trail." Mr. Green has opened offices in the Temple Building, Galt, Canada, and will operate under the name of Wharton's Canadian Features.

Mr. Green has been in the picture business in the United States and Canada practically since the first films were shown. He was one of the first men in this country to exploit pictures upon what is known now as states rights, but which was called in its embryonic stages "wildcatting." And his plans for the exhibitors throughout Canada and Alaska are such as to bring promise of happiness.

"I'm going to try to give the Canadian and Alaskan exhibitors the best deal they ever have had," he says. "That goes for everything connected with the picture, from the print on down, and it includes everything from price to service. I am a stickler for taking care of the exhibitor, for the simple reason that I have been an exhibitor myself, and I know what should be done for him. And having all the knowledge of what I would like to have done for me as an exhibitor, why should I not carry it out in my dealings with the men who book 'The Great White Trail'?"

Handle Motoy Comedies

The Educational Film Company of America is handling Motoy Comedies, produced by the Peter Pan Film Corporation, for Greater New York, New York state, and Northern New Jersey. At present the comedies are being played all over the Loew and Proctor circuits of New York.

William T. Binford, of Denver, has taken over the distributing rights of the Motoy Comedies for the territory of Wyoming, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico.

The Standard Film Company, of Cleveland, is handling the Motoy Comedies in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky. Mayer & Rosenthal have charge of the distribution of Motoys in California, Arizona and Nevada. They are booked by the Turner & Dahnkin circuit of California.

Frank Gersten, the owner of "I Believe," "Redemption," and other big features for Northern New Jersey, reports the most successful summer season that he has ever experienced in Northern New Jersey. Mr. Gersten says that he has three prints of "I Believe" booked for the balance of the month of August and an additional print for September.

"A Trip to Chinatown" will be the Selig-Hoyt comedy release in K. E. S. E. on August 20.

"Submarine Eye" in Cleveland

"The Submarine Eye" opened a week's run at the Standard Theater, Cleveland, Sunday, August 5, to big busniess. Already this picture has done excellent business for two whole weeks at the Grand Theater, Columbus, and a week at the Temple Theater, Toledo.

Herman J. Garfield, general representative for the Submarine Film Corporation, in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, announces that arrangements have been made to present the attraction in Louisville, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Akron, Dayton and Springfield.

Corona Has Big Outdoor Story

A thrilling story of the great outdoors, being a picturization of one of the most popular novels of the day, with an all-star cast, will be the next production of the Corona Cinema Company, producers of "The Curse of Eve," it is announced. The Corona Cinema Company have been compelled to decline or to hold in abeyance a number of excellent offers from state rights men, who have come to Los Angeles to view the picture, on account of the fact that a deal is pending for the world rights.

"Who's Your Neighbor?"

The feature, "Who's Your Neighbor?" written by Willard Mack and produced by S. Rankin Drew, is being handled by Master Drama Features, Inc., at 1943 Broadway, New York, the first output of that firm.

NEW FROHMAN SPECIAL

"A Man Without a Country," Featuring Arnold Daly Completed as Special Release—Has Up-to-Minute Appeal

The identity of the big production, which has been in the making in the fields of Long Island and New Jersey, and off the coast of Cape Cod, for the past seven or eight weeks, has been solved by the announcement coming from the offices of President William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, that his corporation has completed the taking of the final scenes of "A Man Without a Country," and that his next Frohman production will be ready for its first public showing, beginning an indefinite run at a prominent Broadway Theater, on or about August 10

For the past two months, John W. Noble, the new Frohman director, has been laboring with armies of people, building entire villages, fighting replica battles of the Revolutionary, Civil and Spanish-American wars, and staging the wonderful reproduction of Admiral Decatur's naval battle with the Tripoli pirates. At many periods, Director Noble has had an army of upwards of one thousand players, encamped on the grounds for more than a week in the taking of these thrilling scenes.

Anthony P. Kelly, the adaptor of the greater part of the former Frohman successes, has again contributed the scenario of this latest play. Suggested by the book of Edward Hale's, the Kelly scenario is the result of many months of historical research.

Enacting the role of Phillip Nolan, the rash young captain of the U. S. A., who in a moment of extreme anger cried the immortal blasphemy against his country, "Damn the United States! I hope I may never hear of the United States again," is the eminent American actor, Arnold Daly.

John W. Noble, at the helm of production of "A Man Without a Country" has, during the seven years he has been directing motion pictures, accredited himself with distinction. Among his latest successes are "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie." Mr. Noble has been assisted in the making of the new Frohman production by an extensive staff of assistants.

In speaking of his latest production, President Sherrill is most enthusiastic. He says in part, "We have chosen a subject which carries a psychological appeal—a smashing up-to-the-minute, timely production, which will do much to stimulate the interest so much needed at this moment. We have certainly been accorded most unusual co-operation and credentials from every source, enabling us to make our production absolutely authentic and historically correct. In "A Man Without a Country" there is at last a production which will, I conscientiously believe, create a furor."

WHOLE SHOWS FOR GENERAL

Variety of Releases and Four Reel Features Making It Possible for Exhibitor to Do All Shopping Under One Roof

Just what progress has been made by General Film in organizing product for distribution can be gained by a review of current week's releases. It is stated that only a beginning has been made, and that the next six weeks will see some important announcements of additions to the existing list of regular releases. By the time various plans are complete, it is predicted, exhibitors will be booking more entire shows from General Film product. The purveying of four-reel features meets an insistent demand and makes it more possible than ever for an exhibitor to do all his shopping under one roof when he goes out after complete bills for his best dates.

"The Mainspring," four-reel Falcon Feature, a dramatic adventure from the story by Louis Joseph Vance in Popular Magazine, featuring Harry King. This is an adventure story full of thrills, with a strong love motive. It was directed by Mr. King and supervised by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer.

"Discounters of Money," nineteenth of the two-reel O. Henry Broadway Star features. It is a comedy-drama based entirely upon the idealistic young love that scorns wealth. Carleton King and Nell Spencer are featured.

"Star Dust," one of the third series of Black Cat features from Essanay, featuring Marguerite Clayton. It is a clever comedy-drama with the human element mixed with the humorous.

"An Order of the Court," a two-reel episode from "The Further Adventures of Stingaree" (Kalem), featuring True Boardman as the antipodean outlaw who succors the distressed.

"A Man, a Girl and a Lion," one of the exciting animal pictures from Selig. This two-reel offering features Kathlyn Williams and Thomas Santschi, and a full-grown African lion furnishes the thrills.

"Her Perilous Ride," a one-reel Selig offering, brings home thrills, with fighting savages in another jungle atmosphere. Bessie Eyton, who is featured, does an ostrich-riding stunt as part of the story.

Johnny and Emma Ray comedy, one reel, features the little comedian and his majestic spouse in "A Bathtub Marriage," another of their characteristic productions in this series.

"Those Terrible Telegrams," a Sparkle comedy, one reel; a high-class humorous offering from the Jaxon Film Corporation, this subject being the third of the second series of six.

"Tough Luck," a Jaxon comedy, the third of a second series of six; a ludicrous romp throughout.

The Selig-World Library, No. 16, from the educational series issued weekly by the Selig Polyscope Company, containing pictures of travel and of animal life and other subjects of general interest.

New product now being signed up will provide every desirable shade of atmosphere in subjects to supplement those already represented.

Adds 100% to Motography

July 31, 1917.

Motography, Chicago:

I think the "What the Picture Did for Me" section adds a hundred per cent to the value of Motography.

Such things help to dig the motion picture industry out of the "dark ages" of filmdom.

It is much more pleasant to learn of the merit of a picture through the expressed opinions of exhibitors than it is to learn of it through the mutterings and curses of an audience.

Enclosed are some of my criticisms which I hope will help some as much as theirs help me.—
Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Eight-Reeler Ideal Length

Herbert Brenon, who is just completing "The Fall of the Romanoffs," has announced that his new feature will not exceed eight reels. He has made all his pictures within the past year eight reels and has now decided that his future productions will never exceed that limit.

"Eight reels," says Mr. Brenon, "is the ideal length for a special production. An eight-reel picture runs about two hours. The legitimate theater discovered through years of experience exactly how much entertainment the public can stand, and profiting by this knowledge sifted their performances down to two hours and a half. Theatrical managers have learned by experience, too, that there is such a thing as overdosing the public. They know that theater-goers do not want to be entertained for so long that they become conscious they are sitting in chairs.

"These are things which we, the younger industry, can profit by and take to ourselves. It stands to reason that if a theatrical production is unable to hold the interest of an audience for two hours or only a little more, there is no reason why a motion picture should have to be given any longer time. If anything, the time devoted to a motion picture should be a trifle less, because in the picture, there is no human voice to add to the interest.

"Then again in this matter of time and the eight-reel picture the smaller towns must be always remembered. In making a picture we cannot only think of the metropolis. In the smaller theaters throughout the country, the owner of a showhouse always wants to show his picture twice. One performance is not enough. For this purpose the big feature is admirably suited. It is not too long nor too spread out, and gives ample time for a second showing in one evening.

"While, of course, there will always be pictures of varying lengths according to the scope and dramatic possibilities of the subject, it is the eight-reeler that is the ideal length for the big feature."

Aids Uncle Sam

Owing to the enormous demand for lumber at the Pacific Coast army barracks, Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has wired the company's lumber mill at Hoquiam, Wash., which is at work on contracts for the Artcraft studios, to suspend the work for the studios, and put on two shifts a day preparing lumber for the army barracks. The lumber will be sold to the government at cost. The services of the two Famous Players-Lasky lumber carrying vessels and the docking facilities in Los Angeles Harbor have also been offered to Uncle Sam. These moves are expected to cause some slight delay in the construction of the huge sets for the Geraldine Farrar-Artcraft picture, "The Woman God Forgot," but Mr. Lasky holds that government needs must have precedence.

Circus for Selig Play

William N. Selig engaged the services of an entire circus for a series of scenes in "The Barker," the latest Selig-Red Seal Play released in K. E. S. E. service on Monday, August 13. Lew Fields, one of America's most popular dramatic stars plays the leading role.

LEWIS WORKS IN SECRET

Well Known Director Has Large Company at Ticonderoga, New York, Where Spectacular Film Is Being Produced

In spite of the secrecy surrounding the next special Edgar Lewis picture, which is now being completed at Ticonderoga, New York, enough news has reached Broadway to cause considerable speculation in film circles as to the nature of the well known director's new contribution to the screen.

Although Mr. Lewis has been working on his new production for two months, and has had his large company assembled at Ticonderoga for more than six weeks, the only definite news received has related to the fact that Mitchell Lewis, Hedda Nova, Victor Sutherland, William A. Williams, Ray Chamberlain, members of "The Bar Sinister" cast, and Mabel Scott and Edward Rossman, who played prominent parts in "The Barrier," including Joseph Heron, Philip Sanford, William Cavanaugh and Juanita and Alberta Meizner, will also be seen in the coming drama.

The nature of the story and its title have never been mentioned, and are still jealously guarded, but Charles Feature Abrams, who visited the Edgar Lewis Company recently, managed to get some news past the Lewis censor, which gives a hint of the importance of the production.

According to Mr. Abrams, a town consisting of twenty-seven buildings has been built by Mr. Lewis on the edge of a beautiful lake, three miles northwest of Ticonderoga. A church, a dance hall, a Hudson Bay Company post, a Northwest Mounted Police station and even a Chinese laundry are among the structures erected, and the natives of that section of the country have named the village after its creator, calling it Fort Lewis.

Mr. Lewis had a dynamo installed to furnish electricity for temporary lighting, and is using the engines of two automobiles to run the dynamo. Among the effects he has already used in his picture is a big rain storm for which water had to be supplied by drawing it through fire hose from the lake. As twenty-four hundred feet of hose was found necessary to accomplish this feat, the fire departments of Ticonderoga and Fort Henry had to be brought into service in addition to eight hundred feet of hose and a fire engine borrowed from Cohoes, New York.

The amount of construction work done by Edgar Lewis can be judged by the fact that one building is over sixty feet long, its interior being used by the director to stage large ensemble scenes, while its exterior is necessary to the photographing of important action in the main street of the town.

Mr. Lewis expects to return to New York with his picture completed in August.

General Manager of Art Dramas

After several weeks of negotiations, arrangements were concluded this week with Arthur F. Beck, to assume executive management of Art Dramas, Inc. Mr. Beck is rapidly lining up exchange problems and rearranging territorial divisions throughout the United States and Canada. He states that it is his intention to open up at least twelve new offices at strategic points as quickly as he can obtain the people.

Engineers to Meet in New York

Donald J. Bell, president of the Bell and Howell Company, states to MOTOGRAPHY that the next meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be held in New York in October. Mr. Bell is vice-president of the society, which held its last meeting in Chicago at the time of the national convention.

Attacks Mary Pickford

Through the newspapers, the story comes from Los Angeles that Mary Pickford was savagely attacked at her home, on August 2, by an irate maid with a long hat pin. The maid, a French girl, had been discharged, and was in an insane rage. "Little Mary" was rescued by her chauffeur.

Mary's sister, Lottie, escaped danger by hiding under a table.

Diaz Callahan has been transferred from New Orleans to Dallas, Texas, to be manager of Triangle office, succeeding Charles D. Touchen. Mr. Callahan was in Dallas long ago and he still has many friends in the Dallas territory.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THE following article is being sent out by Nat S. Stronge, director of the publicity department of the Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., and is called a "Golden Rule for Operators." It is being sent broadcast through Texas by J. B. Dugger, manager of the Dallas branch of V. L. S. E., distributing organization for Vitagraph, and it is one that branch managers all over the country might do well to disseminate.

It is founded on the "do unto others as you would be done by" lesson, but applies strictly to reel bands. The purpose of the "Golden Rule" is, primarily, to save work for the man in the projection room and assure exhibitors of a smooth-running show, but it has a broader and, to the industry, more vital purpose—pleasing the public.

The idea of Mr. Dugger was inspired by the discovery in the inspection room of his branch that some operators were careless in replacing the bands on reels, with the result that frequently pictures were "balled up" and reels were run outside their proper place. In the V. L. S. E. system, this could not happen, because every feature, when it is returned from a theater, is given a careful examination and no reel is permitted to leave unless it is in perfect condition and properly labeled.

However, there were occasions where the booking was so close on some features that the films had to be rushed from one theater to another. It was in cases like this that the switching of reels was discovered. After studying over the proposition and appealing in specific instances to the operators to exercise care in replacing their reel bands, Mr. Dugger determined upon a means of helping not only his own company, but the entire industry, including manufactures, exhibitors and operators. Consequently, with every Vitagraph feature, comedy or serial episode that goes out of the Dallas branch of V. L. S. E., the following printed slip is sent:

Operator

Reel Bands—Please be sure to replace reel bands on proper reels. This is very important, as it helps to avoid mistakes. You have, no doubt, received the wrong reel on account of a wrong reel band and know what it means. Help us avoid this by replacing bands properly.

Shipping—This picture must be shipped back to Dallas, unless you have other instructions, on first train leaving after 10 p. m., on day of use, otherwise you will cause a blow-up. You know what it means to you to be disappointed. Protect your brother exhibitor by seeing that shipment is handled as instructed.

The results of Mr. Dugger's little plan have proved so effective and beneficial to his territory that V. L. S. E. has decided to adopt his "Golden Rule" as a part of its service system, and before long every reel of Vitagraph film that leaves a V. L. S. E. branch will carry the little reminder to the man in the projection room, with the idea of reducing to a minimum the confusion that trails his multiple dutes at the end of a showing.

This plan, if carried out by the operators, and by the inspectors at the film exchanges as well, will be a big step in the right direction. There are, however, several other things that go to make up the troubles of the operators and managers besides the reel bands. One trouble that causes a good deal of annoyance is the bad reel. Quite a number of exchanges pay no attention at all to the condition of the reels they send their film out on. Reels are used that have no springs on the hub. Instead, the operator finds a nail or a tack driven in to fasten the film to, and sometimes nothing at all.

Then again he will receive a reel with the sides bent so that when the film unwinds from the reel it will bind at one point on the reel and run slack at another. This does not help the film in the least. Many a reel of film has been put out of commission by a bad reel. Another fault is the condition of the shipping cases that are used by some exchanges. They use them as long as they will hold together.

Exchanges also have a habit of cutting the titles and subtitles on new releases and saving part to be used later. This causes the operators no end of trouble because most of the time the titles and subtitles are too short for the patron of the house to read, and consequently the operator in the booth gets the credit for the kick that is registered. When bona fide film exchanges send out feature films with two and three frames of film for a title it is time for them to get busy with their inspection departments.

Finds Shutter a Success

In the issue of July 28 I noticed a shutter pattern that was submitted by N. H. Wilson of Tucson, Arizona. I am working for a manager who has a closed house and an air dome next door. In the first I have a Power's 6A machine and in the other a Power's 6 stand and lamp house. In hot weather we have the show in the air dome and on rainy or cool nights we use the closed house. I move the mechanism from one stand to the other. I have made a shutter from the drawing that was given and find that it works very well. The throw in the air dome is thirty feet greater than in the closed house and I have to use two different lenses and with the new shutter I can change from one to the other and set my shutter in about half the time it used to take. The only trouble that I had with the shutter was in cutting the slots for the wing nuts. Many thanks to Brother Wilson for his suggestion.

While I am writing there is one question I would like to have you settle, and that is this: There has been a discussion among a certain number of operators here as to whom you alluded, in commenting upon "an editor of a projection department in New York City." I give you credit for the stand you have taken, and also wish to say that I will at any time go out of my way to do you a favor, for there are plenty of operators in need of advice, and that is what projection departments are for—*H. H. C., New York.

I am very glad that you have tried out the suggestion and that it is successful. As I said before, I never tried it out and did not know just how it would work.

In commenting on the "editor of a projection department," I was merely defending myself and MOTOGRAPHY. I am not here to settle that kind of argument between operators, but I will say this: It was not Sherman.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

Wins Right to Head Own Organization—Contract with Selznick Abrogated—Productions to Be Marketed by New Concern

Clara Kimball Young is to head her own producing organization.

About three months ago, after finishing her last picture, Miss Young suddenly picked up bag and baggage and left for California, declaring she would make no more pictures for Lewis J. Selznick. At about the same time she filed suit in the New York courts against the Lewis J. Selznick enterprises and the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation asking for an accounting and the annulment of her contract with Selznick, which had until 1921 to run. The amount involved in this suit totaled around a half million dollars.

Mr. Selznick replied with a counter suit, claiming Miss Young to be under exclusive contract to make pictures for him and declaring her agreement with him to be an employment contract, he stated that he would not release her from the fulfilment of same under any circumstances.

Miss Young fired her first bomb in the trade papers, announcing her independence and that she would begin producing pictures at once, and market them herself through various independent exchanges. The battle never reached the courts, for each discontinued his suit against the other.

The new distributing company, of which Adolph Zukor is the prime factor, will market and distribute all the Clara Kimball Young productions for the next four years.

The first picture "The Marionettes," will be made in the Thanhouser Studios at New Rochelle. Miss Young contemplates making one picture at least in Porto Rico, some in California and two or three in other locations not yet decided upon.

"The Marionettes" is a play first produced in Paris, had a long run there and later produced in this country under the name of The Puppets, with Mme. Nazimova as the star.

Frederic Chapin, the adaptor of "The Argyle Case," "The Easiest Way," and "Today," has done the scenario of "The Marionettes." Emile Chautard will have immediate charge of the story as director.

The scenes are already being taken for the first picture while Miss Young is enjoying a short vacation at her camp on Moosehead Lake in Maine.

Executive and publicity offices have been opened in Aeolian Hall, where Miss Young will transact all her business interests outside of the engaging and casting which, of course, will be done at the studios.

"FILM FEATURES" SUCCESS

Vitagraph One and Two Reel Star Productions Meeting Heavy Demand—More Popular Now Than When First Shown

"Favorite Film Features," the new unit of Vitagraph productions being released through V. L. S. E., is now in its second week of booking and the announcement is made that the bookings for these short reel subjects are breaking all records.

These features, selected from the best pictures in the Vitagraph library, were favorites, two, three or four years ago and the players who appear in them are among the greatest on the screen today. On every picture, whether it be comedy or drama, appear the names of several great stars, such as Clara Kimball Young, Edith Storey, Sidney Drew, John Bunny, Norma Talmadge or Rosemary Theby. The pictures have all been retitled and tinted and given the most modern treatment, so that they rank with some of the best pictures of the day.

They were first put on the market on July 23, and the intention is to release them in three reels weekly hereafter, the program being made up of a two-reel drama and a one-reel comedy, or vice versa. For instance, the program for the ensuing week is a two-reel drama, "The Vengeance of Durand," presenting Edith Storey, Earle Williams, Julia Swayne Gordon, E. K. Lincoln and L. Rogers Lytton, and a one-reel comedy, "An Elopement at Home," in which Norma Talmadge is featured.

V. L. S. E. reports that the pictures are booking heavily with exhibitors all over the country, with the Middle West leading in the number of contracts, and that the success of "Favorite Film Features" already is assured. In one day's mail, it is declared, there were more than twenty contracts for the service. V. L. S. E. is putting out special paper for each of the pictures and is advertising them as heavily as its regular program features.

Philip A. Gross, manager of the Strand Theater in Milwaukee, one of the finest in the Cream City, is one of the big exhibitors who has booked the "Favorite Film Features." He thinks so well of them that he has already made plans to run six reels per week, using two weeks' releases in one.

Selznick Plays for September

The schedule of Selznick-Pictures releases for fall has been completed, and forms an interesting array of attractions.

The Selznick-Pictures themselves will be represented by Herbert Brenon's production of "The Lone Wolf," now running at the Broadway Theater, Norma Talmadge in "Poppy," and Constance Talmadge in "The Lesson." In addition to these there will be two special productions, one of which will be the vehicle for Eva Tanguay's debut on the screen, and which has been entitled "Firefly," and the other will be a Rita Jolivet feature, centering about the sinking of the Lusitania.

Owing to the fact that Herbert Brenon has been especially engaged for the production of "The Fall of the Romanoffs," this director will have no other Selznick-Picture than "The Lone Wolf" until late in the fall. "The Lone Wolf," however, from the comments that have been made on it during the Broadway run, is equal to several pictures all rolled into one. It is a frank, out and out melodrama, free from any attempt to teach or preach. Mr. Brenon simply took Louis Joseph Vance's rapid fire story and made it into a still more rapid fire picture.

Norma Talmadge has been so industrious in turning out Selznick-Pictures that "The Moth" was finished, with cutting and titles complete, before "Poppy" was released. This production has been deliberately held back because "Poppy" has proved so popular.

Miss Constance Talmadge, as a star in her own right, has won the admiration of all in "The Lesson." With youth, beauty and vivacity all on her side, the Selznick prediction is that she will leap immediately into a high plane of popularity.

Iowa School Film Library

The popular hold taken on the general public by motion pictures has penetrated even the school system of Iowa. Curator Edgar R. Harlan of the historical department of Iowa, has founded what is probably the world's first motion picture library. It is for purely historical reasons and at present has 200 reels, which total more than 50,000 feet of film.

The work of these films is to show the more interesting of local happenings of importance, of the past three years, which will in time be of valuable aid in enabling future generations to understand the Iowans of the early part of the twentieth century. These films will also be of aid to students, twenty years hence, in learning state history.

The films are made for educational purposes only and the library will contain only such films as will be of educational value to the students. The history class of the coming generation will be able to see the inauguration of a governor a quarter of a century before, reproduced in the living figures. For students interested in mechanical and manufacturing subjects films will be provided, showing the workings of the great Keokuk dam and some of the state's largest manufacturing plants. For students who are inclined towards athletic games some of the more important football games between the state colleges will be saved. This is sure to entertain and instruct future Iowans of their forefathers' customs and manners when playing the favorite sport of a century ago.

Fireproof vaults have been prepared for the storing away of the film negatives in air tight tin containers. Several plans for cataloging them are under consideration now.

Arrangements have been completed with Iowa film companies by which the state is able to secure the films which may be of some historical interest in the future at no cost to itself. As soon as the commercial value of the current events films depreciates to a degree where there is no profit in showing them, they are turned over to the motion picture library. These films are, however, subject to recall by the manufacturer should they at any time regain some of their former commercial value, otherwise they may remain the property of the state.

The historic value of this library is inestimable. Motion pictures present in a single minute more than can be portrayed in a chapter or more of printed matter, and it is usually remembered much more easily.

Lockwood Purchases Studio

Following the leasing by Fred J. Balshofer of several acres of space adjoining the studios of the Yorke Film Corporation in Hollywood, Harold Lockwood, the Yorke-Metro star, acquired the property last week at a sheriff's sale. Lockwood's purchase of the new studio property was a surprise to his producer and director, until the star presented a bill to Mr. Balshofer for rent for the current month.

Extensive improvements have been undertaken on the new property. Several buildings have been added, which include new quarters for Lockwood and Lester Cuneo, the heavy man of the company, and also rooms for the property and technical departments. A stage, sufficient in size to accommodate the elaborate sets of Paradise Garden, is being completed. This will furnish the Yorke company with room to erect a large number of sets at one time.

"From Front to Back"

MOTOGRAPHY, as you probably know, arrives regularly at the Stillman, and I always read it from the front cover to the back page.—S. J. Brandt, Managing director, Stillman Theater Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

What Do Jews Wear in Russia, Anyway

Herbert Brenon is having troubles of his own in staging "The Fall of the Romanoffs." His studio sometimes has a little Russian revolution all its own.

By no means the least of his troubles are the Russian experts who have been called in to supervise and superintend the work in so far as the details and customs of Russian life, habits and costumes are concerned. The trouble with the experts is that they simply cannot agree. They have a way of turning up at the last minute to cast their eagle eyes over the costumes, and with one wave of the hand consign them all to the realm of the impossible.

One expert will up and say, "Jews in Russia wear exactly the same costumes as we do; you should fit them out with modern clothes."

"Not at all," another will say, "Jews in Russia have a garb all their own. I know it because I took part in a Jewish massacre, and I have a scar to prove it!" Whereat it is with difficulty that he is restrained from tearing off his Russian boots to display the proof of his veracity on his ankle.

At this point it is usually the custom to lapse into their native tongue, and judging from their gesticulations and the rapidity of their speech, the battle of words waxes hot.

Theaters Monopolized by Mutual

Six of the seven important downtown theaters in St. Paul, Minneapolis, showed Mutual productions last week. None of the bookings were for less than three days.

New Majestic—Mary Miles Minter in "Periwinkle" (3 days).

New Princess—William Russell in "The Masked Heart" (3 days).

New Palace—Helen Holmes in "The Railroad Raiders" (3 days).

Starland—Margarita Fischer in "Miss Jackie of the Navy" (3 days).

Alhambra—Charlie Chaplin (3 days).

Blue Mouse—Charlie Chaplin (3 days).

King Bee Active

Probably no company engaged in the production of motion pictures has been more active during this summer than the King Bee Films Corporation, whose studios at Bayonne, N. J., have seldom been idle even during the most trying heat. Under the direction of Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the company, work has gone on incessantly night and day to meet the demand for Billy West fun films.

A visitor in the office of Wm. Christy Cabanne, high up in the Metro studio in New York city, while not intending to spy happened on what may be a secret to the method which the author-director of "The Slacker" uses to make his stories fresh and full of pep. At any rate, Mr. Cabanne makes no other explanation for the presence of salt and pepper shakers on his desk.

The Small Town House

THEATERS in the small towns make up a large percentage of the total number of houses in the country. The entire trade has, to a certain extent, neglected these small town brothers. MOTOGRAPHY is to come to the aid of their cause. We are going to do everything we can to be of service to them and to aid them in all their particular problems.

Next Week

in MOTOGRAPHY there will appear the first of a series of live and vital articles on "The Small Town House." It is a remarkable story of the mistakes, struggles and triumphs of an exhibitor in a down east house, told by himself straight from the shoulder, without any frills. It is down to brass tacks all the time.

Watch for this live series, "The Small Town House." If you are an exhibitor in a town of less than 10,000

Laboratories Kept Cool

As is well known in the trade, Nick Kessel, general manager of the Triangle Laboratories at Fort Lee, N. J., has built the greatest organization of its kind, and is recognized as an executive of rare genius, but it takes times like these for him to show his real worth. First the army draft comes along; this will take away about ten of his most valuable men, but being far-sighted Mr. Kessel was prepared and their places will be taken by specially trained girls.

Then comes along this awful spell of torrid weather which wreaks havoc with laboratorial work, and which forced most of the laboratories to close down altogether. But being taught a lesson in last year's hot spell Mr. Kessel, by an ice arrangement he had installed, never allowed the temperature to rise above 75 in any part of the plant, thereby keeping up to his daily average of one hundred and forty thousand feet. In the studios next door, William Farnum, June Caprice, Carlyle Blackwell, etc., were sweltering with the thermometer at 125.

Big Foreign Film Contract

What is said to be the biggest contract to supply serial and feature photoplays to Russia, Norway, Sweden and Denmark ever consummated, was signed this week in New York by R. R. Nehls, manager of the American Film Company, Inc., of Chicago, and representatives of a large foreign distributing syndicate. The terms of the agreement call for an export of 60,000 feet of positive film per week, 3,000,000 feet a year, and involve the exchange of something over $200,000.

Coincidentally with the signing of the Russian and Scandinavian papers, Mr. Nehls arranged for the shipment of approximately 10,000 feet of serial and feature subjects weekly to China and Japan. This, together with recent contracts for Spain and Portugal, further clinches the American's strong position in the foreign picture field.

Miss Evelyn Greeley is "featured" in "The Burglar," an approaching World-Picture Brady-Made, starring Carlyle Blackwell in the name part.

Sennett's First Paramounts

Mack Sennett has picked the titles and casts of his first three pictures to be released by Paramount Pictures Corporation, in accordance with the new Paramount-Sennett affiliation. All Mr. Sennett's most famous comedians and pretty girls have been retained by him and will appear in the Paramount-Sennett comedies, the first release to be September 15 and every two weeks thereafter.

"Roping Her Romeo" is the first Paramount-Sennett. It features Polly Moran, long famous as a vivacious and pretty Sennett comedienne, and Ben Turpin and Slim Summerville. "A Bed Room Blunder" is the second Paramount-Sennett featuring Charles Murray, Mary Thurman and Wayland Trask.

"The Planter" Praised

Following the private showing of Tyrone Power in "The Planter," at the New York Roof, the National Board of Review handed to the president of the company, F. M. Manson, one of the most enthusiastic reports which they have ever issued on a picture.

This picture depicts with vividness, dramatic effect and fidelity, conditions in the Central American states which have never been presented to American audiences.

Blackton Paramount Picture

J. Stuart Blackton, whose affiliation with Paramount was announced recently, has begun his first big spectacular feature for release by that organization. In Mr. Blackton's announcement of his new association he stated that he held the picture rights to almost all of Sir Gilbert Parker's books. His first Paramount picture will be an adaptation of one of the most famous of the great English-Canadian author's novels, "The World for Sale."

Japs Like Fisher's Comics

Bud Fisher, president of the Bud Fisher Film Corporation, has just received a letter of appreciation of which he is very proud. It comes from the Japanese naval base at Nagasaki, and is signed by the commandant.

A few weeks ago the Exhibitions Film Exchange of Seattle, Washington, asked Mr. Fisher's permission to donate prints of his Mutt and Jeff comedies to be exhibited on the Japanese warships. The permission was readily granted, with the result that the navy is enjoying daily the antics of Mutt and Jeff.

M. H. Hoffman Play

One of the big September distribution products of M. H. Hoffman, Inc., is "The Silent Witness," the feature that was based upon the play of that name. This is the play which, during its extended Broadway run, was declared by the dramatic critics on the New York press as the biggest drama since "Madame X."

Army Film Plant in France

The signal corps of the United States army has perfected plans for the establishment in France of a huge plant for making motion and still pictures.

From the plant, which is expected eventually to become one of the largest of its kind in the world, will be issued the photographs which are to form a historical record of America's participation in the war. The plant already is as large as many private concerns.

Fewer Houses in Kansas

EVERY year, according to statistics kept by film distributors, shows a marked decrease in the number of picture theaters.

This, in the face of the robbing of the speaking stage in order that the flickering tape minotaur may feast on the vast histrionic talent the age can offer.

Two years ago there were 850 picture theaters in Kansas.

Today the most complete list the state board of review with the assistance of leading distributing companies whose releases appear on every program in the West has been able to compile, contains the names of 380 theaters.

"Has the public tired of its pet amusement?" a representative of several Kansas City film companies was asked.

"On the contrary, the interest in motion pictures is on the crescendo," was the reply. "With the critical eye of long practice, the picture fan has learned to discriminate between the good and the near-good in productions. They demand real stories, thoroughly good acting, and both competent and artistic production. More real literature has found its way to the screen during the latter half of 1916 and the beginning months of 1917 than in all the past history of motion pictures combined."

The cost of films in rentals to exhibitors has done its share toward crowding out the theaters backed by small capital, men in the producing end of the game admit. Labor costs more than ever before, both that employed in making pictures and in exhibiting them. Chemicals used in preparing the films are costly and materials for their manufacture are constantly increasing in price. But the percentage of increase in the most of films such as the small town "store room" theaters used in their prime could not account, people of the film work declare, for the number of small exhibitors who have thrown up the sponge.

Of perhaps even less weight in the seeming decline of the industry in Kansas than the higher cost of materials, is the factor of rigid censorship laws. These, however, have a tangible effect, in the opinion of some of the exhibitors who have survived.

The "cutting" of pictures in which well known screen actors have appeared to the tune of millions of dollars in cost of production to the makers, in order that the films may be shown in theaters of this state in perfect accord with the rigid cigarette, bone dry and other drastic Kansas laws, has taxed the patience of distributors and owners of states' rights to the limit. A few of the film men, according to owners of local theaters, are considering striking this state from their lists, making it impossible for Kansas fans to see favorite stars in action.

These influences, even in their combined strength, do not answer the question of diminishing numbers of picture shows, experts say. The real solution is obvious enough, in the belief of Carrie H. Simpson, a former member of the speaking stage, a writer of film plays and one of the three women in the present board of review.

"It is the very fact people are demanding better pictures, and are getting them, that is responsible for the crowding out of the smaller theaters," the censor said. "Better productions cost more money, and patrons, with a constantly increasing taste for real merit, are willing to pay big prices for artistic pictures. As a result opera houses turn into picture shows; the best actors and writers and directors of the generation give their talents toward the making of worthy productions and only the exhibitors who can keep up with the trend toward higher class pictures can survive."

10,000 Seater for New York

Another picture theater is destined for New York, and this time it is to be the largest house of its kind in the world.

According to various bits of information from sources of a reputable nature along Broadway it has become known the car barns on Eighth avenue, between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth streets, are shortly to give way, so that a huge theater for the films may be constructed on the site.

A lease of the property for a period of twenty-one years is reported to have been made by the New York Railways Company to a syndicate of business and theatrical men headed by Felix Isman. It was also learned yesterday that plans for the building of such a theater have already been drawn and submitted to the syndicate.

The safest way to assure steady support from your community is to cooperate with it. Here's a good example. A small town house helped collect this pile of rubbish by means of admission given for tin cans.

Kansas Exhibitor Awakens Natives

Out in Salina, Kansas, H. J. Thatcher manages the Strand Theater, and does nothing else. He puts thought into his work and his efforts are putting dollars into his bank account. The which is all preliminary to telling how Manager Thatcher awakened the natives of Salina with a self-starting sensation entitled "The Mysterious Mrs. M." There is so much of enterprise and foresight in Manager Thatcher's achievement that he must be added to the list of real showmen who have turned their attention to picture exhibition.

Kansas City's Bluebird branch, through George Bowles, arranged to send the Mary Mac Laren feature, "The Mysterious Mrs. M," to Salina. A few days before the Bluebird was to be exhibited there arrived from Kansas City an extremely attractive young lady who registered simple as "Mrs. M" at the best hotel in town. Manager Thatcher had taken the newspapers, the hotel man, and one or two Salina business men into his confidence, and everybody helped him wind up his alarm clock that was to awaken the natives.

"Mrs. M" would give the newspapers no information, nor would she see any of the several people who called, through curiosity, to see her. The hotel man was deeply ignorant of his guest's reasons for being in Salina. Before "Mrs. M" had been in town three hours she had "bought" an automobile from a local dealer, glorified its tonneau with signs reading "The Mysterious Mrs. M," and began scudding around town, shrouded in mystery and a black half-mask that hid the upper part of her face. Despite the appeals of newspaper men and the crowd that gathered around her car to question her every time she stopped, "Mrs. M" kept her own secret.

The next day "The Mysterious Mrs. M" was reputed to be a famous seeress. Prominent members of the community were notified that certain things were going to happen to them, and the telephones were busy with mysterious calls and messages. The third day "Mrs. M" stopped her car in front of a jewelry store, entered the place and began the formula of purchasing a diamond ring.

The proprietor knew why she was there, but the girl who was selling the jewels did not. As a consequence the clerk set up a corn-fed screech that echoed through the store and resounded in the public square, when "Mrs. M" deftly extracted a ring, from a dozen or so she was looking at, and fled the place. Manager Thatcher, properly disguised, was chauffeur to the female bandit's car, and he was waiting with his engine running to receive her. A dash was made for the open country roads and after several hours spent in avoiding Salina, the car was returned to an alley back of her hotel and "Mrs. M" was safe.

The local papers had been closely following the exploits of the strange visitor to Salina, and closed the report of the "robbery" with the statement that the jeweler would not prosecute, for the reason that "Mrs. M" had sent him the cash value of the jewel she had "stolen." This brought events up to the day next preceding "Bluebird Day" at Salina's Strand Theater.

The masked woman entered the theater during a performance when the house was packed, and demanded a seat. The usher escorted her down the aisle looking for a vacant chair, while the masked woman continually protested in a loud voice that she did not like this or that location the usher found for her. She made such protest that Manager Thatcher felt impelled to appear in person to assist the usher in seating the noisy patron, the audience, meanwhile, taking vocal part in telling the lady different locations where they thought she might be properly placed.

Finally Manager Thatcher demanded: "What right have you to come into my theater, masked, and create this disturbance? Who are you?" That being the woman's cue, she replied in loud voice: "I'm the mysterious Mrs. M."—and at that moment the operator flashed upon the screen: "The Mysterious Mrs. M.," tomorrow. "It's a Bluebird." The constantly increasing curiosity as to Salina's strange visitor had put the crowded house in the right mood for the finishing stroke.

The next day Bluebird's "Mysterious Mrs. M." broke the Salina Strand's record for attendance.

New Seligs

For the week beginning Monday, August 13, the Selig Company announces some interesting releases. For example, on Monday, August 13, "The Sole Survivor," a two-reel drama of Central American jungles, is released. "The Sole Survivor" was written by James Oliver Cirwood, and features winsome Bessie Eyton, supported by an all-star cast. "Her Heart's Desire" is the title of the one-reel drama released by Selig in General Film service on Saturday, August 18. Bessie Eyton is again featured in this feautiful production, one of the few one-reel film dramas directed by Colin Campbell.

"Between Man and Beast," is the title of the Selig two-reel jungle drama released by Selig in General Film service on Monday, August 20. Again is pretty Bessie Eyton exploited in a drama of thrills. One sensational episode is where a gigantic ape captures and cares for a little child. "Her Salvation," is the title of the Selig one-reel release for Saturday, August 25, in which Bessie Eyton is again starred, in a drama having to do with the "submerged tenth."

Alice Brady's forthcoming World-Picture is called "The Refugee," and is nearly completed. The director is George Archambaud. As the heroine of this photoplay Miss Brady has acting to do which is considerably more strenuous than anything in her recent repertoire. The story is exceedingly harrowing at times.

The tendency for societies and large institutions to give free picture shows along educational lines is on the increase. More than 3,000 persons attended the initial band concert and picture show given at Dallas, Texas, by the Safety Council of that city during the "safety first" week recently held there.

Members of the Milwaukee Photoplay Exhibitors' Association propose to cut down in the amount of display paper they use for advertising. They have decided to use nothing but one-sheets, photographs and newspaper displays in advertising their attractions. The practice of this conservation measure is expected to result in quite an annual saving.

"The Lone Wolf," directed by Herbert Brenon, is now playing rings around "War Brides" at the Broadway Theater, New York. "War Brides" up to the time of this last picture had been Brenon's masterpiece as far as a coin gatherer was concerned. It is intimated, however, that the Broadway may run "The Lone Wolf" the rest of the summer, thereby establishing a new record.

Open-air motion picture shows are being conducted in ten Philadelphia playgrounds in an effort to educate persons in the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis and the dangers of patent medicine. The pictures are shown by the Philadelphia committee of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, in co-operation with Director Krusen, of public health and charities.

Frank Choynski, at a recent meeting of the Chicago Chapter of the American Exhibitors' Association, in speaking of the benefits resulting from co-operation among Chicago theater men, suggested that owners of first run houses pass on the paper they use to other theater men in the association. "I just throw the stuff away after I get through with it," Mr. Choynski said, "and it is still perfectly good. There ought to be some way whereby we could pass this paper around among our members. We don't all use first run pictures, and I am sure there is the possibility for quite a considerable saving on paper if some practical way of handling this thing could be devised."

Jere J. Cohan, father of George M. Cohan, actor, author and producer, died last week at his home in Monroe, New York. We was 69 years old and head of one of the first theatrical families of the country. He was one of the leading lights of the vaudeville and amusement world for nearly half a century. The loss to the stage of Jere Cohan is a loss that is felt throughout the whole country.

When the "Battle of the Somme" was shown at the Auditorium Theater, St. Paul, Minnesota, for the benefit of the comfort kit committee of the Red Cross, the first balcony was reserved for men in uniform, who were admitted free. The theater was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the band of the First Minnesota Infantry played at each performance.

Doro Rodrigues, the "Universal Film Girl," delivered a lecture in front of the Apollo Theater, Dayton, Ohio, on her way from New York to San Francisco. She is the girl who has been traveling about the country helping Uncle Sam get recruits. She spoke in front of the Apollo and appeared there in connection with the film, "The Man Who Was Afraid."

"A line of publicity before the showing of a picture is worth more to the exhibitor than a page of praise afterward." That is the epigrammatic summing up of the policy endorsed by Walter McNeel, manager of the Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin. It is also his phraseology. Needless to say, a man with a working maxim like that knows how to squeeze the ducats out of the long celluloid.

Exchange men in Washington, D. C., declare that if the obnoxious fire rules which are scheduled to go into effect the first of January are not modified, that they will fold up their tents like the Arabs and move over to nearby Baltimore, where the regulations are not so stiff. Baltimore is willing and even eager to welcome them, but Washington is not desirous to have them go. Therefore the fire rules may be made less drastic.

The Garfield Theater, at 2844 West Madison street, Chicago, is making a name for itself by the clever addresses to its patrons which ornament the front cover of its weekly program. Its latest is styled: "Don't Growl—Kick," and follows: "Talk with anybody in the management of an institution that serves the public and you will find the average American will growl, but he seldom complains. When something is wrong he will argue the matter with a ticket-seller, usher or doorman. They have no authority to set things right. The public will not go to the trouble of sending an orderly complaint to the management. An intelligent complaint will often clear up difficulties for you. You must know how to gather yourself for a kick and how to land it in the right place."

A less drastic fire prevention ordinance is in sight for Indianapolis if the recommendation of the city welfare committee of the council is adopted by the governing body of the city. Theater and exchange men met the welfare committee recently and persuaded members that several changes were necessary in the new ordinance governing the storage, manufacture and handling of film, now pending before the city council. The committee will recommend that the changes be made.

H. A. Higgins and F. S. Ferguson are having trouble in Houston, Texas, on account of booking Vitagraph's "Battle Cry of Peace." Higgins and Ferguson claim to have rights on contract with the Supreme Feature Film Company for the film. J. B. Dugger, Dallas manager for Vitagraph, however, says no rights on this picture have been sold except for the state of Montana. The theater men were arrested under a charge of theft, but were later released to report for trial.

Commencing the week of August 12, Manager Edel, of the Strand, New York, will show for two weeks another set of great war pictures, "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras." These pictures are official and authentic British war pictures and will be shown by special arrangement with the Official Government Pictures, Inc., of which William K. Vanderbilt is president. The proceeds will be devoted to the American and European war relief.

Bernard Depkin, managing director of the Parkway Theater, Baltimore, recently was fined $25 and costs for reporting to the censor board that "A Little Soldier Girl," a film which he was exhibiting and which he thought the board had passed, had not yet been reviewed by them. When he told one of the board members of the omission, the latter immediately preferred charges against him and Mr. Depkin was dragged into court.

The Colonial Theater in Chicago introduced "The Garden of Allah," the big Selig picture, with a setting that thoroughly impressed the numbers who saw the production. A desert scene was staged almost duplicating that in the first act of the play. An Arab leading a camel came in sight, followed by more Arabs. They sang a special musical score, written for the feature, that sent a thrill up the spines of the audience and prepared it for the Oriental film which was to follow.

The McHenry Theater, at Light and Cross streets, Baltimore, is issuing an extremely interesting little program. Among other things it gives the schedule time, not only of the entire performances during the day, but also the time for the beginning of the main feature picture. This ought to prove very popular with fans, for they can time their visits to the theater so as not to get in at the middle of the feature. The McHenry is under the direction of the Parkway Theater Company.

Plans for a state-wide campaign for cleaner motion pictures were discussed during the past week at Lansing, Kansas, by officials of the state federation of the parent-teacher association and members of the committee for better films. As a result of the conference, it has been determined to interest every parent-teacher association of the state in a plan to establish "family nights" at the picture houses. Friday night was suggested and a system will be devised whereby a list of clean films will be provided for these family night programs.

If your theater were located at Los Angeles you would scarcely need any lighting equipment, on account of the large number of stars that continually drop in. On one night a short time ago Manager Charles Gates of the Symphony Theater entertained Eddie Polo, Priscilla Dean, Emory Johnson, Harry Carter and Stuart Payton. These people all appeared in "The Gray Ghost," the new Universal serial, and went over to see it shown. Manager Gates has made a specialty of entertaining film folk well, and they like to drop into his house.

On the petition of two motion picture houses of Richmond, Virginia, the city council instructed the city attorney to draft an amendment to the license ordinance raising the license of ten shows from $5 to $10 per day. The play houses complained that a company, which has been showing at Vallejo for the past six months is to invade Richmond with a big tent and that they will cut into the business of the established theaters. There was no opposition to the motion of Councilman J. N. Long increasing the license fee.

A meeting of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit has been called for September 4 at the Hotel Astor in New York. It is expected that the important question of further distribution plans will be considered. Also, it is probable some new productions will be purchased. Thus far the circuit has officially announced only the acquisition of Essanay's "On Trial," but has many more pictures in view. It has also been stated that the First National Circuit has signed Charlie Chaplin for the coming year at a salary of $1,075,000.

The State Board of Health of Louisiana has a moving picture theater on wheels. It is an automobile especially constructed for the carrying of literature, moving picture machine and other necessary equipment for educating the public in city and country in health matters. The exhibitions are held in the evenings, and the screen on which the pictures are shown is usually placed in an open lot. In this way the exhibition can be held in different parts of the city where the people live and many are reached who would not come to a theater building to see such films.

During hot weather try some of the prescriptions suggested below by the Weekly Film News, the house organ for the John H. Kunsky Theaters of Detroit.

When the heat grows oppressive, try your favorite picture theater. We are authorized by the theater managers to make the following statements:

The Madison is positively 10 degrees cooler than the street.

The Washington is just like a cool, refreshing glen.

The Alhambra is as cool as a cucumber.

The Strand will put the starch back into wilted collars.

The Garden is like a shady-nook by the riverside, cooled by sweet-scented breezes.

"Souls Adrift"

Five Part Peerless-World Picture, Featuring Ethel Clayton. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

"SOULS ADRIFT" is the next release on the World-Film program featuring Ethel Clayton and Milton Sills. The theme of the play concerns two young people who, shipwrecked, find shelter on an uninhabited island, their experiences there, and the refound love for each other which results. Although the plot is not overburdened with originality, it is pleasing and the play is interesting as a whole. It carries the hallmark of quality in its staging.

Ethel Clayton plays the role of Elma in a most convincing manner, while Milton Sills is equally effective in the part of Micha. The other principal characters are John Davidson, Frank de Vernon and Walter James. The story is by Andrew Soutar and was photographed by Arthur Edeson. While the picture is not up to the World-Film standard, it will doubtless prove a good box-office attraction. Its advertising possibilities are exceptional and many.

The Palma, homeward bound, is destroyed by a terrific explosion. Micha Steel, second engineer, secures a life boat and with the unconscious Elma Raybourne, puts off from the burning yacht. On the third day they sight land, which proves to be an uninhabited island. There they find shelter and food.

Elma bemoans the fact that she has been thrown on this island with Micha, of all people. He asks her if she has forgotten that she once loved him. He also explains away many of the misunderstandings of their previous acquaintance—how her father had won his confidence, stolen his great invention and had then compelled Elma to discard him for another man. Raybourne rose to great heights, while he, Micha, sank to the lowest depths. It was for revenge that he accepted the place as second engineer on the Palma.

But Elma remains cold and resentful. Not until he is about to make the sacrifice of letting her return to the world alone, does she tell him that she loves him and that they will face the world and its story together.

"Cinderella and the Magic Slipper"

Wholesome Film Corporation's First Release a Fairy Story. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

ACTED by children, this four-reel version of the Cinderella story should make a special appeal to children. It is the introductory offering of the Wholesome Film Corporation of Chicago. Guy McConnell directed the production and has made use of many beautiful outdoor scenes and dancing scenes in which a large number of well trained children take part. These give an air of elaboration to the production.

All of the roles are played by children. They act with vivacity and seem to enjoy their work, which gives spirit to the picture. Some liberties have been taken with the plot of the fairy tale, and humorous touches are introduced. The lengthy subtitles do not aid the production. The average child can follow the story without them, which is well, for few children will be able to read these, because of the length, diction and printing.

The picture is a good one for a children's matinee, or for some special program of this sort. There is little question about its appeal to the youngsters, and it will entertain grown-ups who are interested in children. The exhibitor who intends giving entertainments for school children, or in connection with school or club activities, will find this picture well suited to his needs. It should go well in neighborhood houses catering to women and children largely.

"Do Children Count?"

Three Units in Essanay Series Starring Mary McAlister. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE amazingly good work of the little star of this series continues to be its best feature. Talent, together with the appeal of a dainty, unaffected child, gives this youngster the power of winning and holding the interest and affection of any audience.

These three stories in the series are not in themselves very pleasing. "The Little White Girl" is improbable and theatrical. "The Uneven Road" contains an unpleasant suggestion which might easily have been eliminated. "When Sorrow Weeps" is too sad to be enjoyed by the average patron.

Of course, finding stories for twelve short plays starring a six-year-old girl is not the easiest task imaginable, and the introduction of tragic themes among the lighter, "kid" stories gives variety and is also in keeping with the problem-suggesting title of the series. And the good points of the series outweighs the bad ones. An exhibitor whose patrons complain of the sadness of some of these plays might meet these criticisms with a note in his program asking the audience to note the variety of roles assumed by the baby star. This in itself is very interesting.

In general, the same supporting cast appears in each unit. In the varied stories they are sometimes miscast, and in some do excellent work. Mabel Bardine in "When Sorrow Weeps" and John Cossar in "The Uneven Road" are notably good.

When Sorrow Weeps: "Rags" is left unprovided for when her father dies, and she is about to be sent to an orphan asylum. She runs away and is befriended by a woman who is trying to live down a checkered past. The two are happy together until the woman's husband returns. He is a crook and the woman turns him over to the police. This brings the attention of the authorities to herself and "Rags" and the little girl is taken away. The woman commits suicide, and little "Rags" is lonely in an orphanage.

The Uneven Road: Little Agnes Carlson is always in trouble because of her curiosity. In one of her pranks she is blinded. Her mother is told that the child will be permanently blind unless an expensive operation is performed. The father is a gambler and has lost both his money and his position. Mrs. Carlson goes to the employer of her husband, but is met by insult. Later, in grief over the continued blindness of Agnes, she again appeals to the man. He calls at the Carlson home, is moved by charm of the little girl and relents, offering to take the father again into his employ. After a time the operation is performed and the child recovers her vision.

The Little White Girl: Gyp, an orphaned child, wins the heart of Captain Shay, a crusty old recluse. She recalls to him his daughter, Anna, whom he turned out of house years before. Ever since he has regretted his deed. To make the child happy he spends money liberally. Through a trick of fate, Gyp's dressmaker turns out to be the missing Anna, and is recognized by the Captain when he accompanies the child to the shop. Tracing Gyp's origin through the orphan asylum, they discover that she is Anna's daughter, whom the woman abandoned when she faced starvation. Thus the three are reunited in happiness.

"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray"

Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon Feature for Release August 6. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

"THE SECOND MRS. TANQUERAY" is a picturization of the famous play of the same name, with Sir George Alexander and Hilda Moore in the stellar roles. It is a story of the eternal triangle that has been treated fairly well in production. The efforts of a woman with a past who tries to bury the follies of youth, and her tragic ending when her struggle proves in vain, are realistically told.

The play is exceedingly well acted by the two leading characters and an efficient supporting cast. This vehicle will provide enjoyable entertainment, thus helping in a sense to combat the warm weather, the theater's greatest enemy. The photography is good and the settings appropriate.

The "First" Mrs. Tanqueray, a cold, strict woman, brings unhappiness to her husband by insisting that their only child be sent to a convent. After his wife's death, Paula comes into his life. Although aware that she has a past, he defies convention and marries her. Tanqueray's daughter returns from the convent, and Paula strives to win her love, but the girl is cold and distrustful.

The daughter goes to Paris and while there becomes engaged to an army officer, a former lover of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Not until he arrives at the Tanqueray estate does Paula know the real identity of the girl's fiance. The daughter divines it all and turns on her stepmother, revealing her past. Paula tells her husband everything. In a spirit of forgiveness, the daughter enters the room of Paula, but the woman with the past has found refuge in death.

"Vernon the Bountiful"

Two-Reel "Black Cat" Essanay Offering of August 4. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE is nothing remarkably good or bad about this "Black Cat" release; it will have little trouble pleasing the average audience. It is a comedy-drama, briskly and entertainingly told, with an unoriginal story, pleasingly acted. Rodney La Rock and Virginia Valli have the leading roles, supported by a capable cast.

Life to Vernon was just one party after another.

The players are all well chosen. Virginia Valli photographs well and has personality. She should be careful to avoid appearing too sullen, though, when she is acting displeased. The photography, direction and settings are good.

The Story: Vernon, a wealthy youth, is in love with Hazel, a chorus-girl. The trustees of Vernon's estate threaten to stop his allowance unless he gives the girl up, and also offer her a large sum if she refuses Vernon. This angers Hazel and she marries Vernon, although she does not love him. Vernon surprises everybody by going into partnership with his tailor and making a financial success. In this way he wins the love of Hazel and the respect of the trustees.

Dorothy Phillips in Clever Bluebird Photoplay. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS play opens with the divorce of its hero and heroine, and the progress of its events thereafter is as unusual as its beginning. It is not a problem play, just a cleverly written story cleverly presented, with a number of surprise twists to keep the attention of the audience from wandering. It is as pleasing and wholesome as Bluebirds usually are, with the added attraction of a really good plot, which unfortunately Bluebird pictures sometimes lack. Ida May Park directed the play from a story by Hugh Kahler, and to her much credit is due. She has succeeded in combining novelty and suspense with real human interest.

The photography and settings of the picture are good. Dorothy Phillips plays the leading role well except for a tendency to overact. Molly Malone has an important role, also. William Stowell is the leading man. Others in the cast are Gretchen Lederer, Gertrude Aster, Claire Du Bray and Lon Chaney.

The Story: Anne Weatherall (Dorothy Phillips) has returned to the stage after divorcing her husband, Kent. Friends of the two have tried in vain to bring about a reconciliation. Finally Nell Jerrold tricks Anne into visiting her while Kent is a guest at her house. Anne is persuaded to stay when Nell begs her to save Betty, Nell's young daughter, from marrying Kent. Anne plans to "rescue" Betty from a fate like her own. To do this, she must win Kent's love again. Then follows a struggle between the two women. At last, through an appeal to Betty's sympathy, Anne wins and she and Kent are married. Anne plans to leave Kent immediately after the marriage, for she has not forgiven him and only wants to prevent his marriage to Betty. Then she learns that Kent was never untrue to her, as she had believed and that she misjudged him. And as a further surprise, she learns that Betty and Kent were never in love, that the whole scheme had been planned to bring about a reconciliation between her and her husband.

"The Mad Lover"

Harry Rapf Presents Robert Warwick, Released by Selznick Pictures. Reviewed by George W. Graves

ROBERT WARWICK, in the role of a husband inclined to be jealous, assisted by Elaine Hammerstein, as the wife who does not enjoy in the least sharing her husband's affections with the "dog and gun," furnish the audience with real human, true-to-life husband and wife characters in a story written and directed by Leon Perret. In the offices of author and director the latter has accomplished wonders with a theme slight in itself through treatment. The whole thing breathes an air of refinement—it has to do with refined people and keeps itself wholesome. Little situations, ordinarily trivial, constitute a large part of the action and through unusual conception and human portrayal keep the audience amused and pleased. Neither story nor characters go about being funny in a mechanical way; a lack of artificiality is noticeable. It is the accurate transference to the screen of the little things of life that give the picture its vital power of entertainment. Much footage is occupied in showing husband and wife in "lovey dovey" scenes, but the trend of the story calls for it and the treatment is not ordinary. The story has one fault, in that it drops from the light comedy level into tense melodrama, with the husband killing his wife. Soon afterward we learn that "it was all a dream" and then we are back on the comedy grounds again. Although some may guess the fact of the dream through its very suddenness, the trick on the audience "does not belong." This vision is perhaps necessary to break the husband of his blindness, but the spectator needs to be taken into the author's confidence in order to maintain the original comedy intent.

The human comedy interest would have been impossible without the excellent performance of both Mr. Warwick and Elaine Hammerstein. The former proves to be just the type for the part, making it one of keen enjoyment to the spectator, while the latter, given excellent advantage by the director through artistic lightings, positions, etc., is a center of grace and charm. Valentine Petit, Edward Kimball, George Flateau, and Frank McGlynn are members of a cast which hits a high average in efficient support.

With its bright, entertaining story, its handsome scenic investiture, delightful portrayals and resourceful direction, "The Mad Lover" makes a very high grade of light entertainment. It has a particular appeal, perhaps, to young married folks.

Robert and Clarice, their intense happiness not having abated a bit since their wedding day, are the contented inhabitants of a large house in the country. Clarice tries not to be affected by the time her husband devotes to hunting. She finally has a confidential talk with an old minister friend and has it brought home to her that maternity will bring her only real happiness. Later on we discover that the discrepency of desire in this direction is on Robert's side. The two have just decided upon an extended vacation when up rolls Aunt Lolette in her auto, followed by a string of other machines whose occupants are "just a few of" her friends. Robert's anger is not cooled any, some time after, when he suspects his wife of being intimate with Count Vinzaglio, a society fop. Proceedings undergone by the party in rehearsing a Shakesperian play for charity only heighten his suspicions. In the heat of his suspicions Robert has a dream in which the tragedy of the aforementioned play mingles with one in his own life and he really kills his wife in the tragic scene of the play. He awakens with a reconstructed view towards his wife's suspected lover. The Count tries to kiss Clarice and Robert steps upon the scene in time to hear his wife say "How dare you? I'll tell my husband." Robert then administers to the Count a good old-fashioned reprimand and leaves him wallowing in a mud puddle. That Robert and his wife come to an understanding is evidenced by the closing scene, where a wide-eyed infant is held in admiring embrace.

"The Slacker's Heart"

Emerald Seven-Reel Patriotic Picture—State Rights Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

IN a straightforward fashion, this picture sets forth a plea for recruiting and a brief explanation of America's reasons for entering the war. The foundation of the picture is the struggle in the mind of a young man who has conscientious objections to war. These conscientious objections, we are shown, are the result of the influence of Von Litz, a supposed pacifist, in reality an agent of the German government.

This theme is embroidered by allegorical scenes, extracts from President Wilson's message, and subtitles of patriotic appeal. There are also many views of preparedness parades, troops drilling, warships and submarines. In comparison with the many artistic war pictures, this one seems crude in some respects. For this reason, it will go best with uncritical audiences who can easily absorb the lesson, but will not notice anything inartistic in the presentation.

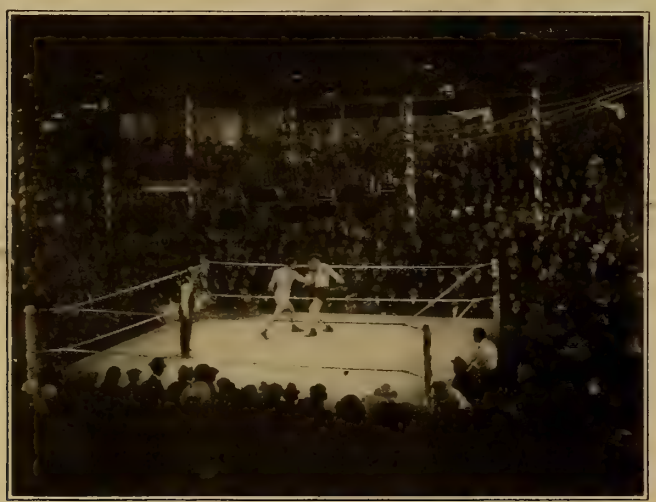
The acting of Edward Arnold as Frank Allen, the hero, is fine and adds greatly to the value of the play. It is a difficult role and Arnold's sincerity makes it convincing and sympathetic. The acting of the balance of the cast, the photography and the directing are all acceptable. Frederick J. Ireland wrote and directed the production. The sincerity of purpose of the picture, together with its timeliness and patriotic appeal, make it commendable. It holds the interest and is morally good. It should please audiences whose members are not over-critical and blase.

The Story: Frank Allen is engaged to marry Phillis, the daughter of a soldier. When war is declared with Germany, Frank refuses to enlist because he does not believe in war. His friend, Von Litz, applauds his decision, but his family and friends are grieved at his action.



The course of events which have led to the war are shown and the German effort to keep the American people indifferent. Von Litz is shown to be a German agent working out a plot against the United States with the aid of Mexicans. Finally Frank begins to distrust him, and when Frank's father and sister are drowned on a ship torpedoed by the Germans, he realizes that he is wrong in not fighting the foe. He turns against his false counsellor and at the same time the secret service department discovers and reveals Von Litz's connection with the enemy.

Supporting Edward Arnold are Byrdine Zuber, Marion Catto Laughlin, Gustave Kleeman, Chester Woods, Oscar Briggs, H. Holberg, Lillian De Turck, Tony West and T. H. Westfall.

"Pride and the Man"

William Russell as Prize-Fighter in American-Mutual Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is a prize-fight story with much human appeal. It proves an excellent vehicle for William Russell who can combine his athletic and acting abilities in the role of the pugilist-hero. Russell's work is the outstanding feature of the offering, and his large following will be pleased with the play. There are a number of unusual and interesting scenes, one of them being a realistic prize-fight scene. We would suggest, however, that for neighborhood houses, especially those catering to women and children, two close-up scenes of the hero after the battle be cut. Otherwise there are no scenes which would offend any audience.

The Fight Scene in "Pride and the Man."

There is a clever combination of action and emotion both in the plot and in the star's work. His power as an athlete will please one element in the audience, while another will be moved by his excellent repression in the scenes in which he decides to win the disgust of his bride so that she will return to her wealthy father, believing that she will be happier there.

The photography is fine, the settings elaborate. The acting of the supporting cast is generally good. Francelia Billington appears as the leading lady. Clarence Burton and George Fisher have important roles.

The Story: Jack Hastings, a prize fighter, falls in love with a society girl, Thelma. In spite of the objections of the girl's father, the two are married. Thelma is disinherited. Jack gives up his fighting profession and goes into business. He is not successful and, unknown to him, Thelma sinks her private fortune into his business. Later he learns this, and also believes that Thelma is unhappy in her new life.

He accepts an offer to fight one more fight. He also makes Thelma believe that he has been drinking heavily. Disillusioned, she goes back to her father. Jack loses the fight but wins enough money to pay Thelma the amount she had lost. A friend of Jack's tells Thelma the true story of the affair, and she goes back to Jack.

"The Slacker"

Metro Seven-Part Patriotic Special. Released August 5. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"THE SLACKER" promises to be one of the best bets of the year for showmen. It is the type of picture that stimulates word-of-mouth advertising, treating on the foremost subject of the day in a play of great dramatic strength. Every department of the production, from the handling of the biggest dramatic scenes to the electric wording of the subtitles, maintains a glowing, but dignified, spirit of patriotism—something more than noisy emotionalism—which seems to have inspired the author and director, William Christy Cabanne. As we see it, the picture should not even hurt the feelings of the slacker, that is, in an unwarranted way, since it doesn't condemn him as without hope, or resort to a method of shaming, but it extends to him a hearty hand, awakens his sense of justice and honor, and rekindles a love of country, latent in the heart of every real American, which always surges to the surface when the historic beacon lights, from the time of the birth of our nation down to the present, are recounted. Short historic episodes, such as Paul Revere's ride, etc., are incorporated in the story deftly, pictorial messages which speak eloquently of the sacrifices hitherto made for liberty, and inspire and give courage to those who are today giving their all to the country.

The story, on its own merits, is entertaining. It certainly has been given expert treatment and enacted by a cast, every member of which has realized the importance of "doing his bit" so well that the picture would not fail in its mission of serious, dignified appeal through any insincerity in acting. Emily Stevens, in the role of the noble woman who makes her husband who married her to escape military service, see the error of his way, is superb—and then use all the adjectives and superlatives you care to. Serenity, queenliness, courage, noble womanhood, characterize the part which she makes bristle with dramatic fervor. In the scenes of the climax, when she makes her supreme sacrifice, bidding her husband farewell on his start to France, without revealing her precious secret, which might be a determent to his best service, Miss Stevens has some remarkable close-ups in which she portrays her anguish with such realism that the sensitive spectator is likely to employ his emergency habit of dropping his eyes from the screen. The spectators will not soon forget the work of Emily Stevens in this picture. Others in the more conspicuous parts are Walter Miller, Leo Delaney and Eugene Borden.

Emily Stevens in the powerful Metro play, "The Slacker."

In concluding, let us congratulate Mr. Cabanne, Miss Stevens, and the whole body of their helpers, on the success that has crowned their efforts in making a real dramatic patriotic offering which will not only work a great good to Uncle Sam, but will heap up profits for exhibitors, and send away audiences, including reformed slackers, benefited by the entertainment, and feeling an imminent sense of responsibility remote from mere pseudo-patriotism.

"The Crystal Gazer"

Lasky-Paramount Release, Featuring Fannie Ward. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

IN this latest Paramount picture, Miss Ward has three unusual roles—she plays the mother and her two daughters. With her splendid dramatic ability she gives each a distinct and separate impersonation, at no time causing confusion in the minds of the audience. The exposure of fake hypnotism, the wonderful photography and double exposures, the rescue of one sister by the other from a burning house, are some of the interesting points that help to make this photodrama a success.

The capable Miss Ward has three roles in "The Crystal Gazer."

Fannie Ward does creditable work in the part she plays. She is supported by an excellent and large cast which includes Jack Dean, Winifred Greenwood, Harrison Ford, Raymond Hatton, Edythe Chapman and Jane Wolff. The scenario was written by Marian Fairfax from the story by Eve Unsell and Edna Riley. It was directed by George A. Melford.

When Rose Jorgensen learns that her husband is to be electrocuted for murder, she commits suicide. Rose, her youngest daughter, is adopted by Judge Keith and is brought up in luxury, while the other daughter, Norma, adopted by a neighbor, is raised in poverty. Calistro, a charlatan hypnotist, becomes interested in Norma and persuades her to act as his subject.

Rose is in love with Dick Alden, a young millionaire. At a parlor exhibition, Calistro notices the resemblance between Rose and Norma. He discovers that the two girls are sisters and the daughters of a murderer. With this knowledge he confronts Rose and demands money. She realizes that she cannot marry Dick with that stain on her name, so sails for Bermuda, asking that he forget her.

Out of pity for Norma, Dick promises to marry her, and so release her from the influence of Calistro. Rose returns and meets Dick at the home of Mrs. Mannering. She explains why she left him. He tells her that he has always loved her and this is overheard by Norma. That night a hot coal falls on Norma's bed and it is soon in a blaze. Rose sees the smoke, rushes in and drags Norma to safety. Norma, however, dies from the burns and Rose and Dick find the obstacles removed from the path of their happiness.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

L. C. Windom had to learn how to play a saxophone in order to tell Taylor Holmes how to go through the proper movements with it in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship."

C. E. Ashley filmed the intricacies of baking bread for a commercial picture.

Harry Beaumont spent two hours trying to get a baby to laugh at Bryant Washburn in "Skinner's Baby." He's looking for an easy job now, fighting in the trenches.

Fred E. Wright directed 1,000 national guardsmen in the big battle scenes in "The Man Who Was Afraid." It was their first time before the camera.

W. S. VanDyke persuaded a pack of wolves to act with Jack Gardner in "Land of Long Shadows" without biting him.

A message of love and affection from more than 1,000,000 loyal Americans will be dispatched to the "Sammies" on the French front by Mae Murray, patriotic Bluebird photoplay star and originator of the "Mae Murray Million Signatures Letter."

Signatures of hundreds of United States senators, congressmen and governors of states have been personally secured by Miss Murray. The letter reads:

"We, the undersigned, 'Folks back home,' rejoice at the recent successful crossing of the American expeditionary force, which, as Secretary of the Navy Daniels well says, is a story of peril and courage. The safe arrival in France of every fighting man and every fighting ship is an achievement whose auspiciousness augurs well for the future, as Secretary of War Baker states. It prompts and animates, the high thoughts that are in our hearts at this moment.

"Military necessity preventing that enthusiastic farewell that a grateful and appreciative nation was eager to accord the vanguard of a nation's glory and a nation's hope, we, the undersigned Americans, senators, congressmen, governors, mayors and all other public-spirited citizens from all walks of life, deem it fit and proper, and take pride and pleasure in subscribing our names to this plain letter of cheer to attest our heartfelt well wishes for the safety and comfort of every fighting man under your command. This wish is laid upon foundation than which none broader, none deeper, have been felt by human hearts for human welfare."

The letter will be issued in circular form to exhibitors who will be asked to conspicuously display it where the public may have opportunity to sign. Electrotypes have been made of many of the signatures of men who are leaders in politics of the Nation and these will be printed beside a blank space where others may write their names.

Francis X. Bushman has purchased forty acres of land, adjoining his estate of one hundred and twenty-five acres at Bushmanor, Maryland. This makes his place one of the largest in Maryland and is valued at $150,000, exclusive of the horses and cattle and the planting of this season.

Mary Pickford's popularity is almost uncanny. She appeared in person twice at Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles on the opening night of "The Little American," and picture-blase Los Angeles crammed the theater and entrances and mobbed the little artiste as she tried to escape to her auto.

On the way to location one day recently, an automobile carrying the

Here are about two thousand Mary Miles Minters, 1,999 done up in folders and the other in silk and poplin. The little American-Mutual star is sending many of these photographs to the "Sammies" in France. If you'd like to borrow this cut just say the word to "Motography, Chicago."

Greater Vitagraph Big V Comedy company had a blow out and chose one of the busiest street corners on the route for the performance. The only person in the company who saw anything funny in the situation was Pieatro Aramonda, who is only about five feet tall and who was dressed up as a comic cop. He jumped right into the crowd which quickly gathered and began to untangle and then to direct traffic. He did so well holding up and passing automobiles that the regular cop on the job got in on the joke, glad enough to have his services.

Tod Burns, Triangle actor, athlete and expert swimmer, distinguished himself for bravery at one of the beach resorts near Los Angeles, recently, when he helped save the lives of a score of bathers who were in peril in the heavy surf and rip tide.

Employes of the American Film Company's studios in Santa Barbara, California, pledged $250,000 to the Liberty loan. Mary Miles Minter, Gail Kane, Juliette Day and William Russell, the star quartet, led the high-signing van with $75,000. George Periolat, George Fisher, Harvey Clark, Clarence Burton, Spottiswoode Aitken, supporting players, and Directors Rollin S. Sturgeon, Edward Sloman, Henry King and Lloyd Ingraham were conspicuous in the size of their subscriptions. Practically every employe of the plant subscribed a sum in keeping with his income.

Mary Miles Minter, the American Film star, is spending her evenings in Red Cross training. She declares willingness to sacrifice her screen career for nursing at the front.

Charles Ray has a new Mercer, a brilliant red machine, and he spends most of his time in it. His friends call it the "Red Devil," but his private name for it is "Tobasco." It has everything but a wall bed and an elevator.

"Patches," the pinto which Jack Gardner rides in his Essanay western pictures, spoiled an entire scene in play by kicking over the camera. Apparently "Patches" objected to the scene.

Essanay has pensioned off "Pod," the three-legged dog appearing with Bryant Washburn in "The Golden Idiot," to a comfortable kennel and "three squares" a day back of the studios.

Virginia Valli, who is Taylor Holmes' leading woman in his first Essanay picture. "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," formerly was an interpretative dancer on the stage.

Movie Mother Goose:

Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard
To look for a piece of change.
The children were sighing
Some of them crying,
For movies within close range.

Molly Malone, petite Universal actress, eloped with a pastor's son to the little town of Santa Anna a few days ago and was married. The young man in the case is Forrest Cornett, son of the Rev. W. H. Cornett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Monica, and Miss Malone became acquainted with him about three years ago when they were attending high school. Their romance has continued ever since and both made up their minds last week that it was time the wedding bells were ringing for them.

Billie Burke, who owns several dozen Rools-Royces, startled the natives at the Famous Players studio by driving up to the door the other day in a mere Ford. It seems, however, that the charming Paramount star's aristocratic English-made car met a mere German Mercedes and refused even to pass it on the road. As a result Miss Burke was forced to complete her journey to the studio via the much more democratic but quite serviceable Ford.

Crane Wilbur has added several Alaskan furs to his already large collection. One day last week a sailor, just returned from the far north, gained admittance to Mr. Wilbur's dressing room by holding a number of unusually gorgeous pieces. No salesmanship was necessary in making Mr. Wilbur a purchaser.

Baby Marie Osborne wore her first wig last week in "Baby Pulls the Strings." Marie proves to be as winsome a little "grown up" with long curls as she does a "cute" baby. Her studio friends now call her "Miss" Osborne.

When Mary Pickford has a holiday, she spends most of it attending motion picture theaters!

Universal Program

Out Again, In Again—Joker—August 16.—With Wm. Franey and Harry Mann. Professor Quince was sure he could restore life to the dead if he could get a current of electricity strong enough. The Warden was willing for him to try as the electric chair was to be idle that day. Prisoner No. 13 forces the porter of Prof. Quince's museum to change clothes with him. Before he could make his get-away, some one enters the place. He hides in the mummy case, which is carried away to the prison. Dumfounded he finds himself back in the chamber from which he had recently escaped. He decides to do the job himself. The near-sighted professor believes he is witnessing a miracle. Bill escapes, but is finally brought back to jail.

The Double Floor—Episode Eight of the Gray Ghost—August 13.—With Emory Johnson, Priscilla Dean and Harry Carter. This episode is just as exciting as the last. Morn Light and Hildreth try to make their escape from the House of Mystery. Marco is captured by the ghost's men, but manages to escape and rides off to warn Jerry that the Ghost is at Arabin's. The Ghost arrives at Arabin's and demands the necklace. Backing over to a secretary, Arabin opens a drawer, and pulling out a revolver, fires at the Gray Ghost.

Algeria, Old and New—(Split Reel)—Powers—August 18.—On the streets of Tlemcen, in the country, where great wastes have been allowed to run wild, the Negrier Falls and nature's wonders in Algeria, the garb of the desert and its trimmings, the caravan, the walls of Mansoura, erected by Abou Yakoub are among the most interesting views of this educational. Close ups of Negrier Falls and of the ancient olive groves, showing how the trees are trained to form a cup, are included in the offering. On the same real with, "Doing His Bit."

Doing His Bit—(Split Reel)—Henry couldn't join the army so thought he would be a farmer instead. But farm life did not quite agree with our hero. He chased a cow, forgot what he didn't ever known about milking, met a widow and a child, but, when it came to "raising" things, the only thing that he could raise was—What Sherman called war. On the same reel with, "Algeria, Old and New."

Back to the Kitchen—Joker—August 18.—With Gale Henry, Milton Sims, and Charles Haefli. Halley is a henpecked married man. In pleading with his wife not to leave him, she throws him into the lake. His wife believes he has been drowned and sorrows for him. But hubby crawls out and meets a friend who wants him to go on a hunting trip. He goes. In the meanwhile, Mrs. Halley receives her husband's insurance. Hector at once offers his hand and heart, which Mrs. Halley accepts. Halley returns from his hunting trip to find his wife being married to his rival. The wedding party breaks up. Hubby is strangely changed in temperment. He now becomes boss and orders his wife back into the kitchen.

The Rushin' Dancers—Nestor—August 14.—With Eddie Lyons. The men determine to break up the dancing school for "women only." One of their members dresses as a woman and opens a school to make the women jealous. When the women hear of the new class they plan to run the "female teacher" out of town. The men rescue the "teacher" just as he is about to be tarred and feathered, and Prof. Wiggle N. Squirm is run out of town, leaving the inhabitants once more at peace with each other.

Cheyenne's Pal—(Two Reels)—Star Featurette—August 16.—With Harry Carey. Cheyenne Harry's horse was his pal and he would not part with him. Harry found a pretty dance-hall girl and blew his money in at one sitting. Then she commenced to look around for another easy mark. This put the befuddled Harry on his mettle. He wondered out and found a buyer for Cactus, his horse. When he finally came to himself his thoughts again reverted to his pal. That night at twelve, Harry cautiously went for his horse, but did not stop with the cry of halt. Jim told the boys that any fellow who thinks as much of his horse as Harry was entitled to keep it.

The Brass Girl—(Two Reels)—Victor—August 17.—With Jane Gail, Matt Moore and Frank Lyon. Jane and Martin live in the same apartment house. She is a sculptress and lives on the first floor, while he is a musician and occupies the floor above her. They are both temperamental and become antagonized through their respective arts. Finally things come to a happy ending when a thief enters Jane's room and Martin goes to her aid. They decide to be married and live only in one apartment.

Rough Stuff—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—August 15.—With Dan Russell and Eunice Murdock. Mrs. Doehound runs her hotel in her own peculiar way with her husband as a flirtatious helper. Mr. and Mrs. Potash arrive. He sells costly gowns to fair women and his wife is his model. Things begins to happen when Doehound becomes jealous of the buyer, who has first peek at the models, and attempts to impersonate him. The ambulances of two or three hospitals are called in to cart off the participants.

General Program

Getting the Coin—Jaxon Comedy—(One Reel).—Pokes and Jabs are forcibly ejected from the Family Vaudeville theater, and find that they have between them just eight cents. Jabs discovers a paid-up insurance policy in one of his pockets, and in order to collect tries to get injured. Finally he beats Pokes up with a coupling pin, swatches him in bandages and takes him to the insurance office, where he is informed that the policy expired two weeks before. Pokes goes to the hospital. Professor Baken has a theory that by the application of intense heat he may bring to life inanimate objects. Parcy starts out on a hunt for a subject for the professor and meets Jabs. They go after Pokes, but he refuses to be baked. A chase sends Pokes into the oven of the professor. The oven explodes and after an aerial flight, Pokes lands on the ground beside Jabs who is counting the money given him by Parcy. They declare dividends and they agree that there is more than one way of getting the coin.

Selig World Library No. 13—August 8.—Mississippi Bay, Japan, named by Commodore Perry in 1854. Cloth Weavers of Java—Javanese have developed a high degree of civilization through commercial contact with India. Home of Thomas Jefferson—Monticello, Charlottsville, Va., where Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. A Japanese Seaweed Harvest—some species abound in jelatin, some are used for food, and some are burned for chemical salts.

The Mainspring—Falcon Features—(Four Reels).—Ned Gillett's father kills himself when it is learned that he had embezzled. Ned fears that his sweetheart would not marry the son of an embezzler, so he goes West without a word and makes for the mountains. A villain by the names of Jones provides him with adventure, and Larence, an old miner he has rescued from the clutches of Jones, dies and leaves him an abandoned mine. Later he rescues a young Easterner from Jones and finds that it is the brother of his sweetheart, Frances. The two become partners and are fought by Jones at every turn, but a final fight kills Jones, injures Ned and brings Frances to his side.

A Bathtub Marriage—Johnny and Emma Ray Comedy—(One Reel).—Casey advertises his small country hotel for sale and Mrs. Lotts Gush, a rich widow, stops there with a view to buying it. Casey is bell hop, waiter, clerk and bar tender. A fat traveing man gets stuck in the bathtub and Casey pulls him out. Then the widow wants something to eat and he goes out after the cow with an axe to get some beef. The widow meanwhile takes a bath, gets stuck in the tub and pleads for help. Casey tells her he will help her out if she will consent to marry him. She assents and Casey has the parson marry them at once.

Those Terrible Telegrams—Sparkle Comedy—(One Reel).—Tom Winters and May Summers marry and remove to the city. They are joined later by Jerry Summers who marries Miss June Fall a year later. On the wedding day Jerry joyfully telegraphs his mother that she has a new daughter. On the same day Tom telegraphs his mother announcing the arrival of a new baby. The telegrams arrive together and are misdirected by the local operator. Mrs. Winter receiving Mrs. Summer's telegram and vice versa. The horrified mothers at once set out for the city where, after an amusing scene, everything is satisfactorily explained.

Her Perilous Ride—(One Reel)—Selig—August 11.—Lieutenant Borden is called to Fort Congo to suppress the lawlessness of the renegade, Jahalli. James McGraw and his wife, with their pretty doughter Doris go to their ostrich farm. Jahalli and his savages descend on the farm from the hills, laying siege to the home and capturing the horses. Doris escapes and mounts an ostrich, which she rides to the fort for help. Lieutenant and his soldiers rescue the McGraws from the burning home and later, when peace has been restored, receive the hand of the pretty Doris as his reward.

A Man, a Girl and a Lion—(Two Reels)—Selig—August 6.—James Otto, the son of a circus owner, goes into the jungle on a lion hunting expedition, and with him go John Davis and his daughter Gene. Gene is betrothed to Jan Kail, a young farmer. Otto is a man of the world and makes love to the girl. Jan and Otto have a fight and Jan writes to Gene that he will not trouble her any more. The party brings a lion out of the forest and when Otto goes away Gene steals from her home and goes with him. On the ship she discovers his real character. She becomes a circus performer, always annoyed with the attention of Otto. A dwarf with the circus hates Otto, and his ill treatment of the lion wins the hatred of the animal. The dwarf cuts the bars of the lion's cage and when Otto and the pretty Gene are struggling one night breaks out and kills him. The girl peads for the custody of the lion and is allowed to take him back to South Africa. Here she surprises her lover, who forgives her and takes her back.

Butterfly

Midnight Man—Butterfly—August 13.—With Jack Mulhall and Ann Kroman. Bob Moore worked night after night in his father's laboratory trying to invent a safe that could not be opened. He objected to his father consolidating with John Hardin, saying that anyone could open the Hardin safe. Hardin was furious and said that if he opened the safe in his library, he could have anything he has. After many exciting incidents Bob is successful in opening the safe. He then tells Hardin that he will now take the best he has. He puts his arms around Hardin's daughter. "Now go ahead with your consolidation," says Bob complacently to the two fathers.

FOx

Wrath of Love—(Five Reels)—Fox—August 4.—Starring Virginia Pearson. Roma Winet, author of a famous novel, "Jealousy," has just married Rob Lawson and lives with him very happily, although a victim of jealousy herself. Ethel Clarke, once her dearest chum, is engagtd to Dave Blake, a friend of Bob's. Dave is called to war and leaves Ethel in Bob's eare. Ethel goes to Bob's mother and when Dave comes home on a furlough Bob goes to the house to warn him that spies are following him. Roma sees Bob and Ethel together and then begins her misery. She misunderstands every move Ethel and Bob make in the interest of Dave, though her husband pleads with her to wait the explanations. Finally all the clouds are brushed away and Roma is cured.

K. E. S. E.

Open Places — Essanay — (65 mins. Screen time)—August 20.—Mollie Andrews is a little New England school teacher who goes out to Rawhide, Montana, to teach the West its manners. She marries Dan Clark, hoping to mold him over. Dan is a bad man at heart and when the first blush of honeymooning is over treats her brutally. He then slays one of his own kind and escapes to Canada. Constable Calhoun of the Royal Mounted Police, keeps an eye on Mollie, looking out for her welfare, and though their mutual friendship ripens into love, they are loyal to Clark. Clark returns and in a fight with Calhoun falls dead. Mollie is thus released from her marriage vows, and to seek a brighter future with Calhoun.

The Magic of Spring—A humorous picture, made to the lines of a fantastic poem, tells the story of a young man's dream. He wanders into the park, but scared by the rude cop falls asleep on a bench and dreams of ancient Greece.

The Four R's.—At a modern American military school the old three R's of 'readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmatic" have been supplemented by a fourth—riding. Pictures of Culver Military Academy.

The Story of Plymouth Rock.—A quaint picture reminiscent of Longfellow's famous poem, "The Courting of Miles Standish." The landing of the pilgrims from the Mayflower, their treaty with Chief Masosoit, and the courting of Standish and John Alden.

The Customary Two Weeks.—The story of the fortunes of George Extell, who is given the "customary two weeks" and who later returns to the factory as its head and manager, after securing a large war order on his personality. He wins the girl he wants and makes a friend out of his former enemy, who fired him.

Metro

The Slacker—(Seven Reels)—Metro Special—August 5.—Produced by Wm. Christy Cabanne and featuring Emily Stevens. Margaret Christy, descendent of a line of patriots, and a noble and inspired woman herself, is in love with Robert Wallace, who, unknown to her, is a slacker. Soon after the declaration of war, Margaret consents to marry Robert, not realizing his intent to escape military service. Robert's brother, as well as an old lover of Margaret's, enlist. Shamelessly Robert confides to his brother his reason for hurrying up his marriage, which reason his wife, horrified, overhears. From this time on it is a struggle of the wife and the other man to bring Robert around, and, although complications over Margaret's supposed infidelity, etc., set in, the husband at last is turned into a staunch patriot, and he goes to France without learning the precious secret of Margaret that a baby is on its way. Reviewed in this issue.

Paramount

The Crystal Gazer—(Five Reels)—Paramount. —Featuring Fannie Ward. This production exposes the methods of fake hypnotism. Many interesting incidents take place, one of which is the rescue of one sister from a burning house by the other—both sisters being portrayed by Fannie Ward. Reviewed in this issue.

World

Soul's Adrift—(Five Reels)—Peerless-World. —With Ethel Clayton and Milton Sills. Elma and Micah are the only survivors of the burning yacht Palma. How they finally land on a deserted island, their experiences there, and the renewal of their love for each other is told in a convincing manner. Reviewed in this issue.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

The Second Mrs. Tanqueray—(Five Reels)—Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon—August 6.—With Sir George Alexander and Hilda Moore. This is a story of a woman with a past who tries to live down the follies of youth, and her tragic ending when her efforts prove in vain. Reviewed in this issue.

Richard, the Brazen—(Five Reels)—Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—July 23.—Featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey. Bill Williams and Jacob Renwyk are business rivals, each trying to beat the other on a munitions contract. Williams' son, Richard, visiting in London, comes to America with Lord Croyland, who has the contract. Croyland meets with a serious accident. To avoid publicity he lies about his identity so that the papers have it that young Williams is the one injured. In the role that the lord thrust upon him Richard appears at the Renwyk home. It is some time before he finds that his host is the rival of his father, but when he does, he decides to waive all hostility, since the eyes of Renwyk's daughter, Harriet, speak louder than the duty to his father. The deception is at last discovered, but not until Richard has placed old Renwyk under considerable obligations to him and a number of encounters with burglars and blackmailers have been successfully weathered. The young people at last force their fathers into a renewal of a friendship long severed. Reviewed in this issue.

The Second Mrs. Tanqueray—(Five Reels)—Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—August 6.—Featuring Sir George Alexander and Hilda Moore. The first Mrs. Tanqueray is a cold austere woman, who insists on sending the only child to a convent. When she dies she leaves Mr. Tanqueray more lonely than ever and he shortly falls in love with a fascinating, but strong-willed woman whose home life is unhappy. When her husband divorces her he marries her and takes her to his country estate. The quiet atmosphere of the well-ordered home is not to her liking and she and her husband have many a stormy scene as he tries to win her from her former associates. Then the little daughter, now grown, comes home. She is cold to everything but her father and will not respond to her step-mother's advances. Things go from bad to worse and the daughter goes to Paris against protest. In a fit of pique the second Mrs. Tanqueray withholds the daughter's letters from her father, but when she owns this and asks for another chance he forgives her. Not until the daughter and her soldier lover come to the Tanqueray estate does she know that her daughter's fiance is a former lover of hers. The daughter in a flash divines the whole situation and she turns on the woman in a flood of resentment. Tanqueray, tortured beyond reason, is seeking the advice of his closest men friends, while above in her room the daughter is seeking relief and guidance in prayer. When she goes to the room of her step-mother, in a spirit of charity and forgiveness she finds her dead by her own hand.

Chicago Notes

THERE is a new official in the Mallers building headquarters of the Fox Film Corporation. He is Edward Manley, formerly with Elliott & Sherman of Minneapolis, and George Kleine, who holds the position of manager of Fox features.

Mrs. Alexander Pantages was in Chicago for several days last week on her way to Seattle.

N. O. Turner, formerly a Milwaukee Fox road man, has evacuated that position and has gone to the celluloid coast to continue work in connection with the silent art.

Wesley Smith, chief studio camera operator for the Rothacker Company, is engaged now in photographing a five-reel feature entitled "The Penny Philanthropist."

Hughey Mack, who has been known as Vitagraph's fat comedian, stopped in Chicago long enough to give out the news that he has joined the L-Ko Komedies, released through Universal.

The Reel Fellows Club held a reorganization meeting at the club rooms, 207 South Wabash, last Monday night. Plans for the club's future were discussed by the members.

A performance of "The Slacker" was given by the Red Cross unit of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the Beach Theater, Fifty-first street and Harper avenue, last Thursday. The proceeds will go to the Red Cross. Captain W. A. Moffett, of the Great Lakes station, made an address. Twenty-five prominent society women acted as patronesses. The performance was held from 2:30 p. m. to 11 p. m.

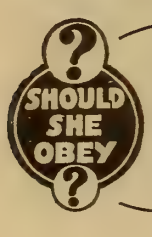
Julius Singer, one of the pioneers of the film game, is now in the city looking after the Alice Howell Comedies.

The Gold Theater, which has been redecorated throughout, was opened again last week with the special feature, "Parentage."

Stuart Acheson, special advertising man from the Fox home office, was in Chicago a couple of days last week conferring with J. E. O'Toole, of the Chicago office, and arranging some special Fox publicity. He was on his way to the Coast.

Edwin Silverman, who for the past two years has been with the V. L. S. E., has been named to assume charge of the sales promotion department of the Butterfly features in this territory.

In the recent wreck of the interurban car near Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, Stanley Spoehr, salesman at Pathe's Milwaukee office, was injured. The first thing he thought of, when he came to, was some feature contracts which he had in his pocket.



Terry Ramsaye, publicity flinger for Mutual, when confronted in his lair last week didn't have a darn bit of news. But do you suppose he would admit it? Not much. We had to spend a half hour listening to him before we found it out.

Fred A. Keller, manager of the St. Louis Mutual branch, paid a visit to the home office last week. He got in during the hot spell so he was perfectly at home as far as temperature was concerned. And furthermore, St. Louis hasn't got it on Chicago by so many cubits in regard to smoke.

I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Chicago Bluebird office, was given a surprise by the Bluebird employes, when he walked into his office and found it gaily decorated, and all his employes seated around a large table filled with goodies. The occasion of the surprise was Mr. Van Ronkel's "fourth" fortieth birthday.

Among the Chicago theater men affected by the draft are the following:

Miss Ruth Armstrong, a former Chicago girl and daughter of a former newspaper man here, is being searched for all over Cuba by means of her picture thrown on the screens of all the theaters of the island, under charge of the police investigation. Miss Armstrong disappeared several months ago and the trail has been traced to Cuba.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president American Film Company, Inc., and Signal Film Corporation, has gone to Santa Barbara to inspect his extensive film interests. While on the coast, Mr. Hutchinson will supervise and get under way several elaborate productions starring Mary Miles Minter and his newly acquired Broadway favorite, Juliette Day, whose screen debut is set for next month.

The Lea Bel Company, of 64 West Randolph street, which has charge of the distribution of the Motoy Comedies in Illinois, Indiana, and Southern Wisconsin, report an unusual demand for short subjects by the exhibitors, and announce extraordinary bookings throughout their entire territory. They say that Motoy Comedies are the most popular short subjects they have ever handled.

The local triangle office has seen several changes since the arrival of Manager Woody. R. P. Madden, from New York, is his new sales manager, and George Bromley, George Wilson and B. A. Lucas are three new salesmen added to the force, making a total of eleven local Triangle picture pushers. Mr. Woody reports that in spite of the fact that some theaters are closing, Triangle's business is steadily increasing.

The colored folk of Chicago are gradually getting hold of picture and vaudeville houses on the south side. The Pickford at East Thirty-fifth street and Michigan avenue, and The Owl, at Forty-seventh and State streets, are now owned by negroes. All of the south side theaters show a decided increase in black attendance, due to the fact that some 100,000 negroes migrated into the city from the South during the past year.

Pathe had another fire scare the first part of last week when a blaze broke out next door to their temporary shipping and storage rooms at 172 West Washington street. The fire loss amounted to $20,000, but this time it was borne by one of Messenger's restaurants instead of the film exchange. They say lightning never strikes twice in the same place, but sometimes it comes too close to be comfortable.

Manager C. W. Bunn of the Pathe exchange declares that despite the fire that recently gutted the Chicago quarters, the Windy City office is doing a tremendous business. "We have 100 per cent more advance bookings than a year ago and are doing 30 per cent more business now than at the same time last year. And if the fire hadn't scattered our offices to the four corners of the compass these figures would have been still more astonishing."

---

C. P. Sheehan, special Fox representative, and brother of W. R. Sheehan, spent several days working with Manager J. E. O'Toole of the local Fox office, last week, particularly in connection with the special showings of the big new Fox Standard Pictures, "The Honor System," "Jack in the Beanstalk," and "The Conqueror." These splendid big films were shown with musical accompaniment at the Colonial on the mornings of last Thursday and Friday. These are the first of the big Fox productions to be known in the future as Fox Standard Pictures.

Among the pioneers of the great picture business, a place rightfully belongs to James Maher, who, though still in the early forties, has a long period of achievement to his credit.

To him belongs the distinction of being a pioneer exhibitor of Chicago, as fifteen years ago he started the first "store show" on lower State street in that city. Afterwards, in 1905, he and William H. Swanson embarked in the exchange business at 79 South Clark street, Chicago.

After selling out his Chicago theaters and film exchanges, he, with Bill Steiner and Herbert Miles, started the International Producing Company, in New York.

For the past few years, "Jim," as he is familiarly known throughout the trade, has been associated with Bill Steiner in the Photo Drama Company in producing, selling and booking their own productions. Recently, he disposed of his stock in the Photo Drama Company. Mr. Maher has under consideration several large propositions, and he is open to consider others.

"After the Ball," "The House of Bondage," "How Molly Made Good," are the names of some of the recent film successes with which Mr. Maher was identified. His rating can be obtained from Bradstreet & Dunn, Chicago. Mail will reach him at the offices of the Photo Drama Company, Chandler Building, New York City.

MY LIFE

BY MARY MILES MINTER OF THE AMERICAN FILM COMPANY.

NO, I was not born in New York, but when I was very tiny I went there with my sister, Margaret. Shreveport, Louisiana, was my birthplace in April, 1902.

The charming Mary Miles would make a delightful farmer's wife—now wouldn't she? She looks as well in overalls as in satin or silk.

I was raised in the grease-paint atmosphere and in my fifth year made my stage debut with Nat Goodwin in "Cameo Kirby." Later I appeared in support of Robert Hilliard, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and Mme. Bertha Kalich.

It was while playing "The Littlest Rebel" in Chicago in 1912 that I was obliged to change my name from Juliet Shelby to Mary Miles Minter. When the Farnums, Dustin and William, retired from the show, I took the company out in my own name and thereby got into difficulty with the child labor law which has a ban on child actresses.

Two and one-half years ago I did my first motion picture. It was a dainty little thing called "The Fairy and the Waif," put out by an eastern concern. After that premiere I went into pictures for good, doing "Barbara Fritchie," "Emma of Stork's Nest" and several others for another studio in the east.

In 1913 I came to the American where I shall remain for some time to come. My first picture made in Santa Barbara was "Youth's Endearing Charm." The first contract completed in May of this year, I signed another for a long period. The first picture under the new agreement is "Charity Castle," to be released in the near future. I am now at work on my second, tentatively named, "The Call to Arms."

YOU will want to adopt this new, modern idea because it will make your theatre the most popular in town.

Projection with the new Sheck Universal Adapter and Mazda Projector Lamps has proven a success in the theatres where used on test during the past two years.

Our first announcement received the attention and interest of hundreds of progressive exhibitors.

YOUR theatre can be equipped with the Sheck Universal Adapter without interrupting your program schedule, and at a cost no greater than the saving in bills for electric current effected by the new equipment during the first year.

So at no extra cost you will be able to get better projection on the screen, eliminate "flicker" and eye strain, and therefore get the crowds in your theatre.

Pictures Escape War Tax

ONLY HOUSES CHARGING 25 CENTS OR MORE ASSESSED—LEGITIMATE PAYS

FATE has again favored the picture industry. The film interests are to escape taxation under the new war tax bill just completed by the United States Congress.

Although the theatrical field will be required to contribute $23,000,000 in tax, annually, towards the prosecution of the war, only those picture theaters charging more than 25 cents admission will come under this measure, according to press reports.

Motion Pictures Aid Necessity

The Senate war committee decided that pictures, being the poor people's amusement and recreation, are practically a necessity in keeping the spirit and morale of the country normal in time of war, and that the poor man is taxed now at so many points that it is advisable to forbear placing any burden upon his most invaluable recreation. The tax was placed upon houses charging more than 25 cents admission, with the idea that the patrons attending are of a class better able to bear the burden of an amusement tax.

Senate's Opinion of Pictures

The section of the tax bill referring to motion pictures is as follows:

Third—Your committee recommends that moving picture shows, the maximum charge for admission to which is 25 cents, be exempted from the admission charge proposed in section 700 of the House bill. The moving picture show has become a national institution. It possesses many valuable educational features. These pictures are exhibited not only in places of amusement, but they are used in schools and colleges for the purpose of illustration and education.

In addition they are largely patronized, especially those of the kind proposed for exemption from this tax, by people of small means. These reasons as well as others that might be given justify the exemption from the admission taxes of this class of amusement.

Tax on Other Amusements

A tax of 10 per cent was placed by the war committee on admission to legitimate theaters and all other places of amusement, including cabarets. Places of amusement that sell tickets at prices in excess of the regular established price, must pay a tax of 50 per cent of this additional price. This additional tax is to be paid by the "scalpers" selling the tickets.

Such amusement as chautauquas, lectures and agricultural affairs are exempted from the war tax.

The section of the war tax bill concerning the theater tax, as reported from the Senate, reads as follows:

Section 700. That from and after the first day of ——, nineteen hundred and seventeen, there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid (a) a tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the person making such payment; provided that the tax on admission of children where an admission charge for children is made shall in every case be 1 cent;

And (b) a tax of 5 cents for each admission of each person (except in the case of a bona fide employee and children under 12 years of age and municipal officers on official business) admitted free to any place for admission to which a charge is made, to be paid by the person so admitted.

Tax on Admissions

And (c) a tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof paid for admission to any public performance for profit, at any cabaret or any similar entertainment to which the charge for admission is wholly or in part included in the price paid for refreshment, service or merchandise, the amount paid for such admission to be computed under rules prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, such tax to be paid by the person paying for such refreshment, service or merchandise.

AMERICAN EXHIBITORS ASSN.

Issue Weekly Bulletin and State Aims to Exhibitors —Organization Started in Thirty States —Dues Six Dollars a Year

The American Exhibitors Association, through its first weekly bulletin makes the following statement of its aims to the exhibitors of America:

The purpose of the American Exhibitors Association is to create and maintain a national body of motion picture exhibitors, to improve and protect the motion picture business, to encourage the production and showing of motion pictures of high character, to protect the individual member from unfair methods of trade and other abuse, to work for the best interests of the industry as a whole, and adjust and arbitrate differences between members and various other branches of the industry; to assist the United States government in the work of public information in times of war and other great crises, and in every lawful way to promote generally, the prosperity, uplift and betterment of the motion picture industry.

In accordance with this purpose, and fulfilling the fundamental idea that the American Exhibitors Association is, in deed as well as in fact, a true exhibitors' organization, a bulletin will be issued each week in time for the editions of the trade papers, in which the doings of the association to date will be concisely given for the information of all exhibitors.

The organization is already started in thirty states, and is working. A national convention will be held in Detroit next year. Exhibitors can join the new organization by communicating with the headquarters at 1110 Times building, New York. The dues are six dollars a year.

Re-issues Not Ethics Problem

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, replying to a question as to the ethics of re-issuing pictures in which stars at present with other companies appear prominently, said:

"I do not think the matter of ethics enters into the situation at all, because I do not think ethical considerations can be applied.

"A motion picture, primarily, is an entertainment, and its longevity is measured only by public favor. Pictures that appeal to the public taste may go on and on for years, while others which do not carry the proper appeal may be shelved within a few months after their issuance. Good pictures are like good books, and good books live forever. The mere fact that a certain individual star may be in a popular feature is only incidental to the main thing—the demand of the public for that particular picture. It would be manifestly stupid business for a company to shelve a picture simply because some star who had appeared in it had changed his or her affiliation after the picture had been made.

"Star contracts do not measure the life of a picture. It is public demand, as I said before.

"It is well known that virtually every star of prominence—that is, the persons who won recognition only as screen players and not as stage favorites—has, at one time or another, been a Vitagraph player.

"The result is that in our library we have hundreds of splendid subjects, the stories of which are better than the average photoplay story of today, which were enacted by the most talented men and women the screen claimed.

"Vitagraph re-issues are put forth solely on their merits as vehicles of entertainment and for no other reason, ethical or otherwise."

Exhibitors Prosper, Says Auger

E. Auger, eastern division manager for the Vitagraph distributing organization, has returned from a trip through his territory, and reported to President Albert E. Smith that prospects for fall business are very promising. He added that this summer has had a less depressing effect on motion picture business than any during his recollection.

"I have been in the motion picture business for fifteen years," Mr. Auger declared apropos of his report to President Smith, "and during that entire time I never saw conditions so favorable at this season as they are now. I went as far west as Cleveland and Detroit, as far north as Toronto and as far south as New Orleans, coming up along the Atlantic Coast, and I found exhibitors generally satisfied with their summer business and enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season.

"I asked them what had created such a feeling of confidence and optimism and the reply usually was that meritorious pictures are making more picture patrons."

Loew Books "Lone Wolf"

Herbert Brenon's thrill masterpiece, "The Lone Wolf," has been booked over the Loew circuit by the Selznick New York exchange. The success of the big Brenon production at the Broadway Theater, where at dollar prices it withstood the extreme heat wave of the past few weeks, and its equal triumph at the Studebaker Theater in Chicago at production prices are jointly responsible for the Loew booking at the top notch figure.

"The Fringe of Society," the big seven-part superfeature which marks the first George Racker-Foursquare product, has just been finished.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews MOTOGRAPHY publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request MOTOGRAPHY *will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. ---

A Daughter of the Poor, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"The poorest picture I have run in some time. Picture is without a plot and is padded from start to finish. It did not hold the interest of my patrons. Half the house left before it was half over. Business poor."—Adolph Schutz, Elks Theater, Silver City, N. Mex.

---

The Crab, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"This is the best five-reel feature I ever ran. It is excellent. The star is great and has become a favorite here. This wonderful picture is fine from start to finish. Do not be afraid to book it. It is a good box-office attraction."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"Good in every detail."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

Her Nature Dance, with Betty Schade (Keystone)—"Fine comedy."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Magnificent Meddler, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Fair drawing card."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

A Magnificent Meddler, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph—"A good picture, with a good story, plenty of action and good photography."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

A Million Bid, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A good picture of the old school. Another case of reissue being out of date in every detail."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

---

A Million Bid, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Pleased our patrons very well. This star is well liked here."—Peter Trocchiano, Pastime Theater, St. Francisville, La.

---

The Suspect, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Wonderful feature of Russian life before the revolution. Good business for two days."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

---

The Man Behind the Curtain, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"Good detective story. Drew fair business for us."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

---

My Official Wife, with Clara Kimball Young (Vitagraph)—"A good picture, with excellent drawing power. Pleased all."—Peter Trocchiano, Pastime Theater, St. Francisville, La.

---

Thou Art the Man, with Virginia Pearson (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Business not very good on account of hot weather."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

Sally in a Hurry, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"A light comedy drama, almost too light to balance the scales. Just an ordinary picture."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

---

The Hawk, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A better five-reel picture has never been in any house. Directing perfect. Star's work wonderful. Everyone pleased."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

---

Durand of the Bad Lands, with Dustin Farnum (Fox)—"With this we did more business than on any other Sunday in three months. It drew a good house all

A Naked Soul, with Susan Grandais (World)—"Nothing extra, but a nice picture. Business fair."—Peter Trocchiano, Pastime Theater, St. Francisville, La.

The Little Duchess, with Madge Evans (World)—"Business and picture both very good."—E. C. Miller, Alcazar Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Youth, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"A pretty good picture which brought fairly good business and pleased the audience very well."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Skinner's Dress Suit, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Pleased everyone. A clever play of business for business people."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Country That God Forgot, with Thomas Santschi (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Fair."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

Filling His Own Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Picture fair, not quite up to Essanay's standard, but a good money-getter. A big audience liked it."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Royal Pauper, with Francine Larrimore (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"This picture packed our theater in an off season. Audience liked it and anyway the box-office is the answer."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Too much cannot be said of this subject. Our patrons simply went wild over it. Exhibitors, book this picture, by all means."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Single Code, with Crane Wilbur (Horsley-Mutual)—"Good picture to fair business. Wilbur is not popular here."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Youth's Endearing Charm, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"This is an excellent production which pleased our patrons very much. Miss Minter at her best. Drew fair business in spite of rain."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Wildcat, with Jackie Saunders (Horkheimer-Mutual)—"It is pictures like this which will make 'movies' permanent. Brought good business."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Common Law, with Clara Kimball Young (Selznick)—"An excellent picture which did not play to as much as it should. Star is fine."—J. W. Alexander, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Poppy, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"An unnatural subject and a disconnected story, which went over on account of the popularity of the star. Patrons' opinions differed as to the merits of the picture."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Luke's Lively Honeymoon, with Harold Lloyd (Pathe comedy)—"This boy is a comer. The audience screamed at the antics of Lonesome Luke. Good business."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Fires of Youth, with Frederick Warde (Pathe)—"A very good subject with the former tragedian at his best. Our patrons were well pleased with this picture."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Cigarette Girl, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"A fairly good picture which brought fairly good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Two Laughs, with Ben Turpin (Essanay)—"A very good comedy. Turpin is a fair drawing card. Scenery and direction, O. K."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Eye of Envy, with Crane Wilbur (Art Dramas)—"A very good picture, with excellent photography. Patrons were well pleased."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Limb of Satan, with Ruth Stonehouse (Gold Seal-Universal)—"Star perfect. Good story. Poor business, although the weather was cool. The title is O. K., but the star is not well known."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Beautiful Impostor, with Mary Fuller (Universal)—"Story good, but wrong title. Star O. K. Good business for first class theater."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Soubrette, with Gale Henry (Joker-Universal)—"Same old story. Direction O. K."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Kentucky Cinderella, with Ruth Clifford (Bluebird)—"One of the cleanest and most enjoyable subjects we have ever shown. Excellent acting, splendid directing. Gave excellent satisfaction."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Doll's House, with Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"A very good picture which played to good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

---

The Little Terror, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"Pleased all. Story light, but the star, support and good direction made it very pleasing. Some minor faults."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

---

The Clock, with Franklin Farnum (Bluebird)—"The usual Bluebird. Story different and very good. Pleased all."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Reward of the Faithless, with Betty Schade (Bluebird)—"Had it not been for the suggestive scenes in the first reel of this picture it would be one of the greatest produced this year. Star's work was wonderful. I don't remember ever seeing a greater five-reel picture than this, but it's too suggestive. The people won't stand for it. If all exhibitors are like me, just a few more of these and they will have no business. Take this picture for instance, the scene in the first reel where the father drives the girl into the streets to sell herself could have been eliminated, also the one where the man, after taking her to his room, tears the clothes down her back and bites her on the shoulder. The director who will put such stuff as this over doesn't know what the public wants. If it is imperative that such scenes as I have tried to describe be put into forthcoming productions, pictures in a year from now will draw just about like a wet stogie."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Serials and Series

The Poisoned Cup, with True Boardman (Adventures of Stingaree, Kalem series)—"A good story Series going strong. Business fair. Paul Hurst is better liked than the star."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe)—"We are running the sixth episode and I must say that it pleases the women and the men as well. It is very interesting. It is the most fascinating serial I ever ran. The stars are good and are good money-getters."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

The Mystery of the Double Cross, with Mollie King (Pathe serial)—"This is also a very good production. It can be described in just one word, 'great'."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

The Railroad Raiders, with Helen Homes (Signal-Mutual)—"Best serial we have run. Kept up interest during hot weather."—P. G. Estee, Star Theater, Alexandria, S. D.

---

"The stars that people like here and who are good drawing cards are Alice Brady, Theda Bara, Robert Warwick and Clara Kimball Young," writes Peter Trocchiano, Pastime Theater, Saint Francisville, La.

---

"The best money-getters for us are Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Theda Bara, W. S. Hart, Clara Kimball Young, Sarah Bernhardt and Douglas Fairbanks," reports Sam C. Stancliff, Subway Airdome, Columbus, Ohio. "Our patrons also always like Fox comedies."

CO-OPERATION WITH THE GOVERNMENT

IT WAS very odd to walk along Madison street last week and see old Abe Lincoln and Prexy Wilson sitting there in front of the Casino Theater. Thousands of people stopped at the "just-as-good" substitutes.

Manager Charlie Schaefer did the stunt to get people to make a personal investigation of "The Slacker's Heart," which he was running.

And Abe and Woodrow proved to be O. K. ballyhoos. Mebbe they've had experience with some big show or other.

A PEPPERY COLOR SCHEME

"Mac," the gilt-roofed and genial representative of the News, is now in full charge of the Chicago office. (We don't mean anything particular by "full.")

The move on the part of the home office is logical. Mac's hair exactly matches the pepper-pink shade of the company's stationery and the front cover of the News.

BIG SPECIAL MEETING

Bill Sweeney and Yourn Truly held a meeting over at the Reel Fellers' Club last Monday night. The trade press and the M. P. E. L. of America were represented. The occasion was enjoyed by all. Bill is a good entertainer—but we don't need to tell you that.

The Iowa exhibitor who has a little war garden in his lobby should plant a row of onions leading through the doors into the auditorium. That would have a strong appeal.

And limburger placed at the front end of eash aisle would enable patrons to find their way about in the dark.

STORY OF AN HONEST MAN AMONG THIEVES

IT'S not because Jack O'Toole, head of the Standard Pictures department of the Chicago Fox exchange, doesn't make enough money.

It's simply that his grip is poor.

During the recent convention of Fox managers at the Biltmowh, Noo Yawk, Jack spread his protecting wing around the boys from the West coast, and proceeded to handle the finances of the party according to the efficiency standards of a city so far East as Chicago.

He was afraid his western brothers might be just a trifle green in dealing with Pullman conductors, taxi drivers, hotel clerks and bartenders.

As a result Jack came out at the small end of the horn, with $280 less than he ought to have.

"And now," he says, "I haven't enough to pay my rent. Honestly, I guess I'm the biggest boob that ever walked. I paid for everything and then forgot to collect. But," he grimaced, "I thought I was among friends."

Moral: Always pay your rent in advance before a convention.

BARELY POSSIBLE

The Balboa studio has in captivity a star bear. This, however, is nothing unusual, as many studios have in captivity stars of whom it may be said that he or she is a "bear." The bear at Balboa, according to the P. A., goes 'em one better. He's civilized. He chews tobacco.

FILMS SOLD AS MERCHANDISE

Goldwyn's Sales Policy of "See the Picture Before You Sign a Contract" Results in Many Bookings

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's sales policy of desiring all prospective exhibitor customers to see the pictures before signing contracts, has received a splendid indorsement from theater owners of the United States.

On the eve of beginning to release its productions, Goldwyn finds that it has under contract a larger volume of business than was ever before booked in advance of a first release in the history of the industry.

The Goldwyn idea, of course, is a new and direct type of salesmanship as applied to the motion picture industry and it makes no distinction between films and other high-class mercantile products which prospective buyers are able to examine in advance of purchase.

The big exhibitors in the large American cities were the first to welcome and approve the Goldwyn method of film salesmanship. For many years it had been the custom for exhibitors to take the word of producers for their output and the owner of a theater rarely saw a picture or knew anything about its quality until it was laid down in his house a day before the announced time of its release.

Trade showings have been held and are still held in the Goldwyn branches in all parts of the United States and Canada and exhibitors, large and small, are seeing months in advance the pictures they have the opportunity to rent for their houses. In other words, they are seeing the merchandise and buying it if they like it and leaving it alone if they do not.

Goldwyn takes pride in the fact that its first run customers throughout the country include many of the ablest and most succesful exhibitors in the industry, among them being:

New York: Mitchel H. Mark's Strand Theater.
Chicago: Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Colonial and other theaters and the entire chain of theaters owned by the Ascher brothers.
Philadelphia: Stanley V. Mastbaum's Stanley Theater and backed up by the entire chain of Mastbaum houses.

ADE FABLES FOR GENERAL

Important New Series Starts September 1—New O. Henry Subjects Current—Story Continues to Be the First Aim

The newest group of subjects to be put on the motion picture market by the General Film distributing organization are the "Fables in Slang" by George Ade. A weekly release of this exceptional comedy feature begins September 1. Essanay is the producer of the series.

The essence of Americanism in literature is now controlled in film form by the General Film Company with the Ade Fables and the O. Henry stories. The sensational success of the O. Henry stories on the screen is recent film history, while the former picturization of George Ade Fables, in 1916, made a tremendous success. The new series of George Ade comedies is being given a most expert production by Essanay and brings into visual form the keen wholesome humor of the author with its native quaintness and brilliancy. General Film announces the first release for September 1 will be "The Fable of the Twelve Cylinder Speed of the Leisure Class."

An official of General Film points out that the new product from the pen of George Ade is a consistent development of the company's appreciation of story worth as an appeal to the picture-going public. The Fables are expected to result in a short-length feature attendance record at all motion picture houses showing the series.

While upon the subject of short-length features it may be stated that two more new O. Henry releases are now ready, bringing the list of the two-reel O. Henry to a total of twenty. The new ones are "Discounters of Money," and "The Furnished Room." Upon the completion of the two-reel stories, a notable list of four-reel O. Henry stories and also a group of one-reel subjects from the same author will be offered. Comedy-dramas and dramas will generally alternate.

Margery Wilson in Kentucky Play

Dixieland has furnished the atmosphere for "The Kentucky Schoolmaster," Margery Wilson's new play now being filmed under the direction of Tom Heffron, in which "hill-billies," moonshine whiskey and shooting feudists all figure.

Miss Wilson's leading man is Charlie Gunn, who takes the part of a short-story writer, school teacher from the north, and suitor for the mountain girl's hand.

One of the interesting characters in the cast is a Virginia mammy who appears in a number of scenes. She is entirely indifferent to the results of the camera's work, doing exactly what Director Heffron suggests, and with considerable ability, but without personal interest in her success in acting. She says she doesn't care to be "no actin' colo'd lady" but is decidedly interested in the pay check. She failed to attend a theater in Los Angeles where she appeared recently in a film play, explaining that she didn't think much of nigger actors!

Children in Next Pickford Play

Mary Pickford and her director, Marshall Neilan, are now busily engaged in selecting children who are to support "Our Mary" in her next production. The groups of waiting applicants around the Pickford bungalow, near the Artcraft studio, are suggestive of the main entrance to a girls' seminary at lunch hour. It is announced that there will be an unusual number of children in this next Pickford play, which will follow "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," released in September.

REMARKABLE THEATER CAREER OF SUCCESSFUL WOMAN EXHIBITOR

"COMBINATION and co-operation," says Flossie A. Jones, one of the most successful women exhibitors of the west, "is going to be the panacea for theater ills in the smaller towns and cities. There are too many theaters throughout the country that are just breaking even. The competition is too fierce. The expenses are too heavy.

Flossie A. Jones of Waukesha, Wisconsin, who has turned lemons into real live lucre.

"And it seems to me that the solution that will satisfactorily take care of this problem is one that has often been tried in business before—namely, combination and co-operation.

"Just think of the saving that could be made during the course of the year on such a thing as light. For instance, if the four or five theaters of a town were under one management they could get the cheaper rate for electricity that goes to the larger consumer. Instead of four or five bills for lesser amounts there would be one bill on "the more you use, the less you pay" basis. In the course of a year this item amounts to a good deal.

Saving on Labor

"A saving could be effected on the help employed, on the advertising, and in various other ways. But the great advantage would come in reduced film rentals. Managers would not be competing with each other for a film. They could not be used against each other by the salesman trying to put over a clever deal.

"Managers now are afraid to let their competitors get a feature film. And in order to keep it themselves they bid the price up to a place where they can't make anything on it after they get it. By having the different houses under a single management, however, the exhibitor could laugh at the salesman when he tried to boost his prices. He simply couldn't do it, that's all.

"I'm putting my theory into practice in Waukesha, and I find it works out very well. At any rate it's worth considering."

And indeed it is, for the story of Miss Jones' business career during the past four years is nothing short of remarkable.

A Modern Business Woman

Today she is the general manager and vice-president of the Waukesha Amusement Company, a corporation that owns and operates the three theaters upon which that progressive little city relies for its entertainment and recreation. Three and one-half years ago she had nothing except perhaps her unshakable determination to make good. Today she is a striking example of the modern business woman, a member of the Waukesha Chamber of Commerce, a lady who commands the respect and admiration of all the men in her field, for she sat in at a table where there was no sentiment, played against stacked cards, and won.

And she won, not by relying on feminine arts, not the way a court lady rises to the position of mistress to the queen's robes, for instance, but because she knew business principles when she say them, applied them with shrewdness and far-sighted wisdom, and was not afraid to bet her last nickel on her judgment.

Flossie Jones also had another quality that helped her immeasurably. She could go to a man and present a proposition in such an open, straight-forward way that he couldn't refuse to hearken to her scheme. And in forming and pushing the amusement company which has just been incorporated at Madison for $75,000 she emulated the politician and stump speaker. She stirred up the people of Waukesha with the pictures she drew of attractions that lay at their very doors if she was but given the chance to bring them to their city. Men, women and children all believed in her, and when it came to actually launching the new concern she went out and sold over three-fourths of the stock herself.

First prize float in parade of 300 vehicles, designed and made by Manager Jones herself, and the hand painted decorations in the Colonial, a 1,000 seater now playing road shows.

Her Assets, All Ideas

When Miss Jones shoved her bark into the treacherous currents of the waters of finance less than four years ago she had nothing in the way of capital. Her assets were all in the form of ideas. She felt that with half a chance she could run a picture theater and make it pay. She saw managers with houses that seemed perfectly good, struggling along, and barely making ends meet. She analyzed their methods of doing business, looked their houses over with a critical eye, watched their advertising schemes, and studied the films they displayed carefully to see which ones were appreciated and which were not.

One day she had a chance to rent an old run-down, dilapidated sort of theater which a man tried to use for a picture house during the summer time. It was too frail and too cold to serve for picture purposes in the winter. It might have been used much more advantageously as an ice house or livery stable than as a modern temple of the cinema. But this young woman felt that she could remedy enough of the defects in the place to make it pay, and right then and there she made her start in the business world.

It was not a very pretentious start, but nevertheless it was a start. That first winter the Colonial, as it was called, huddled its lean bulk about eight oil stoves that were calculated to take some of the frostiness out of its bleak interior. The people that attended said they got chilblains and complained about the cold, and yet they kept returning, for they were lured back with fine, crisp, star-besprinkled films such as Waukesha had never before seen.

Miss Jones made a few changes in the house, fixed it up so that it would do temporarily, and put in the eight oil stoves. And in the spring when she started to figure up her balance sheet she was dumbfounded to find the larger figure on the credit side of her ledger.

Gets Partner to Go in With Her

That spring she went out and got a successful Waukesha business man to go in with her as a partner and $18,000 was spent remodeling the Colonial. When the different contractors submitted their bids this lady enterpreneur scanned each one carefully and finally rejected the lot. Then she went out, bought all the materials herself, hired thirty-one men by the hour, personally superintended every phase of the work—and saved $700 on the lowest bid.

The new Colonial seated about 1,000 people, and, for two months following its rehabilitation, turned over receipts that more than justified the money that had been spent on it. And from the fall of 1914 on she has had everything her own way.

She ran the Colonial herself, did the booking, posting, advertising, took care of the express shipments and finally decided that that was too easy. After starting with pictures this progressive woman decided that Waukesha was a large enough city to make road attractions pay and she introduced some of the best vaudeville and legitimate plays of the day to her townspeople.

Finally the trials and tribulations attendant upon the management of but one theater no longer occupied her time and she began casting her eyes appraisingly at the other theaters in the town. At length a chance was offered to acquire a little house that had never paid by merely taking the lease off the proprietor's hands. Miss Jones took the house over, made a few minor changes, kept it a year, made money on it, and sold it at a profit. The next three proprietors went broke trying to place it on a running basis and finally gave up in despair. Last spring the building was sold and it has since been converted into a bank.

Buys Another Theater that Had Never Paid

As soon as Miss Jones got this gold brick off her hands she leased another little theater, the Unique, which had never enriched anybody but which gluttonously swallowed every cent invested in it and still maintained a lean and hungry look.

And needless to say her success with the theaters she now manages is eloquent evidence of her ability to diagnose theater diseases and apply the remedy.

Now Head of Waukesha Amusement Company

Today the Unique, the Colonial and a new $40,000 house, called the Auditorium, occupy most of her attention as the general manager of the Waukesha Amusement Company, which owns them all. There are a number of men now associated with her in the new corporation, but when it comes to handling the theaters she is given full sway.

The Colonial, which has an unusually large stage, is used for concerts, road shows, benefits, etc., while the Auditorium is devoted to motion pictures, with vaudeville on Saturday and Sunday. The Unique is given over entirely to pictures and today is as attractive a little theater as one would care to see.

The Value of the Broadway Premiere

IT is a tradition of the show business that a tryout on Broadway is the proof of the pudding. If it gets by in New York it will go anywhere. The best thing that can be said for a musical comedy, for instance, is "ten weeks (or maybe fifty) in New York."

And of "legitimate" dramas and musical comedies that is true. The Manhattan public is made up of show experts. They have seen so many, and seen them so often, they are blasé and languid. Only a novelty arouses them. So when anything passes the test there it ought to go big anywhere else.

But films are quite different. In the first place, New York people are no more expert as motion picture judges than the people of Kansas City or Oshkosh or Muskogee. We doubt, in fact, if they have had as much experience in film viewing.

We know people in towns of less than five thousand population who know all about pictures and companies and stars, and who can tell you right off who is good and who isn't. They are jealous of their knowledge, too. They will not let anybody tell them that New York knows more than they do about pictures worth seeing, and they are not at all impressed by the fact that a certain picture "held 'em out" on Broadway.

Now the producers, a good many of whom are both New York men and show men, may not realize that difference between the stage show and the screen show. But the exhibitors know it.

No experienced exhibitor places much reliance on the report that a picture has made a hit in a Broadway house. He is glad to know, of course, that it has made a hit anywhere; but the location is not important so long as it is not in his own town. A hit in Los Angeles or New Orleans is just as valuable a guide to him as a hit in New York. None of them compares with a test in his own town.

Exhibitors have learned at their own expense that what goes over big in one town may not go over at all in another. The size or importance of the town has nothing to do with it. The class of people who patronize each particular theater is really the determining factor. If there were anywhere in the world another town like New York, or another street like Broadway, film success in that town and on that street might be full of meaning. But there isn't.

What goes in one college center is likely to be successful in another. What gets over in one laboring community will probably be greeted with joy in another. But that is about the only guide an exhibitor has, outside of the few films that are so good they are welcome everywhere.

The picture business is bigger than New York, big and erudite as that metropolis is. To make the Broadway crowds patronize a picture is doubtless a feat in itself, because, as we said before, they are blasé and callous to common entertainment. As an advertising catchline, the New York success has its value. It shows, at least, that the picture has pleased those who are admittedly hard to please.

But as a reason for booking a film, its success on Broadway is not substantial. Maybe the people who are to see it are not anything like Broadway people. More likely still, maybe they think they are better judges of picture quality than Broadway.

At any rate, exhibitors outside of New York are becoming more and more skeptical of the idea that a New York showing has any bearing whatever on their business.

The motion picture business must work out its own traditions and beliefs. Those who attempt to carry it along in the channel dug by the "legitimate" are making a serious mistake.

When Players Appear in Person

ANNOUNCEMENT that a celebrated star is to appear in person at a picture theater always brings out a crowd. That is natural. If Rudyard Kipling were to present himself for public gaze in a bookstore, doubtless there would be many gazers. Even J. P. Morgan in the Jonesville Bank, or John D. Rockefeller in Smith's garage, might attract the local patronage in a body.

That does not necessarily mean that it is good business for the players to appear in person at theaters. We question if it is not rather bad business.

Motion picture success is founded on popular love of romance. The "glamour" of the picture is greater than that of the speaking stage, because it shows real environment instead of paint. It makes the best job that was ever done of transporting people out of the life that they think is humdrum and commonplace, into the life that they think is wonderful and romantic. The whole analysis of picture appeal is contained in that one word, "romance."

There is nothing romantic in the flesh-and-blood presence of a picture player. The people may try desperately hard to find romance in the situation, but it isn't there. They flock to the spot because they are about to solve a mystery; they are about to see wherein this remarkable person differs from common folk. They are disappointed, of course, though perhaps they are unaware of it. All players are human beings, built much like the rest of us; but that fact is not generally realized by picture fans before they have seen it proved.

Those player people whose names we conjure with are known by projection to millions —let us say to everybody. Therefore to be one of the few able to say "I have met him" or "I saw her in person last week" is a great tickler to common human vanity.

But it has nothing to do with the picture show business.

Sometimes the argument is made that a star's appearance at picture theaters is a great piece of advertising for the films that star plays in. It is really nothing of the sort. The pictures advertise the star; the star does not advertise the picture. People rush to see the player because they have seen him so often in pictures. They do not rush to see more pictures of his because they saw him in the flesh.

Motion pictures are wonderful things—a fact we are apt to forget from being so close to them all the time. Let's keep them wonderful, and retain all the glamour that nature and art have combined to bestow upon them. There is a virtue in their very silence; the popular verdict was against even the most skilful of "talking pictures." Why break the spell by injecting the words of appreciation that fall from an actor's lips, and that cannot possibly be other than commonplace and disillusioning?

Players are almost demigods to the vast number of people who emotionalize but do not analyze, who feel without thinking and enjoy without philosophizing. It is better not to disturb them. The most magnetic of personalities, the most beautiful of forms and faces, the most delicious of voices, cannot compare with the unreal beauty and the unheard voices of the screen.

Those who are known in pictures should not be known in person. In this we are not voting a life of seclusion for stars; we are merely suggesting that they should not compete with their own life work. When one has appeared in the flesh, his picture has lost something to those who saw him. Even if his bodily presence please the people extraordinarily, thereafter his films are not real—they are but photographs.

The picture itself should be the most real thing that the general public ever sees of a star.

A. E. A. in National Association

DIRECTORS CONSIDERING MATTER — OTHER ASSOCIATION NEWS

IT is altogether probable that the new American Exhibitors' Association will become affiliated with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. This question is now in the hands of the board of directors of the latter organization. They will undoubtedly come to a decision at a meeting called for August 27, in New York.

A. E. A. Representatives at Meeting

Several representatives of the new exhibitors' organization were present at the meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held last week in New York. Samuel Trigger, president of the New York local league and one of the backers of the new association, made a motion to amend the by-laws of the Association so as to include the new exhibitors' body in its membership. It was decided, however, that a more efficient method of effecting this affiliation exists in a clause of the by-laws of the National Association. This clause reads as follows:

Any civic, social or other trade or business association or club in the United States upon application and under conditions approved by the board of directors of this association may obtain a certificate of affiliation with this association whenever any of the three following conditions are complied with, namely:

Such proportion of its members are members of this association as, in the opinion of the board of directors of this association, entitle it to receive such certificate of affiliation; or

Upon agreeing to contribute a definite sum to be prescribed by the board of directors of this association annually to the funds of this association; or

Upon such terms and conditions as the board of directors of this association may decide upon as proper.

The conditions to apply to the American Exhibitors' Association will be decided upon at the next directors' meeting.

Increase Number of Directors

The question of increasing the size of the directorate of the National Association was answered in the affirmative, a close vote of 36 to 33 being recorded. The proxies held by William A. Brady turned the scale in favor of the increase. Four branches of the National Association will hereafter designate seven instead of five directors, the Exhibitors' League branch now being entitled to fourteen instead of ten directors.

Following the open meeting the board of directors held a short executive session, at which details of Federal co-operation were taken up. It was also announced that the five reels of the "All Star" pictures to be distributed by the National Association are in readiness.

The Complete Board

The entire National Association board of directors is as follows:

Lubin Plant Sold at Auction

Lubin is a thing of the past.

The fade-out at the end of the story of this pioneer production concern will come on September 10 to 14, when the plant will be sold at auction in Philadelphia, at Twentieth street and Indiana avenue, by order of Nicholas G. Roosevelt, president.

The entire property is listed, including real estate, buildings, machinery, equipment, scenery, wardrobe, draperies, properties, studio supplies and camera supplies. The auctioneers are Samuel T. Freeman & Co., 1519 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Featured with Carlyle Blackwell in "The Burglar," an approaching World Picture, Brady-Made, are Evelyn Greeley and Madge Evans, making a triangular cast equally effective on each of its corners.

To All Manufacturers and Distributors of Moving Pictures:—

THE War Committee of the moving picture industry, appointed to act with Herbert Hoover on the food commission, respectfully requests the consideration of the trade to the following:

The chairman of this committee is now in Washington getting in touch with the whole question and in conferences to determine along which lines the industry will be able to render the greatest aid to the country and the Government on the important question of food conservation.

We realize the extreme necessity for prompt action but at the same time feel that grave errors may be made and much effort be wasted, and in fact may have to be undone if full consideration be not first given to each step.

Asks Delay of Food Question Films

For this reason this committee requests the trade in general and every manufacturer and distributor in particular not to undertake the making or showing of any film dealing with any phase of food conservation until the many sides of the matter be given the most careful consideration and a plan of propaganda is worked out that is fundamentally sound in every particular.

We believe every one will realize the necessity for this mode of procedure. There will be a very large amount of work for the industry in connection with the various activities of the government for the next few months and it therefore becomes imperative that no waste effort be expended anywhere.

This committee will be glad to consult and advise with anyone in the trade in regard to its future activities and will make its plans and suggestions public from time to time in the various trade papers at the earliest possible moment. Respectfully, Arthur S. Friend, Chairman Food Commission Committee of the Motion Picture Industry.

NEW COMPANY FORMED

New Orleans Film Concern to Begin Operation Soon —Has Number of Successful Southern Business Men Backing It

What promises to be an up-and-coming film producing concern has been started in New Orleans under the name of the Black Diamond Film Company.

None but big stars will be engaged and R. M. Chisolm and Captain W. J. Hannon have left for New York to select one of the best known directors in the east. The announcement of the first big feature to be made and the star's name will appear within the next few days.

The company is organized for $100,000 and has purchased the complete plant and studio of the Nola Film Company, which is the largest studio and plant south of Philadelphia and east of Chicago. In fact, it is the third largest plant and studio in this country. It fronts 150 feet on Bayou St. John by 639 feet in depth, and is an ideal location and fully equipped with all the latest machines and devices.

Among the board of directors and stockholders, which includes R. M. Chisolm as president and L. S. Boudreaux, who are owners of the Diamond Theater property, are Captain W. J. Hannon, well known capitalist of New Orleans, Captain James Ashton of the Illinois Central railroad, John B. Warfield of Schumert & Warfield, C. L. Darragh, capitalist of Galveston, Texas, an owner of the largest picture house in that city, M. H. Morrill and others. This company will immediately begin operation upon the return of Messrs. Chisolm and Hannon from the East.

New Association Members

Several new members have recently been taken into the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The application for membership in the producers' class includes the following:

Selig Polyscope Company, to be represented by William N. Selig; Pathe Exchange, Inc., to be represented by J. A. Berst; Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, to be represented by Joseph M. Schenck; the Bray Studios, Inc., to be represented by John R. Bray. The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation has filed application for membership as exporters of motion pictures, creating a new classification, which will be acted upon at the next meeting of the board of directors.

New additions to the distributors class are expected within a fortnight, and if the applications are received as anticipated, this division of the association will be practically 100 per cent from a membership standpoint.

Inquiries recently received at the offices of the association, from supply and equipment companies, would indicate that several concerns are giving consideration to joining Class 3, which now includes a score of some of the important companies engaged in this branch of the motion picture business.

New recruits are being added to the ranks of the general division through applications for individual memberships. During the past week the officials and staff members of the Motion Picture News filed applications as follows: E. Kendall Gillett, H. A. Wyckoff, Robert Welch, George Gould, Frances Klein, J. S. Judd and William McCormack. Applications were also filed by Ralph A. Kohn, Harry A. Nadel and Allen Kander. An appeal will be made to every company member to enroll their officials and employes as members of the general division.

Loew Books Ivan Feature

"Babbling Tongues," the big Ivan-Humphrey production, was released August 13, at Loew's New York Theater, Broadway and 45th street. It is booked for the entire Loew circuit.

Up to date the books of the Merit Film Corporation show 421 dates in the metropolitan district alone for this exceptional production. This, of course, includes the entire Loew circuit, the U. B. O. and the Exhibitors' Board of Trade, whose representatives have viewed the film and showed their approval of this Ivan super photoplay by booking it for runs of two days and more.

Special advertising has been prepared. The 24-sheet especially is one of tremendous appeal. A special two-color postal card has also been designed.

New Fables in Slang

Essanay announces that commencing September 1, a new series of George Ade Fables in Slang will be issued on the General Film program. This is another step towards the recently published policy of this company to confine a greater part of its output to subjects of a comedy nature.

Jack Sherrill, the juvenile whose last appearance in "The Silent Witness," for the Author's Film Corporation, and in the character of "Pink" for the Frohman Amusement Corporation, in their production of George Bronson Howard's "God's Man," has again been engaged by the Authors Film Co. in the juvenile lead of a multiple reel patriotic subject, soon to be released.

Popular Stars in "Transgression"

August 20 marks the second appearance of Earle Williams, with Corinne Griffith as his leading woman, their first, "The Stolen Treaty," having indicated that they are one of the most popular combinations in filmdom.

Their latest effort is "Transgression," a pulsating story of the mayor of a large city who is torn between two conflicting emotions—obligation to the high trust imposed upon him by the people, and the blood ties that pledge him to save his profligate brother from the circumstantial evidence of murder. Ultimately the brother, his long dormant manhood finally awakened, turns up to exonerate himself by accusing the real murderer, an adventuress and parasite with whom he was formerly infatuated and who was the cause of his dawnfall.

The entire five reels are fraught with gripping situations culminating in a climax that is intensely dramatic. A charming romance between Mr. Williams as the mayor and Miss Griffith as the prosecuting attorney's daughter, affords a subtle relief to the tense dramatic action and greatly enhances the appeal.

Mr. Williams has a virile, forceful part and one involving a wide scope of characterization, which he interprets in his usual sterling manner.

In the part of the prosecutor's daughter and fiance of the mayor, Miss Griffith again demonstrates that she is eminently qualified to take her place among the foremost interpreters of the pantomimic art. In this role of a self-sacrificing girl, Miss Griffith is offered an unlimited scope for emotional acting.

Webster Campbell, one of Vitagraph's most finished juveniles, appears in the role of the weak, vacillating brother.

Campbell's acting is regarded as a splendid characterization. The cast also includes Mary Maurice, "the Mother of the Movies," who is seen as the sympathetic old mother of two sons; the mayor and the misguided youth.

Others in the cast are Florence B. Billings, Denton Vane, Robert Gaillard and Edwards Davis.

Shows First Man Drafted

Fame came to Harry Chapman Gilbert when he was the first to offer himself for the draft army, and with fame came a Gaumont cameraman to record him for the millions of people who see the Mutual Weekly. The picture, taken at Washington, D. C., is shown in Mutual Weekly No. 136, the current issue. "Somewhere-in-France" provides pictures for a boxing match at a convalescent hospital for the amusement of the soldiers.

"Lone Wolf" Defies Heat

Herbert Brenon's screen sensation, "The Lone Wolf," continues to defy the heat at the Broadway Theater, New York. where it is still drawing large audiences with no end to the successful run in sight. In spite of the heat wave of the past week which prostrated hundreds, the attendance at this production held up steadily.

Petrova Forms Own Company

Madam Olga Petrova has formed her own company, the Petrova Picture Company, for the production of her own pictures in her own studios under her own supervision.

"This company," she states, "has unlimited capital behind it and I am to have unlimited time in which to get the very best results. I want to make a few big, very big pictures each year. All producing and distributing arrangements are in the hands of Frederick L. Collins, my partner in the new company."

At the office of Superpictures, Inc., Mr. Collins, who is also president of the McClure Publications, said: "Madam Petrova's statement requires no confirmation from me. The Petrova Picture Company is already an accomplished fact."

The Petrova pictures, all of which will be special productions, will be handled by Superpictures Distributing Corporation in accordance with its recently announced policy of big pictures for big exhibitors. Mr. Conrad Milliken, vice-president of Superpictures, Inc., and secretary of McClure's, will act as general manager of the new company and handle all its financial and business affairs.

Picture Displaces Vaudeville

Keith's Hippodrome in Cleveland is known, as are all other Keith houses throughout the country, as the home of vaudeville and it is that particular form of entertainment which they make a specialty of. Last week, however, at the Hippodrome, the headliner was a picture instead of vaudeville. This was so unusual that it attracted a great deal of attention, and Manager Royal of the Hippodrome went on record as saying that no other attraction at the Hippodrome during that week could compare with the picture in question, "The Halfback," a three-reel drama of the Thomas A. Edison Conquest Series, distributed by George Kleine.

Foreign News Films

Felix Malitz, general manager of the Piedmont Pictures Corporation, is receiving regularly extremely interesting topic films from France and England, showing current events. The latest arrivals were films showing General Pershing and the American troops in Paris on the 4th of July, and the celebration by French troops of the 14th of July.

These interesting films are shown in this country through various prominent weeklies.

The most recent sales for Williamson Brothers' "The Submarine Eye" included South Africa, France, Switzerland, Italy, the Balkan States and Dominion of Canada.

IMPRESSIVE PRIVATE SHOWING

Russian Ambassador to Be Special Guest of Herbert Brenon at Elaborate First Showing of "Fall of Romanoffs"

Boris Bakhnetieff, the Russian ambassador at Washington, will be the special invited guest to attend the first private showing of the latest big Herbert Brenon special production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," featuring Iliodor, the exiled Russian monk and confidant of Rasputin. The beautiful main ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton has been engaged for this purpose.

Preparations are now being made to make this the finest private showing that has ever been held in New York. It is for this reason that the beautiful and elaborate ballroom of the Ritz has been engaged, and care will be taken that the picture is shown under ideal conditions of lighting and projection.

The Russian ambassador will be accompanied to New York for this special occasion by his entire embassy staff in full dress uniform. With the exception of the newspaper men these will be the only guests outside of the motion picture industry.

Invitations will also be sent to the representatives in this country of the prominent English, French, Italian and Spanish papers, most of whom will be brought on especially from Washington for the express purpose of viewing this astonishing production. Representatives of the big newsapers of Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other important cities of the United States will also be among those invited. Although theatrical producers have on one or two occasions brought out-of-town newspaper men to New York to attend the opening performance of an attraction it is believed that this is the first time that such a thing has been done for a motion picture. Mr. Brenon feels, however, that this picture is so out of the ordinary that it is well worth the extra effort and expense.

For over a month a specially engaged staff of well known composers has been working in close co-operation with Mr. Brenon on the music that is to go with the picture. This, owing to the subject with which it deals, will be entirely Russian and particular care has been taken that every scene is accompanied by the right and proper music, all so delicately and harmoniously blended that it is almost impossible to tell where one theme breaks off and the next one begins. At the private showing this music will be interpreted by a Russian Symphony orchestra of thirty pieces.

The main reason that Mr. Brenon feels that this is the greatest picture that he ever made is because he considers it the biggest subject that he has ever handled. This is the first time in the history of the screen that a director has had an opportunity to portray the actual events of one of the most stupendous episodes in the history of the world, the fall of the house of Romanoff and the setting up in its place of a demoracy representative of the power of the people.

"Big Laugh" for August 20

Greater Vitagraph's big laugh for the week of August 20 will be "Shells and Shivers," which as its name implies, follows the popular trend. "Shells and Shivers" is a burlesque on war and female spies, in which a real alligator figures prominentlyy. If all wars are as funny as the one depicted in "Shells and Shivers" there would be no need for conscription or any additions to the clerical forces of the marriage bureaus.

YOUNG FOX STARS

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, Stars of "Jack and the Beanstalk," Given Choice Contracts by William Fox

"Just playing" by two remarkable children and an ordinary dog has made an instantaneous success of the greatest film of make-believe land and has insured the trio practically a life of ease.

So phenomenal has been the success of "Jack and the Beanstalk," the William Fox 1917 fairy film for the whole family, at the Globe Theater, New York, that William Fox has signed contracts for five years each with Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin—and Sport, the mongrel dog.

Already each of the children, Francis and Virginia, have received a pony and cart from Mr. Fox because of this excellent acting in "Jack and the Beanstalk," but they are each promised an automobile in their contract.

In addition to the salaries and automobiles, Mr. Fox pledges himself to furnish instructors for each of the children so long as they remain under his direction. All this is set out in great detail in the contract; first, how many hours per day the children are to appear before the camera; second, how many hours each day they are to devote to their studies under the direction of competent tutors; third, how many hours each day they are to devote to recreation. In fact, their little lives are mapped out by contract from now until five years hence.

The salaries which these youngsters will draw will not only support themselves and their parents in luxury, but will enable each of them to have substantial bank accounts before either is ten years old.

Neither of the children realized that in making "Jack and the Beanstalk" they were acting or working. To them it was a wonderfully realistic game of "make believe," only in the gigantic game in which they were engaged they did not have to "imagine"—everything, castles, giants, kings, armies and villages were there.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" may well be called the grown-up's comedy and the child's drama. This has been accentuated in the make up of the audiences attending the performances at the Globe Theater. At the matinees the audiences consist of fully 90 per cent children, while at night just the reverse is true, as these audiences consist of 95 percent adults. The children are no more enthusiastic than their elders.

Goldwyn to Release "Auction Block"

It is not usual for an author to write his own subtitles, but Mr. Beach is not going at picture-making in the usual way. He argues that nobody can possibly know as much about what the titles ought to be as the man who wrote the story from which the picture play is made. Consequently, every Rex Beach title will be Rex Beach-made. It took six months to photograph "The Auction Block," and the titles are going to be worthy of the picture.

"The Auction Block," adapted from one of the most successful of Mr. Beach's many successful novels, reaches into the life of world's greatest city, New York, for its characters and action, and in making the picture Mr. Beach, Benjamin B. Hampton, president of the Rex Beach Film Corporation, and Larry Trimble, the director, went right into the environment of the story for the people of the cast. No actor or actress had even a "bit" in the play unless he or she could be the character without acting it.

Mr. Beach and his associates hesitated long before selecting a young woman for the part of Lorelei Knight, beautiful heroine of the book, who comes from a country home with her shrewd parents and a scapegrace brother to be put upon the auction block of a great city. She is "sold" to the man who appears to be the highest bidder, but with results scarcely within the calculation of her folks. Rubye de Remer, virtually a newcomer in pictures, has this part. She has been a member of the Ziegfeld companies.

Tom Powers, one of New York's capable young leading men, has the part of the juvenile hero.

FILM MISSIONARY REPORTS

Rose Tapley Reports to Head of Greater Vitagraph After Feeling Pulse of Industry During Extensive Trip

Miss Rose Tapley, actress and writer, has written a message of general interest to the motion picture industry, based upon observations she made during a tour of the United States. Miss Tapley was sent out by President Smith of Greater Vitagraph last December as a motion picture missionary, commissioned to preach "better pictures" to the layman public in behalf of the entire industry.

Starting from New York on the first Monday of last December, Miss Tapley made a complete circle of the country, visiting 120 cities and towns located in forty states, and winding up her work by acting as official hostess at the National Exhibitors League convention in Chicago.

Following Mr. Smith's plan she addressed scores of women's clubs and other civic organizations, theater audiences, legislatures, aldermanic bodies, ministers and teachers' associations, parents, and others. She explained to them the making of motion pictures and illustrated her lecture with a descriptive film entitled "From Script to Screen," which showed the evolution of a motion picture from the time it left the scenario editor's hands.

Mr. Smith, after hearing Miss Tapley's report on her trip, expressed the belief that she had succeeded in doing a vast amount of good for motion picture makers, distributors and exhibitors, and suggested that she give the trade in general an outline of her work.

"The trip was handled through the various Greater Vitagraph exchanges," said Miss Tapley, "each of them being allotted a certain portion of my time, to be employed in their territory in addressing women's clubs, civic bodies, audiences, etc. I did not get into New England, but I covered virtually every other section of the United States—North, East, South and West.

"I visited 120 cities, forty states, and spoke more than a thousand times during the tour. The burden of my talk was "better and cleaner pictures," and "fair play for the motion picture industry." The result of my observations is a stronger conviction than ever of the necessity for a closer community of interests between manufacturer and exhibitor, and a better understanding of each other's problems.

"Censorship seemed to be in the air in every direction. Not that the public really wanted censorship, so much as it sought some assurance that the cheap, trashy, sensational product which crept in during the tremendous and rapid growth of the industry, would be eliminated.

"The objectors with whom I talked did not stop to realize that in this, as in every other business, it is the demand which creates and controls the supply, and that censorship is not the medium for controlling the situation. The remedy lies with the public.

"As statistics will prove, the really objectionable type of picture was less than one per cent of the output, in reality, but owing to the tremendous word-of-mouth advertising it received, it assumed in the public mind the proportions of at least ninety-nine per cent.

"The censorship wave, distressing as it is in detail, is, I think, an augury for better pictures. At least, that was the impression I received from the undercurrent of opinion that recognizes the necessity for some factor that will control the motion picture. If the public wanted the vulgar, broad problem play, the unwholesome vampire and similar types, there would be no demand for censorship. It is just because the public wants clean pictures that the industry now is beset with the censorial affliction. The cure lies with the manufacturers themselves."

DIRECT TO EXHIBITOR

Wholesome Films Announces Its New Sales "Square Deal" Policy of One Central Exchange in Chicago, Eliminating Branches

Direct dealing between the exhibitor and the producer is the basis of the new sales policy announced by Wholesome Films Corporation. This plan will call for one big central exchange in Chicago, with which the exhibitors will deal direct, thus eliminating branches and go-betweens, on a straight, square deal basis.

"This plan we consider is one of the most progressive steps thus far taken in methods of film distribution," said M. J. Weisfeldt, manager of Wholesome Films Corporation. "It is easy for any successful exhibitor to estimate the economic advantages of this direct sales policy by the saving on overhead expense, such as branch managers, clerks, rentals, et cetera.

"One big outstanding proof of the worth of our policy is this: We pay express charges both ways. We make only one requirement of the exhibitor, aside of course, from paying for his rentals, and that is to book sufficiently far in advance so that on-time delivery may be assured any exhibitor anywhere in the United States.

"Wholesome Films Corporation is very much interested, too, in the success of the exhibitors' circuits recently announced. We will make special offers to exhibitors' circuits.

"The plans of Wholesome Films Corporation will fill for the industry a long-felt want, and our aim is to make friends with exhibitors right at the start by making our policy more than fifty-fifty as far as the exhibitor is concerned."

First "Wholesome" Picture

The first feature production to be released by the Wholesome Pictures Corporation of Chicago will be "Penny Philanthrophy," which is now being completed by director Guy McConnell. The scenario of this production was also written by Mr. McConnell.

"Cinderella and the Magic Slipper" will be released at a later date as a special.

New Victor Moore Comedy

Victor Moore will release on August 13 his latest comedy called "Summer Boarding." It is a continuation of his "family series," written by Thos. J. Gray. This comedy is one of the fastest Moore has made, and he is supported by a cast of thirty.

Following the run of the first of the Fox Kiddies Pictures, "Jack and the Beanstalk," at the Globe, Theater, New York, William Fox will offer at that house "The Conqueror," the first of the series of Standard Pictures of which William Farnum is the star.

Mary Garden Comes to Goldwyn Studios

CELEBRATED PRIMA DONNA WILL ARRIVE IN AMERICA IN SEPTEMBER

MARY GARDEN will arrive at "an Atlantic port" the first week in September and will immediately begin work before the camera for her first motion picture, "Thais," for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

This information was received in New York by wireless on August 4, in the last private message given transmission before the British government discontinued the Marconi Company's trans-Atlantic service.

Immediately upon receipt of this wireless Goldwyn hastened its efforts to be ready for Miss Garden's arrival. Scenic artists at the Fort Lee studios are hard at work converting sketches and drawings into scenic splendors for "Thais." Costumes have been in the making for many weeks and the famous prima donna will not have to wait an extra minute after she notifies Goldwyn of her readiness to report at the studios.

In France this summer Miss Garden has been the guest, on numerous occasions, of Anatole France, the celebrated author of "Thais."

Few of the celebrated stories brought to the screen have ever possessed such opportunities for pictorial splendors as those afforded by "Thais." The ablest brains in the American theater have been enlisted to make the picturization of this operatic and literary sensation one of the masterful achievements of the cinema.

Big Theaters Making Changes

To receive the full benefit of the tremendous attention that Goldwyn will command from motion picture audiences everywhere, many of the important theaters where these productions will have their first showing throughout America are undergoing changes and renovations.

R. G. Larsen, manager of the Boston Theater, in the bean city, is one of the first to take advantage of the additional possibilities of audience-attraction in the Goldwyn productions. "New pictures—therefore a newly decorated theater," is his edict. The Boston Theater, with a seating capacity in excess of 3,000 has one of the largest and finest lobbies in America, reaching from Washington street inwardly almost to the middle of the block. This lobby is being entirely done over and a type of pictorial and electrical display hitherto unknown in the industry is being installed.

In Toledo Edward A. Zorn expresses the intention of "going dark" with his Temple Theater long enough to refit and redecorate his splendid house for the advent of the new productions. "Goldwyn Pictures are deserving of an entirely new setting," says Mr. Zorn, "and I desire my showmanship to be as distinctive as the pictures."

In Newark the Goodwin Theater is being freshened up in preparation for the showing of the new streamers. From a small start, the enterpise of Mrs. L. H. Weeb has grown until it has become a splendid amusement institution in Newark and its owner is rated as one of the country's most alert exhibitors.

The Goodwin Theater takes its name from the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin, rector of the House of Prayer, Newark, who is credited with being one of the discoverers and inventors of the modern motion picture film.

A peculiar sentiment attaches to the signing of Sam A. Swartz, of Roswell, New Mexico, for all Goldwyn productions at his Armory Theater. Last winter, when no pictures had been completed and when Goldwyn's chief assets were the names of the men who own the company, Mr. Swartz sent in his check as an advance deposit to insure his getting the pictures first in Roswell. His check was the first dollar of exhibitor money ever sent in to Goldwyn, and this confidence of a small and distant exhibitor in a new company, when made known in Goldwyn advertisements, elicited a response all the way across the country.

Below is beautiful Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn," a Goldwyn play. In the oval is Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus."

This kittenish scene is from "Baby Mine," a Goldwyn production written by Margaret Mayo and featuring Madge Kennedy.

Rio Cooper Megrue to Meet Big Exhibitors

When any of the well known personalities identified with Goldwyn set out in quest of recreation they quickly discover that they must combine business with their pleasures.

Roi Cooper Megrue, playwright, co-author of Maxine Elliott's first picture, "Fighting Odds," and member of the Goldwyn advisory board, is the newest one to make this discovery.

Mr. Megrue and his mother left this week on their annual vacation, and by now are beginning to enter the big cities of the Canadian west. In the Canadian Rockies and our own Northwest the author of "Under Cover," "It Pays to Advertise," " Under Fire," and half a dozen other successful plays, felt certain that he could evade all forms of work for sixty days.

But instead of idling away the late summer months, Mr. Megrue will labor unceasingly for he has been assigned to meet the managers of all the Goldwyn offices in Western Canada and also those in Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Minneapolis and elsewhere in that territory. Through these managers the playwright will meet the owners of motion picture theaters in cities and towns of all sizes.

This is the first time in the history of the industry that one of the big figures in dramatic authorship has ever been sent directly to the men who exhibit motion pictures to ask these influential showmen their opinions as to what the public desires on the screen.

Marie Dressler's First Comedy "The Scrublady"

Pursuing the motion picture theory more often honored in the breach than the observance that the way to produce the best pictures is to get the best and most capable people for every angle, from the writing of the scenario to the cutting and titling of the finished film, the Dressler Producing Corporation is completing its first comedy, soon to be released through the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation.

Marie Dressler herself will head the cast of every picture, of course. In "The Scrublady," written and directed by Vincent Bryan, Miss Dressler has an opportunity hitherto unparalleled to be as funny as she can. But she has not hesitated to surround herself with men and women of proved comedy reputation and has permitted Mr. Bryan to give them situations and action offering full play for their ability.

In her new picture Miss Dressler is a scrubwoman in a munition factory. The leading woman in her support is Miss Florence Hamilton, a "discovery" of Miss Dressler's. She is a brunette and beautiful. Also in the cast is Raymonde Cacho, famous before the war as a moving picture comedian in Paris. He served through the early part of the great conflict, but was so severely wounded in a battle along the Meuse as to be incapacitated for further service.

There are other players of magnitude, including Fred Hallen, of the celebrated team of Hallen and Hart, who is making his first appearance in films, and Miss Harriet Ross.

The majority of people post a letter and give no thought to the intricate system required to speed it to its destination. To show what happens to the missive after it is placed in the box is the mission of "Handling the Mail," a leading section of Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 70, released through Mutual, August 30.

NEW DISTRIBUTING COMPANY

Jewel Productions to Establish Exchange System Throughout United States and Canada to Handle Big Features

Jewel Productions, Inc., a new distributing organization with offices at 1600 Broadway, announces that it will purchase for cash outright, for the United States and Canada, the biggest and best special feature productions obtainable. Independent producers have been invited to submit their pictures to the reviewing board of Jewel Productions, Inc., with a view toward selling them to this organization, which will endeavor to conduct an efficient and co-operative string of exchanges.

One of the innovations introduced by the officials of the Jewel Company is the rule that before any production is purchased or even considered it must have received the stamp of public approval during its exhibition of at least one week in a metropolitan center. This will eliminate entirely the gambling chance that is usual for the distributor to take in accepting a production which he then must necessarily pass on to the exhibitor. Every play offered to exhibitors by Jewel Productions, Inc., will then, according to this inflexible rule, have been tried and have been found to be a success.

As a forerunner of the many attractions available to exhibitors through the Jewel exchanges, they announce the purchase from the Universal Film Manufacturing Company of George Bronson Howard's drama "Come Through," which scored a decided hit during its run at the Broadway Theater, New York.

It is not planned to have any definite number of releases during the year, but the announcement reads that there will be approximately one attraction per month.

"Come Through" will be available in the New York territory about the middle of September, and throughout the remainder of the country shortly thereafter. The New York Exchange has already been opened and will be under the management of Mr. Harry Berman.

Exchanges are also being rapidly opened in the following cities: Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Atlanta, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Toronton, Canada.

The entire circuit of exchanges will be under the general supervision of Leon J. Bamberger, who for the past two years has been sales manager for Vitagraph V-L-S-E. Mr. Bamberger is at the present time engaging a large staff necessary to exploit the Jewel Productions.

Begins Work for Metro September 17

Mme. Alla Nazimova, the celebrated dramatic star who recently signed a contract with Metro Pictures Corporation to appear in special productions de luxe, will commence work September 17, according to the announcement by Maxwell Karger, general manager of the super-feature studio.

Mme. Nazimova's first Metro picture will be a seven-act special production de luxe called "A Rose-Bush of a Thousand Years," written by Mabel Wagnalls, daughter of A. W. Wagnalls, president of the well-known publishing house of Funk & Wagnalls. George D. Baker is the director chosen to produce Mme. Nazimova's first picture for the Metro Pictures Corporation.

Fox Announces New Policy

BIG FEATURE PRODUCTIONS TO BE BOOKED ON OPEN MARKET

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Fox Film Corporation, presents herewith, a summary of the new policy of the company he heads, for the guidance and information of exhibitors of the United States. The new system scheduled to go into effect September 2 marks a momentous advance in the product of that company, and includes the following:

Standard Pictures

Eight Theda Bara Superpictures under a separate and independent contract on the open market.

Eight William Farnum De Luxe pictures under a separate and independent contract on the open market.

"Jack and the Beanstalk"—nine amazing reels of action, children, thrills, novelties. This picture will be booked on the open market.

"The Honor System"—the greatest human story ever told on the stage or screen. This picture can be booked on the open market.

Twelve Fox Kiddie pictures. This series can be booked on the open market. Among the stories already produced that will be released in this series are "Treasure Island," "Babes in the Woods," "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," "The Brownies," "Mikado," "Pinafore," "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves."

Trade showings will be held in every important exchange center of the United States, showing Standard Pictures before release dates. We will not book Standard Pictures unless the exhibitor has actually seen them on the screen.

52 Fox Special Features

Beginning Sunday, September 2, we will release every week one special feature picture, from five to six reels. Each production will be based on a successful stage play or novel, headed by a star of box office drawing power, staged by a capable director, and produced with skill and care, regardless of expense, each a special of the highest merit.

Comedy Pictures

We will also release twenty to twenty-six comedies, two reels each, during 1917-1918. It is a human impossibility to guarantee more than twenty-six meritorious comedies during the next twelve months. Therefore, we have limited our output to twenty-six. We have ten of the greatest comedy pictures ever made on our shelves. We will show them to you. Our release dates will be announced later.

Recapitulation

Fox Film Corporation will offer the exhibitor during the coming season the following pictures: Thirty-six Standard Pictures on the open market; fifty-two Fox special features on contract; twenty to twenty-six comedies on open market.

Call at our nearest exchange and make your arrangements now. I can assure you that the two and one-half million dollars that we have expended in finished productions are worthy of your earnest and immediate attention, and I advise you to call at our nearest branch office and see the pictures screened at trade shows. I have personally witnessed the first six months productions and I believe they will insure the 1917-18 success of any exhibitor who is fortunate enough to secure our contract.

"I do not believe that there is anything to be added to my statement of the policy of the Fox Film Corporation," William Fox responded, when asked to amplify his statement, "except that I might tell you how it all came about.

"My greatest ambition has always been to make better pictures than anyone else, and I have experimented patiently for several years. I knew that the pictures that we made at first could be improved. I began to take a deeper personal interest in the scenarios and to rewrite some of them. I looked around for the best directors, and as I found them I encouraged them — gave them carte blanche in their productions when I saw that they were on the right track.

"Being an exhibitor myself, I had great opportunities for watching the public and its desires, and, little by little, I saw our films growing into better stories, better photography and more perfect production.

"When we started on the production of 'Jack and the Beanstalk,' I searched for the best child directors I could find. It took some time, but when I finally got into touch with C. M. and S. A. Franklin, and got them started to work, I knew I had succeeded.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" started out to be a three-reel film, just for children, to fill the need then apparent for something to entertain the little folks—something that would not worry their little brains to follow—something they were familiar with. When we got started on the picture with those thirteen hundred wonderful children, and saw them enter into the spirit of it earnestly, we realized that we had struck a big idea, and I gave the Franklin brothers full authority to go as far as they liked. When you have seen the picture at the Globe Theater next week, you will realize how wonderful has been the result and how astoundingly the children have shown their innate talent.

Started More Than a Year Ago

"This was nearly a year ago, and we spent more than $500,000 on the first experiment. The original filming ran into about seventeen reels—we will show it in ten. We put this picture away and looked at it ourselves hundreds of times—with more enjoyment at each sitting. And we came to realize that these pictures were not only for children, but for grown-ups as well.

"Immediately we started 'Babes in the Woods' and then 'Treasure Island'; another, 'Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp.' With these in our pocket, we knew there was no end to what we could do.

"Theda Bara, in the meantime, had advanced to the very top of artistic achievement and of trade popularity, and I decided that we would give her the very best we had. She posed in a version of Cleopatra which looked so very good that we decided to lay this picture on our shelf, also, temporarily, for our own private enjoyment.

"Then I began to think hard. We had three more big subjects for Theda Bara, so we cast everything to the winds and turned her loose.

"William Farnum, whom I admire for his art and his manliness, was in the meantime recovering from an illness, and he looked so fit that he was permitted to outdo himself in four of the biggest, red-blooded, thrilling and wonderful pictures that any man has ever made. We made some innovations in these pictures, too.

Farnum Pictures Have Real Fights

"It used to be the idea in motion pictures that when a fight was made, it was merely mugged, as they say, and it registered. Not so in the Farnum pictures. When they get wrought up in these pictures, the men are allowed to fight as men fight—and I am pleased to let you know that when the National Board of Review passed on this particular picture they gave it their warmest recommendation in a special additional note.

"With the Theda Bara superpictures and 'Jack and the Beanstalk,' the William Farnum pictures, the Fox Kiddies series, and 'The Honor System' ready to be offered to the exhibitors, I came to the conclusion that our two and a half million dollars had been better expended than I had dreamed. And I have now announced 'Standard Pictures' for open booking, to include the pictures already mentioned, and the Fox Kiddie stories, which will in the year amount to twelve of the children's pictures that cannot be resisted by the grown-ups.

"Then, when I thought we were ready for a rest, we gave a sudden thought to our little kiddies, Jane and Katherine Lee. We starred them in a play called 'Two Little Imps' last week, and overnight they were a sensation, not only in New York, but all over the country.

"So now Jane and Katherine Lee are Fox kiddies, indeed, and are named among the Standard Pictures.

"We have employed special representatives to give trade showings in all the important cities of the United States and Canada. The releases will begin in September, so that there is plenty of time for the men from Missouri and elsewhere "to be shown."

"While Standard Pictures occupied a great deal of our attention in the last eight months, we were not neglectful of our fifty-two feature releases for the next year. Dustin Farnum, who has not been heard of in the past ten months, has made for us four pictures that vary in style from the wild Southwest to the thrilling Northeast, and in between, and these will be seen among our fifty-two features. There are some new ones for George Walsh, Gladys Brockwell, Miriam Cooper, Virginia Pearson, June Caprice, Valeska Suratt, and others."

Making a Losing House Pay

MOTOGRAPHY is about to run a series of extremely practical and useful articles by exhibitors of experience on the subject of switching a losing theater over into the profit side of the books. Watch for these stories.

Great Help to Exhibitor

MOTOGRAPHY:

Your department, "What the Picture Did for Me," is of inestimable help to the exhibitor. For honest criterions by which to judge a play in advance to its showing I depend almost exclusively upon your critics and Julian Johnson of Photoplay Magazine.

Your manner of publishing the worth while news is the best I can conceive. You have the faculty of assembling to the best advantage a great deal of news in a comparatively small area of clear, white paper.

As to the editorials, I consider them honest, excellently written and stimulating. I do not always agree with their sentiments, but that is why I read them. I want to get the other man's point of view, not my own.—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Russian Films Superior

The unpopularity of foreign films both with exhibitors and with their patrons is believed to be about to disappear in favor of a marked favor when the first of a repertory of Russian art films are presented to trade within a few weeks. There has been complaint that foreign films have proved unprofitable because of the character of the productions, the exaggerated gestures of the actors and a system of direction which emphasized unpleasantly the foreign flavor of the dramas.

Competent critics who have witnessed the half dozen productions of the Russian Art Film Corporation which N. S. Kaplan has prepared for immediate release from the more than fifty films which he brought from Moscow several weeks ago venture the opinion that the old attitude is due to be supplanted by a new and favorable one.

Among theater-goers there is still a recollection of the coming to this country several years ago of a band of unknown players headed by a Russian named Nazimoff. Although this woman and her associates spoke a language that few in the audiences which packed a Broadway theater for several weeks could understand, so intense was their artistry that their message never failed of revelation.

Upon this foundation Mr. Kaplan has built his Russian repertory for production in the United States. Art at its apex is the promise he makes, art in its most easily understood form of expression—the pictorial. So that, whereas Nazimoff—now the famous American star of stage and screen, Nazimova—delivered her message in spite of the unfamiliar tongue which she spoke, the Moscow players who are coming here in screen productions work without this handicap.

According to present plans they will be seen here in more than fifty masterpieces of Russian literature. Less than a dozen prominent players of the Moscow Theater will be introduced in the first half dozen productions of the Russian art repertory. There are many others to come later.

Methods of Promoting Seat Sales

EDITOR OF TRIANGLE MAGAZINE TELLS HOW IT CAN BE DONE

IN connection with the Triangle service, the purpose of which is to lend the exhibitor practical aid in building up a stable and profitable patronage, the following article has been prepared by the editor of Triangle Magazine for distribution among the service men of the various exchanges.

"In the campaign for better business, the theater manager soon learns that while it is important to spend great effort in trying to promote sales, it is a waste of good energy if the returns are so small that they do not equal the value of the worker's time. That is to say, if an advertising man's time is worth a dollar an hour, and he spends eight hours perfecting a "stunt" which brings only five dollars worth of business, his energy is misdirected, and almost sheer waste. On the other hand, if in that eight hours he conceives and develops a plan which causes the business of the house with which he is connected, to double, he is showing a high degree of efficiency.

Thinking in Blocks

So it comes about that the theater manager things in terms not of individual seats, but of whole blocks of seats. A single patron does not make it possible for him to give his performance; a number of patrons not only make it possible for the show to go on, but, if the number is large enough, to show a profit.

There are many ways to promote the selling of many seats through publicity; and publicity campaigns are important. But there are other means by which the same end may be reached directly; and the manager is passing up a big opportunity if he ignores them. By these means we mean organization of parties to attend the given theater in a body.

First of all, there are special clubs that are built up through the mailing list. A long time ago, Triangle strongly recommended this sort of work, and indicated clearly how it might be done. In the first place, the exhibitor was reminded that certain of his patrons preferred some players to others. If he could isolate these patrons from the rest, he would be able to make a special appeal to them when the favorites came along again in a new play.

Personality Clubs

The way in which the members of the group are to be found out is to encourage the persons composing the audience to express their preferences on slips distributed among them, to be filled out with their names and addresses in this manner:

NOTICE

If you will fill out the blank spaces below with the name of your favorite player whose pictures are showing regularly at this theater, we shall be glad to notify you in advance when his or her next picture will appear.

My favorite player is.....
My name is.....
My address is.....

A card index of these names may be kept then in the manager's office for ready reference. They should be kept in groups, each group known by the name of the favorite player. In this way it will be easy to notify the patrons as the plays come along.

This plan has the great merit of bringing the manager in personal contact with the patron through correspondence, a condition which stimulates the loyalty of the patron to the theater, and which encourages that best of all advertising, the word-of-mouth recommendation of plays. The cost of note paper, stamps and printing is negligible when it is considered that each person addressed is likely to bring from three to five other persons with him.

Direct Organization

However, this is more in the nature of publicity acceleration than direct organization. Some of the theaters in large cities employ men and women to do nothing else but get theater parties together, working for the managers on commission basis.

These special representatives are usually persons of some social acquaintance, being able to reach people of means who are likely to give parties of the kind; and in some cases they are vested with authority to sell seats en bloc at something below the usual box office scale. This plan of reduced rates, however, is not one to be encouraged. There are enough advantages in having an entire section of the theater reserved, to make the proposition at regular rates, entirely attractive.

This arrangement is subject to wide variations, and is never particularly dependable. Still, if the representative works far enough ahead on the schedule so as not to interfere with the regular business by tying up gangs of seats, it may be resorted to with profit, and certainly no loss if it does not work, because the agent is doing his or her part on a commission basis.

There is still another way of handling this business that is rather more dependable, because it rests less on whims and caprices. It is going after the conventions that come to town, the regular resident clubs, the hotels, the chamber of commerce, and the board of trade.

In mentining the two last-named institutions, one has in mind the fact that a theater is always an adjunct to be mentioned with more or less pride by civic associations. If a town has a theater, however poor it may be, the implication exists that the town is thriving. But it is up to the theater manager in many cases, to call the attention of the boards to this fact, for, in press of other work, promoting the town canning factory or the knitting mill, they are apt to overlook it.

The secretaries of chamber of commerce and the board of trade are usually in receipt of frequent communications asking about the desirability of locating in town, and often, too, have to act as hosts for investigating committees from other places. These committees should be directed to the theater, and there be entertained. The secretaries might not think of it, so the manager should never fail to be on hand with his reminder.

Much transient trade may be drummed up through the hotels. It may be that the hotel will permit the theater to place neat program cards in each room, to encourage the patronage of transients; and it may be that the hotel clerks, night and day, may be enlisted as consistent boosters.

Special Nights

Desirable locations in the theater should be reserved for special delegates, and the performance that they attend should be treated as a special occasion. Effort should be made to sell out large portions of the theater or even the entire theater, for club benefits. It would surprise the newcomer in the managerial end of the game to know how many theaters are doing that very thing at frequent intervals.

ASKS ABOUT SERVICE

Manager of Vitagraph's Kansas City Exchange Sends Exhibitors Letters Asking How Service Can Be Improved—Many Replies

F. F. Nine, manager of the Kansas City office for Greater Vitagraph, in an effort to improve the service, has sent out letters to every exhibitor served by his branch requesting the exhibitors to inform him just exactly where the service, in their estimation, falls short.

Several exhibitors have taken advantage of the letter to forward their complaints.

L. H. Moore, of the Galena Amusement Company, writes:

My copy of your recent circular asking patrons of your office for suggestions for the improvement of Vitagraph service, came today.

I have observed (and yours is one of the cases I have in mind) that when an exchange manager is fair enough to ask his customers how he can better serve them, generally he is already giving them a service that leaves very little for a reasonable exhibitor to complain of.

I am glad of the chance to say I am well pleased with the way our account is handled. Every difference we have had with you has been promptly and cheerfully settled to our satisfaction, such a change from the high-handed methods that used to prevail in your office. The best compliment I can pay you is to say your service now is as good as your pictures.

Your office is "solid" with us and as long as your present policy prevails you may depend upon keeping our account.

G. W. Bays, of the Royal Theater, Newton, Kansas, writes:

I just received your letter asking me to suggest a way an exchange could and should be run to better the conditions of all concerned. You have gone beyond me, but my idea of some of the exchange's policy in the past has been on the order of a shell game; things are changing very rapidly, dishonest exchangemen and exhibitors are taking the rear-most seats.

If I were running an exchange the first thing I would do is get a reliable shipping clerk, and his instructions would be to ship paper and film just as ordered. The films should be in good condition, and paper and photos must be clean and in good shape also.

I believe your shipping clerk should put a little more wrapping paper on the advertising matter. All reasonable complaints should be looked into and adjusted if possible. No doubt you are following that policy. If you are, you are pretty sure of success.

G. W. Rothrock, of Macksville Opera House, Macksville, Kansas, writes:

So far I think you people are managing that exchange well, as far as my service is concerned. You might, however save an exhibitor about half if you would send all advertising by parcels post.

E. B. Bugher, owner of the New Wonderland Theater, Sallisaw, Oklahoma, writes:

Am in receipt of your circular letter asking for views on how to handle an exchange, and beg to advise as follows:

I am going to give you my views from my standpoint, as I know nothing of your side of the question, and know but very little of the trials and tribulations of other exhibitors. I have always paid my expenses promptly and most especially my film rental, and I believe I have as good a record along that line as any small exhibitor in the state. And for this reason I think that exacting a deposit from me in order that I may have the privilege of using your service is an injustice; also sending C. O. D. shipments just because my check is not in your office on Monday. Running the three shows at Sallisaw, Muldrow and Vian keeps me very busy, as I do all my own work.

In booking a big feature like the "Battle Cry of Peace," "Womanhood," etc., I would not object to making a deposit and I think you are justified to demand it, inasmuch as that partly protects you for those dates, and the exhibitor gets the benefit of the deposit when he makes final payment.

N. J. Boody, of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, writes:

Your letter received in regard to service. I for one will state it the best. If I want a booking changed you do so without any trouble. My advertising matter and pictures are always on time and no change in programs booked.

S. W. Cooper of Idle Hour Theater, Liberal, Missouri, writes:

Your circular letter of recent date relative to the service and its betterment received. I will say that I have been in the film deal some seven years and have dealt with quite a number of film concerns, and without a brag or boast must say that your film has come out equal or in better condition than any other firm with which I have dealt.

In regard to paper, I must say that you have a very good system in getting paper out on time and in good condition. I for one cannot see where you could better conditions very much, as I am one of the satisfied customers; while we would like to run a little newer film, yet we find the service of the class we run in very good condition, clean and pliable.

New Crane Wilbur Play

The second Horsley production on Art Dramas program, which is entitled "Blood of His Fathers," is said to be a study in heredity and to be filled with many gripping scenes. Crane Wilbur, the popular star who scored what was perhaps his greatest hit in "Eye of Envy," his first Art Drama, plays three distinct roles in his new production.

THE MUSIC QUESTION

Thinks Exhibitors Can Bring Publishers' Society to Terms—Plenty of the Standard Uncopyrighted Music in Works of Great Artists

Music Master for Mutual Film Corporation

By Joseph O'Sullivan

Now that the interpretation by the Supreme Court of the copyright law upholds the stand taken by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, in demanding a tax for the privilege of using music composed by its members, it certainly behooves the purveyor of music, particularly the motion picture exhibitor, to take drastic measures to protect his interests from this unjust tax, which is inspired by arrogance, conceit and avarice.

The exhibitor for long has been the advertising medium for the latest popular music and so-called "hits," and now, in addition to the original cost of this music, he is compelled to pay a tax for helping to popularize what, in many cases, are vapid and inane "compositions."

The intelligent exhibitor knows well that for all the purposes for which music is presented in his house, there is enough really good and effective music uncopyrighted for all time to come. It is my opinion, frequently emphasized during my connection with the Mutual Film Corporation, that if every exhibitor were to confine his music to the standard uncopyrighted music for a period of six months, his patrons would never be satisfied to listen again to the sentimental gush and clatter that frequently parade under the guise of music; and there is no doubt but that the presentation of the pictures would not suffer for lack of appropriate music, for the works of the great masters, Beethoven, Wagner, Chopin, Schubert, Berlioz, etc., are an inexhaustible source of dramatic music material.

It is a significant fact that such prominent publishing concerns as Schirmer, Carl Fischer, Ditson, Boosey & Co., Stasny, etc., are not listed among the membership of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. These well-known houses are wise in their generation, for they realize that the imposition of a tax can have but one result—an enormous decrease in the sale of copyrighted music, with a consequent diminishing of revenue. Then, too, it is a well known fact that the sale of standard music has increased enormously since the advent of the motion picture theater and orchestra, and as no one house has the exclusive publishing rights of such music—probably three-fourths of the music listed in the catalogues of the principal publishing houses being entirely free from copyright claims—it is palpably impracticable to attempt to enforce the tax on standard music.

For every musician worthy of the name, the motion picture industry has been a life-saver; for since the dance mania had its inception, many of the best orchestra men were thrown out of employment, being supplanted by dance combinations and "Jazz" bands, whose members cannot always be classified as musicians. Some of the best organists in the country have taken advantage of the opportunity to increase their incomes by playing in picture houses, and these men are without exception musicians of the first caliber, to whom the American Society is but a name.

It can, therefore, be confidently stated that the musicians of the country will gladly assist the exhibitor and other high-class amusement proprietors in digging the grave of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and will gladly play the "Marche Funebre"—full orchestra parts supplied gratis. The result will be the elimination of an undesirable element in the music publishing field in this country.

Sounds Doom of Family Album

The day is coming when the moving picture machine will replace the family album in the home, according to B. S. Moss, theatrical and motion picture promoter. Mr. Moss believes that motion pictures are destined to play a much more important part in our daily lives than they do today.

"It doesn't require much imagination to see moving picture machines—not the present model, of course—as common in the home as the talking machines are today. Then, instead of future generations looking at faded photographs of their ancestors in the family album, they will place a tiny reel of film in a miniature machine, turn the crank and see grandfather's father or some other distinguished relative.

"The day will come, I believe, when the kodak of today will be replaced by the moving picture camera of the future."

Present Film to Red Cross

The Whartons have given the Red Cross film which they made for the Rochester committee to the national Red Cross.

The film was made originally to aid in the raising of a million dollars in the vicinity of Rochester. After the picture had been shown in all the theaters in that district and the contributions counted, it was found that the donations totaled more than a million and a half. Other communities then began to evince strong desires for the pictures and the Whartons decided to make a gift of the film to the national Red Cross in order that the latter might handle the distribution of the picture in as wide a territory as desired.

Scripts and Titles Office

Tom Bret, formerly sub-title editor of the Vitagraph and scenario editor at the Rolfe-Metro studios, has just completed his first picturization of a story by Walt Mason, the celebrated prose poet. The Walt Mason comedies are being produced by Filmcraft. Mr. Bret has opened an office at 616 Candler Building, New York, where he is busy writing titles for the Metro-Drew comedies, French government war pictures and a number of big state rights features.

New Hoyt Comedy

"A Trip to Chinatown" is considered one of Charles Hoyt's merriest comedies and the Selig Polyscope Company promises that not a laugh has been lost in the two-reel Hoyt comedy, "A Trip to Chinatown," released in K. E. S. E. on Monday, August 20.

Susie Light Moon

Susie Light Moon, one of the few remaining Indians encamped at Hartville, the Santa Monica plant of the Triangle Film Corporation, proves herself a capable actress in "Master of His Home," the latest starring vehicle of William Desmond.

Valeska Suratt has commenced her tenth William Fox photoplay.

Stage Star in "Runaway Romany"

One of the strongest supporting casts ever assembled in support of a picture star will be seen in "Runaway Romany," the new Ardsley Art Film Corporation production which will present Marion Davies for the first time in photo drama. It is generally known that Miss Davies wrote the story on which the screen play is based but it is now announced that she also selected the cast.

Miss Davies came to pictures from "Oh Boy" at the Princess Theater, New York. Every film fan recognizes the names of the principal players who will be seen with her in "Runaway Romany." For instance, Mr. Kilgour has had a successful career both on stage and screen and in recent years has divided his time about evenly between the two forms of art. He is seen most often in Vitagraph productions. On the stage he is recalled especially for his work in "The Easiest Way," Eugene Walter's great play, in "The Lion and the Mouse," and in "Ready Money."

Among the members of the original New Theater company was Pedro de Cordoba. Upon completion of "Runaway Romany" he was immediately engaged as leading man for Elsie Ferguson in her screen debut. He appeared in the Geraldine Farrar features, having previously appeared on the speaking stage with Sothern and Marlowe, Carlotta Nillson and Eleanor Robson. His French and Spanish ancestry stand him in good stead as the gypsy princeling in "Runaway Romany."

Matt Moore, who is the hero with Miss Davies, was last seen as leading man with Mary Pickford, his brother's wife. Like the rest of the family he has devoted his career to pictures and has been remarkably successful as actor and director.

Of Ormi Hawley it is said that in her career she has appeard in more than three hundred photoplays with the best known companies in the industry.

"Runaway Romany" is now being cut and assembled for production on Broadway after Labor Day.

Dustin Farnum Play August 13

"Durand of the Bad Lands," Dustin Farnum's drama of the West, will be released by William Fox on August 13. This will mark "Dusty" Farnum's debut on the screen as a Fox player. Mr. Farnum has been busy for almost a year enacting stellar roles in a series of pictures for Fox Film Corporation.

MAKES PICTURE SURVEY

H. O. Davis Has Elaborate Statistics Compiled as Guide for Directing the Affairs of Triangle Throughout the World

Some idea of the tremendous scope and thoroughness of the new Triangle's campaign to unite the interests of exhibitor and producer and bring about conditions which heretofore have not existed in the motion picture industry, may be gleaned from a survey of the film situation just completed by H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Triangle Film Corporation.

The report, which contains statistics never before compiled, embraces an exhaustive summary of cinema affairs, in every section of the globe, from the viewpoint of both exhibitor and producer. It has taken more than a year to gather the data and several months to assemble the facts in the desired form. Much of the information is of a confidential nature and is considered an invaluable asset for the furtherance of the Triangle's plans for the future.

According to Mr. Davis, the features of the summary that now may be made public pertain to figures furnished by thousands of exhibitors in every part of the United States and all of the foreign countries in which amusement enterprises have not been completely devastated and demoralized by the war. The exhibitors have reported on almost every phase of their business, including brands of films used, receipts, population, class of population, kinds of films most popular, methods of advertising, support given by newspapers and publications, popular interest in motion picture affairs, popularity of individual players, opinions as to the relative importance of star, story and direction, and scores of other technical but vital facts.

"The result of this survey," said Mr. Davis, "is that we have assembled in concrete form an array of statistics that remove from our relations with the exhibitors the element of chance or guess-work and reduces production to a mathetmatical and business certainty. The information in the report is indisputable and contains a condensed summary of obstacles to be overcome by both exhibitor and producer and a detailed account of conditions encountered by experienced showmen in the various communities represented.

"By way of illustration, turning at random to a city listed in the survey, we find a city in Japan of 120,000 population, a manufacturing community where the majority of the residents cannot afford to pay more than a stipulated price of admission for their film entertainment. The kinds of plays most popular here are those which have an uplifting moral, or depict industry and thrift attaining the reward of success. Vampire plays are unpopular here, but short news reels or fillers which have an educational value are at a premium. Bright, witty comedies are always popular here, according to the report, but the residents of this community do not care particularly for the slapstick and custard pie variety of humor. In this Japanese city, as throughout the entire nation, plays are never popular that have Japanese actors performing menial tasks or acting as the butt of ridiculous jokes perpetrated by Caucasians or members of another race. The Japanese are not averse to seeing their countrymen the target of jokes or horseplay but they resent their countrymen being shown in a more unfavorable light than the other actors. There is much other information about this city and the motion picture situation in this locality, but these facts are enough to explain the purpose and nature of the survey."

ENTERTAINER EXTRAORDINARY

George M. Cohan in Artcraft's "Seven Keys to Baldpate" Has Career That Reads Like Arabian Nights Story

When George M. Cohan, millionaire actor, author and producer, walked out before the Artcraft camera to play the first scenes of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," released by Artcraft on the 26th of this month, it was not the first time he had appeared as an actor in the role of George Washington Magee, the hero of the Earl Derr Biggers story which Cohan dramatized and produced for the speaking stage, and in which he is now starred as a film comedian.

Cohan's career began when, as a boy, he toured the New England states in a sketch called "Four of a Kind." His father, the late Jere J. Cohan, was the author of the sketch and the head of the company. The other members were George's mother, his sister, the late Josephine Cohan-Niblo, and himself. In this sketch George played the violin. In 1890, before he was into long trousers, he was playing the title role of "Peck's Bad Boy."

In 1903 the famous firm of Cohan & Harris was organized, Cohan joining forces with Sam H. Harris, a well known producer. Immediately after the organization of the firm Cohan appeared for the first time as an individual star in a regular production, the attraction being "Littly Johnny Jones," a musical comedy which ranks as one of the greatest successes of the American stage.

In 1904 the tireless George M. wrote and composed "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which, with only four little songs, ran a whole year in New York and another in Chicago, while four companies presented it throughout the country. It is said to have cleaned up in profit and royalties considerably over a million dollars.

In 1905-6 Cohan wrote, composed, produced and played in his patriotic play, "George Washington, Jr." "Fifty Miles from Boston" followed, with "The Talk of New York," "The Yankee Prince," "The American Idea," and "The Man Who Owns Broadway." In 1910 he dramatized "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford," which ran a full year in New York and Chicago. In 1911-12 he wrote, composed, produced and appeared as the star in "The Little Millionaire," playing the entire season at his own theater in New York. In 1912-13 he appeared for the first time as a light comedian in straight comedy, creating the title role in his play "Broadway Jones."

In the summer of 1913 he dramatized "Seven Keys to Baldpate," which was one of the greatest New York successes of recent years. During that season Cohan again played in "Broadway Jones," after which he announced his retirement as an actor. But, after he had dramatized and produced "The Miracle Man," in 1914-15, he came back to the stage in "Hello Broadway," his first musical revue. "The Cohan Revue of 1916" followed, but without the author as an active participant.

Last winter the famous actor-author-producer consented to appear before the camera as an Artcraft star, and "Broadway Jones" was given to the screen. It has demonstrated in motion picture theaters the country over that Cohan is one of the greatest drawing cards who ever appealed to the American public.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" is his second Artcraft production. It promises to far outdo on the screen its record as a stage success.

Opens Minneapolis Office

Under the direction of B. Barnett, Sr., the Barnett Film Corporation opened an office in Minneapolis on August 13, for the promotion of "Joan the Woman" in the Northwest territory.

The early part of this year the Barnetts sold the Famous Players Star Feature Film Service of Minneapolis to the Paramount Pictures Corporation. They established in this territory about four years ago. The Barnetts also control the rights of "Joan the Woman" and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" for Michigan and Ohio. This territory is under the supervision of Bert Barnett, Jr., with offices in Detroit and Cleveland.

Virginia Exhibitors to Entertain

There will be a meeting of exhibitors at Ocean View, Virginia, August 30, 31 and September 1, at which North Carolina, South Carolina, Maryland and the District of Columbia will come together under the auspices of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Virginia. Several film producers and others connected with the industry have made reservations for space, and have signified their intention of being present at this occasion. The Virginia League had originally intended to hold its meeting August 27, 28 and 29, but conditions which developed at Chicago during the convention necessitated a change of plans.

Clara Kimball Changes Play

Herman Sudermann's immortal "Magda," played in every language and the favorite dramatic vehicle of such super-stars as Mme. Bernhardt and Duse, will be the first of the new series of Clara Kimball Young photoplays to be made under the popular star's own personal direction by her own personally directed company. "The Marionettes" had been announced as the initial production under the new plan but it has been necessary to supersede it with "Magda" because of a question which has arisen as to the screen rights of the play.

No expense in production has been spared by the Erbograph Company on its next Art Drama, "The Little Samaritan," in which Marian Swayne makes her third appearance for that company.

Gail Kane in Spy Play

Gail Kane, Mutual-American star, plays a beautiful and talented French widow who falls in the power of an enemy spy in a new patriotic drama, "Souls in Pawn," her latest Mutual release.

"Souls in Pawn" reveals ramifications of the enemy spy system in Europe in the days which preceded the war and shows how it defied, for months, the French secret service.

Allen Discusses Motoy Comedies

In a recent discussion of the merits and the future of the new Motoy Comedies, the objection was raised that owing to the type of the releases the comedies must necessarily become similar. This point of view was taken on the ground that the field of production is limited and that the same dolls are used over and over again.

H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, which makes these doll comedies, denies this emphatically. He says that the field is not limited, and that it possesses rare possibilities for humor. The Motoy book has any quantity of dissimilar stories, and at present they are doing up to the minute fairy stories, which are all totally different.

In support of this claim he outlined the plots of several of the recent releases, showing that in spite of using the same dolls which, after all, will become as well known as real actors and actresses, the pictures are entirely unlike. Mr. Allen said:

Take, for instance, "In the Jungle." There we find Willie and Jane eloping from the nursery via a balloon, and landing in a jungle. After various adventures with lions, crocodiles, monkeys, and savages, they finally get the balloon started and sail safely back to the nursery.

Then, look at "The Midnight Frolic." Here we have a revel of the dolls on the nursery floor, after their little owners have gone to sleep. Teddy, the bear, installs himself as camera man, and Willie and Jane play a love scene, which, however, is broken up by Jimmy, who insists on imitating Charlie Chaplin. His comedy aspirations are finally squelched by Willie, who is a regular hero.

In "Dolly Doings," Jimmy's antics with a needle and thread form the theme of the plot. He steals the other fellow's girl, but at last receives the just deserts of his mischief by incurring the enmity of the nursery dog.

Jimmy is the principal mischief maker of all the doll actors. In "Jimmy Gets the Pennant," he takes part in a baseball game, and after valiantly cheering his side on to victory, finally takes the bat, knocks a home run, and breaks a neighbor's window.

Now, it doesn't seem to me that any one of these resembles another. They are just as different from one another as are any releases, featuring the same actors. Nor is there any prospect of our running out of ideas.

Champion Rider Joins Fairbanks

Douglas Fairbanks is back in Los Angeles, after having had one of the biggest times of his strenuous career at the Wild West exercises in Cheyenne, Wyo., and bringing with him as a new member of the Fairbanks company J. H. Strickland, champion bareback and bucking horse rider of the world.

Fairbanks watched Strickland's amazing feats of horsemanship during the trick riding contests at Cheyenne, and at once decided that Strickland must appear in his next picture. There soon appeared one trifling obstacle—Strickland didn't want to. For two hours the Artcraft star argued and pleaded with the cowboy, before the latter was willing to sign a contract.

The next Fairbanks play—his fourth for Artcraft release—is to be a rip-roaring, up-to-the-minute comedy drama of the real west, and prominent parts will be played by Strickland and five other cowboys who were engaged with him at Cheyenne. Strickland brought with him to the studio the horse which he has ridden in all his championship contests.

EDNA GOODRICH IN MUTUALS

Noted and Wealthy American Stage Celebrity to Appear in Four New Productions of Five Reels Each

Edna Goodrich, the brilliant and famous American actress, who has appeared in more than a dozen New York successes, is starred in a series of four new five-reel productions to be released shortly by the Mutual Film Corporation. The first will be released within a few weeks.

The productions will be issued under the policy of "big stars only," announced some months ago by President John R. Freuler of the Mutual, and rigidly adhered to since. Miss Goodrich's fame on the legitimate stage puts her distinctly into the "big star" class, stars of proved box office value.

Mutual has already started a nation-wide publicity and advertising campaign to herald the first release of the productions starring the noted beauty.

Miss Goodrich is regarded by her critics as the "all American" girl of the stage, with all that this implies. To be the typical American girl involves not only having ability to wear beautiful clothes gracefully in any of the varying situations of modern life, but as well, having the clothes to wear.

The forthcoming productions are "Reputation," "Queen X," "A Daughter of Maryland," and "American Maid," each of the plays having been selected by Miss Goodrich herself in consultation with President Freuler.

The utmost care and deliberation were involved in the selection of the plays, which are considered in each instance to be well adapted to the display of Miss Goodrich's interpretative genius. More than two months of analysis preceeded selection of the first play deemed suitable to the young star's requirements.

The four new Goodrich dramas are by authors of distinction. "Reputation" was written by John Clymer, who wrote "Ashes of Embers," "The White Raven," "The Diplomatic Romance," and other widely known screen successes. It was directed by John B. O'Brien, who was formerly stage manager for Augustus Thomas.

"Queen X" is by Assistant United States District Attorney Edwin M. Stanton of New York, who led the sensational Federal crusade against opium smugglers, and was instrumental in stamping out the criminal conspiracy centering in the Chinese settlements of New York and San Francisco. Mr. O'Brien also directed this play.

"American Maid" is, as the title indicates, a play glorifying that glorious product, the American girl, a role that fits Miss Goodrich delightfully. "American Maid" was directed by Albert Capellani, the famous Parisian director who staged "Camille" and many other splendid productions, including Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law."

"A Daughter of Maryland" is also indicated by its title as a play with a southern heroine who does wonderful things in great emergencies and proves herself equal to the test just as southern girls have been doing from time immemorial.

Miss Goodrich is known as one of the wealthiest women of the stage, owning residences in New York and London, and has suburban places in Italy and England.

When the war broke out Miss Goodrich turned her Riverside mansion over to the British Red Cross for hospital uses, and it is now sheltering eighty wounded men from Ypres.

The young star first appeared professionally at the Casino in New York as a member of the "Floradora Sextette." She married Nat Goodwin early in her stage career but the marriage was soon afterwards dissolved.

Mme. Alice Blache has completed a series of lectures on scenario writing at Columbia University.

Broadway Testing Mazda Projection

H. H. Cudmore of Cleveland, Ohio, general manager of the Argus Lamp and Supply Company of Cleveland, is in New York personally superintending the installation of the new Sheck Adapters in several of the larger motion picture theaters of the city.

H. H. Cudmore, secretary and general manager, Argus Lamp and Appliance Co.

The new appliance which Mr. Cudmore will personally introduce in New York is the invention of Oscar M. Sheck of Cleveland, one of the best known electrical engineers in the country. By his invention it is possible to use the Mazda incandescent lamps with the ordinary equipment to be found in any motion picture theater.

"We are of the opinion," said Mr. Cudmore in discussing the merits of the Sheck invention, "that the development of this new Mazda lamp and the coincident invention of the Sheck Universal Adapter, will revolutionize the entire field of motion picture projection.

"We claim that we give better screen illumination; that we do not tire the eyes; that we entirely eliminate flicker on the screen, and that we materially lower the cost of projection. One item of greatest importance is the fact that the new lamp method of projection does away with all the poisonous gases in the projection booth which have been so injurious to the health of operators."

The New York theaters where the new projection method is being demonstrated will be announced later and the entire motion picture trade invited to see for themselves what the lamps will do.

Trials of a Cartoonist

"Thinking up ideas for humorous cartoons is a very serious business," says Bud Fisher. "I believe people want good, wholesome humor, to remove the bad taste so often left in their mouths by suggestive pictures, put on for moral education. And it is the short, light comedy which does the business. The day for the sex picture is gone. The whole game is getting cleaner and going after finer and less morbid entertainment.

"There is a lot in choosing the right material for either newspaper or animated cartoons. The field for selection is narrow and the subjects must be general. Religion, politics, races of people, and various types of readers and audiences must be taken into consideration and treated according to their standards. For instance, a cartoon which is extremely popular in a democratic community, will be anything but well-received in a republican district. The ridiculing or light handling of any particular race must be eliminated. For while using the negro as a butt for comedy might be popular in New England, in the South where the exhibitor is largely dependent upon colored patronage, it would be very unwise. The same applies to religion and other topics. Thus the cartoonist has but a limited field to draw from and he must make everybody laugh and offend no one. It is a difficult business."

SERVICE TO EXHIBITORS

Universal Inaugurates Many Helpful Features, Including Adjustment of Claims and Preparation of Publicity Valuable to Exhibitors

Universal has established a service department to work in co-operation with both the Mecca and Universal exchanges, taking care of all matters calling for adjustment with exhibitors.

If films or lithographic paper chance to be delayed in transit, or any one of a dozen other things occur to cause the exhibitor worry or loss, the experts in charge of the new service department take the matter up at once and see that matters are straightened out to the satisfaction of the man whose income depends upon the money-making quality of Universal films. As a matter of facts, the employes of the service department have been retained to represent the interests of the exhibitors, and although their salaries are being paid by Universal, they have been given a free hand to see that the exhibitor gets every dollar's worth of service to which he is entitled.

In addition to adjusting claims, the new department takes care of the exhibitor's advertising and publicity, wherever such assistance is desired. Newspaper copy is prepared, handbills and special folders gotten up, and circular letters composed to meet requirements.

HART IN "NARROW TRAIL"

Lambert Hillyer, Director of Famous Star—Sylvia Bremer His Leading Woman in Western Play Featuring Road Agent

Following close upon the recent court decision in New York, upholding Artcraft's right to present Wm. S. Hart in pictures supervised by Thos. H. Ince, comes news from California of the first Hart production which will be offered by Artcraft. It bears the name of "The Narrow Trail," and advance announcements state it is replete with both the thrills and romance which have distinguished the plays of the famous "western" star.

Lambert Hillyer, well known as an author and for some time attached in this capacity to the Ince forces, has been made a director for the Hart productions, and is now with Hart and a large company somewhere in the most mountainous region of California.

Sylvia Bremer will be Hart's leading woman in "The Narrow Trail. Miss Bremer recently supported Hart in "The Cold Deck," and also attracted much attention by her work as leading woman for Chas. Ray in "The Pinch Hitter," "The Millionaire Vagrant" and "Sudden Jim."

The plot of "The Narrow Trail" deals with the reform of the bandit impersonated by Hart, through his love for the girl, with whom he becomes acquainted when she figures as one of the victims of a hold-up in which he is the man behind the mask. When the robber falls in love he falls hard, and there follows a series of adventures that culminate in the reform of the highwayman and the capitulation of the girl.

All the Artcraft productions starring Hart will be made by the company organized by the actor himself for the filming of pictures in which he will appear.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

State Rights Operating

By Robert W. Priest,

General Manager Arrow Film Company.

THE simplicity of the State Rights plan of marketing pictures is seemingly so obvious to the meanest capacity, that at the present time there is a bewildering list of these productions to select from. But there is no mechanical method known of producing "winners." You cannot reduce the matter to an automatic formula. Motion pictures are essentially abstract conceptions, not concrete manufactures. It is usually very much a case of trial and error, as opposed to mathematical precision, when you come to filming and assembling your scenes. The finished result is a complex conglomerate of personal equations which may be an artistic and financial success, or a dire failure on being shown to the public for the first time or thereafter. To this general rule, however, there are exceptions which I will subsequently cite.

But even so, you may roughly classify the state rights pictures. Yet more precisely, by the nature of things, they arrange themselves in some such order as the following:

(1) Features desirable in themselves.
(2) Features desirable in themselves and for their results.
(3) Features desirable for their results only.

If the unbiased student of the matter will consult recent records, he will, I think agree with me that this method of classification is permissible. To the first class belong machine made program features, to the third, sex and problem films and empirical junk, i. e. ninety per cent of the whole. Now, when a buyer obtains a feature of the second class, he invariably secures prestige and profit as the result of his judicious handling of it.

Such a picture as "The Deemster" properly takes its place in the second class, hence the favorable reception which it has received. As nearly as possible the production was a concrete one, in contradistinction to an empirical one. In other words, its success was made a practical certainty by a few simple calculations or factors invariably omitted by ignorant quacks.

It follows then that from the available list of state rights features a man of average intelligence can select productions that are bound to yield favorable returns. This is reducing state rights exploitation to a scientific basis. In other words, you may make financial success fairly certain.

The success of the territorial exploitation of the picture by state rights buyers is also as reasonably certain as the primary distributions although this is not a subject that is within my province to discuss. What I am mainly concerned with on the present occasion, is to make it clear that the proper production and exploitation of state rights features by responsible companies or individuals, is virtually unattended by risk and that it is up to the buyer who obtains a franchise to profit by the data for making money out of the picture which is usually in possession of the producing company. The concern with which I am associated is one of the few that not merely sells a picture but also service for exploiting it.

Do we not, therefore, in these latter conditions approach near to the ideal of state rights exploitation in the motion picture field? The history of the business shows that no program has been attended by continuous and invariable success, but that individual productions upon which time and care have been extended have redounded to the credit and profit of all concerned. "The Fall of Troy," released in 1910, is the first classic example of the truth of the latter contention.

Ogden Completes Production

The Ogden Pictures Corporation was formed to produce a series of extraordinary attractions, starring Miss Lillian Walker, popularly known as "Dimples," and whose enviable work for the years she was with the Vitagraph Company has placed her in the ranks of the very few female stars with whom the film fans of the world are captivated.

Under the direction of Harry J. Revier, one of the advance guard of directors of massive productions, the initial attraction was produced at the studios of the Ogden Pictures Corporation at Ogden, Utah.

This initial production is entitled "The Lust of the Ages," and deals with a subject that is at present engaging the attention of the entire world apart from the present world war. No inkling of the character of the story has been forthcoming excepting the bare information that it is not a sex play nor a war subject.

In order to set the highest standard possible by which the public and the trade might judge the future activities of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, Albert Scrowcroft, the president, and Lester Park, the general manager, determined to spare neither time nor expense in the staging of the production and gave Mr. Revier carte blanche, with the result that $100,000 is below the actual cost but, Mr. Scrowcroft stated, "every dollar of it shows its value in the picture."

The exploitation and sale of "The Lust of the Ages" is under the managership of Mr. Jesse J. Goldburg, who lately returned from a tour of the country selling the state right market, and offices of the company have been temporarily opened at 729 Seventh avenue, Suite 1202, New York.

The channel of release of the production has not been finally determined upon, excepting that it will be released on a state-right basis, but whether by the Ogden Pictures Corporation or through any one of the concerns who are interested in the purchase of the negative will depend upon the activity of state-right buyers in negotiating direct with the Ogden Pictures Corporation. In the latter event, it is stated at the executive offices of the company, options will be granted to exchanges for the control of the entire Lillian Walker series, which will approximate six a year for the next two years.

Form State Rights Corporation

A number of states rights men in town are forming a new States Rights Corporation. Meetings are being held regularly at the King Bee Company's offices, and although nothing as yet has definitely been given out, the details of a plan of great interest to the industry will shortly be made public. Sol Lesser is at the head of the new organization.

Buys "God's Man"

Representing the Supreme Photo-Play Productions of Pittsburg, General Manager Harry F. Greele, after a special trip to New York, has completed contract with the Frohman Amusement Corporation whereby his corporation has acquired the exclusive booking privileges to the latest Frohman success, "God's Man," starring H. B. Warner, for the territory of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Who Produced Feature?

Klotz & Streimer, Inc., announce that the picture "Whither Thou Goest," which is being sold on state rights has caused a good guessing contest among the different people associated in the motion picture industry.

Up to this announcement there were 406 letters asking if they had guessed right by naming the director and out of the lot there were 186 that named Thomas H. Ince.

One of the 186 was from Mr. Thomas A. Gregg, Melbourne, Australia.

Wolfberg Extends Field

Harris P. Wolfberg, the Pittsburgh state rights magnate, has extended his field of operation by taking Missouri and Kansas for "The Deemster." Mr. Wolfberg had already bought the rights to the big Hall Caine feature for Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and through his purchase achieved such signal success that he decided to jump into New York and close up with W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, for the additional states.

So good are the prospects in his new territory that he has already opened offices in St. Louis and Kansas City.

"The important thing for state rights operators to learn," said Mr. Wolfberg, "is co-operation with the exhibitor. My men must use every available means to boost business whenever and wherever one of my features is booked. Service, to my way of reasoning, is based upon results obtained through the combined efforts of the man who sells and the man who buys."

Run Extended

"God's Man," the multiple reel motion picture attraction which stars H. B. Warner and which is the latest from the studios of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, enjoys the distinction of having been retained at the Studebaker Theater in Chicago for another week owing to the popular demand. Samuel Van Ronkel controls the exclusive rights for the subject in the state of Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana.

Buys "Deemster" in Ten Minutes

Colonel Fred Levy, president Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville, Ky., and W. E. Shallenberger, president Arrow Film Corporation, closed a deal for "The Deemster" in Kentucky and Tennessee within ten minutes from the time they met.

The Big Feature Rights Corporation of Louisville is rated as one of the most substantial and important organizations in the independent field: It controls Charlie Chaplin and "On Trial," through affiliation with the First National Circuit, "Joan the Woman," "The Whip," "The Crisis," "Garden of Allah," "Neptune's Daughter," "Battle Cry of Peace," "Where Are My Children," and one or two others besides "The Deemster."

Handles Mutt and Jeff

H. T. Nolan, one of the foremost figures in the western exchange world, has opened an office in Denver, Colorado, from which he is handling the Mutt and Jeff comedies for Wyoming, Southern Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Northern New Mexico, and the Black Hills section of South Dakota. He is also about to open an office in Omaha in order to take care of the territory of Nebraska and Iowa.

Frank Zambreno of Unity Photoplays Co., Chicago, has bought Edward Warren's production, "Souls Redeemed" ("The Warfare of the Flesh") for Illinois and Chicago. Edward Warren also reports the sale of "The Warfare of the Flesh" for Brazil and for British India.

Colonel Levy Buys Ivan Films

Colonel Fred Levy, accompanied by one of the members of his executive staff, visited New York City last week for the purpose of looking over state right pictures and selecting such as would come up to the standard that he is in the habit of distributing. Colonel Levy is a prominent member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

The Colonel makes it his business to show the pictures that he distributes in his territory for a full week's run in two of the finest theaters of Kentucky—the Strand and The Mary Anderson.

Among other purchases made while in the city the Big Feature Rights Corporation, of which Colonel Levy is president, bought the two Ivan super-photoplays, "Babbling Tongues" and "One Law for Both," which will have successive week runs at his respective theaters in Louisville, Kentucky. He has already arranged for the next seven-reel production soon to be released by that company.

Matt Moore, former Universal star, is to be featured by the Ziegfeld Cinema Corporation in a new photo play entitled "Still Jim." The picture is to be made in El Paso, Texas.

NEW CHICAGO FILM CLUB

Reel Fellows Club of Chicago Gives Place to New Organization, to Include Prominent Men in Industry

The club is dead: long live the club! The Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, which has held an important place in film social affairs in the city for the past several years, is no more. It has been found necessary to close the attractive and well-furnished club rooms in the College Building, at 207 S. Wabash avenue, and to dissolve the organization.

At the present moment there is no film club in Chicago. There will, however, in the very near future, appear upon the map a new organization of similar type, but constructed upon a more conservative and solid basis and to include the most prominent figures associated with the film industry in Chicago.

These decisions were made at a meeting of the club's Emergency Committee, held at the Hamilton Club on Monday, August 13. At this luncheon reorganization meeting, Roderick Ross acted as host. The Emergency Committee, appointed by the Club, consisted of Richard Nehls, chairman; Edward W. Stoddard, secretary of the committee; T. H. Belford, treasurer of the committee, and Messrs. Joseph Hopp, Watterson R. Rothacker, William E. Heaney, Donald J. Bell, David Russakov, Roderick Ross, A. E. Curtis and Ralph E. Proctor, former president of the Reel Fellows Club, ex-officio member. This committee has entire charge of the organization of the new film body. It has been divided into finance and organization committees, which have already held meetings to perform their duties of financing and organizing the new club. The entire Emergency Committee is to meet again at the Hamilton Club on Tuesday, July 21.

With the conservative, constructive work of the club committee, and the co-operation, which has already been promised by prominent film men, it is confidently expected that the new film club will meet with real success when it gets under way. Great care is to be used in handling the affairs of the club and in selecting its members.

Inside Stuff on Chaplin

Charles Chaplin uses an average of nearly a hundred thousand feet of film every time he makes a two thousand foot comedy, according to Terry Ramsaye, who has written an "inside" story of the making of Chaplin comedy in September Photoplay Magazine.

Mr. Ramsaye remarks also, "Chaplin comedies are not made—they occur. No one knows when the next one will occur. Mr. Chaplin does not know when the next one will happen. If he knew how to make one he would quit waiting and do it."

"But," adds the writer, "Chaplin has worked out the great common denominator of fun," indicating that he credits the comedian with knowing a comedy when it happens.

Selig Makes "Still Alarm"

"The Still Alarm," that sterling melodrama, known to thousands of theater goers of the past decade, will be produced on a lavish scale at the Selig studios, Los Angeles, under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Hayakawa as a Comedian

Sessue Hayakawa has his first chance to portray comedy in the Paramount picture, "Hashimura Togo." The famous Jap brought to life in print by Wallace Irwin is essentially a humorous character.

The three comedies announced as the first Paramount-Sennett productions are now well under way in Edendale.

Beban Breezes Through Chicago

The Paramount and Artcraft offices of Chicago last week enjoyed the job of entertaining George Beban, the Morosco-Paramount planet, during his brief stay in the city. The press people were also let in on the fun—and the luncheon given in his honor at the Blackstone Hotel, arranged by Manager Max Goldstine of the Artcraft office. C. J. Stoughton, Paramount manager; W. K. Hill and C. E. Elliot, and some exhibitors were also present.

The well-known delineator of picturesque Italian and French workingmen roles was on his way from New York to the celluloid coast and California. While in Chicago Mr. Beban discussed his plans, stating the commendable ideal:

"If I can't make the kind of pictures I feel I ought to make, as God is my judge, I'll quit!"

This remark sprang from the fact that some of the officials of the company have suggested that Beban appear as the hero in more romantic "love pictures." The star himself prefers to remain in what he feels to be the niche he has in years of work eroded out for himself—the depicting of quaint and colorful French and Italian characters. These pictures are becoming recognized as standing alone in their excellence and faithful interpretation of pages from everyday life.

Exhibitors will remember Mr. Beban as the convincing centerpiece in "The Alien," "Pasquale," "His Sweetheart" and other pictures of similar type.

Essanay's September Releases

Taylor Holmes, the stage star, heads Essanay's schedule of feature releases for September in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." Little Mary McAllister will follow him in "Pants," and Jack Gardner will complete the month's program of five-part pictures with the fourth of his series of westerns, entitled "Men of the Desert."

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" will mark Taylor Holmes' first appearance as a screen star. Until he joined

Little Mary McAlister in Essanay's "Pants."

Esanay, the comedian was one of the best drawing cards of the audible play, his most recent stage production being "His Majesty, Bunker Bean."

Mr. Holmes won his fame on his interpretation of subtle, homely, humorous roles and Essanay has endeavored to afford him the same type of characterization in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." The story is a comedy-romance in which an enterprising young man introduces strictly business methods in his love-making and wins out. Virginia Valli has the leading feminine role.

Trade showings of the picture are now in progress at all branch offices of the K-E-S-E service. It will be released through this organization Septembmer 3.

"Pants," featuring little Mary McAllister, will be released September 10. This six-year-old star is now reported to be having a successful run in Essanay's current series, "Do Children Count?" She won the critics' favor for her work in the role of little Doris Strickland in "On Trial," the First National Exhibitors Circuit's initial production, and appeared previously in several of Henry B. Walthall's Essanay pictures. Here forthcoming production is the first five-reel picture in which she has been starred.

"Men of the Desert" will be released September 24. Like its predecessors, "Land of Long Shadows," "The Range Boss," and "Open Places," this picture presents a story of the red-blooded west. Mr. Gardner, who formerly was a musical comedy star, is supported by Ruth King, Carl Stockdale and Essanay's original western company formed for this series.

The management of Tally's Broadway Theater, Los Angeles, Cal., has signed a contract for the first run in that city of the Gaumont-Mutual weekly.

Big "U" for August 20

"Squaring It," a colorful Bison drama of the far west, featuring Neal Hart and Janet Eastman, heads Universal's regular list of releases for the week of August 20. Monday is Butterfly day, as usual signalized by the release of "The Lair of the Wolf," in which Denna Drew, Joseph Girard and Gretchen Lederer have been provided with effective parts.

"Squaring It," bears the release date of Tuesday, August 21. The play is undoubtedly the strongest in which Neal has yet appeared. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts will be presented on the same date in a Nestor Comedy, entitled "Move Over." This is a typical Lyons and Moran celluloid farce and details some amazing events that take place in the private hospital where Eddie is convalescing from what he claims is overwork.

"Street Cars and Carbuncles," a two-reel L-Ko Comedy, headlining Bob Mackenzie, Eva Novak and Eddie Barry, is the feature for Wednesday, August 22. J. G. Blystone and Dick Smith, directors of the pot-pourri of absurdities, have succeeded in putting together a comedy of errors that has at least a score of laughter-making devices to each reel.

The 86th issue of the Animated Weekly will be released on the same date, featuring many exclusive shots of big events. Clear photography and breezy captions will add distinction to the subjects pictured.

Little Zoe Rae, widely known for her clever acting in numerous Butterfly and Universal screen plays, will be starred in "Heart of Gold," the feature released Thursday, August 23. Zoe takes part of a child of the tenements, who is the humanizing influence in the life of the miserly pawnbroker. The miniature star is capably supported by Walter Belasco, Sewmour Hastings and Gertrude Astor. "Behind the Map," a Joker Comedy, featuring William Franey, will be released on the same date. Lillian Peacock and Milburn Meranti are prominent in Franey's support.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are the stars of "A Five Foot Ruler," a two-reel Victor Comedy scheduled for release August 24. The setting pictured in the opening of this stirring tale is a co-educational college, where Carter, the Beau Brummel of the institution, is expelled for coming to the rescue of Argo, a beautiful South American student, who is being showered with unwelcome attentions by her companion in a private room at the local cafe. The 33d issue of the Universal Screen Magazine will be released on the same day.

Gale Henry and Milton Sims will be featured in "Mrs. Madam Manager," a Joker Comedy, to be shown Saturday, August 25. A rural opera house is utilized to give a picturesque background to the tale of the joys and woes of a company of visiting burlesquers. Lillian Peacock and Charles Haeffli are prominent in the cast. A Power's cartoon and a Ditmars' Educational complete the list of releases for the week.

"The Pearl Necklace," the ninth episode of "The Gray Ghost," will also be released for exhibition outside greater New York during the week of August 20.

Although it has not been generally known, the Gaumont Company has been making pictures of America's military preparations for release in France through the Société des Etablissements Gaumont.

The Man Inside the Booth

Wants to Be An Operator

Three years ago I worked on a Power's machine in a film printing plant. I was employed there for about one year. I next held an outside job for two years. Then I went to a motion picture operators' school in New York City for three months and tried to pass the examination for a license but failed. I have a copy of Hallberg's book for operators. Now, I would like to know how I can learn to answer the questions that are asked at the examinations, for I am crazy to become a motion picture operator.—S. R., New York.

My advice to you is this: Get yourself a position in some first-class theater as an assistant to the operator and then apply yourself to the job and you will find that is the quickest way to learn the fundamental principles of the craft. There are several good books that you can get that pertain to projection and electricity that will help you out and which you can study when not employed in the booth. If you are lucky enough to get a job where you will be working under a first-class operator and he will take the time to explain things to you, you can learn a lot.

You have had the same experience that lots of other young men have had, and that is the experience of being misled by the advertisements of the so-called operators' schools. It is against the law for a man to commit highway robbery, but it's just as much a crime for a man, or a so-called school, to tell you that they can make an operator out of you in two or three months as it is to stick a gun under your nose and take your money. It is worse, because they don't only take your money but cause you to lose that much time along with it. And after you have completed the "course" and secured the valuable piece of paper with the gold seal on it which certifies that you are a full-fledged operator, you wake up and find that you have wasted money and time for practically nothing.

Take my advice and get a job and apply yourself, and in time you will be ready to take the examination and get away with it. There is no local of the I. A. T. S. E. in your city, but if you should apply to some of the operators there I am sure that they would be glad to help you out. If at any time this department can help you in any way, its editor will be only too glad to do so.

Applies Device to Simplex Machines

I am a reader of your department and in the issue of August 11 I read an article about a new signal device used by brother Sam Fear of Anderson, Indiana. He was using it on Powers machines. I am using two Simplex machines, and as I have to change from one to the other, I was interested in the article that he wrote. I discovered that I would have to make some changes in the installation of the device to make it work on my Simplexes. But I will try to explain what they were.

First, I removed the upper magazine; then the upper magazine roller holder (C-S) by taking out the three small screws. After that I drilled out the screw holes in the holder so that there was room to replace the screws with a fiber bushing around them. I placed the part, C-S, on a piece of thin sheet fiber and cut out a pattern from the fiber. Next I marked the holes where the screws passed through and punched these holes in the pattern (I used a belt punch for this). I then marked the slot where the film slipped through the magazine roller. Cut it about a quarter of an inch wide. At each end of the pattern I cut off the extra fiber the same length as the part C-8, but the sides were left alone. I bent the fiber at each side so as to fit between the part C-8 and the head on one side and part C-8 and the door on the other.

You are now ready to replace part C-8, and in replacing the three screws use a metal washer next to the head of the screw and then a fiber washer under it and a fiber bushing under the fiber washer so that the screw will be insulated from the C-8. Next replace the upper magazine and be sure that it does not touch the part C-8. I took a strip of electricians' tape and put it on the edges of the magazine next to the part C-8 so that there would be no contact. Next I cut off the extra fiber from the sides of the pattern and glued the pattern on the door side to the part C-8 so that it would not interfere with the opening and closing of the door.

The rest of the device I installed according to brother Fear's directions, except that I used two dry cells and located them and the buzzer in the base of the machine thereby doing away with the wire running between the two machines. I ran the zinc side of the battery circuit to the base of the machine and the carbon side to the buzzer and from the buzzer to the part C-8 and fastened it under the fiber washer of one of the screws that holds C-8 to the head of the machine. I have been using the device for several days and so far it has worked fine. It takes a little time to install, but I was more than repaid for my time and work the first day that I used it. Many thanks to brother Fear and your projection department for the information.—F. H. L., Ohio.

The signal device that the brother refers to is described on page 309 of the projection department of the August 11 issue. Operators who are using two machines will be interested in this device for two reasons; first, it gives warning to start the lamp on the second machine and then gives warning to start the second machine. It also saves the film from mutilation in any way. With this device in use, the days of the punch holes in film are over. Readers of this department are invited to forward any suggestion that they may have, and it will be given to the operators for their approval. It is the object of this department to help the operators in any way possible, and the only way that any of us learn is by asking the advice of others or by working out our own problems and then passing the lesson that we have learned on to the less experienced operators, so that they may benefit by it. Come in with your questions or suggestions and let all of the readers benefit by them.

Has Trouble with Lights

I am the owner and operator of a small theater of this town and have been running the show for the last year. Last week I commenced to have trouble with the light and am still having trouble with it. Can you tell me what to do about it? I have a small generator and gas engine that furnishes the light for the theater and the machine. There is no light company in this town so I have to furnish my own.

Up to last week I had no trouble, but I broke the switch on the machine and got a new one and put it on. However, that night when I tried to start my show I commenced to have trouble with the light. The lights in the house were all right, but when I started the light in the lamp the engine slowed down and the light got dim.

When I cut off the light in the lamp the engine is all right again. What do you think causes this? There has never been anything changed since I had the outfit put in, and I have never had any trouble with it until now. If you can tell me what to do I will appreciate it. Hoping to hear from you at once.—I. F. Y., Illinois.

From the description you have given of your trouble, I think that you must have shifted the positive and negative wires when you put on the new switch. Start the gas engine and then light the lamp and let it burn for about one minute. Then cut it off. Look at the carbons and see if the bottom carbon does not stay red longer than the top one does.

If it does, then you have the positive and negative wires reversed. Loosen the wires at the switch that you have just put on and reverse these two wires that lead from the switch to the lamp and I think you will find that that will remedy your trouble. Remember one thing about your light: the top carbon on D. C. current must be the positive and the bottom carbon must be the negative, and the test to determine which is positive and which is negative is to let the lamp burn for a minute and then cut it off. If the top carbon stays red the longest the lamp is connected right, and if the bottom carbon stays red the longest then the lamp is burning upside down and the wires leading to the lamp must be reversed.

Second Vice-President William F. Canavan, of the I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., has been in Indianapolis, Indiana, for the last two weeks trying to adjust the differences of exhibitors and operators of Local No. 194. The contract between the exhibitors and operators expired on August 1 and as the committees of the two organizations could not agree, Brother Canavan was called in to see if he could not adjust the differences. So far he has been unable to bring about a settlement, but both exhibitors and operators have agreed to arbitration, and no doubt the differences will be settled in the next few days.

RESENTS ELIMINATIONS

Vitagraph Will Hold Up "Within the Law" Rather Than Show It as Mutilated by Chicago Censor.

President Albert E. Smith, of Greater Vitagraph, has ordered that court action be taken against Major Funkhouser to force the Chicago motion picture censor to allow Greater Vitagraph's masterpiece "Within the Law" to be viewed by Chicago audiences without eliminations of any sort.

The court action also will seek to have the complete picture issued under a white permit so that all Chicagoans, irrespective of age, may see "Within the Law."

When Walter W. Irwin, of Greater Vitagraph, started on his around the country trip for the purpose of visiting all the exchanges handling the Greater Vitagraph productions and talking with the exhibitors of the country, his first stop was at Chicago where he made an investigation of the eliminations in "Within the Law." He immediately engaged Lewis F. Jacobson, a Chicago attorney who has had a wide experience in legally upsetting the censorship rulings of Major Funkhouser, to take charge of the legal proceedings.

After viewing the screen version of "Within the Law" Major Funkhouser ordered eliminations as follows:

Reel 2—Cut entire incident between jailer and girl after his giving her books.

Reel 2—Cut subtitle: "Blacklisted by the police."

Reel 2—Cut subtitle: "Everywhere I go I am hounded by the police, etc."

Reel 3—Cut out all scenes of thieves looking at loot.

Reel 4—Cut scene of putting Maxim silencer on gun and title: "With this on the gun you can't hear a sound."

Reel 5—Cut subtitle: "No and I'm proud of it. Do you know what a girl has to do to get time off?"

Reel 5—Cut subtitle: "Inspector Burke springs a trap."

Reel 5—Cut subtitle: "You and I might be able to do a little business together, d'you see?"

Reel 5—Cut scene of chief paying money to stool pigeon.

Reel 5—Cut out subtitle: "I ain't running a charity bazaar."

Reel 7—Cut out scene of taking bells from telephone. Cut out scene of shooting English Eddie.

Reel 8—Cut out subtitle: "The law be damned."

Reel 8—Cut entire third degree scene in chief's office to include knocking down of two men and showing them on the floor, striking prisoners and threatening them with fists.

Reel 9—Cut out subtitle: "I shot English Eddie because he was a skunk and a stool pigeon."

Major Funkhouser, the Chicago censor, announced that if these eliminations were made he would issue a permit by which adults would be allowed to view the picture.

In all, Major Funkhouser demands that fifteen eliminations be made from the screen version of "Within the Law" as it stands at present. These fifteen eliminations compare with two demanded by the Censor Board of Pennsylvania, which is known to be the most drastic censor board in the country.

If the eliminations demanded by Major Funkhouser are made Greater Vitagraph asserts that in place of the smooth masterpiece "Within the Law" will appear on the screen as a jerky disconnected picture.

Nearly all of the eliminations demanded by Major Funkhouser have to do with third degree methods used by the police and with conditions prevalent in penal institutions.

When "Within the Law" was first staged as a legitimate production these very scenes were used as the basis to force the enactment of laws in many states throughout the country which were intended to do away with third degree methods. In many states the campaign waged with the legitimate play as a basis resulted in the passage of laws which have had a tendency to do away with these third degree methods.

Vitagraph will not show the picture except as a finished product, preferring to remain out of the Chicago territory with the picture if it is to be presented in the mutilated state suggested by Major Funkhouser.

Universal New Brands

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company will shortly issue three new brands of pictures under the names of Golden Rod, Premier and Primrose.

Including the Star Featurette, the Universal Current Events and the Butterfly Pictures, this will make six new brands that the Universal has put on the market since the first of the year.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THE Castle Square Theater, one of Boston's largest and finest "legitimate" houses, is about to be remodeled and transformed to accommodate the vertical stage. The silent drama is to supplant the spoken. Frank Ross, manager of the Lancaster Theater, has been chosen to pilot the Castle Square through the waters of moviedom.

George L. Walker of the Lyceum Theater of Grand Junction, Colorado, and James Thompson, have purchased the Idle Hour Theater at Palisades, Colorado. They have remodeled it and rechristened it the Crystal. It is under the management of James Thompson.

Nearly four hundred applications for seats for a matinee performance were received by the management of the Strand Theater, New York, from first draft men. Manager Edel invited the first twenty-five men drafted in each district of greater New York to see "The Slacker," and the men responded most heartily.

Last Sunday marked the close of a successful showing of "The Lone Wolf" at the Studebaker Theater, Chicago. Following this picture "Seven Keys to Baldpate," the presentation which ran in play form for a whole year at Cohan's Grand Opera House, will occupy the Studebaker stage for a week.

The Columbia Theater, Boston, which was destroyed by fire last February, has been rehabilitated and will be ready to once more welcome its patrons on Labor Day. It is now owned by Marcus Loew. For a long time previous to the fire it had been closed because it was not a paying proposition.

More departments and an increase in size and circulation is being planned for the Weekly Film News, the official mouthpiece for the Kunsky theaters, in Detroit. It is contemplated to make the change about the time of the opening of the Adams Theater, the new Kunsky house. Chief among the new departments will be one devoted to dramatic news.

London Bioscope says, "if you make music a feature of your program, do not fail to advertise it. Good music will bring many people to your theater, just as bad music will keep them away." Which, by the way, is not bad advice for with certain people the music counts for as much as the picture.

Chester Paul of Chicago has triplets on his hands. He owns and manages the Washington, States and Lincoln theaters. These three houses have a total seating capacity of 1,300 and the universal admission price of ten cents is charged. At the States a six piece orchestra is used.

A. E. Wall, the censor of Nova Scotia, has declared war on machines, exchanges and operators—in fact on anything or anybody that contributes to film delinquency. He is after the men and the machines that damage film and the exchanges that distribute that kind of celluloid. Mr. Wall has threatened to cancel the machine license on any machine which is out of order and continually damaging film. He has also threatened to cancel the license of any operator who makes a practice of destroying film. And not content with this he has placed restrictions on the exchanges that send film out in bad condition.

The Crescent and Sussex theaters of Sussex, New Jersey, have entered into a unique agreement by which they intend to divide the patronage of the town fifty-fifty. One theater plays three days of the week and the other plays the rest. The orchestra of the Sussex furnishes the music for the Crescent.

Resolutions have been adopted by the Building and Trades Council of Springfield, Ohio, endorsing the Sunday picture show because of the relief to the tubercular patients who are benefited by the money raised from this source, and because it affords recreation to the women and children who have no other time for amusements.

"Take a Stand for Better Pictures" is the slogan of the Emerson Theater of Brusch, Colorado, managed by Harold N. Desby. Brusch is a live little town of 1,800 and the Emerson Theater cost $19,000. It is fireproof, has perfect ventilation, and seats 500. Paramount, Artcraft, Triangle, Metro and Bluebird are among the bills from which the programs are drawn.

W. H. Cox has closed a deal for the sale of the Alamo Theater at Stillwater, Oklahoma, to J. E. Taylor of Oklahoma City. Mr. Cox has been in the picture show business in Stillwater for the past seven years and feels that he is entitled to a rest. The new manager will endeavor to improve, if possible, on the quality and type of pictures displayed by Mr. Cox.

A new theater and office building, costing $1,000,000, is being constructed at Third street and Broadway, Los Angeles. The new house will seat about 3,000 people, and will be one of the most lavish showhouses in America. An art room filled with oil paintings, a rest room, a tea room where refreshments will be served, and a mirror room constitute a few of the adjuncts of this real temple of the cinema.

In the hope that the family or relatives of a boy who has lost his memory will see him in some theater, pictures were taken last week of a youth, evidently of gentle upbringing, who is being held at the Mountainside Hospital, Glen Ridge, New Jersey. He was picked up in a field suffering with amnesia, and the screen has been resorted to in an effort to locate the boy's parents.

The following is a list of the pictures shown last week in the Chicago loop, giving, also, the theaters at which they were on display:

Alcazar, "The Food Gamblers," with Wilfred

Lucas; Bandbox, "An Outlaw's Revenge;" Bijou Dream, "Souls in Pawn," with Gail Kane; Boston, "The Little Duchess," with Madge Evans; Casino, "The Soul Herder," with Harry D. Carey; Castle, "The Little American," with Mary Pickford; Gem, "The Combat," with Anita Stewart; Kozy, "Untamed," drama; Lyric, "The Final Payment," with Virginia Pearson; Orpheum, "Skinner's Baby," with Bryant Washburn; Pastime, "My Country First," drama; Playhouse, "The Cleanup," with Franklyn Farnum; Rose, "The Little American," with Mary Pickford; Royal, "A Mother's Ordeal," with Jean Sothern; Star, "Sold at Auction," drama; Studebaker, "The Lone Wolf," with Hazel Dawn; World, "The Captain of the Grey Horse Troop," drama; Ziegfeld, "One Law for Both," with Rita Jolivet.

The Leon F. Douglass natural color pictures recently furnished the principal entertainment at a Red Cross Benefit given by the inventor, himself, at San Rafael, San Francisco. The pictures were shown in the Elks Hall of San Rafael, and proved quite a revelation to the people who saw them. Mr. Douglass claims that with his new process every color known to nature can be printed directly on the film just as the ordinary process brings forth merely black and white.

A. A. Huttlemayer, proprietor of the Queen's Theater on the Canadian side at Niagara Falls, reports that his business is exceptionally good. This, he declares, is due to the fact that Canadians are finding it more and more difficult to pass back and forth in the evening to the American side of the Falls. The edict of the Dominion authorities tightening immigration regulations is keeping people on their own side of the line and is pleasing Canadian theater owners along the border.

H. Pollak, manager of the Webster Theater, New York City, is a firm believer in the theory that the amount of business you do varies directly with your advertising. His advertising policy includes the posting of from fifteen to thirty especially printed 24-sheets each week. It also embraces 500 half-sheet window cards and the sending of announcements to a mailing list of some 1,200 names. In addition Mr. Pollak uses 500 one-sheets, and 100 three-sheets on special features, all of which are especially printed. He uses Paramount pictures, and his weekly advertising bill is about $100.

Exhibitors who go to California on their wedding trips are likely to become affected by the climate and remain there. At least that is what happened to John M. Root. Shortly after he arrived in the sunshine state, from Burlington, Iowa, he acquired a lease on the Strand Theater at Pasadena. Later he purchased an eight acre estate at Altadena, where he has a beautiful home called Rose Knoll. From this estate Mr. Root can see the electric lights flash on and off at his theater in Pasadena.

Irving Novitsky struck to his post in the booth at the Savoy Theater, Jacksonville, Florida, last week while the roof of that house caved in during a cloud burst. With rare presence of mind he held the picture on the screen until all had reached the sidewalk and averted the crash. The roof, which was flat and improperly drained, become flooded and slowly gave way. Falling plaster and the cracking of the roof beams warned the people in time to allow them to escape.

According to an opinion handed to Frank P. Shattuck, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, by Deputy Attorney General Joseph L. Kun, the board has the authority "to recall an approval of a film unless rights have been acquired or have intervened which a recall would disturb."

The opinion states that "if power is given to recall a disapproval, there is certainly power to recall an approval. The harm which may ensue through an approval may be infinitely greater than that which would result from an erroneous disapproval. In the first case, the individual may be harmed but in the latter instance it is the public that would suffer."

The public safety committee of the City Council of Seattle, Washington, has recommended an amendment to the building code that will make a large number of changes in the motion picture business necessary on January 1 next, if the proposed amendment is put into effect.

This amendment provides that no permit shall be issued to manufacture, print, develop, keep, store or use motion picture films in any building more than two stories high, in any building of farm construction or in any building a part of which is used for assembly or other purposes where more than fifty persons are at any time congregated over and above the number employed by the film business therein maintained.

Louis and Abe Latts of Ashland, Wisconsin, have recently acquired a five-year lease on the Majestic Theater of that city. They already were the owners and proprietors of the Royal Theater so that they now have a monopoly on the amusement places of the town. By controlling both show houses they believe they will be able to get bigger and better attractions for Ashland. Previously when they wished to play a large road attraction they were often restricted because of having but one house. The Majestic will be devoted entirely to pictures, but the Royal henceforth will be thrown open to road shows when something good presents itself.

The Red Cross and First Infantry relief fund benefited to the extent of $3,200 by the picture display, "The Battle of the Somme," which was recently shown at the Auditorium Theater in St. Paul, Minnesota. More than 7,500 people witnessed the picture and at the final presentation the big house was packed to the doors.

Preparatory to the mustering in of the national guard and the selective draft army of 1,000,000 men, the war work council of the Young Men's Christian Association, in conjunction with the Fosdick commission on training camp activities, has installed motion picture machines in about 90 army and navy training camps throughout the country. Nearly 2,000,000 feet of film are being shown weekly and this will be increased eight times over when the greater army is mobilized. An average weekly attendance of 250,000 enlisted men is reported at the motion picture exhibitions in the association huts.

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Red Cross Auxiliary at Theater

AT the Decatur Theater, 1676 Broadway, Brooklyn, the management, Fisher, Celler and Rosenthal, has established a Red Cross department, which has for its object the organizing of women into a working organization auxiliary of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Red Cross.

As an inducement to join this admirable organization, which is in every way possible to make life easier for the boys in the camps and at the front, the management of the Decatur Theater will pay the first year's dues to the Red Cross Society of the first twenty-five women that wish to join this auxiliary.

Also any uniformed member of the Marine Corps, the Army, or the Navy will be admitted free at any time to performances of the Decatur Theater or Park.

This is the first theater in the United States, so far as we know, to establish an auxiliary to the Red Cross Society or admit free uniformed men of Uncle Sam's fighting force.

Theaters for Soldiers

W. S. Butterfield and his associates will build two new theaters in Battle Creek, Michigan, to accommodate the soldiers at the big training camp to be established there in the Food City. Plans have been completed for both and the locations selected. Each will have a seating capacity of about 1,200, and one will play vaudeville and pictures, and the other straight pictures.

William F. Klatt has sold the Vendome Theater in Grand River avenue, Detroit, to Jack Matthews, who recently purchased the Jewel from Mr. Klatt. Mr. Klatt will continue to operate the Regent and Rosedale theaters in the North Woodward avenue district. The Library Theater, Gratiot avenue, has re-opened under new management. The Duplex Theater has closed for the summer. A new theater to seat 1,100 persons is to be erected at Ferndale and Central avenues.

Disposes of Interests

Clyde Wright, for five years manager and part owner of Wright's Grand Theater in Lexington, Missouri, has sold his interest in the business to John C. Young, who has been a partner in the firm for about two years. The news that Mr. Wright had quit the picture business was a surprise to the patrons of this popular amusement house, who had become so used to seeing him on duty every night that it seemed he was a part of the program. His recent illness, however, and the continued increase in the work of his office as Justice of the Peace of Lexington township, caused him to dispose of his interest in the business.

While he was not the pioneer of the picture show business in Lexington, Mr. Wright did more to give the local public the latest and best in motion pictures than any other person. He devoted a great deal of his time to a study of the picture show game and was in continual touch with all the big features produced, always bringing them to the Grand as soon as he could possibly get them. A firm believer in the wisdom of advertising his shows, Mr. Wright also studied that end of the business closely, and his catchy and clever ads were always kept before the public. In handing over the reins to Mr. Young the show business in Lexington will still be in competent hands as Mr. Young has had several years of experience in the game.

Gives More Than Law Requires

Safety first—more exits, wider aisle space, wider and more comfortable seats and better ventilation than the law requires, is the slogan of the Rosewood Theater, Chicago, Ill., of which August Zilligen is proprietor and manager. And we might very truthfully add to this the clearest projection, most courteous attendants and most beautiful theater, for the Rosewood can boast of all of these.

A canopy extending from the front of the house to the curbing is topped by an electric sign announcing the attraction for the evening. On entering the door one is immediately impressed with the artistic simplicity of the white and gold lobby with its ticket booth surmounted by birchbark boxes filled with flowers, and a fountain reflecting the colored lights beneath. The ushers are dressed to correspond in uniforms of white trimmed with gold braid and have been thoroughly drilled in all matters which will add to the comfort of the patrons.

The interior of the house carries out the same color scheme of white and gold relieved by bright flowers in flat vases, alternating with bas-relief panels on the walls and a border of the birchbark boxes of flowers at the foot of the screen. Dark red velvet curtains hide the screen and the inverted system of lighting gives a subdued light very restful to the eyes.

The house holds one thousand—or to be exact, nine hundred and ninety-nine. A pipe organ was formerly used but the house was found to be too damp for it and a mechanical orchestra was substituted. Metro, Triangle, Universal, Fox and World films make up the program and a continuous performance is run every day from 1:30 to 11 p. m.

Getting the "Punch" in Signs

Saying things in the different way on signs about the theater is the subject of an interesting article in a recent issue of the Triangle Magazine, a publication which aims to advise and co-operate with exhibitors in every detail of theater management. There seems to be very little new under the sun save a new manner of expression, and a man in almost any line may concentrate on the appropriate habit of mind without feeling that he is wasting time. However, there is a by-path that runs off from the main highway of such expression, that leads a man to be "smart" without being bright or clever; and this line of thought must be avoided at the outset. We mean that sarcasm is not generally a good habit. Neither is "knocking" of any kind.

The thing to aim for is wholesome humor, with plenty of human interest. Laugh with things rather than at them, and you'll usually get the crowd. But, of course, we don't mean to launch into a sermon on optimism. The value of optimism is already too patent to the American nation.

To get "punch" into the appeal on the sign is to say the message in the most direct, forceful way possible. Say precisely what you mean, even if you do exaggerate the terms. For the moment, we cannot think of anything that illustrates the foregoing better than that celebrated sign found by a tourist in a western hotel making clear its purpose to prohibit profanity and yet doing it so good-naturedly that nobody could take offense:

NO SWEARING IN HERE

Not that we give a —— but it sounds like —— to strangers.

We are expressing it gently to avoid exclusion from the mails; but the hotel carried it uncensored.

It is an accepted fact that when a business establishment is having a new shop-front installed it must carry a sign notifying the public that business is going on as usual. Unless the business is one of exceptional dignity, it will not be a disadvantage to express the fact on the sign in this manner: "The alterations going on in front of here only mean that we're keeping up with the times. If you don't come in today, step in tomorrow. We're in business for keeps."

In accordance with this view, we are producing herewith some suggested signs that express what might ordinarily be routine facts with a new twist.

There are plenty of other commonplace facts, or facts that have become commonplace through universal use, that require bright and snappy expression. That effervescent purveyor of publicity, Ralph Ruffner of the Liberty Theater, Spokane, Wash., did not say "Come early and avoid the rush," when he announced a Triangle feature starring a tremendous favorite, but gave it his own twist by saying, "Try to get in!"

The man who sidesteps the trite expression, "the most beautiful theater in Patagonia," and says, "In this theater there are no drafts and every seat is a good seat," is providing his public with the sort of information it desires, in a straightforward manner. The other man who avoids saying, "This theater is ten degrees cooler than on the street," and substitutes "It's October weather inside," is at least not following the example set by his fellow exhibitors this summer all over the country.

Kunsky Adds to Detroit Chain

The latest addition to the chain of theaters controlled by John H. Kunsky in Detroit is the new Adams Theater, at Grand Circus Park and Adams avenue, just a step from Woodward avenue. The Adams Theater was built for Mr. Kunsky under his personal supervision, to be managed by him as a popular priced, high class dramatic (not photoplay) theater, in conjunction with his chain of successful play houses.

The acquisition of the Adams Theater gives Mr. Kunsky control of ten of Detroit's leading playhouses.

With the new Madison Theater on one side of Grand Circus Park, east of Woodward, devoted to the very best program of feature pictures, the latest news weeklies and high class music; with the Washington Theater, west of Woodward, devoted to the big spectacular special pictures; with the outskirt houses presenting everything of merit that the picture world is offering; and now with the new Adams Theater, located in the heart of the business and hotel district, devoted to high class dramatic productions, John H. Kunsky is offering everything that the public desires in varied and high class entertainment in modern, comfortable theaters of the latest type, situated in the most desirable sections of the city.

The Adams Theater is to be the society playhouse of Detroit. Vaughan Glaser and Fay Courtenay, with a company of dramatic favorites, will open the Adams Theater with high class dramatic productions. One play will be produced each week and presented at popular prices.

The Adams Theater is constructed in the French Renaissance, Louis XV style of architecture in the tone and splendor that was influenced a great deal by Madame de Pompadour and Madame du Bary. C. Howard Crane is the architect.

The seating capacity is approximately 2,000, comfortably placed on the main floor, a mezzanine and one balcony. The entrance extends through the Fine Arts building. This elaborate lobby is finished in Beanco statuary marble, and leads to the main floor and mezzanine of the theater.

"The Show Down"

Bluebird Play with Desert Island Theme Is Entertaining. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MOST of us, leading civilized existences, like to imagine ourselves "roughing it" under primitive conditions. Perhaps this reaction against city surroundings which frequently sends us camping or otherwise getting "back to the soil" also accounts

This picture is similar to others founded on such a situation. It is made timely by having a German submarine torpedo the ship on which the characters are traveling, but in other respects it is the familiar story of a group of people who find themselves on a desert island and set about to deal with the new situations and each other. There are the usual transformations and revelations of character. The great philanthropist shows his selfishness; while the supposed heartless capitalist is the most valuable member of the party. The novelist who had written books about primitive life proves a coward and the society man is a hero.

The best feature of the picture is its well photographed and refreshing outdoor scenes. The locations are very beautiful and will be enjoyed by all. The story, too, holds the interest well and the acting is good. Lynn F. Reynolds directed. George Hernandez and Myrtle Gonzales have important roles. Other players are Arthur Hoyt, George Chesebro, Edward Cecil and Jean Hersholt.

The Story: Among the passengers on a ship going across the Pacific ocean are John Benson, a rich man, called the most selfish man in the world; his daughter, Lydia; Oliver North, a philanthropist, called the most unselfish man in the world; Langdon Crane, author of many books of the "Back to Primitive" nature, and Robert Curtis, who travels for pleasure.

After their ship has been wrecked by a torpedo, this group of people and a few sailors find themselves on an island. There each is shown in his true colors. Benson and Curtis prove the heroes of the occasion. The party manages to live on fruit and fish. Then Curtis discovers the station on the island from which the submarines are directed. He also learns that another island with an American wireless station is nearby. He makes the journey in a rowboat and the information he brings is sent to the United States. The wrecked party is rescued and the beginning of a romance between Curtis and Lydia Benson ends the story.

"The Barker"

Lew Fields in Melodramatic Selig-K. E. S. E. Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AUDIENCES which take well to the thriller type of serial are sure to like this five-reel offering. Its plot material is in the melodramatic style. There is also much pathos in the story and excellent acting by Lew Fields. A love story which occupies a subordinate part in the play aids in bringing about a happy ending to the picture.

There is quick action in the story and it is clearly and interestingly told. It is improbable in plot, but the fine work of Lew Fields will commend it to discriminating patrons. This is, however, not the outstanding feature of the offering. The melodramatic events rather overshadow it. The picture also is lacking in humor. As a whole, it is best adapted to the class of audience mentioned first.

The photography, direction and settings are all satisfactory. The acting of the supporting cast is good. Amy Dennis is pleasing as the heroine, Floria Fielding. Pat O'Malley, in a small but important part, will be liked. James Harris, Mabel Bardine and Francis Lenz are melodramatically wicked as they are supposed to be. Charles K. Harris wrote the story. J. A. Richmond directed. August 13 is the release date.

The Story: Professor Leo Fielding (Lew Fields) is persuaded by his brother, Henri, to attend an anarchist meeting. The place is raided by the police and the professor takes the blame for his brother's presence upon himself. He is exiled and goes to America, leaving his little daughter, Floria, in the care of Henri and the latter's wife.

In America, Professor Fielding obtains a position as teacher of languages. He sends for his daughter. Henri and his wife wish to inherit all of the Fielding estates and plan to injure the little girl. They give her to the Count de Grasse who is coming to America, telling him that they will pay him if the child is put out of the way.

The professor plans for the arrival of his daughter, and buys toys for her. At the time he expects her, a telegram comes, telling him that she has fallen overboard from the ship and been drowned. The grief of the old man is pathetic. After that, his life is very unhappy. Finally he loses his position and when his money is gone, he becomes a "barker" for a side-show in a circus. In the meantime, Floria, his daughter, who had not died, has become a circus acrobat. The count is her manager and is very cruel to her. She is the star-performer in the circus to which Fielding comes and, unaware of her identity, he befriends her.

One day the count is killed when he falls through a net that had been weakened by acid. On his death-bed he confesses the identity of Floria. So she is reunited with her father. Later she marries the owner of the circus, who takes her and her father away from their poverty and hardships.

"Follow the Girl"

Ruth Clifford in Butterfly Release of August 6. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE material of which this photoplay is composed is varied enough to suit any taste. There are scenes in a Swedish cottage and in the steerage of an ocean liner, western scenes with round-up views and many cowboys, and a dash of detective and secret service flavor, with an adventuress and a spy and "the papers." There is brisk action throughout and well presented humor.

Hilda studies English before she comes to America.

The picture begins in an interesting fashion. The characters are introduced in a novel way, scenes from their varied lives being shown in Fate's spinning wheel. Then the story connects them in its plot. The play becomes very improbable and melodramatic as it progresses, but the beautiful photography and scenery and the touches of humor makes up for logic in plot.

Ruth Stonehouse is not very well suited to the role of a Swedish immigrant, but she plays with much sincerity. Olaf, her companion, played by Jack Dill, will win many laughs. Roy Stewart is the hero. Others in the cast are Mrs. Witting, Claire Duprey, Alfred Allen and Harry Dunkinson, the latter appearing as a Chinese cook. Fred Myton is responsible for the story, which L. W. Chaudet directed.

The Story: Hilda Swanson leaves her home in Sweden to come to America. Olaf, a dull-witted fellow, is her companion and guardian. Traveling on the same ship is an adventuress, Donna, who wishes to smuggle plans into the United States. Knowing that she will be searched, she conceals the papers in the hem of Hilda's skirt while Hilda is sleeping.

On their arrival, Donna is detained by the secret service department and loses track of Hilda and the papers. Hilda and Olaf go westward and, getting lost from their train, stray to the O'Keefe ranch, where they are cared for. Olaf is the butt of the jokes of the cowboys. Hilda wins Mrs. O'Keefe's heart and later that of her son, Larry. Donna and her aids trace Hilda and kidnap her. They are foiled by Larry and sent to jail as traitors. Then Larry marries Hilda.

Franklyn Farnum in Clever Bluebird Comedy Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is an unusually good comedy drama, with a clever story cleverly directed and acted. It is the sort of play Franklyn Farnum's name is becoming associated with, but it is much more original and worth while than most of the previous vehicles. It is founded on a good story, with excellent comedy situations. It is the sort of picture that is sure-fire in any theater, especially at the present time when patrons are seeking light, amusing plays to make them forget war and summer weather.

Brownie Vernon and a good caste support Farnum. Direction, photography and settings are up to the Bluebird standard. Waldemar Young wrote the story and prepared it for the screen. William Worthington directed it. Mary Talbot, Martha Mattox, Mark Fenton, Claire McDowell, William Human, Claude Benson and Albert McQuarrie are in the cast.

The Story: Stuart Adams (Franklyn Farnum) comes back to his home town of Weston as advance agent for "The Girl and the Garter" just when the town was undergoing a "clean-up" by the Purity League. To complicate matters, Stuart is in love with Hazel Richards, daughter of the leader of the "Purity League." Stuart takes advantage of the crusade to win excellent publicity for the burlesque show, even challenging Richards to a debate. Interest is at white heat and everyone in town has bought tickets to "The Girl and the Garter."

Then Stuart gets a telegram stating that bad business has forced the show to disband. He sees a chance to win the favor of Hazel's father. Therefore at the debate he states that he will withdraw the show, out of consideration for the "Purity League." So he becomes a town hero and Richards withdraws all objections to his marriage with Hazel.

"An Even Break"

Triangle Five-Part Drama Features Olive Thomas. Reviewed by George W. Graves

A DRAMA of no remarkable proportions, but pleasingly produced and acted, is this story by Lambert Hillyer, presenting Olive Thomas in the role of a popular dancer in a fashionable cabaret entertainment. The rather conventional story, having to do with the sacrifice of the dancer for her girl friend from the country to whom she knows the money and position of the man in the case will mean everything in the world, is aided substantially by Mr. Hillyer in the capacity of director. Among the latter's achievements are some "strike" scenes, some cabaret entertainment views with novel effects, and one or two thrills. The story's climax is composed of lively melodrama.

Olive Thomas, while having very little real dramatic work, is presented very advantageously to the audience through positions, lightings, close-ups, etc., and the spectator is sure to feel the attraction of her dainty personality. It is our opinion that the real Olive Thomas role was seen in "Madcap Madge," yet she acquits herself very creditably in the semi-emotional part allotted her in this. Charles Gunn does very well with the part of the successful young inventor and Margaret Thompson figures equally well in the other main role. Others who appear are Darrel Foss, Charles French, J. Frank Burke and Louis Durham.

As a summary, "An Even Break" is a pleasingly entertaining drama, made so largely through interesting treatment. It is up to the standard of the better class of things as a program subject.

"The Spy"

Fox Film Feature in Seven Parts a Timely Offering. Reviewed by George W. Graves

RICHARD STANTON'S production, "The Spy," based on a story by George Bronson-Howard, which undertakes an expose of the German systems of espionage, with the manifest intent to awaken the populace to the spy menace, is first of all a rattling good subject in point of timeliness. It, perhaps, does not reveal anything new to those well informed, but for those who are not it contains a few startling revelations. The ruthless persecution of those spys who let anything come between them and the strict fulfilment of their duty, the awful grip of the military machine which makes its servants either obey or suffer death, the ingratitude and inhuman treatment shown these same servants, who, after all, are human beings,—all of this is pointed out sharply, showing the frightfulness of the militarism which is the people's master rather than their servant.

The story, laid for the most part in Germany, is interesting from the start. It has the fascinating attraction of the well-builded detective drama, exhibiting the requisite qualities of suspense, mystery and excitement. It is a good old-fashioned melodrama, holding an audience's interest without a waver,—in other words, melodrama with the "ordinary movie" modification left out. The intelligent, painstaking direction, makes it a delight to watch. However, Mr. Stanton, was inclined to play up the torture chamber scenes too vividly. Even if this blood-curdling detail does belong in the story, the average spectator wants to be let off as easily as possible. The slightest indication of this torture stuff sinks very deep and is all that is requisite for the right effect. We understand that some four hundred feet were cut out of this torture detail, but there is now more than enough.

At the end both the hero and heroine are shot. Though this ending is unpleasant enough to leave a bad taste, it brings the picture to a logical conclusion, making the picture big and the leading role a really heroic one, since the American has successfully done his duty and is now paying the stern penalty for his country's sake.

Dustin Farnum adds new laurels to his now lofty reputation as a screen actor as Mark Quaintance, the American millionaire idler, who, called upon to offer his services to his country, becomes a spy in Berlin and finally steals a book containing names of ten thousand of the Kaiser's spies in America. For this he pays the death penalty, along with his sweetheart, a German spy who turns against her government. The latter role is portrayed with fine emotional control by Winifred Kingston. The fact that she looks like a German girl makes the part all the more real. Other excellent performances are given by Charles Clary, William Burress, Howard Gaye and William E. Lowry.

As a good exciting melodrama "The Spy" is good any time, but its timeliness and patriotic appeal make it a live, red hot attraction at the present moment.

"Jack and the Beanstalk"

William Fox Kiddie Film de Luxe in Ten Reels. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE picturization of this ancient and immortal fairy tale by the William Fox forces is surely one of the biggest film events of the year. Though the picture is essentially for children, grown-ups are pretty sure to let go of their reserve toward the fairy world and mount the beanstalk heights of the "make-believe" realm with the same degree of spell-bound interest as the children. To make it easier for the adult spectator to lose himself in this beautiful old story, the artists who did the staging, C. M. and S. A. Franklin, have created an atmosphere that fairly throws a spell over the spectator, young or old. The little village of Cornwall, nestling between the hills and inhabited by hundreds of little child players, swarming about their houses and streets, is surely a picturesque and fairy-like sight when caught in a long distance view by the camera, and the more intimate views around the place remind one of the sunny and quaint hamlets in Holland. The castle of the great giant Blunderbore, with its grim gray walls, towers, etc., and its cold, dungeon-like interior, is also a fine piece of the work contributed by those who had charge of the staging.

The story has been coupled up with a very appropriate modern prologue and epilogue, showing how the two little tots, after listening to the tale of "Jack and the Beanstalk" by their nurse, set out by themselves to find the enchanted forest and fall asleep in the woods. The visualization of their dream then ensues, constituting the story proper, and later they are shaken out of their dream by the parents' searching party. The prologue furnishes the spectator with some very pleasant straight comedy. There are plenty of smiles throughout the main story, but they are confined to the conclusive exercise of adults who will be amused at the little boys, be-whiskered and be-moustached, and the little girls, in long dresses and "done up" hair, in their seriousness and acting like grown-ups. They certainly are, one and all, fine little actors, and they know how to mimic the expressions of older people. Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, play the parts of Jack and Princess Regina, respectively, and the work of both will long be remembered by the spectator. Violet Radcliffe is the villainous Prince and Carmen Fay DeRue, the bearded King of Cornwall. J. G. Tarver, who is said to be eight feet six inches tall, is the giant. His bloodthirsty destruction of the village of Cornwall is a sensational feature of the picture. The most perfect kind of photography was furnished by Frank Good.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" is a wonderful attraction for special children's performances, but it is by no means confined in interest to the children. Mostly everybody loves the work of child actors, and there are hundreds of them in this, handled with the utmost skill. Out of the whole aggregation, not one of the tots seemed to be conscious that a camera was recording his actions. Certainly an immense amount of credit goes to C. M. and S. A. Franklin, the directors, and everyone concerned in the picture's making. It is with pleasure that we record the fact that this is the first of a series of Fox Kiddies features.

an orphaned girl, whose guardian is desirous of possessing her fortune. There is nothing remarkable about the plot, but the picture is nice to look at.

"Think It Over" was written and directed by Herbert Blache and produced by U. S. Amusement Corporation. The settings are appropriate and the photography is excellent. Catherine Clavert, as Alice Rowland, does very good work. In the support of Miss Clavert are Richard Tucker, A. Lloyd Lack, Eugene Borden and Auguste Burmester.

George Baring, an unscrupulous man, tries to force his ward, Alice Rowland, to marry his son, so that he can gain entire control of her fortune. Alice overhears the two planning together and decides to take matters into her own hands. In the middle of night she leaves the house and goes to the home of Henry Whitworth, an old friend and sweetheart of her mother's.

Whitworth tells her that her guardian can claim her legally, and for a while they are both confronted with a plan of thwarting them. Alice comes to an amazing decision, which startles Whitworth. She proposes that he marry her and thus dissolve the guardianship. It is understood that when she becomes of age and comes into her fortune that there will be a divorce. But when the time comes to separate they realize that they love each other.

"The Long-Green Trail"

Essanay "Black Cat" Release of August 11. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is a light-hearted little play, with plenty of action and a surprise ending. We don't know how well most audiences will like this ending, but at least it will win a laugh, and it is a clever satire on the "concluded in our next" stories, which always end at the exciting part. This play contains two reels of story, with thrill and excitement. Then when the complicated situation is about to be straightened out, there is a picture of a group of tramps about a camp-fire, reading a story from an old magazine. Just at that point they find the story "continued in our next installment," and their feeling of amused disappointment will be shared by the audience.

Virginia Valli, Rodney LaRock and J. C. Carroll have the leading roles.

The Story: Bobby Hooper's father wishes him to marry the daughter of his business competitor in order to consolidate the business. Bobby refuses, and his father employes Jim Dykeman, an ex-convict, to force the marriage. Dykeman plans to kidnap the two and force them into marriage. He gets Bobby but mistakes the girl for her maid, Yvonne. Bobby and Yvonne effect a thrilling escape, fall in love with each other and are married. Just how it turns out for the best is told in the next chapter. The whole thing is just the picturization of a newspaper story a hobo is reading.

Correction

In the American-Mutual feature, "Souls in Pawn," featuring Gail Kane, the role of the cobbler-spy was played by Robert Klein, not Charles Newton, as stated in the review of the picture in MOTOGRAPHY.

Pathe Distributes New War Pictures

Having successfully run the gauntlet of Teuton submarines, what is said to be the most unique record of the great war yet to reach this country has been received in New York.

It is a motion picture of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras" and like "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre" and "The Battle of the Somme," it is controlled by Official British Government Pictures, Inc., and will be presented here by the house of Pathe.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

"NO experience on earth is as valuable for the silent drama as that of the chorus girl," declares Olive Thomas, the new Triangle star; "because," elucidates this former Ziegfeld favorite, "no vehicle on earth offers the action that the musical comedy does, and action is the soul of pictures. The chorus girl is the most active creature on earth next to the moving picture actress. She is kept on the hop, skip and jump continually. Life is nothing but one mad dash after the other. First she appears as a jaunty little jockey girl, then she tears to the dressing room and reappears as—Oh, anything from a rainbow to a dragonfly. Meanwhile she sings and dances and smiles, and gesticulates every minute, for just let her stop once and she's fired! There's nothing slow about the 'movies,' either, I have found out, so I say that the chorus is the very place for the young film aspirant." Miss Thomas knows whereof she speaks, for she has graduated directly from the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic into Triangle productions and she has already discovered, as she says, that there is nothing slow about moving pictures. Miss Thomas did solo parts in the Frolic and the Follies, as well as chorus work, but she claims that even that step is unnecessary to the girl who wants to act before the camera. "Because, you know, if you become a star, you might get langourous and fat and depend on your beautiful voice to get you by, and your beautiful voice won't get you much on the screen. Neither could your reputation help you out any in the movies. A splendid actress of the spoken drama can easily be a total failure in moving pictures. There's nothing but action in moving pictures, and if you can't provide that, you aren't there. Mr. Ince has kept me so busy out here that I would have died under the strain if I hadn't had those old days and nights on the roof as schooling."

If there is a general exodus of property men from the Triangle Culver City, California, studio to join the army in the near future it may not altogether be explained on the grounds of patriotism. Director Lambert Hillyer soon will begin work on a new production, but he has gleaned from the advance script that four live rattlesnakes will be among the properties needed. Upon the ever faithful and resourceful property men will evolve the task of capturing the reptiles, and those who have had experience in snake warfare say that compared with it life in the trenches and dodging gas bombs are mere child's play.

Photoplay stars have their troubles—having to leap off cliffs, face batteries of custard pies, swim icy rivers, and other "stunts." But harken to a few troubles of which Essanay's directors are complaining:

Arthur Berthelet had to coax a three-legged dog to act with Bryant Washburn in "The Golden Idiot." Whoever heard of a three-legged dog, anyway?

Bessie Barriscale is in a most enviable position, one gained by real hard work and ability. When she broke into the moving picture game no one thought for a moment she would be one of filmdom's brightest stars and yet in a comparatively short time the Bessie Barriscale pictures were eagerly looked forward to. Now with her very own company she has the finest kind of a release, picks her own stories and selects her own directors, has a retired studio where good work can be done in peace and one of the prettiest dressing rooms possible. It must be remembered there has been no luck in all this, merely ability and good business judgment.

Henry King, the American director, has made a new find in the shape of a child actress. The little girl, whose name is Ruth Everdale, gave a strikingly good performance in his most recent film, starring Gail Kane. Little Ruth acted as though born to it and proved natural and intelligent and she has beauty out of the ordinary. Later the child appeared for a few scenes in "Loreloi of the Sea," when Gypsy Abbott took her over to the Island with her, and so good was she that Henry Otto gave her a few scenes with Tyrone Power and Jay Belasco.

Santa Barbara, California, is reveling in figurative red-fire and confetti. The American Film Company, Inc., is celebrating its fifth anniversary of location there and the townsfolk have taken a hand. Five years ago a company of mumming cowboys rode up the main street of the town. Not even the most golden-penned press agent could have foreseen in that inauspicious entry the pretentions of the present American outfit. Few of the old guard remain in Santa Barbara. Of the players there remains but one, George Periolat, daddy of the make-up box. In those early days, Periolat supported "Jack" Kerrigan. Among the eighteen first comers, most of them were unknown men, but after training in the American camp and developing their talent, they were enabled to get the right start. Hardly a known company today but has one or more American-trained players on its roster.

The first studio was a puny affair upon an ostrich farm. Frequently the big birds uprose and kicked up so much trouble that the production was stopped for the period. The location was at State and Islay streets which has long since given way to intensive improvements.

But from the first, success blessed the American's efforts and in the fall of the initial Santa Barbara year Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the company, visited the town and with rare foresight, purchased property where the present beautiful walled film-town has been developed.

And here is the sunset side of the story, "Mother of Mine," the Bluebird play mentioned in connection with the cut opposite. Rupert Julian is the man. Just ask MOTOGRAPHY if you'd like to use these cuts—free of all charge.

The Coast, however, has no monopoly upon improvement and healthy development. There has been a growth in every direction. While the fairy city grew under the California sun, the Chicago factory increased in size from 6,000 to 50,000 square feet of floor space, and increased in weekly output from 60,000 to 1,500,000 feet of celluloid. Changes in personnel in the central office have been many, but through the period R. R. Nehls, manager, and Charles A. Ziebarth, superintendent of the plant, have watched the business grow.

The employes of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company held their annual picnic at Point Comfort, Fox Lake, last Wednesday. The entire plant was closed on that day.

The employes have their own organization called the Rothacker Pleasure Club with the following officers: George H. Gibson, president; Barbara Mertes, vice-president; Lillian Riedel, treasurer, and Ernest Neumann, secretary.

The committee on arrangement was as follows: John Hahn, George Gibson, Hattie Behrke, Barbara Mertes, Frieda Lang, mittee: John Hahn and George Gibson.

READY TO CLIP AND USE IN YOUR PROGRAM OR ADVERTISING

Universal Program

The Home Life of the Spider—(Split Reel)—Powers—August 25.—An amazing picture story of the mysteries of small wild life, features this offering, with views of the water spider from the time of the carrying of her egg cocoon to the going out into the world of her whole family of three hundred brave. Into the mysteries of the cocoon, the opening of which reveal two hundred eggs, the Leonard spider, exhausted unto death, with spinning her egg cocoon, another opening—the wonderful nursery, the features of the nursery of the water spider and of many varieties, including the wolf spider, are viewed by the spectator. On the same reel with "Colonel Pepper's Mobilized Farm."

Colonel Pepper's Mobilized Farm—(Split Reel).—A peek into the colonel's ammunition factory is rewarded by the sight of a patriotic party, headed by a bunch of healthily laying hens who help their country by their efforts, even dispatching the "hen-shells" into an adjacent building, there to remain until they grow "ripe." A sight of Colonel Pepper's signal station is seen, and his signals, which mean "Get ready for target practice," is shown, the hens all obeying. The mobilized farm, run by Colonel Pepper, exploits all of the animals in training, their patriotic efforts largely rewarded in the end. On the same reel with "The Home Life of the Spider."

A Five-Foot Ruler—(Two Reels)—August 24.—With Carter DeHaven, Frank MacQuarrie and Flora Parker DeHaven. One day while out for a ride Frank Bartlett meets Argo, a beautiful South American girl. With some misgivings she accepts his invitation to go for a ride. He takes her to a private room in a cafe and there tries to make love to her. Beau Brummel hears her screams and goes to her assistance. As a result of it all the faculty of the college report to both parents. Argo is sent home and Beau is disowned. Beau ships as a stowaway on a South American bound ship. He lands in the same city where Argo lives. She recognizes him as her former rescuer and her father installs him as prime minister. Later he is forgiven by his parents. The friendship between Argo and Beau soon ripens into love.

Behind the Map—Joker—August 23.—With William Franey. Bill is the new teacher at Hokum Center. His arm becomes tired spanking the pupils the first day, so he installs a spanking machine. The pupils decide that he had best be left alone. May is very fond of Jed and tries to persuade him to go to school. He does so when he learns that the teacher is paying attention to her. Bill realizes that if Jed continues to be a pupil his reign as master of the school will soon come to an end. For just such an emergency he keeps a bottle of "courage" behind the map, and of this he imbibes of at frequent intervals. Bill thinks that he is now brave enough to thrash Jed, but he fails and seeks safety in flight.

The Golden Heart—Star Featurette—August 23.—With Walter Belasco and Zoe Rae. Embittered against the world by the death of his wife and child, Harry Fenstein had devoted his entire energy to the making of money. The one bright spot in his life was Mary, who had lived with him since the death of her mother. When a wealthy lawyer offers to adopt the little girl he is reluctant to let her go, but he realizes that with them she will get a good education and home, so he says good bye to little Mary.

Street Cars and Carbunkles—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—August 22.—This is a thrilling comedy showing the quarrels between the jitney driver and the president of the railway. The street car was drawn by two skinny mules and manned by a conductor and a motorman, equally as skinny and snug. The people demand service or the jitney driver for them. Then began a series of stunts whereby the passengers were pulled by threats, breakdowns and promises, from the jitney to the street car. Finally they both go over the side of a bluff, an equal wreck of debris side by side. The passengers peer out of the windows wearing the never-never again expression.

The Pearl Necklace—Episode Nine of The Gray Ghost.—With Emory Johnson, Phiscilla Dean and Harry Carter. Arabin pulls the trigger of the revolver, but finds that it is empty and the Gray Ghost only smiles. An instant later the Ghost's gang enter the house and search for the necklace. Meantime Marco arrives at police headquarters and informs them where the Gray Ghost is. Jerry Tryon, with his men, rush to the house of Arabin. A furious struggle takes place between the crooks and the detectives. Williams escapes with Marco close at his heels. At the house of mystery the double floor suddenly starts to go down. Thinking they might find a way out Hildreth and Morn Light go down to the second floor. They soon find themselves in a steel walled room into which water is pouring. We see Marco rowing to the island and Jerry Tryon writing his report to the chief of police.

Mrs. Madam Manager—Joker—August 25.—With Gale Henry and Milton Sims. Gale is manageress of the opera house. She does everything, from taking tickets to filling in on the stage in an emergency. When the Imperial Burlesquers come to town one of its members, Tessie, attracts the husband of the manageress. That night finds Gale on the job. At the end of the first act the husband becomes thirsty and sneaks off to the bar next door. En route he meets Tessie, and she goes with him for a little refreshment. When the second act begins and there is no dancer, the manageress takes her place. When the two return, wifie starts a fight. Finally triumphant, she turns to her husband and tells him she stopped Tessie just in time to keep from losing him.

Move Over—Nestor—August 21.—With Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. Eddie is convalescing at the Gamble Hospital. Lee visits him and is struck by the beauty of the nurses. He tries to change places with Eddie. Eddie is willing, for he is anxious to see the baseball game. Lee is mistaken for another patient that is to have his leg cut off. But at the game Eddie is seen by his pretty nurse and is brought back to the hospital and arrives just in time to save Lee from having his leg amputated.

Screen Magazine No. 33—August 24.—This number opens with interesting studies on an alligator farm, where alligators are raised for market, killed, stuffed and mounted. The production of fine table salt, showing the method of mining and manufacture, an explanation of an unsinkable life boat, and the work of the industrial schools in prisons and reformatories of the Department of Correction in the City of New York, together with Willie Hopkins' famous Miracles in Mud, make one of the most interesting of Screen Magazines.

Squaring It—(Three Reels)—August 21.—Wito Neal Heart. There is a big reward offered for the capture of Neal Hart. Neal reads the notice, but as he can't arrest himself and secure the reward he goes for a drink. He is recognized and pursued by the sheriff and just escapes by plunging over a cliff, but he is seriously injured. Staggering to a cabin he is taken care of by Mary Moore and her husband, although they believe him to be an outlaw. Later when he finds the posse at the door he tells John Moore to hold him up and turn him over to the sheriff, as it is the only way. Neal surrenders himself. Thus he squares himself for the kindness of the strangers.

General Program

Selig World Library No. 14—August 15.—Vast Vineyards of California—Grape culture in California began in 1770. The American Rattlesnake—The rattlesnake of southwestern America. The Clay Industry—Women are employed to cast small statues. The Buddhists Pagodas of Burma—About nine-tenths of the total population of Burma are Buddhists.

The Sole Survivor—(Two Reels)—Selig—August 13.—Five young men meet at the home of Thomas Wynn and propose that they shall meet again there five years from that date at nine o'clock in the evening if they are alive. The years pass and the appointed time arrives. Three of the men get there on time. A letter is received from the fourth who is dying from a bullet wound in a Bombay hospital. The three friends drink to John Gaunt, the fifth and last man, wherever he may be. Gaunt then appears in tattered clothing and tells them his strange story. Searching for gold in Central America, he is captured by a mad scientist, who shows him a beautiful girl in a cage, one of his specimens. He escapes after many hardships, but his story is not believed when he reaches the coast settlement. He begs his friends to go with him to rescue the girl. They get there just in time to save her from death, and she promises to marry Gaunt. him for the massacre, and although he knows he

Her Heart's Desire—(One Reel)—Selig—August 18.—Carolyn Carter obeys her mother's commands and marries John Fordyce, rich and a rounder. When she has been married a short time she discovers that a marriage for money does not make for happiness. A divorce is secured and Carolyn goes to live among the simple folk of the mountains. There she meets Andres, a young shepherd, who longs for an education. Carolyn teaches him from books, while he teaches her to love him.

Cheating His Wife—(One Reel)—Johnny and Emma Ray Comedy.—Casey, a hotel porter, is obliged to hand over his weekly wages to his wife, receiving only enough for tobacco, but nothing for car fare. He discovers where his wife keeps the bank roll and helps himself. At the hotel he carries a trunk up thirteen floors for which he is not tipped. In the basement he sees a youth annoying a girl and puts him to flight. Her father's gratitude prompts him to give Casey a tip on the market and Casey goes home, grabs the bank roll and makes a clean up of $30,000. It gets into the papers, and when Casey comes home that night, after a gay time, his wife chases him all over the house with a buggy whip.

Jerry on the Farm—(One Reel)—Horsley—August 23.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry is a "movie" actor making pictures on a farm. He spots the farmer's daughter and proceeds to flirt, while Hank, the hired man, falls for the leading lady. Hank becomes enraged when he sees Jerry making love to the farmer's daughter, "his girl." Hank and Jerry stage a fast fist fight and Hank is discharged by the farmer. Jerry promises him a job with the movie company if he will drive him back to town, but Hank consents only when the girl elopes with him. Hank and the girl take rooms in a tenement. Jerry calls on the daughter during Hank's absence and she cries for food. Hank returns with the sandwiches, finds Jerry there, and opens fire with a revolver. The police are attracted by the shots and jail Hank, while Jerry offers his protection to the girl. The whole action is just a few scenes of a picture in the making.

Feature Programs

Butterfly

The Lair of the Wolf—(Five Reels)—Universal-Butterfly—August 20.—Starring Dona Drew. There is a villain, Cathcart by name, who makes every one most unhappy. The heroine is taught to regard him with hatred, as does her father, who has long sought revenge. Her father calls her Steve, and she lives in the world of imagination. Cathcart marries an old friend, Margaret Dennis, and takes her to his country place to live. Here she finds life unbearable and Cathcart's cruelties torturing. Her son Jim works for Cathcart, and when he learns of his mother's unhappiness goes to her rescue. Steve, meanwhile, has gone out into the world to seek her fortune and happiness and lies down in an old barn on the straw. Jim, seeking shelter also, finds a lad in the barn and never knows until the next day that his companion was a girl. The next day it is discovered that Cathcart has been murdered and suspicion points to Jim, but Steve saves him and helps find the real murderer.

Christie Comedies

A Smoky Love Affair—(One Reel)—Christie—August 14.—Jimmy leaves the office for his vacation and goes to the seashore. On the way he falls in love with Betty, also bound for the shore, but she will not deign to notice him. He gets up all sorts of schemes for making him look at her, even to setting fire to a turkish towel, and rescuing her from what she thinks is a fire. When she learns of the deception she is angry, and when there is a fire will not believe him. Later she goes back to rescue him when he has been overcome with smoke.

Fox

Durand of the Badlands—(Five Reels)—August 11.—Starring Dustin Farnum. Durand is the bad man of the country. He is blamed for everything that happens, whether he was there or not. One day he discovers a group of settlers being attacked by Indians, but before he can rescue them all are killed but three little girls. These he leaves to the care of Molly Gore, to whom he has lost his heart. The sheriff is after Durand and he is in danger of being taken, but he stops to rescue a girl who has been kidnapped by the Indians. The girl is the daughter of the governor, and he pardons Durand an instant before the evidence comes that he is innocent.

K. S. E. E.

The Lady of the Photograph—(Five Reels)—Edison—August 11.—Ferdinand, the son of Lord Latimer, is left without a cent because of his manner of living. Marjorie Van Dam, daughter of a good American family, visits in England and meets Ferdie in a romantic fashion. He promises to come to America after her when he has made good. He comes to America to try it and meets John Brown, of good heart and poor manners. John Brown engages him to teach him how to conduct himself in polite society and to pose as an English lord. Ferdie does this under protest. Eric Latimer, his cousin, comes to America in search of Ferdie when his elder brother dies, and also calls at the home of Marjorie. Soon Marjorie is being courted by all three men, but still remembers Ferdie. When Ferdie is accused of impersonating a lord Margie sees a great light and happiness comes to all of them.

The Kingdom of Hope—(Screen time 25 mins)—Essanay—August 22.—Starring Little Mary McAllister.—The Erlings are the leaders of their town's "peace-at-any-price" propagandists; however, their small children, Daisy and Bobbie, are strong for war play. Recruiting officers, in order to frustrate the parents' plans, persuade the children to enlist as honorary soldier and Red Cross nurse. The newspapers publish the story of the pacifists' children enlisting and it it read during a big peace meeting. Daisy hotly replies to her parents' scoldings with the statement that she'd rather enlist then than have to be conscripted. This puts the matter in a new light to the peace advocates and there is a rush to the recruiting offices.

Mutual Star Productions

Charity Castle—(Five Reels)—American-Mutual—September 3.—Starring Mary Miles Minter. In a park lived the rich old ogre and his son. The son he threw out because he was a spendthrift. Charity and her little brother live all alone, and Meril, the ogre's son, finds them and does the best he can to take care of them. Charity goes to see the ogre, wins his heart and melts it, so that he opens the Castle, names it Charity Castle, and when the prodigal son comes home, welcomes him with open arms. Then the prodigal marries the princess, Charity, and everything is lovely ever after.

Paramount

Summer Boarding—(Two Reels)—Victor Moore Comedy—August 13.—Vic reads an ad in the Summer Resort Column of a daily paper advertising "Restful Villa" at Bullem-in-the-Pines. The place, so the ad reads, has everything your heart would desire, and wanting to get away from the heat of the city, Vic decides here's his chance and packs his family up and off they go. They soon arrive at Bullem-in-the-Pines and are met at the station by a hackman whom Vic describes as "Rip Van Winkle." After many hardships in the hack they manage to reach Restful Villa. The place is everything that your heart would NOT desire and from this moment on Vic's troubles begin. The things that happen to him and his family help to make great laughing situtions which end up in Vic and family trying to escape from the Villa by climbing down out of the window. They manage to make a "getaway" and arrive home all in, resolving that so far as summer boarding is concerned, "never again."

Triangle

Golden Rule Kate—(Five Reels)—Triangle.—With Louise Glaum. This is a thrilling story of a Western mining camp. A reform wave hit the little settlement and Rev. Gavin McGregor was sent to reform the town. "The Hen," owner of "The Red Light," a saloon and dance hall, resents his coming. How he wins her admiration and love is realistically shown. Reviewed in this issue.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

Transgression—(Five Reels)—August 20.—Earl Williams and Corinne Griffith starred. Stephen Page, mayor, and his errant brother Hal, are each left a million dollars by their father. Caroline Shrefton learns of the inheritance and determines to marry Hal, notwithstanding her affair with Burton Staley, a man about town. Hal and Caroline meet and he becomes fascinated by her beauty. This leads to quarrels between the two men, and finally one night Staley is shot. Hal is sent to Spain and Staley's body is found in a distant part of the city. After months of work the district attorney gets the goods on Reed, the leader of a political gang whom Caroline has married. Reed is in jail when Caroline goes to the mayor and tells him that unless he calls off the district attorney she will tell all she knows. The mayor is engaged to the young daughter of the district attorney and she strikes through her. Then Hal comes back from Spain, tells how Caroline shot Staley unintentionally in a struggle, and that he had tried to protect her. Caroline confesses, and Read, who really loves the woman, forgets his threat to "holler" when the district attorney swears if he says a word he will try Caroline for the murder.

Chicago Notes

THE local branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has been communicating with New York in regard to the best course of action to pursue in order to combat the new music tax. Mrs. M. McFadden, George Laing, Fred Hartman and Robert Levy are the local committee on the subject.

Richard C. Travers, former Essanay actor, is among those chosen for the second Reserve Officers' training camp, which opens at Fort Sheridan August 27.

A. Teitel, Chicago's "film doctor," has been drafted and his fine form will undoubtedly win a place of honor in the front ranks of the new army.

Jack Cohn, editor Universal News Weekly, made a stopover in this city on his return trip from the coast.

Harry Miller, manager of the Rose, Alcazar and Boston theaters, has been spending the past few days delving into the cooling Dells of Wisconsin.

Charles E. Hagen, manager of the Kenmore Theater on Wilson avenue, is one of those honored by Uncle Sam and taken into the first national army.

Jones, Linick and Schaefer are planning on opening their new Broadway Hippodrome, at Broadway and Grace streets, about December 1.

Monte Snell, formerly of Paramount, is taking charge of the dissemination of films on the north side stamped with the Metro trade mark. He started in last week as the Gold Coast solicitor for that corporation.

F. R. Bromley, assistant manager of the Universal Film exchange, is leaving for a two weeks' vacation. This is Mr. Bromley's first vacation in five years.

Every Saturday from now on the Ziegfeld will offer a pre-release of Paramount or Artcraft. Beginning Saturday, August 18, Mr. Hamburger will run Billy Burke in "The Mysterious Miss Terry" at the Ziegfeld.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has sent a solid gold wristwatch, appropriately engraved, to Rose Tapley, who performed so proficiently and untiringly as official hostess at the exposition. Miss Taply reecntly showed her good will towards the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago by a contribution of $10.

The Longacre Film Company, who will release the Alice Howell comedies September 1, have opened an office on the fifteenth floor of the Consumers building.

On August 20, Jones, Linick and Schaefer will again make the Colonial a vaudeville house, after two years of straight pictures. The vaudeville bills will each contain one five-reel feature film.

The Chicago exchange of Greater Vitagraph has lost one of its most valued assistants in George Hueth, of the shipping department, who has enlisted in the regular army, not waiting to be drafted.

Maurice Fleckles, district manager for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, is getting to be a daily commuter from New York to Chicago. Mr. Fleckles was in Chicago last week for two days, this being his second visit to this city in the past ten days.

E. O. Gurney, auditor of the Universal and Bluebird exchanges, was in town conferring with the local exchange managers.

Fill Up Our Soldiers' Pipes

America's fighting men need tobacco to make trench life a little more comfortable. Here's a chance to treat the boys at the front.

"Our Boys In France Tobacco Fund" has been organized to furnish "smokes" for the American soldiers and sailors in active service.

All labor and administrative expenses are contributed so that every cent you give goes to pay for tobacco, which is purchased in large quantities at a low price.

One dollar buys four packages of tobacco and sends them to France. Each package, costing twenty-five cents, has a retail value of forty-five cents and keeps a man in "smokes" for a week. Every dollar sent to "Our Boys In France Tobacco Fund" buys a bundle of tobacco that would cost $1.80 at your cigar store.

In every package is a post card addressed to a contributor to the tobacco fund. In accepting the package, the soldier or sailor agrees to send on the card a message to his benefactor in the United States. According to the plan, every person who gives a quarter gets his receipt from a fighting man in France.

The work of this fund is approved by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy.

Send as many dollars as you can spare. Write your name and address clearly.

Mr. Gurney is on an extended trip through the West and expects to cover all the Universal, Butterfly and Bluebird exchanges before returning to New York.

The employes of the Butterfly Pictures are going to run a Butterfly dance at the Colonial ballroom Saturday evening, September 29. Herbert Levy and James Martin are managers of the dance, and they promise to have the biggest gathering of film employes and exhibitors ever gathered.

Edgar Hopp, of E. Hopp & Co., dealers in motion picture equipment in the Mallers building, has become a first class yeoman of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station. In his absence, the equipment company is in charge of his father, Joseph Hopp, president of the Exhibitors' League of Chicago.

Manager C. W. Bunn, of the Chicago Pathe office, states that the damages done by the recent fire are practically remedied and all of the various departments of the exchange will again be installed in the Consumers building quarters within a few days.

William J. McGrath, who for some time has been in charge of the editorial side of the local office of the Motion Picture News, has been placed in complete charge of the Chicago office, with both advertising and news under his charge. "Ted" Mead, the former manager, is one of the potential officers at Fort Sheridan.

E. Mitchel, who formerly frisked around in the Fox office on the fifth floor of the Mallers building, has gone down another step—or rather another floor. He is now looking after the interests of Metro in the Hoosier state. It's a tough state, but if Mitch can't make 'em sit up and give a look it's even tougher than it used to be.

Irving Mack, who directs the publicity of the local Bluebird, Butterfly and Universal pictures, is bemoaning the fact that he gets no vacation this year. The reason for this is that up to the first of June he was connected with the publicity department of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and made a change just as he was getting ready to go on his vacation.

It is stated upon good authority that the Chicago operators are about to demand an increase in wages, to take effect on October 1. The new scale of prices is to be based upon the size of the theater. The operators of St. Paul, Minnesota, are also demanding an increase. They are asking a raise of $10 a week to $42. The exhibitors of that city are planning to resist the demand.

F. H. McMillan, 404 Consumers building, is handling the 8-reel feature, "Real Life in China," for the United States. He is also arranging to take over the rights of several other productions. Mr. McMillan recently returned from Duluth, Minnesota, where he gave a demonstration of his new shaft drive safety projector, which is being manufactured at Duluth. He expects the first machine will reach Chicago soon, when it will be on display at his office.

Miss Anne Zimmerman and Mrs. Rose Primm, movie students at the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company studio, were drowned last week while attending the annual picnic of the company at Fox Lake. Mrs. Primm and Miss Zimmerman rented a boat and started out with three women friends. After they had rowed out a short distance the boat suddenly sprung a leak and filled almost instantly. The two women were drowned before a rescuing party could reach them.

How the movies are made will be shown and explained to members and friends of the Chicago Camera Club by Charles A. Ziebarth, superintendent American Film Company, Inc., at the company's factory, 6227 Broadway, August 15. As guests of the American, the amateur photographers will be addressed by Mr. Ziebarth on the processes the celluloid undergoes from raw stock to screen and will inspect these processes in actual operation at the plant.

Thomas E. Delaney has been added to the Chicago sales force of Greater Vitagraph by Branch Manager Sidney Abel. After several years in commercial life, holding various positions with the Pullman Car Company and the Chicago Telephone Company, Mr. Delaney entered the motion picture business as a booker for the Universal Film Company. Later he went with Mutual, from which company he was secured by Mr. Abel for Greater Vitagraph.

T. W. Chatburn, one of Greater Vitagraph's crack salesmen formerly connected with the Chicago exchange, has been transferred to Pittsburgh and made branch manager. Mr. Chatburn has had seven years' experience in the motion picture business, starting as an exhibitor at Atchinson, Kansas, in 1910. He ran his theater with success for two years when he was drafted by the General Film Company. Later he went with Pathe and then as special representative for Mutual from whom he was taken by V. L. S. E.

Jolly, jovial Jack O'Toole started in on his duties last week as manager of the Standard Picture department of the Chicago Fox office. When seen he had just come back from Milwaukee where he had staged a trade showing of "The Spy" and "The Honor System." Edward Manley, formerly with Elliott & Sherman, is holding down Jack's old place as manager of the Fox feature department. Jack was busy caressing a bunch of contracts he had dipped up with a net during the morning, and which ran into the umpty ump thousands of dollars. Anyway, it was an amount that made us sick.

Paramount and Artcraft pictures are to go to Hamburger theaters in a deal totaling $200,000, including $10,000 up as deposit. All the product of these two leading companies will be shown first in Hamburger houses in Chicago. The program includes those top-notch stars known as Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Olga Petrova, Sessue Hayawaka, George Cohan, Elsie Ferguson, D. W. Griffith exclusive productions, Cecil de Mille productions, Geraldine Farrar, Julian Eltinge, Billie Burke, Pauline Frederick, Lina Cavalieri, Ann Pennington, Jack Pickford, William S. Hart, Charles Ray, George Beban, Wallace Reid and Enid Bennett. Add to that the new Mack Sennett Keystone comedies and you have about all that could be desired in high-class picture entertainment. Needless to say the finest exhibition methods must be used to present a $200,000 picture-program. Mr. Hamburger has personally directed his staff of managers to attune themselves to the proposition. Augmented orchestras with special music have been arranged for. The usual good courtesy and excellent service will prevail throughout the entire Hamburger chain of theaters.

The Double's Wail

YOU gasp when the ascoundrelly villain
Hurls Percival over the bluff;
As he registers fright in his harrowing flight
You say to your neighbor, "That's tough!"
But Percival isn't the person
That's picked for that plunge in the sea;
They won't risk them guys with the burnt umber eyes—
The come-on that tumbles is me.

You weep when the lovely young lady
Is lashed by a rope to the track,
And registers fear as the engine draws near;
Her future appears rather black.
But Mabel is taking no chances,
A cagy young beauty is she.
The form in the skirt that is due to get hurt
In case of a brake slip is me.

Your blood leaves your face when the lion
Takes a bite at the leading man's map,
And registers spite when he misses his bite,
And sharpens his claws for a scrap.
But it isn't the leading man, reader,
Who quails at the man-eater's rage.
He's out for a ride with some Jane by his side,
While I am the goat in the cage!

Government Issues Film Guide

UNCLE SAM PAMPHLET GIVES INFORMATION ON WAR PICTURES

PRODUCERS and distributors will be required to abide by the suggestions of the United States government in regard to the making and distributing of pictures showing the activities of the army and navy.

The Committee on Public Information at Washington has just issued a pamphlet on this subject. The provisions follow, verbatim:

For the guidance of the newspapers and periodical press, illustrative news syndicates, motion picture producing companies, and independent photographers and artists generally, the following information concerning the making and distribution of pictures that show the activities of the army and navy during the period of the war is issued, in accordance with authority from the War and Navy Departments:

Permits for Unofficial Photographs

Applications for permits to make pictures showing the activities of the Army, the Navy, and other departments and bureaus of the Government, if addressed to the Committee on Public Information, will be referred directly to the proper authorities, and unnecessary delays in securing proper consideration of such requests will be thereby avoided. It is the function of this committee to secure access for the photographers whenever possible to the Government departments and to co-operate with them in making a pictorial record of the work that is being done. This task will be facilitated if all requests for permits are handled through one central authoritative office.

Special permits will be issued on occasions on condition that all photographs and drawings be submitted for approval to the Committee on Public Information, unless otherwise specified. Requests for permits should explain the character of the pictures desired and the uses for which they are intended, and should be accompanied by sufficient references to establish the character and responsibility of the person or organization from which the request comes.

Pictures That Are Not Admissible

Pursuant to instructions emanating from the War Department and from the Nary Department, pictures of the following subjects should not be made or circulated without special permission in writing:

1. Army fortifications, magazines, wireless plants, navy yards, manufactories of munitions or any military equipment that has been installed or adopted since the outbreak of the war, as well as pictures that give information concerning ports of embarkation of troops or the fixed land defenses of the United States or the number, nature, or position of their guns.

2. Close views of the details of construction, as well as of all tests, or new weapons, equipment, or instruments used by the Army or Navy, such as—

Aeroplane devices.
Gun-handling gear.
Electric communications.
Stabilizers.
Submarine fixtures.
Sighting mechanisms.
Range-finding instruments.
Fire controls.
Turret interiors.
New inventions and experiments of military or naval import.

3. Movements of troops marching or in transport in such a way as to identify localities, or pictures that reveal special duties of detachments, positions of guards or sentinels, or that show new military formations.

4. Locations of mine fields or the location, identity, or number of warships belonging to our own Navy or to the navy of any country at war with Germany.

5. Views, in either news or fiction films, that tend to misrepresent or to arouse prejudice against friendly nations.

6. Scenes abroad that have not been passed by censors of friendly nations.

Whether or not specifically prohibited by these rulings, when pictures are plainly of a character that require official consideration, representatives of motion picture companies and distributing agencies, exhibitors, illustrative news bureaus, editors, and others are themselves expected to withhold publication. When there is doubt as to the admissibility of pictures, communication should be had immediately with the Committee on Public Information, which, with the least delay possible, will pass upon them.

Information not permissible in news matter should not be used in reading matter, titles, or captions in connection with photographs, motion pictures or illustrations.

No exclusive privileges to make pictures for private commercial purposes will be granted to any photographer or artist.

Three prints from all photographic plates and films exposed with permission by other than the official photographers within territory controlled by the Army and Navy should be submitted for approval to the Committee on Public Information before publication. One print will be retained as a record by the department from which the permit is issued; one print will be retained by the Committee on Public Information; and the third print (if the picture is declared suitable for public distribution) will be returned to the owner, bearing the imprint, "Passed by the Committee on Public Information, Washington." The publication, sale, or other distribution of such pictures as are officially disapproved is forbidden.

Photographs made on permits issued by other departments and bureaus should be submitted for approval before publication. Still photographs should be submitted in duplicate; one print, if approved, will be stamped, "Passed by the Committee on Public Information, Washington," and will be returned to the owner; the duplicate print will be kept for the files.

One positive print of all motion picture films taken by special permits should be delivered, free of charges, to the files of the department from which the permit is issued.

Releases on Official Stills

All photographs made by official photographers are developed and printed by the military and naval authorities in accordance with the regulations that are provided. All official plates and films remain in the possession of the military and naval authorities, and are not permitted to pass into other hands. Prints of every official plate or film that is released will be kept on file by the Committee on Public Information for record; additional prints may be furnished by the committee as may be required.

Official photographs of the Army and Navy will be released through the Committee on Public Information. All official photographs bear the imprint of the Committee on Public Information, Washington.

Releases on Official Motion Pictures

Official Army and Navy motion picture films will be released through the Committee on Public Information, and will be distributed as the demands of the occasion may warrant.

Ask us if you would like some practical aid in making your house pay, or making it pay MORE, also in regard as to how to build, remodel, and so forth. Ask us about screens, organs, ticket venders, or any form of theater equipment.

IT'S YOUR TRADE PAPER

In short, MOTOGRAPHY will tell you anything that can be found out, and will do anything possible for you that you cannot conveniently do for yourself.

Remember: MOTOGRAPHY is YOUR TRADE PAPER, to help YOU and our other 9,000 exhibitors first, last and all the time.

WRITE MOTOGRAPHY.

and bureaus may be secured at terms or under conditions that will be furnished upon application.

No photographers shall be permitted to accompany the Army abroad on active service in the war zones, except the official photographers in the Government service. Applications for permits for photographers and artists to picture the activities of the Navy should be addressed to the Committee on Public Information.

Only those photographs that are made by official photographers in the employ of or under contract to the Government may be termed "official photographs." Only photographers who are in the employ of the Government may be designated as "official photographers," and this designation will apply only during the period of their service.

Photographs Submitted for Approval

Motion picture producers, illustrative news bureaus and photographers generally are invited to avail themselves of the advice of the Committee on Public Information in regard to the admissibility of pictures that are taken without permits. In such cases photographic prints should be submitted in duplicate to the Committee on Public Information. If admissible one print will be marked, "Passed by the Committee on Public Information, Washington," and returned to the owner without further comment. If the picture is not admissible, the print will be marked, "Not authorized by the Committee on Public Information, Washington." The use of photographs thus disapproved is prohibited. The duplicate print will be retained as a record by the Committee on Public Information.

Motion picture films will receive immediate consideration, and will be returned with the written approval of the committee or with suggestions concerning changes that may be desirable.

No photographs or drawings shall be considered as approved until prints have been submitted for review and have been officially stamped or released in writing.

KENDALL BANNING,
Director of the Division of Pictures.

The latter part of "Unto the End," the third of the Crane Wilbur productions on Art Dramas' program, is laid in the Hawaiian Islands.

Mena Company Begins Activities

The Mena Film Company is a New Jersey corporation, having a capitalization of $250,000.

Its officers are as follows: E. W. Kuehn, Toledo, O., president; J. G. Kuehn, Brooklyn, N. Y., vice-president; Dr. L. W. Jones, Chicago, Ill., secretary-treasurer; R. R. Hollister, Pittsburgh, Pa., foreign director; G. C. Driscoll, Los Angeles, Cal., manager.

The management is planning to produce motion picture feature films on popular subjects and the first picture which is in process of production will be an allegorical Biblical and modern story in a new and unique setting.

The company's principal studio is located at Fountain avenue and Berendo street, Hollywood, Los Angeles. It embodies the latest ideas in scientific studio efficiency, both in construction and equipment, and is expected to fully measure up to the requirements of the company's plans for the production of a series of elaborate and spectacular features.

Mr. G. C. Driscoll, president of the Pyramid Film Company, has taken charge of the Los Angeles studio and the producing end of the company's activities.

Howard Gaye, who was associated with D. W. Griffith for three years, is the director of productions.

The appropriation by the United States Government of millions of dollars in recent weeks to seek out and uproot the German spy system in the United States has led William Fox to produce a vitally important photodrama, "The Spy." Dustin Farnum, the American favorite, appears in the title role.

The picture will be a special issue, and the first releases were made on August 19.

Skidding Hearts (Keystone)—"Just an average attempt to extract a laugh."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Nick of Time Baby (Keystone)—"A good melodrama made into a poor comedy. Saved by the Keystone dog."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Sins of Her Parents, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"Wonderful acting. A repeater any time."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Tangled Lives, with Genevieve Hamper (Fox)—"Not quite up to Fox standard. Star didn't draw for she is not known here."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Fox Comedies (Fox)—"I think they are the best on the market."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

To Honor and Obey, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"Very satisfactory in every way."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

An Innocent Sinner, with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"Business doubled on the second day. That tells the story."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Innocent Sinner, with Mariam Cooper (Fox) "A very good box-office attraction. Played to a full house all day."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Question, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture with excellent drawing power. Played to excellent business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Question, with Harry Morey and Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"A fairly good picture, spoiled by the dream ending. Too many 'hit the pipe and dream.' "—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Question, with Harry Morey and Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"One of those pictures that do not get anywhere, although I guess it pleased a few of our patrons. Business just fair."—Billy Van, Princess Theater, Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Within the Law, with Harry Morey and Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"Played three days at advanced prices. Is a winner from every angle."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Message of the Mouse, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A splendid production. The star is very popular here. This is up to Vitagraph's standard."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

The Tarantula, with Edith Storey (Vitagraph)—"Picture very good. Business fair."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

The Juggernaut, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture but with little drawing power on account of its age."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

A Prince in a Pawn Shop, with B. Bernard (Vitagraph)—"A great picture."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Kid, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"A good one. Play it."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Aladdin From Broadway, with Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"An excellent production in every way. Received many very favorable comments."—Mrs. W. D. Jenkins, Auditorium Theater, Slater, Mo.

The Light at Dusk, with Orrin Johnson (Lubin-V. L. S. E.)—"This picture was so well liked that I could repeat it and pack my house. Star great. Good enough for any house."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.—Town of 2,000 population.

The Man of Mystery, with E. H. Sothern (Vitagraph)—"An excellent drama. Pleased 90 per cent of those present."—W. L. Buck, New Gem Theater, Waterville, Minn.

The Million Bid, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"One of the very best pictures ever in the house. Capacity business and a well pleased audience."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Big V Comedies, with Hughie Mack (Vitagraph) "I want to recommend these to anyone who is looking for good clean comedies. They are great."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Clover's Rebellion, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"The best Vitagraph in some time. Has a laugh, a thrill, a tear, and an interesting story. Well acted."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

Shackles of Truth, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"The kind of a picture my audience likes. Great business."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Pearl of Paradise, with Margarita Fischer (Pollard-Mutual)—"Excellent. Star great. Business good. Good drawing card."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.—In town of 2,000 population.

Her American Prince, with Ormi Hawley (Mutual)—"Nothing to it. Title not a drawing card. Poor business."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.—In town of 2,000 population.

Miss Jackie of the Navy, with Margarita Fischer (Pollard-Mutual)—"Well liked by all. Good drawing card. Title draws."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.

The Frame-up, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"This is the best picture I have ever run. It pleased the audience from start to finish. Everyone talked about it. All the new Russell pictures are knock-outs, plays any exhibitor can be proud to show. I ran all of the first series and am well into the second."—R. G. Willert, Grand Theater, Laverne, Minn.

Dulcie's Adventure, with Mary Miles Minter (Mutual)—"A good picture but minus 'pep.' Business poor."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Philip Holden, Waster, with Richard Bennett (American-Mutual)—"Solid commerce picture. Good only for trade people. Star is perfect in his part."—J. L. Coral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Gentle Intruder, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"The biggest Sunday house of the season. Picture is not up to the Minter standard."—I. D. Stanford, Lyric Theater, Chico, Cal.

The Twinkler, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"The picture is great and so is the star. Business good."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

Melissa of the Hills, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Not up to the Minter standard. The usual clan story. Subject done to death."—Bert Goldman, New Majestic Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Quest of Life, with Maurice and Florence Walton (Paramount)—"An exceptionally good picture, and the dancing done by these stars is splendid."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Ashes of Embers, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"One of this star's best pictures. It will please those who admire her. Drew exceedingly well for us."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Pretty Mrs. Smith, with Fritzi Scheff (Paramount)—"A complete failure."—W. L. Buck, New Gem Theater, Waterville, Minn.

Tess of the Storm Country, with Mary Pickford (Paramount)—"Have shown it several times but it always draws better than ordinary pictures and pleases always."—O. Korn, Grand Theater, Bay City, Texas.

Forbidden Paths, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"An extraordinary production. Well liked. Great business."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Cook of Canyon Camp, with George Beban (Paramount)—"Like the other Beban pictures. Star clever character actor but does not draw."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Romantic Journey, with William Courtney (Pathe)—"This was too hair-raising to suit my audience and is not at all a film fit for children to see. However, for any exhibitor who wants a very thrilling melodrama, this one will fill the bill."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

It Happened to Adele, with Gladys Leslie (Pathe)—"A very good production. Business good."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Pots and Pans Peggy, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"Capacity business. The star is well liked here. Good work by all players."—I. D. Stanford, Lyric Theater, Chico, Cal.

Hinton's Double, with Frederick Warde (Pathe) "Warde's work is fine. A good picture all around."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Woman in White, with Florence LaBadie (Thanhouser-Pathe)—"Good drawing power, and the goods to back it."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Filling His Own Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"My people liked this show. Good business."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Heart of the Hills, with Mabel Trunnelle (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"A poor picture. Cast good, also photography."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. D.

Sweet Alyssum, with Kathlyn Williams (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"A dandy picture. It pleased everybody. A well-built story."—O. Korn, Grand Theater, Bay City, Texas.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Every exhibitor who wants to do his bit should get this film. It is the only picture I have seen that hits the nail on the head in showing what a slacker looks like."—Gus Meyers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

Skinner's Bubble, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Good. Pleased almost as well as Skinner's Dress Suit."—Gus Meyers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

One Touch of Nature, with John Drew Bennett (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"A great baseball picture. Holds the interest all the time. Business fair."—Bert Goldman, New Majestic Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Follow the Girl, with Ruth Stonehouse (Butterfly)—"Remarkable production. Miss Stonehouse is perfect. J. Webster Dill's part couldn't be played better. A business drawer, sure."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Even as You and I (Lois Weber-Universal special)—"A great picture. Played to advanced prices. Built to please the most critical."—O. Korn, Grand Theater, Bay City, Texas.

Idle Wives (Lois Weber-Universal special)—"Everybody should book this picture and boost it to the skies. You can't say too much for it. It is a 100 per cent picture, plus, and the kind that will advance the industry."—O. Korn, Grand Theater, Bay City, Texas.

Six-shooter Justice (Gold Seal-Universal)—"A good story. Interesting plot. Business fair."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Woman Who Would Not Pay, with Cleo Madison (Star Featurette-Universal)—"This picture pleased my audience. The star is perfect, but the title drew more than the star."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Clock, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—"A fine picture, one the people have to like."—W. L. Buck, New Gem Theater, Waterville, Minn.

Wanted a Home, with Mary MacLaren (Bluebird)—"One they all like."—W. L. Buck, New Gem Theater, Waterville, Minn.

The Mysterious Mrs. M., with Mary MacLaren (Bluebird)—"A story of suspense, acted right, with nice settings. Bluebird is right, 'The play's the thing.' "—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"Played to big business all day. Fairbanks is always a good drawing card in this locality."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"Two days of good business with this western Fairbanks offering, which was good, but not liked as well as some of the others he has done."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Pride of the Clan, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"A great picture. Excellent business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Seven Keys to Baldpate, with George M. Cohan (Artcraft)—"Seems to be a very pleasing picture. The title should make it a drawing card in most communities."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

A Corner in Smiths (Black Cat-Essanay)—"Nothing extra. Ordinary business."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Mother's Ordeal, with Jean Sothern (Art Dramas)—"Photography good. Not especially well directed. Am tired of the everlasting 'wronged girl' stuff."—Mrs. W. D. Jenkins, Auditorium Theater, Slater, Mo.

The Rainbow, with Dorothy Bernard (Art Dramas)—"This is a very clever offering, even if it does drag. It pleases. People liked it. Good business for hot weather."—Billy Van, Princess Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The God of Little Children with Alma Hanlon (Art Dramas)—"Just fair. Hard to judge, as condition of the print was bad."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Moral Code, with Anna G. Nilson (Art Dramas)—"Fairly good picture if it had been in screen condition."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Beloved Adventuress, with Kittie Gordon (World)—"A very good picture."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

A Self-made Widow, with Alice Brady (World)—"A very pleasing picture. Good business."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

In Darkest Russia, with Alice Brady (World)—"One of the best pullers of the season. General satisfaction. Capacity business."—I. D. Stanford, Lyric Theater, Chico, Cal.

The Iron Ring, with Gerda Holmes (World)—"The worst World we ever ran in the theater. Has no drawing power. Is not up to the World standard."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Somewhere in America, with Mary Miles Minter (Metro)—"This did not draw and there is nothing to the play. It is a reissue and should not have been put out on the regular program.—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Somewhere in America, with Mary Miles Minter (Metro)—This picture is absolutely a 'foul ball.' The audience was very much displeased. It looks as if Mary Miles Minter had only appeared in one or two reels during the whole picture. One of the poorest pictures Metro has gotten out in some time."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Hidden Spring, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Pleased the audience immensely. Also drew good business."—Charles E. Hagen, Kenmore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Will o' the Wisp, with Mabel Taliaferro (Metro)—"A poor title, but a dandy picture, that pleased all who saw it."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Greatest Power, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"Because of the patriotic appeal, this may get over. A very weak story, but the patrons liked it. Good business."—Billy Van, Princess Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Millionaire's Double, with John Barrymore (Metro)—"A good picture in ever way."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. D.

Serials and Series

Patria, with Mrs. Vernon Castle (Pathe)—"This seems to be well liked and is pulling very well for us."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

British Official War Pictures (Pathe)—"The first three numbers are the best of the series. All are interesting and educational."—Leo Peterson, Iris Theater, Belle Fourche, S. Dak.

The Fatal Ring, with Pearl White (Pathe serial)—"An excellent serial. It pulls."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

The Fatal Ring, with Pearl White (Pathe serial)—"We have run five episodes and it holds the interest during very hot weather. Great."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

The Railroad Raiders, with Helen Holmes (Signal-Mutual)—"This is one of the best serials I ever ran. Draws working class as well as others."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

The Railroad Raiders, with Helen Holmes (Signal-Mutual)—"Crowded houses. Patrons well pleased. Snappy throughout."—I. D. Stanford, Lyric Theater, Chico, Cal.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Series (Schwartz)—"Only fair. Did not take with my patrons."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

The Jimmy Dale Series, with E. K. Lincoln (Mutual)—"This serial is only fair. The star has no drawing power here."—Peter Grillo, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

Do Children Count? with Mary McAlister (Essanay-K. E. S. E. series)—"This series is very pleasing. Little Mary McAllister appeals to old and young."—F. C. Smalley, Banner Theater, Chicago.

Art Films on Broadway

Arrangements are now being made for a first showing of the Russian Art Film repertorie in a Broadway theater. Should there be delay in obtaining the theater desired as early as present plans contemplate, a trade showing will be given. The theater showing is preferred by Nathan Kaplan, who brought the films from Russia, because of the opportunity it gives to obtain the professional and lay verdicts at the same time. It is upon these verdicts that the distribution plan of the Russian Art Film Corporation will be determined.

Paralta Plan Book Out

The Paralta Plan book, which Paralta Plays, Inc., has been advertising very extensively in the trade papers of late as an aid to the development of picture theater patronage and the elimination of waste in the management of theaters, has been issued from the press and thousands of copies are now being sent to exhibitors throughout the country who filed their applications for them during the past three months.

It reviews the economic history of the trade, it shows the "leakage" which results from the present forms of picture distribution and shows how the four big points of the Paralta Plan will redound to the benefit of the exhibitor.

The book especially dwells on restricted, non-competitive territory, unlimited runs, repeat booking privileges without extra charge, and a twelve-month contract, with cancellation privileges to the exhibitor which are exclusively his. He can cancel a Paralta contract, whereas the company cannot cancel on him.

Scribes Visit Home of E. K. Lincoln

A special Pullman car was attached to train number 54 when it pulled out of Grand Central Station Saturday noon, August 18, the same having been chartered by E. K. Lincoln to take representatives of the motion picture magazine and trade journals on a four-day outing to his summer estate in the Berkshires.

Those who made the trip were Gerald Duffy of Picture Play Magazine, William Barry of the Motion Picture News, Edwin M. La Roache of the Motion Picture Magazine, Charles Condon of MOTOGRAPHY, Ben. Grimm of the Moving Picture World, Peter Milne, representing Every Week, C. A. Kracht of The Morning Telegraph, Mr. Cormier of the Exhibitors Trade Review, Walter McCray of the Motion Picture Classic, William Beecroft of the Exhibitors Herald, Mr. Thompson of the Dramatic Mirror, N. Boneil of the New York Clipper, Colgate Baker of the New York Review, Jack Edwards of the Billboard, Lumiere, the photographer, and T. E. Letendre, business manager for the trip. The party returned in two sections, those who tired out quickly returning on Monday, while the others remained until Tuesday evening.

Edith Storey Commences Work

Metro Pictures Corporation has chosen as Edith Storey's first Metro vehicle, "The House in the Mist," a novel by Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesy, authors of "The Matrimaniac" and other successes. "The House in the Mist" appears in the August 10 issue of the People's Magazine, published by Street & Smith.

A six-reel special production will be made of "The House in the Mist," work on which will begin immediately at the Metro Studio, under the direction of Tod Browning.

A notable cast has been chosen to support Miss Storey in her initial Metro production. Bradley Barker will play Jack Carrington, the hero who shares the adventures of the heroine. Harry S. Northrup, Metro's popular "villain," well known on both stage and screen, will have an important role. Another player of importance will be Frank Fisher Bennett, the Francois Leblanc of "The Jury of Fate."

Clara Kimball Young is at work on "Magda," her initial production with her own new organization under the management of Harry I. Garson. Her new production will be ready for release about September 1.

GEORGE, YOU'RE ALL RIGHT ANYWAY

YOU know how sheep are. Wherever one goes they all will go.

Well, that describes the luncheon given at the Blackstone Hotel the other day for the inimitable George Beban, when he was in town.

George asked the representatives of the trade and press present for their real opinions as to whether he should continue exactly as he has in delineating Dago dish washers and French ditch diggers. Everybody took the verbal butter knife and spread the familiar salve, sincere enough, but to be taken with salt—that is, everybody except Yours truly.

We held that George could include characterizations from other democratic but not lowly walks of life in his pictures. Nobody agreed.

Which was fine for the discussion.

Get 'em mad and they'll talk.

Anyway, you see, we wasn't no sheep.

No.

We was a goat.

THE MYSTERY OF THE TAXI BILL

Chester Withey, director at the Greater Vitagraph studio, in Brooklyn, misused Harry Ham the other day, although Alice Joyce is indirectly to be blamed.

Mr. Withey's car being out of commission, he suggested to Mr. Ham that they get a nice, new white taxicab and ask Miss Joyce to ride with them to the studio.

It would be cheaper than walking. Miss Joyce's liability comes in this way.

When the driver learned he was driving the noted screen star, he lost his nerve and also control of the wheel and bumped into a truck. The trio hailed another cab. This driver was apparently all right but in two blocks his meter jumped up to $7.80.

This was too raw for Mr. Ham and he insisted the party get out and walk the remainder of the way to the studio. It was established later that the two men had matched for the taxi bill and that Mr. Withey had won.

WHAT TRADE PAPERS ARE GOOD FOR

UP in the Pathe office the other day we asked W. H. Esch of the Princess and Phoenix of La Porte, Indiana, if he read the trade journals.

"Sure."

"What ones?"

"Oh I get 'em all—World, Moshograff, News, Review, Herald and house organs and everything."

"Ge whiz, how do you get time to read all of them?"

"Oh, I don't read 'em, necessarily."

"Get your money's worth out of them?"

"Sure. I got a baler for $12 and it paid for itself in three months and now the trade papers and house organs and advertising paper and stuff bring me a little velvet every month."

Whereupon the editor swelled with pride to know that he was of some real use in the world.

BILL SWEENEY'S NAMSAKE

Did you know Bill Sweeney, national M. P. E. L. secretary, has a colored namesake?

Bill tells the story of the coon who had lost his registration card and was hauled up before one of the Chicago judges. He declared he didn't want to go to war, and after he had told all his reasons the judge said:

"Well, you're the first Sweeney I ever saw who didn't want to get into a fight!"

WILL THIS GET A RISE?

Now it'll be flies in the place of ems,
Pictures will wait on pike;
No more discussions on acting "fems,"
Till he tells about every strike.

His pencil like a rod he'll grip;
A scow supplants his chair.
The editor's back from his fishing trip,
And he can see fish in the air!

SAM TRIGGER RESIGNS

Head of New York League Gives Up Presidency—Makes Farewell Speech—C. R. Martineau Succeeds Him

Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York local of the Exhibitors League, tendered his resignation to that body last week and C. R. Martineau, vice-president, automatically succeeded him. In his speech of resignation, Mr. Trigger said:

It is a most unpleasant task to be asked by gentlemen purporting to be my friends to explain my conduct. This is the first time in my life that friends have questioned my God-given right to exercise my conscience and my judgment.

As your president, I entered the hall at the Chicago convention in your behalf and for you. I was not permitted to vote and I was not permitted to speak either as your national vice chairman or as your president. Was that the treatment you wanted me to have, and did you expect me to suffer such insults? These are two questions, my friends, for you to answer.

Not being permitted to take part in the deliberations of the convention, refused the right to voice your sentiments and your desires or to vote on any measure, I realized I was not a delegate, and left the convention. For this act I have no apologies to offer. That I have aligned myself with the American Exhibitors' Association needs no explanation except that I am glad to do my bit in this organization of business men that really stands for something, and that I believe will accomplish something for you and for me as exhibitors.

I now hand to our secretary my resignation as president of this local. This act I will also explain. I should not continue as president of a local that is affiliated with a national organization that I do not believe in. A few of you have indicated that you prefer a new president. You should have one. This resignation I owe you, but my personal liberty to exercise my best judgment at all times I do not.

Now that my unpleasant task is over, let me just say this in conclusion: Forget our political differences, and let's be the same friends we have always been. I care not for presidencies, but my friends I love. As fellow exhibitors, continue to do as you have done for fifteen years—call on me day or night—and even if I have turned my sixty-fifth milestone, you will find me as full of enthusiasm for my friends as ever.

Mr. Martineau, upon taking Mr. Trigger's place, immediately sent out the following statement:

In assuming the presidency of New York Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, I take this opportunity to pledge my support to the National League and all its officials, and will use my best efforts to promote a closer bond of friendship between all local exhibitors, whether in the organization or not.

It will be my greatest desire to protect the individual members from unfair trade methods and abuse, and at the same time to work for the best interest of the entire industry.

I will endeavor to see that all differences between branches of the industry and exhibitors are properly arbitrated. I will be at the service of the exhibitors at all times, and will do my utmost to assist them in protecting their interests.

Edna Goodrich's First Mutual

Edna Goodrich, famous beauty of the stage, will return to the screen September 3 in "Reputation," the first of her series of star productions for Mutual. Chas. Goodrich has been at work for months on the series of photodramas which she is making under her contract with John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation.

In addition to "Reputation," "Queen X" has been completed and "A Daughter of Maryland" is so far under way that it will be finished before "Reputation's" release. The fourth of the series will be "American Maid," preparations for the production of which are already started. Miss Goodrich will be directed in "American Maid" by Albert Capellani, the noted stage manager, who has but recently come into the Mutual organization.

Miss Goodrich is as well known as any woman who has appeared on the American stage in the last ten years. She is celebrated in America and Europe as a beauty. She is one of the wealthiest women of the stage and is commonly acknowledged to have been the highest salaried showgirl who ever appeared on Broadway.

"Reputation" is from the story by John Clymer, who wrote the scenario himself. It was directed by John B. O'Brien. It deals with a small town girl who went to the city and returned with a "reputation."

"Queen X" is from the story by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant United States attorney of New York who led a sensational crusade against oriental smugglers. The story deals with his experiences. Anthony Kelly wrote the scenario and John O'Brien directed the picture.

"A Daughter of Maryland" gives Miss Goodrich the role of a charming southern girl. The story is by Samuel Morse and the scenario by Joseph F. Poland.

Julius Rothschild is the author of "American Maid" and the scenario was prepared by Hamilton Smith. Mr. Capellani has been named to direct the production.

Bud Fisher Off for Plattsburg

There are few men in business today who can afford to enter military service and leave the office to run itself. Bud Fisher is one of those few, and yet he is off for Plattsburg and the Officers' Training Corps this week, and he is not in the least worried about the future of the Bud Fisher Films Corporation during his absence.

Ince Takes Over Biograph Studio

Thomas H. Ince has taken over the former Biograph studios in Los Angeles for the production of photoplays which he is soon to release through Artcraft and Paramount.

In celebration of the event, Mr. Ince and William S. Hart, the new Artcraft star, donned overalls and with a saw, hammer and nails, began the carpenter work on the first set.

Seeks Safety in Numbers

M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation, has announced that he has made tentative arrangements with four of the leading directors of the trade to direct Peggy Hyland in her forthcoming releases.

Mr. Schlesinger proposes to have a new director for each Peggy Hyland-Mayfair production so that they will lack the sameness so often prevalent where one director oversees a series of pictures featuring the same star.

Selznick Exchange in Washington

Through Arthur S. Kane, the new general manager for Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., a new exchange has been established at Washington, D. C., to handle only pictures released through the Selznick firm. V. P. Whitaker, recently sales manager for Artcraft-Paramount pictures in Washington, will have charge of the new offices.

The Peter Pan Film Corporation has secured the services of George W. Hanlon, one of the richest men in showman's ideas in New York. He will assist in the production of the Peter Pan releases, and for the next month will devote his time to building exceptionally strong stories for the Motoy Comedies.

A few glimpses of that striking new Fox production, "A Conqueror," with Dustin Farnum playing the role of the Texas liberator, General Sam Houston.

"THE CONQUEROR" A BIG PLAY

8,000 People Employed in Making Thriller, which Opens at the Globe Theater, New York, September, 10

In "The Conqueror," offered as the first of the series of Standard Pictures of which William Farnum is the star, William Fox believes a new standard has been set in motion picture production.

"The Conqueror" picturizes the heroic life and romantic times of General Sam Houston, known to every American as the liberator of Texas. It is a cross section cut out of American history and holds intense interest for every citizen and resident of the United States.

There is probably no more romantic figure in American history than Sam Houston, and no actor better equipped artistically as well as physically for the portrayal of Houston than William Farnum.

Given Henry Christeen Warnack's engrossing, virile story, and the facilities afforded by the resources of the Fox producing organization, it needed but the hand of R. A. Walsh, the Fox director who staged "The Honor System," to make of "The Conqueror" a photodramatic masterpiece.

This story was photographed in California, Texas and Mexico. It was six months in the making, and cost $300,000. Eight thousand people were employed in the making of this picture. Among them 450 Sioux Indians secured through the Department of the Interior from the Pine Ridge Agency for whose safe return at the end of their artistic labors a bond of $50,000 was deposited. Among the 8,000 also were Mexican soldiers, negroes and southern plantations, Texas rangers and U. S. cavalrymen. Weeks were spent on the big battle scenes, thousands of dollars worth of ammunition went up in smoke, and as a result the battle scenes in "The Conqueror" are reality itself.

But bigger than all these is the dramatic drive of "The Conqueror." The picture holds its audience tense, ever expectant of new thrills, riveted to their seats as they watch the ever human story of Sam Houston unfold. "The Conqueror" will open at the Globe Theater, New York, September 10.

Work Begun on "Penny Philanthropist"

Ralph Morgan, who is best known for the role of the dashing Joe Bascom, in "Turn to the Right," has been engaged by Wholesome Films Corporation to play the lead in "The Penny Philanthropist," Clara E. McLaughlin's story, on which production has begun in Chicago.

Should you chance to hear of a speeding taxi, shades drawn tight, with a human elbow or perhaps a foot protruding, careening through Lincoln park, don't suspect the black hand. 'Tis only Ralph enroute from one post of histrionic duty to another, in his new and novel taxicab dressing-room, which he has affectionately dubbed as "Saffron Susie."

M. J. Weisfeldt, general manager of Wholesome Films Corporation, announces that in addition to "The Penny Philanthropist," production is soon to begin on "Everybody's Lonesome." "Cinderella and the Magic Slipper" has been completed.

Conditions in the Country Districts

HOWEVER well patronage may hold out in the big cities, thousands of small town exhibitors are beginning to wonder if the picture business is not facing a decline.

A letter we have just received from an exhibitor in a town of about a thousand population analyzes the situation so well that we will use a part of it verbatim:

"The trend of the pleasure-seeking public is away from the theater and a-straddle of anything that will take them whizzing from one place to another. It is becoming harder and harder to interest people in screen stories. They have become so all-fired intelligent and critical that it is a man's size job to pick and choose to suit their tastes; and their tastes are so fickle and change so quickly that what will suit them one day will be hooted at the next. They will come honking up to the theater in a big six and a cloud of dust and breeze in, full of noise and peanuts, with a jaunty air of 'Oh well, we'll just stop in a minute while the radiator cools and Charlie gets some gas,' and in the middle of a big scene they will scatter the rest of the peanuts on the floor and beat it for the Lake Shore drive.

"Add to the motor menace the popular 'no-spend' propaganda that is being spread by over-zealous conservationists and a modern theater has a fat chance to pay the light bill, to say nothing of the rent and the films."

All this sounds more or less like a plain case of grouch, but it isn't. We have just completed a small first-hand investigation of picture show conditions in some little towns, and they bear out all our western correspondent says. Theaters that were running seven nights a week last year are now running three. Where the house was full last year it is now barely half filled. There is still a living in it—as small town livings go; but there is little incentive to enthusiasm and no encouragement to further improvement.

Meanwhile some of the big city exhibitors are seriously considering a return to the old combination of pictures and vaudeville. That is a backward step for the film business, because the pictures drove vaudeville out of their houses once as an inferior attraction.

The city exhibitors, at least the big ones, can readily keep pace with changing conditions, even if they have to import outside attractions. But the small town exhibitors find the situation more serious. They can use neither vaudeville filler nor those "stupendous" productions which require full orchestra and stage settings for proper presentations. They must go on booking ordinary films at ordinary prices, so that a thousand admissions a week at ten cents will yield them a living profit—a profit which figures no wages for their wives and daughters and sons who sell tickets and operate the machine.

It behooves the producers and distributors to give a little more consideration to the country exhibitor—the fellow who runs the only theater in the town of a thousand or two population. If they continue to rely on him to absorb the fag ends and cold copies in his former efficient manner, presently he will fade from the scene. And when his numbers diminish, some of the "velvet" will be rubbed off film renting profits.

It isn't a matter of better films or newer films for the country exhibitor—that wouldn't help him in proportion to its cost. It is a matter of assisting him in his advertising and his decorating and in all the ways of stirring up interest among people who are getting a little calloused toward his offerings. This is work for the trade papers and the producers and the exchanges. We all want to see the country exhibitor hold his patronage, and just now he needs help.

Getting Screen Material from the Stage

"THE history of motion picture success," says William A. Brady, "is that the biggest and most enduring hits are screen adaptations of stories which have been highly favored by the public in the speaking theater."

We are forced to agree with this opinion, though we cannot give it enthusiastic endorsement. There have been, and are, lots of exceptions to the rule it lays down. Anyone can name a number of successful pictures whose story never saw either book or stage. Nevertheless, the fact remains that a screen adaptation is a safer bet for the producer than a screen origination.

This condition provides a fair assurance of pleasing the public; but it is not very complimentary to the motion picture industry. We are not wholly satisfied with the idea that the photographing of prearranged scenes, the proper developing and printing of films, and the clever commercial distribution of the finished product, constitute the essence of motographic art.

We are admitting that the speaking stage can obtain better story material than we can. So long as we may obtain the adaptation rights to the same stories, the public will not care who had them first. The picture goes to the whole world; the speaking stage speaks only to a limited audience. The picture does a service to mankind when it distributes broadcast a story whose virtues would be apparent, via the horizontal stage, to but a few favored playgoers.

The question of successful picture production is no broader than that. But the independence of the industry demands more. It demands not that the adaptation of stage successes be curtailed in any sense, but that the sources of original material be nourished and encouraged.

The story that makes a good stage play, and a good screen play after adaptation, would have made a good screen play in the first place. There is more reason that the speaking stage should make adaptations of successful films than that the screen should depend upon stage adaptations.

The motion picture is greater than the stage ever can hope to be; and that the former should follow the latter is an artistic absurdity. Keep on using good stage productions as screen material; but let us also originate stuff so good that the stage will want to get speaking rights on it.

Playwrights—whether from a sense of dignity or for better remuneration—still remain loyal to the speaking stage. Because of the impression that even the illiterate can write a scenario, the really literate prepare screen subjects only when requested to do so. The screen still depends, for its original stuff, upon tired staff writers and more or less hack free lances. The chance of obtaining "hits" by this method runs about one-tenth of one per cent.

To the talented authors of real scenarios the picture producers should offer more, not less, than the speaking stage offers. The true author writes for love and not for money; but the only thing that assures him he is appreciated is royalties. Twenty-five dollars, or even two hundred and fifty dollars for a script, is not half so convincing as a share in the profits.

There is no reason why the story writer should not go first to the film market, if he is treated right. That he now goes first to the stage is evidence that the stage treats him better.

As a result, we have to make the unwitting confession—and demonstrate it—that the stage still gets better material than the screen.

Camilla Dahlberg With Metro

Camilla Dahlberg, who originated the role of Bianca in "The Great Lover" with Leo Ditrichstein, has been engaged by Metro Pictures Corporation to play the important part of the woman spy in "Draft 258," Metro's new patriotic photo-drama which has already been placed in production. Mabel Taliaferro is the star of "Draft 258," which was written by William Christy Cabanne and June Mathis.

Camilla Dahlberg, who has signed with Metro Pictures Corporation.

Miss Dahlberg has starred both in Europe and America, in "La Main," a pantomime version of "The Dumb Girl of Portici," which was later portrayed in another form by the dancer, Anna Pavlowa.

Miss Dahlberg appeared in pantomime versions of "The Taming of the Shrew," Ibsen's "The Doll House," "Salome" and Portia in "The Merchant of Venice." Coming to America, she was engaged by David Belasco to appear in "Years of Discretion," later playing in the Ditrichstein production.

From pantomime to motion picture work was an easy progression, and the European artist's success was instantaneous. "The Heart of Nichette" and "After Many Days," were among her first screen appearances. In the latter she played the heroine, and in the same picture Viola Dana, now a Metro star, appeared as the Nichette of childhood days. "The Seven Sisters," "In the Bishop's Carriage," "Caprice" and "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" were other productions. For Metro she appeared in "A Million Dollars" with William Faversham. Her role of Marcita Blein, the spy posing as a newspaper woman, is one of the most important in "Draft 258."

A. E. A. HEADS CONFER

American Exhibitors Association Holds Important Meeting—Determines Policy Toward Rest of Industry—Pettijohn Gives Back Part of His Salary

Officers and directors of the American Exhibitors Association held an important meeting last Thursday, in New York, and came to an understanding regarding the policy of the Chicago-born organization toward the other branches of the film trade. The matter was carefully considered at this time, owing to the fact that on August 27 the board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will, in all probability, act upon the theater men's recent offer of affiliation and co-operation. The American Association sent a letter addressed to the National Association officers and directors. It declares emphatically that the exhibitors will never permit themselves to be bound in support of any measure not for the best interests of the exhibitors of America. The text of the letter follows:

"To the president and directors of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry.

"Gentlemen: In order that the attitude of the American Exhibitors Association toward the National Association of Motion Picture Industry may be clearly understood, and that the directors may have definitely in mind our position with reference to what has been termed our application to affiliate with the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, I am instructed by our directors to write you the following:

"First—The American Exhibitors Association, on July 20, 1917, tendered, through William A. Brady, not as the president of the National Association, of Motion Picture Industry, but as the designated official, by reason of his selection by President Wilson, our hearty co-operation and services to help carry on the work set aside by our government for the motion picture industry during the present crisis. We are building a business organization of exhibitors to the end that this may be effectively done and results obtained.

"Second—We care not whether we have one or fifty vote either as directors or members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, because voting inside the industry cannot interest us.

"Third—We are asking nothing of you, and are offering only our affiliation and assistance in a stand with the other branches of the industry for what is healthful, and against that which unjustly attacks.

"Fourth—On the other hand, we will not, at any time, by any unit vote or combination of votes, permit ourselves to be bound to support any act, measure, or effort that is not for the best interests of real exhibitors of America, who comprise our membership, nor for or against any faction in any other branch of the industry that may hereafter develop.

"Fifth—We desire to have it clearly understood that our services are tendered, and that no application is made at this time for votes or for any change, in the by-laws of your organization.

"Sixth—We ask that the directors, at the meeting August 27, 1917, either promptly reject or accept our offer of affiliation, assistance and co-operation in such manner that our position may be clearly and definitely interpreted by our officers and entire membership."

The letter is signed by Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager.

Mr. Pettijohn, Indianapolis lawyer and film man, who has been made general manager of the body, also read a letter to the treasurer, in which he said that considering the newness of the American Association, the fact that many expenditures would be necessary only for the first year, and that all funds so far have largely consisted of individual contributions, he would, for the time being, return a portion of his guaranteed salary. He also declared that he had been most unselfishly supported in his work by the officials of the organization, and in return for his return of moneys would only require a continuation of the same sort of support.

It was then decided to call a meeting of the American Exhibitors Association at Ocean City on August 30, at which time a convention of exhibitors from many southern states will be held there.

Besides a half dozen directors the following officials attended the meeting: Jake Wells, president; Guy Wonders, vice president; William Fait, Jr., treasurer; C. C. Pettijohn, general manager, and Harry M. Crandall.

To Picture Romance of the War

VITAGRAPH HEAD SAYS PEOPLE NEED TO LAUGH—BATTLE SCENES OFF MENU

ALBERT E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, in discussing the effect of this country's entry into the war and the effect it must have on the production of motion pictures, said:

"I feel that our two big war pictures 'The Battle Cry of Peace' and 'Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation,' served and still are serving the purpose for which they were made—the arousing of the American public to a realization of what the war means and the necessity for putting the country in a state of preparedness. The one was put out long before the United States entered the war and carried a faithful warning of what this country might expect at the hands of an invader if it were not adequately prepared to defend itself. The second spectacle, 'Womanhood,' was issued simultaneously with the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany and it directed the minds of the people and government officials to the question of mobilizing its men and resources on a gigantic scale, similar to that which is now engaging the National Council of Defense and the Congress.

"With these two features, Vitagraph, I think, has partially done its duty toward awakening the nation to a sense of its obligation to itself and civilization. Now, I feel, the policy of Vitagraph and of every other motion picture manufacturer should be to make pictures that will take the minds of the people off the war and their troubles, make them laugh, and in that way, make them happy. That is to be our policy, at any rate, although we stand ready, of course, to do anything that the government may suggest to advance the national propaganda for patriotism.

"Generally speaking, though, I think we should seek for subjects as far detached from the war as it is possible to get them, because with the organization of the new national army by the draft the war has been brought right into the homes of ten million American families. These people, I feel quite sure, will prefer not to have the horrors of war presented to them too vividly, because they know that the boy in the bright new uniform of khaki may soon be stretched dead in France or some other part of the European battle line.

"My idea is to produce romances—not problem plays, but clean stories with a light atmosphere and a laugh lurking here and there in their literary folds.

"I do not think that we shall be able to get away from the war pictures entirely, because, apparently, every author and scenario writer in the world, has his or her eye focused on the great struggle, and the market is being flooded with such stories. Then, too, there is the historical angle which makes it necessary for the motion picture, like the daily newspaper and the periodical, to keep space of events. However, if Vitagraph does make any more war pictures, the real war, such as fighting and the horrors of the battlefield, will be eliminated. The thousands of beautiful romances—of severed loves, of man's heroism and woman's devotion—which this war will bring forth, are certain to provide unlimited material for masterful and enthralling photoplays.

"Another thing. The rapid strides towards artistic perfection of photography which the motion picture industry is making, will enable us to give these stories the proper treatment. Had this war come five or six years ago, before motion photography was developed to its present splendid standard, it is more than likely that a great deal of fine human interest material would have been lost to the generations that are to come.

"With all of the resources that we can command, Vitagraph shall strive to give the public henceforth pictures that will bring brightness into the lives of people rather than gloom. Our pictures will be builded of 'sunshiny' tales and when the war does creep into one, it well be so far in the background that its presence will hardly be felt. This will be noticed in one of our forthcoming Blue Ribbon features, 'For France.' This is a delightful little romance involving a young American aviator and a beautiful French girl, the daughter of an artist. Some war thrills have been introduced, but they are only flashes and they do not take the mind of the spectators to the more sanguinary battlefield areas."

Wholesome's Policy Meets Approval

Recent announcement of the sales policy of Wholesome Films Corporation, Chicago, has stirred widespread interest among the motion picture trade.

"We expected many inquiries when our new plan was announced," Mr. Weisfeldt asserted. "Our expectations have been exceeded many fold. The response of exhibitors literally has been a bombardment—gratifying testimony that the new Wholesome Films Corporation sales plan fills a long felt want in the exhibitors' field.

"It is proof," Mr. Weisfeldt continued, "that we are accomplishing what we set out to do, namely, to give the exhibitor what he wants. It is proof, too, that the exhibitor appreciates this opportunity to deal direct with the producer—that he appreciates our offer to pay all express charges."

Announcement that Anna Case of the Metropolitan Opera Company is to enter motion pictures for a limited period is made by Julius Steger under whose direction the prima donna's photoplays will be produced.

1,000 THEATERS TO COMBINE

Northwest Exhibitors Incorporate to Buy, Sell and Rent Films—Expect Great Saving Through Collective Marketing and Renting

With two hundred theaters enrolled and determined not to start its actual business activities until one thousand theaters are stockholding members, "Associated Theaters Incorporated" was formed at the Hotel Dyckman, Minneapolis, Minnesota, Tuesday, August 14.

The following officers were elected, each of whom is also a member of the Board of Directors: President, H. L. Hartman, Mandan, North Dakota; vice president, Forest Secor, Forest City, Iowa; treasurer, Henry P. Greene, Minneapolis, Minnesota; secretary, Wm. S. Smith, Menominee, Wisconsin; chairman Board of Directors, Chas. E. Gates, Aberdeen, South Dakota; general manager, Thomas J. Hamlin, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

The "Hamlin Plan" of booking was adopted, which is intended to conduct the booking of film, supplies and equipment at a minimum expense and solve the present high cost of marketing and distributing by co-operative collective merchandising.

Offices were opened at once in the Lumber Exchange building, Minneapolis, but the actual opening of the proposed large central Minneapolis exchange and the various sub-stations for inspection and shipping may not take place until December, according to Mr. Hamlin.

President Hartman is also president of the North Dakota state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Vice President Secor is secretary-treasurer of the Iowa organization of exhibitors and exchangemen. Treasurer Greene of Minnesota is director of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest. Secretary Smith is a prominent Wisconsin exhibitor and his brother-partner was secretary of the early Wisconsin exhibitors' organization. Chairman Chas. W. Gates is vice president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest. General Manager Hamlin was the founder of Amusements, a territorial theater trade weekly of Minneapolis.

"We have incorporated for $100,000.00 under the laws of South Dakota, as 'Associated Theaters Incorporated'," declared Mr. Hamlin. "We have no connection either directly or indirectly with any other organization or group in the motion picture industry.

"No exhibitor is expected to subscribe for more stock than the amount he would ordinarily pay for ten days' film rental and no theater can hold more than $1,500 worth of stock.

"Neither myself nor any member of the board are drawing a cent of salary and the entire expense of organizing will not equal ten per cent.

"We expect to do a film rental business alone of fully $50,000 a week," continued General-Manager Hamlin, "and are incorporated to produce, buy, sell, lease and rent film, equipment and supplies; to buy, sell and operate theaters and to book films, vaudeville, tabloids and road attractions."

Grace Darmond in "When Duty Calls"

Sanger and Jordan have engaged Grace Darmond as the star of their forthcoming production, "When Duty Calls," which they are producing at the Norma Talmadge studios at present. Captain Harry Lambart is directing the picture.

Miss Darmond returned to New York within the last week from Florida, where she has just completed the color process feature for the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, which Doctor Willat is shortly to show to the trade. In the latter production, entitled "The Little Skipper," she is also starred.

Prior to appearing in the Willat feature, which was produced in Jacksonville, Miss Darmond was featured in the Pathe-Astra serial, "The Shielding Shadow." "When Duty Calls" will be released some time in September.

Bessie Barriscale, Military Spy

In "Madam Who," her latest picture, Miss Barriscale plays the role of a young girl, who is married against her will to one of eleven masked men. The identity of the bridegroom is not revealed until the very ending of the picture.

She also becomes a military spy and in this character Miss Barriscale will display a versatility which it is said will surpass that noted in any character in which she has been seen, appearing both as a boy in passing military lines and as a young society woman in securing military confidences from important public officials.

"Madam Who" is described as one of Harold McGrath's best mystery stories and in subject is peculiarly in touch with the great events of the times.

Triangle Exchange Enlarged

Due to the enormous volume of increased business, the New York exchange of the Triangle Distributing Corporation has announced that hereafter the exchange will be divided into two separate departments, one having charge of the sale and release of productions appearing on the Triangle program, and the other to handle special productions. The former will be known as the Program Department, and the latter as the Series Department.

The Series Department will have charge of all Paralta releases, and also the Fairbanks and Hart re-issues, which are to be released September 2 and 16, respectively. Entirely distinct sales and service representatives will be located in each department, devoting their time exclusively to the special work of the respective branches.

It has originally been planned to keep the exchange as one office, handling both the program and the specials from there, but the volume of business already undertaken made this arrangement impossible.

Fairbanks Pays Soldier Salary

When Douglas Fairbanks learned that Victor Fleming, his photographer, had been drafted for service in the United States Army, he advised him that his salary in full would continue until he returned. Fairbanks also presented Fleming with a complete photographer's outfit and negotiations are now under way for permission to photograph social events that happen from time to time between battles. This film when completed will be turned over to the censorship committee, to use for special patriotic purposes.

Theater Makes Ideal Studio

The studios and offices of the Ogden Pictures Corporation at Ogden, Utah, typifies once again the original ideas that enter into the entire plans of operation of that company. Being pressed for time and requiring at very short notice a complete studio and experimental laboratory, Albert W. Scowcroft, president, and Lester Park, general manager of that company, hit upon the idea of converting the stage of the Alhambra Theater, situated at Ogden and owned by Mr. Scowcroft, into a studio.

The Alhambra Theater was originally constructed so as to accommodate legitimate theatrical productions, as well as motion pictures, and the stage was built with a depth of forty feet and a width of seventy feet.

A contract was awarded to the Cooper-Hewitt Electrical Company to install a complete lighting system on the stage of the Alhambra Theater and the usual appurtenances of a studio, such as paint frames, scene racks, etc. The carpenter shop was placed in the basement of the theater and the regular projection machines with the large screen were used to run individual scenes as soon as positive prints were made.

On this stage there was built for "The Lust of the Ages," the initial release of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, in which Lillian Walker is starred, the Hall of Mammon, the Council Chamber of the War Ministers, the Castle of the Hoyden Princess; in fact, all the settings, large and small, that appear in the production. A more perfect studio could not have been built and the advantages to be derived from the theater itself in the staging of scenes showing the theatrical performance in the auditorium justifies the statement that converting the interior of a modern, up-to-date theater to studio purposes is very practical, indeed.

When the Ogden Pictures Corporation builds its eastern studio, Mr. Scowcroft said it is to be built along the lines of a theater with a regular stage and auditorium.

The Alhambra is a theater in which pictures are not only shown but in which they are made. It is the studio of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, at Ogden, Utah.

Score of Stars in Single Reel

Love scenes from screen successes featuring a score of popular artists in the National Association's review of the great motion pictures of all time make up the first reel of the All-Star picture to be released September 15. The following scenes constitute the first reel:

Rupert Julian and Ella Hall in a scene from "The Bugler of Algiers," courtesy of the Bluebird; Carlyle Blackwell and Ethel Clayton in a scene from "A Woman's Way," courtesy of World Film Corporation; Donald Cameron and Lillian Walker in a scene from "Kitty Mackay," courtesy of Vitagraph Company of America; Mary Miles Minter in a scene from "Youth's Endearing Young Charms," courtesy of Mutual Film Corporation; Franklin Farnum in a scene from "The Woman He Feared," courtesy of Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Anita Stewart and Evart Overton in a scene from "The Glory of Yolanda," courtesy of Vitagraph Company of America; Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in a scene from "Romeo and Juliet," courtesy of Metro Pictures Corporation; Clara Kimball Young in a scene from "The Dark Silence," courtesy of World Film Corporation; Madam Petrova in a scene from "The Black Butterfly," courtesy of the Metro Pictures Corporation; Alice Brady in a scene from "La Vie De Boheme," courtesy of the World Film Corporation; Mary Pickford and Henry Walthall in a scene from "Ramona," courtesy of the Biograph Company; Earle Williams and Edith Storey in a scene from "The Christian," courtesy of Vitagraph Company of America; Harold Lockwood and May Allison in a scene from "Pidgin Island," courtesy of Metro Pictures Corporation.

New Chaplin Mutual Comedy

The coast range of the Sierra Madre mountains, with the mirror-like waters of the Pacific ocean as a background, furnishes a picturesque setting for a large portion of the next Mutual-Chaplin special, which is nearing completion at the Lone Star studios, Los Angeles.

In his latest subject, Chaplin makes a departure from his previous productions, adding a number of unusual thrills of a character entirely different than anything he has ever before attempted.

At the start Charlie is seen as an escaped convict, hemmed in on all sides by a posse, and the manner in which he evades capture not alone furnishes unlimited situations for the creation of laughter, but the fearlessness of his leaps from lofty cliffs and his climbs up steep embankments, is almost unbelievable.

Chaplin reveals, in his new picture, his versatility as an athlete. In carrying out the new and strenuous stunts, he is not assisted in any manner by trick photography or mechanical devices. He has merely called upon the ability which he has held in reserve.

Neal Hart with Universal

Neal Hart, Universal's husky hero of the open range, has signed a contract to play feature leads in western pictures for the next year.

Anticipating a depression which will sweep the country as a result of the great war, Essanay is producing only film plays which show the happy side of life, and relieve the public's mind of the terrible struggle in progress across the water.

Goldwyn's Progress Remarkable

COMPLETE PRODUCTIONS WITHOUT USING A CENT OF EXHIBITOR'S MONEY

EXHIBITORS throughout the country will be interested to receive herewith the first complete announcement of Goldwyn's accomplished production work. Thus far the completed Goldwyn Pictures are:

Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," by Margaret Mayo.
Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine," by Margaret Mayo.
Maxine Elliott in "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLaughlin.
Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn," by Basil King.
Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley," by Mary Rider.
Maxine Elliott in "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb.
Mae Marsh in "Fields of Honor," by Irvin S. Cobb.

Pictures now in the making at Goldwyn's New Jersey studios are:

Mabel Normand in "Joan of Flatbush," by Porter Emerson Browne.
Madge Kennedy in "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn.
Mae Marsh in "The Cinderella Man," by Edward Childs Carpenter.
And, early in September, Mary Garden, just returning from France, will begin work in "Thais," by Anatole France.

Mae Marsh, beginning work first for Goldwyn last February, of course has more completed productions to her credit, but this does not mean that there will be more of her pictures on the Goldwyn schedule. Her pictures take their place in rotation with those of other stars, coming at stated intervals. Nor is the order in which the productions have been named above necessarily the order in which they will be released. The release will be arranged so as to maintain the best sense of proportion and balance for Goldwyn's customers throughout the country.

The thing of biggest import, perhaps, is the fact that not one penny of exhibitor money has been received or applied to production costs from the day the company was formed down to the present moment and there will be no alteration of this policy. Goldwyn, from the outset, was, through its owners, prepared to finance itself. In pictures it has been more or less customary to expect the exhibitor through deposits, advances or money paid for franchises to provide producers with the money with which pictures were made.

Next in importance is the Goldwyn policy of distribution and salesmanship which has resulted in the application of real merchandising principles to film renting and distribution. Goldwyn's owners wish to build for themselves a place as real merchants in the selling end of the industry—men not afraid to make excellent wares and submit them, when made, to public inspection. On the basis of these inspections they are confident of the appeal and attractiveness of their productions and without any doubts as to their saleability.

More Exhibitors Sign for Complete Output

Their new pictures will be shown first in Los Angeles, at J. A. Quinn's Rialto Theater, one of the show places on the Pacific Coast. Mr. Quinn for weeks was negotiating to obtain the first run rights to the Goldwyn productions.

After signing his contract Mr. Quinn said: "I am going to exploit the Goldwyn productions in Los Angeles on a larger scale than any pictures have ever been heralded in this city. These pictures will bring a new type of people into motion picture theaters of this country and immensely please the audiences we have had in our houses for years."

E. H. Hulsey, the big Texas exhibitor, who owns theaters in a chain of cities in the Lone Star state, has signed contracts for all of his houses in Dallas, Galveston, Houston, Waco and Beaumont.

Wherever a Goldwyn contract is signed the local newspapers seemingly take pleasure in commenting upon the coming of a new and noteworthy type of screen production to their communities.

In St. Louis, where William Sievers has signed for all the pictures at his Grand Central Theater, the St. Louis Times gives this news first page position with illustrations.

In Peterborough, Canada, when Goldwyn Pictures Ltd. closed a contract with Dr. F. L. Robinson for the Empire Theater, the Peterborough Examiner hailed the coming of the Goldwyn plays and players as one of the big events in the amusement activities of the city and gave a half page of news space to its local announcement.

From the Detroit offices of Goldwyn come contracts for the Bijou Theater, Mt. Clemens; Princess Theater, South Haven; Bijou Theater, Port Huron; Censor Theater, Albion, and Majestic Theater, Jackson. Michigan exhibitors have been quick to recognize the merits of Goldwyn productions and sign for the entire first year's output.

John Green, of Galt, Ontario, has signed for the productions for the ensuing year. Mr. Green is known to every exhibitor in Canada as the one who introduced motion pictures into the Dominion twenty-two years ago.

The signing of the Messrs. Dusenbury's Grand Theater in Columbus, Ohio, is heralded in the local papers, while Nathan H. Gordon, the big New England exhibitor, writes from Boston:

"I am very enthusiastic about the Goldwyn type of productions. In story and in acting they are remarkable."

Goldwyn Buys "The Cinderella Man"

Goldwyn has purchased from Oliver Morosco and Edward Childs Carpenter, the author, the famous all-season New York success, "The Cinderella Man," and Miss Marsh has already begun work before the camera on this production.

The director of this production is George Loane Tucker, the successful English director, whose recent film productions under his own auspices have attracted widespread attention in the industry. Mr. Tucker's affiliation with the Goldwyn directorial forces has been impending for a long time and his work with Mae Marsh may be expected to add still further to his reputation.

Announcement is not yet made of the players in Miss Marsh's supporting cast. All of the technical and artistic resources of the Goldwyn organization are being called into play to make this production one of immense appeal for the holiday-time.

"Nearly Married" Madge Kennedy's Second Play

Madge Kennedy's second production will be the famous stage success, "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn, Goldwyn having purchased this delightful farce comedy during the current week.

The purchase of "Nearly Married" further indicates the determination of this producing organization to build its permanent place in the field of the screen by using for its material only assured successes which have been big money-makers either on the stage or in the world of literature. Up to this time, in an entire year's work, Goldwyn has not produced a single picture from an unknown author. Every play and every author represents a known and established factor in American amusements. This, of course, means a great deal for the exhibitors who later are to vend and show Goldwyn Pictures to the public, for they are always assured in advance of the drawing power of the productions.

Maxine Elliott in "The Eternal Magdalene"

Since mid-winter Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has closely guarded against announcing by name the second picture made by Maxine Elliott, international stage favorite and noted beauty. But this week the long silence was broken by a Goldwyn statement revealing that Miss Elliott's big production is a picturization of "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLaughlin, the Cleveland author and playwright.

Miss Elliott from the beginning desired to present this play as one of her Goldwyn Pictures. It will be recalled by the many thousands who saw the play that it is not a religious drama, but an essentially modern one in which there is a prototype of the popular Billy Sunday and a series of personalities and episodes paralleling the every-day people and themes surrounding all of us.

Beecroft Eludes Torpedo

While enroute from England to Norway, a steamer carrying Chester Beecroft, the well-known film expert, was torpedoed in the North Sea. First reports from abroad stated that all on board the ship were lost, but Miss O'Keefe, present manager of Mr. Beecroft's office, later received a cable from him, saying that he was safe in a British port. Mr. Beecroft, who was formerly allied with several prominent producers in an executive capacity, is now in the importing and exporting trade. On trip abroad he is making a number of important connections which will be given out at length on his return.

Alice Brady's World Picture, "Betsy Ross," is close at hand. The story, revolving around the making of the first stars and stripes, is laid in and near Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON

Preventable fire is more than a private misfortune. It is a public dereliction. At a time like this of emergency and of manifest necessity for the conservation of national resources, it is more than ever a matter of deep and pressing consequence that every means should be taken to prevent this evil.

$5,000,000 Yearly for Mutual Pictures

FREULER PROPHESIES EXHIBITOR PROSPERITY TWO FEATURES PER WEEK

FIVE and a quarter millions of dollars' worth of feature productions per year will be marketed by the Mutual Film Corporation according to a policy effective September 3, it is announced from the Chicago offices of John R. Freuler, president of that concern.

The Mutual has adopted a policy of "big stars only" for its feature productions, which beginning in September will be issued to exhibitors at the rate of two a week.

Mr. Freuler also announces the completed schedule for two months of releases at this rate, including:

September 3

Mary Miles Minter in "Charity Castle," the first of a new series of Mutual-American productions starring the delightful actress, and the first Minter picture under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, late of Fine Arts.

Edna Goodrich in "Reputation," the first of the series of Mutual Star productions featuring the celebrated stage beauty. "Reputation" is the story of a small town girl who went to the city, met a he-vampire and came back with a reputation. It was directed by John B. O'Brien.

Scenes from the first of the productions on Mutual's five million dollar yearly schedule. Below, Edna Goodrich in "Reputation," for September 3. At the right, Ann Murdock in "Outcast," September 10. Above is Gail Kane in "The Spectre of Suspicion," September 10, and in the circle, "Charity Castle," a new Mary Miles Minter play, for September 3.

September 10

Gail Kane in "The Spectre of Suspicion," the fifth of the series of Mutual-American star productions in which the beautiful and talented Miss Kane plays the leading role. "The Specter of Suspicion" deals with a bride whose family closet is the abiding place of a skeleton and furnishes the basis for a thrilling drama. It was directed by Henry King, who scored such a big success with "Souls in Pawn," Miss Kane's latest photoplay.

Ann Murdock in "Outcast," the first of the Charles Frohman stage successes in motion pictures. Miss Murdock is one of the most famous of American actresses, the product of the school of the celebrated genius of the drama. "Outcast" is a picture adaptation of the Broadway hit. Miss Murdock is supported by an all star cast. The production is the first to be released from the Empire All Star studios.

September 17

Juliette Day in "The Rainbow Girl," which is the first of the Mutual American productions starring the Broadway star, Juliette Day. Miss Day scored her most recent stage success in "Upstairs and Down" and has been at the American-Mutual studios since early in the summer working under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon.

Margarita Fischer in "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up," the fifth of the series of Pollard-Mutual star productions featuring Margarita Fischer. Miss Fischer has not appeared on the screen since the release of "The Devil's Assistant," early in the spring, closely following the completion of which she was taken ill.

September 24

William Russell in "Sands of Sacrifice," a corking five reel drama starring the heroic Mutual-American star. "Sands of Sacrifice" is the first of a new series of William Russell productions, directed as were the pictures of the previous series by Edward S. Sloman.

Julia Sanderson in "The Runaway," the second of the Frohman productions and the first of the series featuring Miss Sanderson. "The Runaway" is the picturization of the stage success of the same title in which Miss Sanderson scored on Broadway. It was produced under the direction of Dell Henderson.

October 1

Mary Miles Minter in "Her Country's Call," the second of her new series of Mutual American star productions in which Miss Minter carries the role of a patriotic little girl. "Her Country's Call" was directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

Edna Goodrich in "Queen X," the second of the series of productions starring Miss Goodrich. "Queen X" is from the story by Edwin M. Stanton, assistant United States attorney of New York, who conducted a crusade against smugglers and put his experiences into a five reel photo-drama. The picture was directed by John B. O'Brien.

October 8

Gail Kane in "Southern Pride," sixth of the Mutual American series starring the Broadway favorite in which she plays the role of a beautiful southern girl. The production was under the direction of Henry King.

Anita King in "The Girl Angel," first of a new series of Mutual Horkheimer productions starring the popular motion picture star. Miss King has played leading parts in "The Heir to Hoorah," "Maria Rosa," "The Race" and "Golden Fetters." She has been engaged by the Horkheimer studios to produce a series of star productions for release on the Mutual schedule.

October 15

Juliette Day in "Betty and the Buccaneers," a story of pirates bold, produced at the Mutual American studios under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon. "Betty and the Buccaneers" is Miss Day's second production under the contract for which she deserted Broadway for the camera.

Margarita Fischer in "The Miracle of Life," sixth of the series of productions starring the well known and popular screen star.

October 22

William Russell in "The Sea Master," the second of the new series of William Russell productions, in which he appears as an entirely new sort of a hero. The picture was directed by Edward S. Sloman, who is responsible for staging the successful series of recent Russell productions.

Ann Murdock in "The Beautiful Adventure," the second of Miss Murdock's productions and the third release of the Charles Frohman stage successes in motion pictures. "The Beautiful Adventure" gives Miss Murdock a role admirably suited to her abilities. It was staged under the direction of Dell Henderson.

Prosperous Season for Exhibitors

"This collection of pictures, now complete and ready for delivery to our half a hundred exchanges represents a year of planning and effort and the most careful consideration of the picture market," observed Mr. Freuler.

"I am convinced that the picture theaters will find this fall and winter a particularly prosperous season. The circulation of money is lively and despite high living costs the people who constitute the big majority of motion picture patrons have more money to spend than ever.

"This is evidenced by the success of picture theaters which are rapidly increasing their standard price of admission from ten cents to fifteen cents. Also the theaters are now not only presenting better pictures more worthy of the price but they are putting them on with better music, better advertising and better showmanship.

"The big steps that we have been able to make has been directly empowered by the public which is willing to support its improving taste in pictures. The standard accepted five reel feature production of today, given to the public at from ten to twenty-five cents, is a better picture from an artistic standpoint than the big special production of two or three years ago which drew admissions of from fifty cents to two dollars. The volume of appreciative demand has made this possible. It has made it possible for the Mutual Film Corporation to gather the big array of stars of the first magnitude presented in the schedule I have announced."

General Film Adds to O. Henry Series

All the curiosity that has been accumulating in regard to General Film's forthcoming O. Henry stories in more elaborate picture form is now to be satisfied. The title and release of the first four-reel O. Henry has been determined. It will be "The Defeat of the City," scheduled for September 1.

Other details of the plan for O. Henry pictures include the information that one four-reel picture is expected to be presented every two weeks, and that a series of at least ten may be expected.

Another bit of welcome news to the trade emanates from General Film in this connection. It is that the two-reel O. Henry pictures will continue owing to the demand for short length features of high merit. Confirming hints that have been given already, western O. Henry stories are being produced. These will be put into the two-reel division, and one of them will alternate every two weeks with a 4-reel O. Henry. Many of the stories with western atmosphere were published in his "The Gentle Grafter" series, and for the initial release "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear" has been chosen, it being one of the favorite Jess Peters adventures.

Three competent directors are now working to provide the O. Henry pictures for General Film. At the eastern studio Thos. R. Mills, the first of several clever people to be made famous with O. Henry productions and who directed over a dozen of the first twenty releases, has finished "The Defeat of the City." Also working at the eastern studio is Martin Justice. At the Hollywood studio David Smith is doing the "Jeff Peters" stories and others with a western setting.

Circle Theater Extends Run

The Circle Theater, Indianapolis' largest photoplay house, showed "One Touch of Nature," the Thomas A. Edison photoplay, released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, last week. It was originally scheduled for two days only but met with such a cordial reception that the Circle extended the run through the balance of the week.

Music cue sheets will hereafter be provided on all features released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay. This service begins regularly with the release of Essanay's "Open Places," August 20.

"The Spy" Bares German Plots

NEW FOX PICTURE ESSENCE OF NEWS—SHOWS SPY SYSTEM

WILLIAM FOX will present "The Spy," George Bronson-Howard's sensational expose of the nation-wide workings of the German spy system in this country, in which Dustin Farnum appears in the stellar role, at the Globe Theater, beginning Monday night, August 27.

"The Spy" is the very essence of news—the real live drama of the day—the front pages of the newspapers dramatized and interpreted by an admirable cast.

The United States government has appropriated millions of dollars in recent months to fight the remarkably efficient German spy system in America. At present there is not a bridge, nor a tunnel, of any size, a munition factory, or public utility of any importance, that is not guarded by Federal troops, the police or private guards. "The Spy" exposes German plots in the United States—plots that for wanton wickedness are without parallel in the history of the world.

It is not secret that the Kaiser has upward of 10,000 trained agents in America, who have been here for months before the war—operating not only as government secret service men, but as agents for German commercial interests. Washington knows facts about the breed that would startle the average American citizen. It is a matter of public information that the designs for the big guns used by the Germans to batter down the walls of Liege and Namur in Belgium were stolen from the patent office at the Capitol. And the German foreign office calmly admitted that it instigated the Mexican-Japanese plot against the United States.

In the closely guarded state and war departments in Washington, the German spy cleverly insinuated himself, securing valuable information of troop and warship movements, all of which quickly found its way to Berlin by secret wireless stations and other mysterious communicative means. Even during the past week, the Federal authorities discovered evidence to prove that German spies have been working among the I. W. W. members to stir up strife and strike all over the country.

The New York World exposed the plots of Dr. Alfred, who with other prominent German propagandists planned to foment strikes, control munition factories, to buy up American newspapers, to corner the supply of liquid chlorine, to control the Wright aeroplane factory, and to destroy the Panama Canal. Captain von Papen and Captain Boy-Ed were the head and heels of the nest of German spies. At that time it was estimated by government officials that nearly two million and a half enemy aliens were residents of this country.

It has been proved that over a million dollars in gold was offered the officials of the Longshoremen's Union to inaugurate a national dock strike. Secret wireless plants, control of food supplies, bread famines, juggling with conscription plans and negro riots in the south and west are but a small part of the German spy plans in America. Even in the rich man's club, it has been shown that the waiters are in the employ of the Kaiser.

All these intimate facts George Bronson Howard knows. And because of his connection at one time with the government and because of his knowledge of the secret police system in Berlin and Potsdam, he is eminently qualified to write. He has put all his information into "The Spy," and Mr. Fox has produced it.

To Decide Between Societies

Members of the Oklahoma branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, met at the Lee-Huchins Hotel, Oklahoma City, August twenty-first, to determine whether Oklahoma would remain in the League or join the newly organized American Exhibitors Association. Every exhibitor in the state was urged to be present to voice his views in the matter.

New Virginia Pearson Play Titled

The new William Fox production which is in work at the big studios in Fort Lee, N. J., with Virginia Pearson in the chief role, has been titled "Thou Shalt Not Kill." William Nigh is in charge of the direction.

Initial Ferguson Film Finished

With the completion of the big Algerian street scenes for Elsie Ferguson's initial picture, "Barbary Sheep," early last week, the production of this super-photoplay drew to a close at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Fort Lee. For practically two months' work on this gigantic production has been in progress under the direction of Maurice Tourneur and it is announced that the film is the most elaborate ever staged at this studio in New Jersey.

For the big street scenes in which two thousand persons took part, a complete Algerian village was built and on the last day of the production of the film several thousand "fans" from New Jersey and New York gathered on the streets and nearby roof-tops to watch the unusual proceedings.

Advance reports indicate that Elsie Ferguson will score an immediate triumph as a photoplay star. One of the most beautiful women of the speaking stage, she has always been identified with the true dramatic art such as evidenced in her many famous stage characterizations. Her rare personal charm is faithfully reproduced by the camera, it is announced, and that her popularity of stageland will more than be duplicated on the screen is readily anticipated. Supporting her is an exceptional cast, including Lumsden Hare, Pedro de Cordoba, Macy Harlem, Alex Shannon, Maude Ford and many other talented artists of the cinema.

Another item of notable interest in connection with the merits of this picture is the fact that Robert Hichens is its author and that the original book from which the film is adapted proved this noted writer's greatest seller since "The Garden of Allah."

BRADY ISSUES CHALLENGE

Agrees to Donate $10,000 to Red Cross if any Other Producer Can Equal New World Pictures in Same Time

"The history of motion picture success," said William A. Brady, director-general of World-Pictures Brady-Made, "is that the biggest and most enduring hits are screen adaptations of stories which have been highly favored by the public in the speaking theater. This applies not alone to program features but to special price pictures, and the fact accounts for the sharp competition always in progress to secure the picture rights to stage plays.

"The World corporation has been exceptionally fortunate in acquiring these productions heretofore, and they have invariably turned out so very well as to more than justify our faith in them, going to show that there is little if any diifference between the tastes of moving picture audiences and those that assemble in the 'regular' playhouse.

"All this is preliminary to the announcement that World Pictures will immediately present an altogether remarkable series of screen versions of dramas which have enjoyed big careers in the oral theater. Between September 17 and October 15 we shall publish no less than four such productions, and I desire to invite the closest of scrutiny as to their quality.

"The first of this series is 'Betsy Ross,' the title role of which is acted by Alice Brady. This story, by H. A. Du Souchet, author of 'My Friend From India,' not alone had a notable stage career but was widely circulated in book form. It carries a strong dramatic plot and faithfully reproduces certain events of importance in the history of our country.

"The second of the quartette is 'The Corner Grocery,' in which Madge Evans is featured with Lew Fields. The original of this comedy with serious touches was produced by Adolph Philipp in New York, where it had a record-breaking run although under the disadvantage of being interpreted in a foreign tongue.

"Third in the set is 'Shall We Forgive Her,' the central personages of which are assumed by June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley, with John Bowers playing an important part.

"Finally comes 'The Burglar' with Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley and Madge Evans at the head of a particularly effective company. The story first appeared as a novel from the pen of Frances Hodgson Burnett, who was also the writer of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' It was made into a drama by Augustus Thomas and quite possibly contributed more to the popularity of that justly famous author than any of his other plays.

"The qualities which made 'The Burglar' one of the very greatest successes in the history of the American stage have been fully preserved, and perhaps emphasized, in its transference to the screen. Certainly it never was played better than by Mr. Blackwell, Miss Greeley, Little Madge Evans and the other members of the silent cast.

"I am willing to let my judgment of values stand or fall upon the assertion that 'The Burglar' is the best picture play in five reels that ever was published.

"Indeed, I will go further, and donate ten thousand dollars from my personal funds to the Red Cross if within a space equal to that consumed in the production of these four World Pictures the same number of special price pictures of as good quality have been made—the decision to rest with a jury of exhibitors. This is a challenge for a comparison between regular World program fair price features of five reels each and an equal number of special price pictures no matter how long or pretentious."

Mae Murray, who recently joined the Bluebird forces, is playing the title role in "The Princess Virtue," a five-reel society photoplay.

NEW TRIANGLE RELEASES

Plays Starring Louise Glaum, Olive Thomas, Bessie Love, Dorothy Dalton, Margery Wilson and Others Listed for Release Soon.

Triangle opens the fall season with a flourish of stars in production of unusual stories, some of which have appeared in national magazines or in book form.

Notable among these is "The Man Hater," by Mary Brecht Pulver, published in the Saturday Evening Post. It will reach the public in picture form on September 2 with Winifred Allen in the leading role and will be shown first at the New York Rialto Theater. The story will give Miss Allen the finest opportunity she has had for emotional acting. Albert Parker directed the production under the supervision of Allan Dwan. The cast includes, beside Miss Allen and Mr. Meredith, Harry Neville, Jessie Shirley, Marguerite Gale, Robert Vivian and Little Anna Lehr.

Dorothy Dalton will appear the same week in "Ten of Diamonds," adapted for the screen by L. V. Jefferson from the story by Albert Cowles. Jack Livingston, J. Barney Sherry, Billy Shaw and Dorcas Matthews support the star. The story is designed to show how a woman's life may be directed by the man or men with whom she comes in contact. Miss Dalton vivifies the role of Neva Blaine, a cabaret girl in a cheap resort.

A play that will be heralded by the Triangle company as an extraordinary program feature, warranting special attention from the exhibitor because of its unusual box-office value, is "Idolaters," starring Louise Glaum, which is scheduled for the week of September 9. It is similar in action to "The Wolf Woman," which is said to have been one of the most valuable box-office propositions ever put out by the company.

So impressed was the producer with the potential value of the story that he insisted upon engaging players particularly qualified for the roles rather than drawing upon the stock company, as is the usual custom. George Webb was secured for the leading male role opposite Miss Glaum, and Hugo Koch was engaged for another important part. Other prominent players who appear are Thomas S. Guise, Milton Ross, Dorcas Matthews and Lee Hill.

Bessie Love in "Polly Ann"

"The Sawdust Ring" indicated what Bessie Love could do in a worthy play well directed. Following "Wee Lady Betty," to be released August 26, the little star set to work on "Polly Ann," scheduled for place with "Idolaters" on the September 9 program. The story of "Polly Ann" is woven with bright threads of humor, the star shining in the role of a happiness-giver.

Margery Wilson in her first starring play, "Mountain Dew," will come to the screen on September 16. The locale of the story is Kentucky, the home of Miss Wilson, who appears as a mountain girl brought up where law is made by feudist clans.

Belle Bennett, a new Triangle star, makes her bow in "The Judgment of the Guilty," by Edith Kennedy, on the same week that Miss Wilson appears in her first starring vehicle. It is a story of the west.

On the program of September 23, Roy Stewart and William Desmond are presented. Stewart in "Devil Dodger" is a western gun-man, whose daring gives him his satanic sobriquet.

Desmond, in the part of a young college man who turns detective just as an experiment and because he is in need of a meal ticket, is the star of "Flying Colors," written by John Lynch.

"Broadway, Arizona," is the title of the next Olive Thomas play, now in the course of production. It will be released on September 30 on the same program with "The Tar Hell Warrior," featuring Walt Whitman. Miss Thomas comes forth this time as a western dance hall girl, as famous along Broadway, Arizona, as she is in real life along Broadway, New York.

Alice Brady to Leave World Pictures

Within the week Alice Brady's contract for a term of two years with the World Film Company has come to an end, and she has declined definitely to renew it. She is, therefore, severing her connection with that organization of which her father, William A. Brady, is president.

She has not determined her future plans. Offers from several other film firms are under consideration, and she is also partly inclined to return to the spoken drama. She holds an option on two plays for this purpose, and Mr. Brady may produce for her the one she selects.

In her two years of screen work Miss Brady has attained widespread popularity. As a matter of fact, the World Film offered her an increase of salary to renew the contract, but she decided that it was not commensurate with her present position in films.

The two vamping scenes on the left show Louise Glaum, the Triangle peacock woman, in "Idolaters," her latest play. The happy dog on the right is in the arms of Olive Thomas, so you will have to pardon his smile.

English Beauty in "Tides of Fate"

Alexandra Carlisle, who plays the star role in the new World-Picture Brady-Made, titled "Tides of Fate," is an English actress of great celebrity for her rare physical beauty and her surpassing gifts in the art of acting.

Alexandra Carlisle, playing in the World picture, "Tides of Fate."

Her greatest triumph in London was registered upon her appearance there in the leading role of "Everywoman" some years ago, when the most austere of the English critics hailed her as "the best actress and the most beautiful woman on the London stage."

Miss Carlisle came to America shortly after the production above mentioned and she has remained here ever since. She has been the "featured" player in several dramas and comedies, and last season was chosen by George C. Tyler for the central personage in "The Country Cousin," in which she made a genuine sensation during the long run in Philadelphia.

By an odd coincidence Miss Carlisle's first New York appearance in this drama will occur at the Gaiety Theater on the same date as the publication of her picture play, "Tides of Fate."

This drama contains a number of exceptionally thrilling episodes. In one of these a runaway saddle horse upon which Miss Carlisle as the heroine is taking her morning spin, plunges from a high cliff into the river, from which she is rescued by "the wrong man," whom she marries from gratitude. Later, there are two striking battle scenes—one between bandits and the mounted police of Canada, and the other an engagement of United States troops with an overwhelming horde of Moros in the Philippines.

Olive Tell in "The Unforeseen"

There are very few stage or screen stars today who can lay claim to have started at the top of the ladder, rather than to have experienced all the bitter before reaching the sweet things in life. Still, Olive Tell, now starring in film features for the Empire All-Star Corporation, and who is actively engaged in filming "The Unforeseen," under the direction of Albert Capellani, spent a year in the Sargent Dramatic School after finishing her education abroad, and from there to the stage, where she played in leading parts from the first, having been engaged by Frohman.

Exceedingly beautiful and talented, Miss Tell brings to the screen one of the most charming personalities of the theatrical world. Much interest is being manifested in Miss Tell's first starring vehicle, which will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation.

Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Rosemary Theby—mirth makers. That's the latest combination at Universal City.

"Auction Block" True to Life

In writing "The Auction Block," Mr. Beach seems to have exercised the functions of a newspaper reporter rather than of an author. He has sketched his characters in a straightforward, uncolored way and has been content to rely on their natural actions and reactions under the circumstances he has built up for the working out of his theme.

The heroine, played by Lorelei Knight, is an exceptionally beautiful daughter of small town parents in moderate circumstances who resolve to turn her beauty to financial profit for themselves. They bring her to the great city with the avowed purpose of putting her on the auction block, to be knocked down to the highest bidder. She is bought in marriage by the dissolute son of a millionaire who appears to have more money than he really has. Together, when false pretenses on both sides are dissipated, they work out a common salvation.

The part of Lorelei Knight is in the capable hands of Rubye De Remer, who until recently was one of the celebrated beauties of the Ziegfeld roof.

"Man Hater" at Rialto

S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the New York Rialto theater, has selected "The Man Hater," a Triangle production of the Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, as the opening attraction for the fall picture season, booking it for the week of September 2.

Winifred Allen has the title role in the play, which was made under the supervision of Allan Dwan at the Yonkers studio. This is the first play in which she has been featured alone, and is said to prove her right to first place among the young actresses of the screen.

Julia Dean with World Pictures

Julia Dean has been added to the list of World Pictures attractions, and is already at work in the Fort Lee studio upon a play not yet named but said to be of a most timely nature. Miss Dean has long been held in very high favor upon the speaking stage, where she originated leading roles for some of Mr. Belasco's greatest successes, following which she acted the central feminine character in "Bought and Paid For" throughout the famous run of that drama at the Playhouse.

Directs Norma Talmadge

Charles Miller, who for two years directed many of Triangle's greatest productions, has been engaged by Joseph M. Schenck to direct the Norma Talmadge photoplays. The first effort of Mr. Miller's new affiliation will be Grace Miller White's "The Secret of the Storm Country," on which Miss Talmadge will begin work next week in Ithaca, N. Y., where the original scenes of the story were laid.

They Are All Going to Be There

Mack Sennett's first Paramount comedies to be released the latter part of September will feature all the famous Sennett comedians and beauties, they call the bathing suit girls.

With Harry Carey and Molly Malone as his principal players, director Jack Ford of Universal City, is making rapid progress filming "The Trail of Shadows," a five reel western drama.

"The Divorcee"

Greater Vitagraph's release for the week of August 27, "The Divorcee," is built around the unique theme of a pretty society girl who, in a mood of capriciousness, adopts the career of a "divorcee" in the exclusive Reno colony. The little pretender's efforts to uphold her pose as a victim of marital infelicity leads to many embarrassing and highly amusing incidents. There is also a strong element of romance in which the "divorcee" meets and loves a young minister whom she knows only as a cowboy and he is unaware that she a member of the divorce colony.

In the unraveling of the story, Mary Anderson as the pretender, and Alfred Vosburgh, as the minister-cowboy, make a thrilling flight on horseback pursued by a sheriff's posse who think that the minister is a stage robber. The pretender is told of a stage hold-up and becomes convinced that the robber is none other than her lover. She hurries out to warn him of the approach of the sheriff's posse and he, also laboring under a misapprehension, thinks that she is fleeing from an irate husband.

Cast in the role of Wanda, the pseudo divorcee, Mary Anderson is given full scope for the display of her dramatic ability, also the well known Mary Anderson pout and dimples.

The part of the minister-cowboy, who assails the law's laxity in granting divorces, is a newcomer to the Vitagraph ranks in the person of Alfred Vosburgh, an experienced actor and popular leading man.

The production was directed by William Wolbert who has surrounded the stars with a cast of uniform excellence including such well known players as Pliny Goodfriend and Jean Hathaway.

Paramount to Release 'Twisted Thread'

The Horkheimer Brothers announce the completion of "The Twisted Thread," a wonder story of mystery and intrigue in fifteen episodes by H. M. Horkheimer.

Each episode consists of two reels of rapid fire action.

"The Twisted Thread" is the first serial ever released on the Paramount program.

Kathleen Clifford, the celebrated vaudeville artist, is the featured star.

A fist full of scenes from Greater Vitagraph's release for August 27, "The Divorcee." Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburgh play the leads in this story, in which the Reno divorce colony is cheated out of one of its prettiest inhabitants.

Animated Sub-title for Essanay

An innovation, which has caused much favorable comment, has been introduced by Essanay into recent photoplays. It is called the animated sub-title.

One of the chief causes for criticism of sub-titles, particularly where any quantity are used in a feature, is the fact that many persons read them at a glance and are then forced to continue to watch several yards of the same title being run off for the benefit of those who read more slowly. This has resulted in every possible sub-title being eliminated in the past, in spite of the opinion of many that this portion of a subject can be made one of its greatest assets. For this very reason Essanay considered it important to provide a form of reader that would add to the pleasing qualities of the film without in any way detracting from the entertainment of those who found cause for complain.

The animated sub-title is the result and it has been hailed as a decided novelty. It was first introduced to the public in "The Golden Idiot," a recent success featuring Bryant Washburn. Those who have seen it will remember the interest aroused by the conversation which took place between the characters that was shown in a blocked off corner of the screen without interfering with the action. The success of this innovation means that it will undoubtedly play an important part in future releases of the Essanay Company.

Universal Mystery Serial

Universal is about to launch a new mystery serial entitled "The Red Ace," starring Marie Walcamp. The opening espisode will be released October 8, the week following the conclusion of "The Gray Ghost." Jacques Jaccard is the author and director of this new thriller. To those who recall the work of Miss Walcamp and Jacques Jaccard as star and director of "Liberty," it will only be necessary to say that both have excelled themselves in this vigorous tale of a lost platinum mine in British Columbia, the location of which is sought by the secret agents of a foreign government.

Marie Walcamp adds to her laurels in the opening episodes, which require her to jump from a racing automobile to the platform of a swiftly moving train, to swing across a chasm 123 feet deep on a tightly stretched rope, and finally to negotiate a 60 foot dive from an overhanging rock into Lost Lake with the swiftness and grace of an Annette Kellermann. She is also given many opportunities to display her remarkable horsemanship. Those who have witnessed her work in the first part of Jaccard's unusual story declare that "The Red Ace" will prove one of the authentic screen successes of the coming year.

"Outcast" to Follow Stage Play Closely

At a final viewing of their first release "Outcast" the Empire All Star Corporation, who are releasing through the Mutual Exchanges, feel quite sure they have a picture that is going to be something of a surprise to those who believe that plays have to be materially altered for screen showing.

Much of the scenery was taken from the Frohman store-houses and costumes were faithfully reproduced.

Miss Ann Murdock, who is starring in the film version, herself long a Frohman star, declares that she is be more than pleased.

She and Mr. David Powell, who is playing "Geoffrey," the same role he played when on tour with the original "Outcast" Company, often discussed various little incidents that cropped up, and their memory helped to straighten out many mooted questions.

Mr. Dell Henderson, who directed, declares that he asks for nothing better than that all plays should adapt themselves to the screen as well as "Outcast" has.

And so those who declare that a good story is equally good whether it be used for magazine, stage or screen use, win their point.

Brenon Finds a Kerensky

Herbert Brenon is putting the finishing touches on "The Fall of the Romanoffs," his big feature which will authentically visualize on the screen the recent upheaval in Russia which reduced the pussiant czar and czarina to plain Nick Romanoff and wife, gardeners, and humble citizens.

"The Fall of the Romanoffs" has been a peculiar picture in the making, since it has been developed from day to day by actual happenings in Russia. Being a series of pages from recent history its scenario was necessarily penned by the revolutionary leaders who were doing things in Russia. As new actors advanced on to the stage in Petrograd, where the greatest of all plays is being enacted, Mr. Brenon was compelled to secure their counterparts for his picture cast.

But the outstanding figure of the Russian revolution, the one character whose prominence demanded an important position in the picture was the new found "Man-of-Iron," premier and military dictator, Alexander Kerensky. For weeks Brenon employes have been seeking the actor for this role. Agencies have been combed and players by the score have taken the ferries and been examined and rejected.

Finally the right actor was found. His name is W. Francis Chapin. He is not a Russian but his resemblance to Kerensky is startling. Mr. Chapin has been posing before the Brenon camera for the past week and with the taking of his scenes the big feature will be ready for assembling.

The Fun-Art Film Company has been organized by Harry I. Garson, who is also personal manager for Clara Kimball Young, to produce a series of two-reel pictures.

Kenean Buel to Direct Lee Kiddies

Kenean Buel, one of the veteran directors of the Fox Film Corporation, has been selected to direct the future activities of the famous Lee children—Jane and Katherine.

Kenean Buel, director of the popular Jane and Katherine Lee.

These two youngsters, probably the best known children in the films, made an instantaneous and universal success in their first picture, "Two Little Imps," which was directed by Mr. Buel. There was an immediate demand from exhibitors and the public for similar pictures by the Fox "baby grands."

The problem of selecting their future director was a most serious one and Mr. Fox had repeated conferences with his aides and advisors. The most capable directors, not only of the Fox Company but of other producers, were considered.

After looking over the lists submitted to him, Mr. Fox said:

"There is no necessity of going outside of our own organization for a director for the Lee children. Kenean Buel is the man. He has already produced a marvelous picture with them, and for years I have watched his work with children. Children like and work with him and I have the greatest confidence in his ability."

This decision of Mr. Fox places Mr. Buel in charge of one of the most unique and important features of the Fox program.

Kenean Buel is only thirty-four years old, and graduated from college at the age of eighteen, two years later being admitted to the bar as a practicing lawyer.

Born in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, it was the hope of his parents that he would follow the law, as had his ancestors. The law, however, was too prosaic and dull for the young Kentuckian, who had an imagination, and wanted to create rather than follow precedents.

The stage lured him away from his Blackstone and he joined a stock company as its business manager. Owing to the illness of one of his players, he was suddenly called upon to play a part. He next began playing juvenile leads and made a success. Naturally from this, he drifted into playwriting and stage direction.

The first picture he directed was so successful that the company insisted he continue. Before leaving to join the Fox organization, Mr. Buel managed a five-company studio in Florida, after having taken the first stock company to California, where he erected the plant for his company.

Clara Morden, the Chicago girl whom Bryant Washburn selected as the prettiest among the hundreds at the recent exhibitor's convention for the opportunity to appear in his next Essanay picture, is now being prepared for her studio debut.

Holmes Heads Essanay Schedule

Taylor Holmes heads Essanay's fall program in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." Mr. Holmes is one of the best known interpreters of subtle humor on the speaking stage, having been responsible for such tremendous successes as "His Majesty Bunker Bean," "The Third Party" and other audible comedies. In presenting him to patrons of the screen, Essanay has given him the same type of characterization, as well as the broader field for its portrayal which motion picture productions afford.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," which is a five-part picturization of a young man's endeavors to win his heart's desire by strictly business methods, will be released September 3. The story was written by Clarence Budington Kelland and published in the Saturday Evening Post.

Mr. Holmes will appear again in October in "A Fool for Luck." This comedy-drama is an adaptation from the story by Kennett Harris called "Talismans," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. The following month, November, he will be presented in "Two Bit Seats," an adaptation from a story in a well-known magazine.

Bryant Washburn's three Skinner pictures, "Skinner's Dress Suit," "Skinner's Bubble" and "Skinner's Baby," already are on the screen, and, according to reports from K-E-S-E- headquarters, are demonstrating by their success, the public's desire for pictures of a lighter vein. Mr. Washburn will be released in another comedy-drama next month, the title of which will be "The Fibbers." His November release will be announced shortly.

In addition to pictures featuring these two big stars, Essanay is releasing September 10, a comedy-drama in five parts with little Mary McAllister as the lead. The child recently has been seen all over the country in "Do Children Count?" a series of child dramas. She also was a member of the all-star cast in Essanay's super-feature, "On Trial." Her forthcoming production is called "Pants." She is scheduled for another picture of the comedy-drama type next month.

New New York Producer

A new film manufacturing concern sprang into existence when the Screen Craft Photoplay Co. was launched by George W. Shepard, the head of a big lumbering concern, which will produce six one-reel comedies translated from the Chinese by Robert B. Carson, who will also direct their making.

The comedies will not be of the slapstick variety, but will star Charlie Fang, who appeared with marked success in the serial "The Great Secret." Fang is a native of Canton, China.

When the first six films are finished a series of twelve five-reelers will be made. The offices of the Screen Craft Photoplay Co. are located at 303 Fifth avenue, New York.

Raver Stars Frank Keenan

Frank Keenan and Robert Edeson have been engaged by Harry Raver to appear in a special production of "The Public Defender," by Mayer Goldman and Frank Harris of the New York Bar. Alma Hanlon will be seen in the leading female role.

---

Norman S. Rose has left Artcraft's publicity department to become associated with the George Batten advertising agency.

OUTDOOR STAGE SUCCESS

World Pictures Big Open Air Stage Attracting Much Favorable Attention—Better and Cooler Than Under Glass Studio

The new outdoors stage for World-Pictures Brady-Made is attracting a great deal of attention in the studio colony at Fort Lee, in addition to having drawn the inspection of several automobile loads of visitors from New York.

New out-door stage for World pictures Brady-made, adjoining the World-Peerless studio, Fort Lee, New Jersey. This is said to be the largest al fresco stage east of California.

Curiously, the workers in the extensive plant at Fort Lee were at first averse to making use of the al fresco space provided for them, although the temperature under glass was utterly appalling during the recent record breaking heat period.

But the reports from members of the first company that tried the open air stage were so enthusiastic that the prejudice disappeared in a moment, and now five or six separate picture plays are being made constantly and simultaneously in this added space.

The new stage is rectangular in shape, with dimensions of 65 feet by 125, giving a floor area of a trifle more than 8,000 square feet. This is the largest outdoors stage in the East, and its equipment is thoroughly modern.

The foundations are a series of heavy concrete piers which, in addition to supporting the general structure, sustain a series of large upright columns. From the tops of these strong bronze wires are strung at various angles, carrying movable overhead sheets and screens which serve as deflectors and diffusers of light.

This system works out perfectly for the elimination of undesirable shadows, enabling the cameramen to secure greatly improved values in lighting effects.

One end of this stage closely adjoins the side of the Peerless studio, so that it practically becomes a part of that structure.

At present picture plays are being completed here by Kitty Gordon, Ethel Clayton, Alice Brady, Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, June Elvidge, Montagu Love and Arthur Ashley, and Madge Evans.

"We are making better photoplays by the use of this stage," said Director General William A. Brady. The atmospheric conditions are more favorable to photography in the open than inside and everybody naturally does better work in physical comfort.

Paramount's September Releases

With the announcement of its September releases Paramount establishes more firmly than ever, its determination to improve the quality of production and to place before the exhibitor under its new star series selective booking system an even higher grade of photoplay than that upon which it has established its reputation in the motion picture field.

September will mark the advent of Mary Roberts Rinehart upon the screen as an author, the adaptation of the first of her celebrated "Sub-Deb" stories, starring Marguerite Clark, being scheduled for release in the latter part of the month. This production will be called "Bab's Burglar," and the titles of the others in the series will be announced later.

The first production for the month will be George Beban in "Lost in Transit," which was written for Mr. Beban by Kathlyn Williams. Wallace Reid follows Mr. Beban in "The Hostage," a timely story written by Beulah Marie Dix, well known playwright and author of "Molloch."

Charles Kenyon is the author of "On the Level," in which Fannie Ward will appear. Pauline Frederick, leaving her rags and tatters far afield, appears as a society belle in a drama written especially for her by Hector Turnbull. It is called "Double Crossed," and has to do with political intrigue in high circles.

The next production in the list is "Exile," a story of the far east starring Madame Petrova, which has been staged in an extremely comprehensive and absorbingly interesting manner by Maurice Tourneur. Gelett Burgess and Carolyn Wells furnish the literary inspiration for Julian Eltinge's first screen appearance in "The Countess Charming." It is of course designed to give full scope to the remarkable dual personality of Mr. Eltinge, which arises from his ability as a feminine impersonator.

Local of A. E. A. Holds Meeting

The American Exhibitors' Association of Detroit held a lively meeting recently in the Hotel Statler. Need of a strong organization of motion picture exhibitors was urged by Peter J. Jeup, former treasurer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

"The moving picture business is being hampered at every step by uninformed persons and organizations and so-called reformers who are in the reforming game for a living," said Mr. Jeup. "The great educational work of moving pictures should not be held back by these disgruntled people."

The new local association will replace the former Detroit branch of the National league. Organization work was effected by Mr. Jeup. It has been proposed to extend the limits of the Detroit association to cover all Michigan.

The following officers were elected: President, Fred A. Schneider, who was president of the Detroit branch of the National Exhibitors' League; vice president, William E. Schuttenhelm; secretary, King Perry; treasurer, John Brennen.

Upon the completion of "Idolaters," Louise Glaum, Triangle's siren-in-chief, was presented by General Manager H. O. Davis with the entire Egyptian setting which was used to represent the apartment of the "vanity woman" in the play. Miss Glaum not only acted as star of this production but also assisted the art director in gaining the general effect of sybaritic luxury desired for the siren's boudoir.

Hatrick, International Secretary

E. B. Hatrick is now secretary of the International Film Service.

Mr. Hatrick's experience covers a wide range of newspaper and film activities. For several years he was a reporter, telegraph editor and bureau manager on the United Press Association, later editor of the Hearst syndicate in charge of the news photograph departments of the various Hearst newspapers.

E. B. Hatrick, secretary International Film Service.

After the establishment of the news picture organization, Mr. Hatrick conceived the idea of utilizing this institution for the gathering of an up-to-the-minute news film. A combinaation was made with Selig of Chicago and in 1914 the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial made its appearance on the screen. Later, when the International Film Service established its own system of exchanges, Mr. Hatrick organized and issued the Hearst International News Reel. He also, at this time, took charge of the organization of the laboratory work for the International, and the scenic, educational and cartoon reels. When the amalgamation was made between International and Pathe, Mr. Hatrick took charge of the work of combining the two staffs of field operators and of the gathering of all negatives for the Hearst-Pathe News.

J. L. Barnard with Cabanne

J. L. Barnard, familiarly known in Coast and New York film circles as "Barney," has joined the staff of William Christy Cabanne at Metro and is acting as assistant to that famous director in the production of his forthcoming multiple-reel feature, "Draft 258."

Mr. Barnard has had an unsually wide experience in motion pictures. He gave up his newspaper work to engage in film work under D. W. Griffith at the old Reliance studio and gained recognition as a writer, actor, assistant director and publicity writer.

After serving two years with Thomas H. Ince in the latter capacity he came to New York with that director and aided in putting on "Civilization" at the Criterion Theater in New York, at Cohan's Grand Opera House in Chicago and at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. Later he toured New York state with the first road company sent out by Mr. Ince.

During the past year he has increased his film experience by a number of road tours with spectacles of the film ad with spoken drama attractions. For some time he also represented the Triangle Film Company as film salesman.

Ethel Clayton's next play for World Pictures is due to be published late in September.

DAVIS STARTS NEW POLICY

"Yankee Plays for the World" Is Triangle Slogan—Big Campaign for Foreign Markets Inaugurated by General Manager

"Yankee plays for the world," is a new slogan soon to be adopted and carried out in policy by the Triangle Film Corporation as the result of the determination of General Manager and Vice-president H. O. Davis to invade the foreign exhibiting market on a larger scale and long different lines than ever before undertaken in the industry.

Decidedly an aggressive one, the campaign will be based upon Mr. Davis' personal investigations of the field and his belief that the war has stimulated rather than retarded the European and Oriental amusement demand. Distinctive Americanism will be so outstanding in the product that the stamp will be as recognizable as the brand.

"One of the chief reasons why American producers have failed in their efforts to get safe and sane export business," said Mr. Davis, "is that they have persisted in giving foreign exhibitors and foreign cinema patrons a product they can obtain of better quality and more cheaply at home. We have been trying to make French plays and Japanese plays and East Indian plays in the United States when we knew nothing of the customs, like and dislikes of these peoples. Even if this were not true, we have been offering the foreign consumer nothing that he could not obtain from the producers of his own country, and every nationality prefers to patronize home industry.

"It would be just as logical for American exhibitors to go to France, Japan and India for their American pictures as for foreign exhibitors to buy from us something they can get from their own producers.

"However, it is not reasonable to believe that American producers can compete with foreign producers in their own fields and the Triangle Film Corporation does not propose longer to try. We will endeavor to lend the industry in supplying the already brisk demand for a distinctly Yankee, if I may use the term, film play that does not encroach upon the foreign producer but fills a well established place of its own.

"The American business drama, the so-called western plays, the comedy drama and the good old 'melodrama' are four types of screen productions that the foreign producer cannot make as well as we can, and these forms of drama never fail to attract and retain the interest of the masses in almost every country under the sun."

Triangle's new policy, as outlined by Mr. Davis, also embraces many innovations in distribution and improvement of product which will be announced later.

Fairbanks in Heart of West

The Douglas Fairbanks special, consisting of two Pullmans and three freight cars, carrying Fairbanks' horse, "Smiles," that he rode in "Wild and Woolly," and twenty other horses to be used in the new Artcraft play, "Fancy Jim Sherwood," arrived in Laramie, Wyoming, last week. It is needless to say who will portray the name part in this Artcraft production.

The reception at the station was very elaborate, headed by the mayor and the members of the Chamber of Commerce. Fairbanks and his party were taken on an automobile tour through the city, stopping at the city hall, and other places of local prominence.

Newspapers Strong for Goldwyns

Philadelphia newspapers are saying many good things about Goldwyn pictures. A trade showing was held in the Quaker Town last week, when "Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's famous farce comedy, introducing Madge Kennedy to the screen, was disclosed to an invited audience of exhibitors.

Writing in The Public Ledger, C. Howard Bonte, the scholarly critic of that newspaper, said:

"Baby Mine" is a revelation of the high art of the screen . . The cast, headed by Madge Kennedy and John Cumberland, is virtually flawless. But it is in the latest methods of photography and lighting and the simple taste of the interiors that I took the most interest. The skill of great artists has produced these results.

In the Evening Ledger, Bushnell Dimond, the picture critic, said:

If "Baby Mine" is an index of future Goldwyn productions showmen may be assured of some capital stuff from these studios. The picture has many distinctions in addition to star and story . . . individuality in settings, and no one to date has built such imposing rooms and halls and "shot" the results from such effective points.

In the North American a critic wrote:

For technique, fittings, direction and players "Baby Mine" is a most creditable picture, and it looks as if Goldwyn was going to fulfill its promise about "different" photoplays.—

And Harry L. Knapp, critic of the Philadelphia Inquirer, in a separate article said:

Goldwyn Pictures are going to be the real surprise of the coming season at the theaters throughout America in which they will be shown.

Paralta Growing

Rumor has it that three new Paralta producing companies are being organized by Carl Anderson and his associates, which will give his company the control of a large number of star productions a year.

When the Paralta company took over the Clune studios in Hollywood, instead of providing J. Warren Kerrigan and Bessie Barriscale with separate establishments, as was at first planned, it was done because the establishment is sufficiently large to house at least five companies and give each practically separate accommodations.

The new glass covered stage, 50 by 150 feet, the great open air stages, 80 by 200 feet, and the 18 acres of field space for practical sets afford ample opportunity for the making of several big pictures at one time and it seems evident that Paralta intends to take full advantage of every opportunity to make its big studios as efficient as possible.

Some big announcements, it is said, will be made by Paralta in the next ten days.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" Praised

New York likes "Jack and the Beanstalk," William Fox's big new spectacle. It is running at the Globe Theater on Broadway.

Here are excerpts from some of the newspaper reviews:

"Jack not only ascended the beanstalk in the first of the Fox Kiddie Features, but he climbed right into the hearts of the audience."—New York Sun.

"It is another Fox winner. A marvelous production."—New York American.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" as a picture spectacle captured all the children present from six to sixty."—New York Herald.

"They say Broadway is blasé, but 'they' should have seen—and heard a Broadway gathering at the first showing of 'Jack and the Beanstalk.'"—New York World.

"The fairy tale as a piece of workmanship was admirably clear and varied."—New York Times.

"Delighted everyone."—New York Evening World.

K. E. S. E. Program for Fall

Here is a bird's eye view of the fall and early winter Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay releases:

August 27, "The Lady of the Photograph," Edison, featuring Shirley Mason; Sept. 3, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," Essanay, presenting Taylor Holmes; Sept. 10, "Pants," Essanay, in which charming little Mary McAlister will be starred; Sept. 17, title not yet given out: Sept. 24, "Men of the Desert," Essanay featuring Jack Gardner; Oct. 1, title not yet announced; Oct. 8, "A Fool for Luck," Essanay, presenting Taylor Holmes; Oct. 15, "Fibbers," Essanay, featuring Bryant Washburn; Oct. 22, title not yet announced; Oct. 29, novelty film, title to be announced later, Essanay, Marguerite Clayton; Nov. 4, title not yet decided upon; Nov. 11, "Two Bit Seats," Essanay, featuring Taylor Holmes.

In addition to the above releases, George Kleine has announced the following releases of the Edison Conquest Programs.

AUGUST 11, CONQUEST PROGRAM NO. 5

The Little Chevalier, featuring Shirley Mason, 4 reels.
Birds of a Far Off Sea, 500 feet.
A Vanishing Race, 500 feet.
Soldiers of the Sea, 1,000 feet.
Gold and Diamond Mines of South Africa, 500 feet.
The Dinosaur and the Baboon, 500 feet.

AUGUST 18, CONQUEST PROGRAM NO. 6

The Customary Two Weeks, featuring Kathryn Adams, Albert Ellis, Herbert Evans and Joseph Burke, 4 reels.
The Story of Plymouth Rock, 1,000 feet.
The Grand Canyon of Arizona, 500 feet.
The Four R's, 500 feet.
Nature's Perfect Thread-Spinner, 500 feet.
The Magic of Spring, 500 feet.

AUGUST 25. CONQUEST PROGRAM NO. 7

T. Haviland Hicks, Freshman, 3 reels.
Gallegher, 2 reels.
Turning Out Silver Bullets, 1 reel.
Young Salts, and The Holy Land, combined in 1 reel.

SEPTEMBER 1, CONQUEST PROGRAM NO. 8

The Princess' Necklace, featuring Katherine Townsend and Walter McDonald, 4 reels.
The Puzzling Billboard, 1 reel.
The Brook, Woodcraft for Boys, and Shipping Live Fish in Sealed Bottles, combined in 1 reel.
The Blind Fiddler, 1 reel.

Some of the country's most noted authors are contributing stories to be filmed in these Conquest Programs. Many theaters throughout the country have set aside one day each week for the Conquest Program which is composed of seven reels. In referring to these programs Mr. Kleine's publicity department describes them as "Films for the Whole Family." As the titles indicate, they are made up of dramas, comedies, scenic, travelogue, legendry, cartoons, scientific and educational.

Conquest Pictures appeal strongly to the better class of theaters by reason of the high calibre of the entertainment provided.

Big Vitagraph Serial Shipped

Vitagraph announces that shipment of prints on "The Fighting Trail," the big outdoor serial which is scheduled to start on September 10, are already under way, the films for the first eight episodes having been shipped during the last to its twenty-six distributing branches.

The object of sending the prints out so far ahead of the release date, it is asserted, is due to the desire on the part of Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, to have the exhibitors see the episodes before they book the serial. Mr. Smith has let it be known that he considers "The Fighting Trail," in fifteen episodes, one of the most finished pieces of work Vitagraph ever turned out and also that he believes it to be the most exciting motion picture feature that has ever been put on the market.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

Magazine Issues Film Novelty

MOTION pictures are, after all, an extension of the publishing business. Fiction, news, and matters of general interest such as travel, have long been presented via screen as well as press.

The latest development along this line is 12 single reel subjects issued at monthly intervals by Photoplay Magazine and to be known as "Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement." This will be in the nature of a decided film novelty. The subjects will be marketed through state rights buyers and exhibitors controlling large chains of houses. James R. Quirk, general manager of Photoplay Publishing Company of Chicago, is in charge of the "celluloid supplement."

The new state rights offering will consist of a collection of pictures depicting the actors and actresses of cinemaland in off-the-screen poses. They will be shown in their homes, with their pets, enjoying their favorite forms of recreation, making up in their dressing rooms for important roles, and material of the nature published by the popular Photoplay Magazine itself.

Just as a sample of what exhibitors may expect, one issue of Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement as now "Out" will present views of Mae Marsh in her own home, a glimpse of Henry Walthall searching for clams, pictures of Charlie Chaplin and some of the Keystone comedians as they appeared in a recent Red Cross base-ball game in Los Angeles, Edith Storey with her mother, the Drews at work in their library on a forthcoming Drew comedy, and Bessie Love at the Triangle "lot" with a lot of "extras." Each release will contain views of a half dozen or more popular stars and undoubtedly will prove a drawing card second to none when exhibited.

Mr. Quirk is already receiving applications for territory on Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement from state right buyers and exhibitors who are seeking exclusive rights to these single reel subjects in their localities.

Standard Film Buys Christies

Some new evidence of the great 1917 demand for comedy film is to be had in the announcement by the Standard Film Corporation, of which R. C. Cropper is president, that it has purchased distributing rights in the well-known Christie Comedies for the states of Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. These are a class of photoplays known as "society comedies," having as their principal ingredients youthful attractive players, including in the case of the Standard's purchase, Betty Compson, Neal Burns and Billie Rhodes, and depending for their appeal on a certain freshness and breeziness of plot rather than upon the "Eternal Slapstick."

The Standard Film Corporation is the largest independent film exchange in the middle West, with offices at Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omaha and St. Louis. Phil L. Ryan, the sales manager, is at present making a flying visit to the St. Louis office, as an exceptionally strong demand is expected in the territory of that office for the Billy West and the newly-purchased Christie Comedies. He is conferring with "Barney" Fegan, the genial and highly efficient manager who has succeeded J. Erwin Dodson in the St. Louis territory of the Standard.

More Big Seligs Coming

The All Star Features Company, of Jacksonville, Fla., are the latest buyers of territorial rights for "The Garden of Allah" having purchased the rights to the states of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Following the exploitation of state rights for "The Garden of Allah" the Selig Polyscope Company is turning its attention to several other big features which have been completed or are nearing completion. While William N. Selig has not definitely announced his plans concerning these latest features, it is reasonable to presume that several such as "Who Shall Take My Life," "The Railroader," and "The City of Purple Dreams," may be marketed along the lines of state rights successes such as "The Crisis," Beware of Strangers," and "The Garden of Allah."

Buys Mexican Rights

Harry Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., announces that he has just disposed of the Mexican rights of several of that concern's pictures, and that they will be handled by the Compania Latino Cinematographica, whose New York office is at 145 W. 45th Street.

The deal has just been closed after a lengthy negotiation between Mr. Raver and Felipe Palenque, president of the Compania. The two productions involved are "Rosie O'Grady," in which Viola Dana is starred, and "The Golden God," an Alma Hanlon picture.

These will be released through Mexico immediately.

In the United States Apollo pictures are released on Art Dramas Program.

Handled by Chicago Exchange

Griever & Herz, whose offices are on the fourth floor of the Consumers Building, Chicago, have acquired a good list of productions which they are handling on the state rights basis.

These include the two-reel Midget comedies made by the Greater Pictures Company of New York, the bi-weekly Terry Human Interest Reels, the monthly Terry Feature Burlesques, American Bioscope "Screen News," Emerald's feature, "The Slacker's Heart," and the big Arizona production, "Should She Obey?"

This live exchange is also arranging for several other specialties for the near future.

Handle Travel Film

October 1 has been set as the release date for the sixteen reels of travel picture made by Rex Beach and Dr. Edward A. Salisbury on their 12,000 mile motor boat trip to the waters of South and Central Aemrica and the Carribean Sea for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin exhibitors. The feature is handled by Unity

Photoplay Company, Chicago, for this territory. An elaborate press sheet and numerous business getting ideas have been provided the exhibitors in connection with the picture which will be released one reel each week.

"Deemster" Stock High

The Arrow Film Corporation, through its president, W. E. Shallenberger, is meeting with remarkable success in disposing of rights to "The Deemster."

Last week, two important territories, comprising eight states were sold. D. P. Davis, acting for the All Star Features, Inc., Jacksonville, Fla., bought the rights for North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi, while A. H. Blank, president of the Mid West Photoplay Corp., of Des Moines, purchased rights for Iowa and Nebraska.

Horsley State-Rights Feature

Mary MacLaren photoplays made under her new contract with David Horsley will be sold on the state-right basis. David Horsley, in New York, has closed negotiations in four states for the first of her new seven reel features, "The Counterfeit Soul." Mr. Horsley reports contracts signed for New York, New Jersey, New England and Pennslyvania.

Kane Selznick General Manager

Arthur S. Kane has been made the general manager of Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc. He will undertake the organization and opening of several new branches for Selznick interests. A new Washington branch has already been opened.

The Selznick forces are getting ready for an energetic campaign in the fall, and the new general executive is rapidly shaping his organization for the rush of business which the Selznick salesmen confidently believe will greet the release of their new productions.

Mr. Kane, during the past year and a half, has been in charge as district manager of eleven western states, comprising the western territory of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, whose Denver, Seattle and San Francisco offices he established. For two years prior to this, Mr. Kane was assistant general manager of the World Film Corporation, conducting business under his own name in New York City. Mr. Kane was also the general manager of the Eclectic Film Company (Pathe Freres), and during the year that he was with the Pathe concern established its entire system of branch offices and exchanges. These ventures in the east followed many years in the picture industry in the west.

Vivian Moses with Selznick

A change in the office staff of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises brings Vivian M. Moses to the position of publicity manager, succeeding Randolph Bartlett, who has joined the editorial staff of Photoplay Magazine. In the pages of the popular magazines, Vivian Moses' name has been a familiar signature to contributions of verse, special articles and criticisms and articles dealing with the drama.

"Every Girl's Dream" Finished

By dint of the steadiest work at the William Fox Studios, June Caprice has finished "Every Girl's Dream," under the direction of Harry Millarde. The picture will be released on August 27.

TO PRESENT TIMELY THEMES

Allan Dwan Urges Policy of Specializing in Up-to-the-Minute Plays Dealing with American Life

Allan Dwan, who supervises all Triangle productions made in the east, is gradually putting into operation a distinct policy of picture making, which he correlates with the editorial policy of the Saturday Evening Post insofar as he aims to specialize in pictures treating of tmely issues touching on the every day life of American people.

There is no intention of making costume plays, vampire pictures or historical productions at the Yonkers studio, over which Dwan is director general. It is Dwan's belief that there are enough live issues in the present day life of average humanity to make dramatic material of the first order, and his beliefs are being substantiated by the excellent scenarios which have come to his attention during the past month. At a time when motion picture directors as a whole are complaiing of a dearth of photoplays, this supervisor is quoted as saying that his only difficulty is in making a selection from so many available offerings.

As indicative of his general policy of production, "The Food Gamblers," recently issued, is a striking example. It is entertainment that treats constructively of a national evil, and one which is receiving the attention not only of one class of people but of virtually every family in America.

"A Successful Failure," "The Man Who Made Good," and "American, That's All," three other productions from the Yonkers studio, all treat of some particular phase of business life as faced by young America.

"Grafters," which is scheduled for the August 26 program is an amusing arraignment of the idle youth who believes he knows all the tricks of business.

Dwan does not take up masculine problems exclusively as demonstrated by the announcement that "The Man Hater," the Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, is shortly to make its appearance in picture form with Winifred Allen in the leading role. "The Man Hater" was published in the Post on June 9. It will be out in picture form on September 2.

Another Saturday Evening Post story now in the course of production is "Cassidy," by Larry Evans. A number of other plays are being put into production at this studio, and all of them are said to have subjects of actual news value.

"The scenario writer who reads the newspapers and takes his theme from current events is the man whose work will interest us." Mr. Dwan is quoted as saying. "Only the fresh, live issues of the moment, such as might receive place on the first page of a metropolitan newspaper, will be considered. It is our intention to focus the camera upon American life of today, catching, as much as possible, the color, dramatic quality and romance with which it is filled."

Loew Signs for Conquest Programs

Marcus Loew has signed, in behalf of eight New York theaters of his circuit, to show Conquest Picture Programs. The theaters selected by Mr. Loew to show these pictures are: The New York Theater, Greeley Square, National, Orpheum, Boulevard and Avenue B.

A new Pathe serial, "The Seven Pearls," will be released early in September, according to a decision just reached by Pathe and the International.

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Build Theater for Soldiers

At Junction City, Kansas, two new theaters are to be constructed within a short time to furnish amusement to the soldiers at Fort Riley. The Columbia Realty & Amusement Company, of Kansas City, is to erect a show house to be known as the Columbia, on Tenth and Washington streets. It will be 93 by 139 feet and will have a seating capacity of 2,200, making it the second largest in the state, it is said. The interior decorations are to be the same as in the Garden Theater at Kansas City.

A theater also is to be built on East Seventh street, the site for this having been purchased several weeks ago.

Bert R. Gallupp, of Kansas City, has leased the opera house and a crew of workmen are busy preparing it for speedy opening as a vaudeville theater.

Interesting Chicago Presentation

Selig's "The Garden of Allah," at the Colonial Theater, one of the most beautiful houses in the "Loop," recently had its Chicago premiere. Despite the heat, the drama gained in popularity day by day and the Edmund M. Allen Company, owners of the territorial rights for eight states, cashed in on the run.

No time nor expense were spared in staging and exploiting the production. Twenty sheets and eight sheets were used almost exclusively in billing Chicago, and seven hundred twenty sheet stands alone were used.

The lobby display in front of the theater was particularly attractive. The pictures and lettering were in oil colors and two sets of lobby display easel frames were utilized. There was also an illuminated cutout of a scene in "The Garden of Allah."

A camel driven by an Arab attracted a crowd before the theater in Randolph street and the young lady ushers were garbed after the mysterious manner of the Orient.

The special musical score supplied by William N. Selig was used at the four performances daily, afternoons 1 to 5, evenings 7 to 11. Before the performance a dozen or more Arabs appeared and while one sang a song of the desert the others bowed toward the east. The lights were finally dimmed on the desert set and the song died out and the film drama began.

The Chicago newspaper critics were requested to review the picture at the first night's showing, cards of invitation being sent to them, each card being good for two choice seats. It was an improvement from the usual review for the press in some dark projection room and without music.

Some Problems in Management

Some of the problems of theater management are discussed for the benefit of patrons in the organ of the John H. Kunsky enterprises. The article was written by Harry R. Guest, editor of the interesting weekly magazinelet. It follows:

A downtown theater is governed by diffierent rules than those that apply at a residential theater. Obviously, this must be so. The residential theater becomes the neighborhood meeting place. The manager and his assistants learn to know the people of the district as they come regularly to his playhouse, and friends use the neighborhood theater as a sort of social center, which does away with the "calling" obligation in some cases, and serves to make friends of folks who live in the same district. Therefore it is both possible and wise—indeed it becomes a part of the service that the theater is designed to render—for certain privileges to be granted to the patrons of the neighborhood theater that are not allowed in the downtown theater.

Two letters that prompt these remarks came to the editor's desk last week. A gentleman waiting for a lady at the Madison felt that he should have been allowed to enter the theater inasmuch as the last performance was more than half finished. In the neighborhood theater this privilege is granted, because the people are nearly all known to the attendants who can in many instances mention the patron's name; but in a downtown theater, where the patronage is never the same and people of all classes and all stations seek admittance, this waiting privilege inside the theater proper is not granted to anybody at any time.

The other letter comes from a gentleman who was asked to put on his coat in the Madison theater during the recent hot spell. This is another downtown ruling If one man is allowed to remove his coat every man has the same right. And were the rule not enforced, a downtown theater might become a place where refined people would not care to be in warm weather, for who is to judge on the cleanliness and sweetness of a coat removed.

There are many problems to be met in the management of a high class theater, but the comfort and protection of the greatest number is the rule that the careful manager keeps in mind.

Exhibitor Gambles $1,000 on Unmade Picture

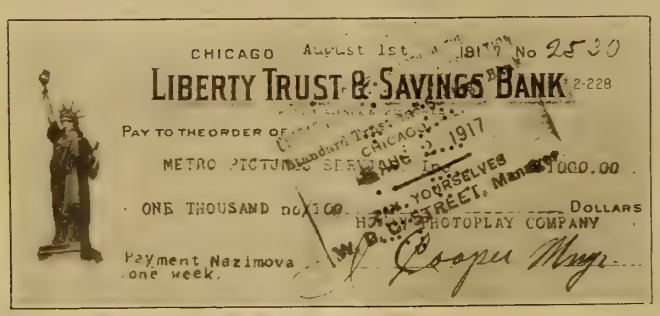
It is very unusual for an exhibitor, no matter how bulging the state of his exchequer may be, to gamble a thousand dollars on a picture that he has never seen, and which, furthermore, has not even been started yet.

However, this is exactly what J. Cooper, manager of the Twentieth Century Theater, at Twelfth street and Homan avenue, Chicago, did. He sailed into the Chicago Metro office recently and handed over a check for a thousand dollars as coolly as though he had just come in to pass the time of day.



"But, what's it for?" gasped Max Levy. "You don't owe us anything."

"Oh, that! That's just so I can get in on the first run of Nazimova's next picture."

"I know, but my dear fellow," gurgled Mr. Levy, who handles the Metro products in Mr. Cooper's territory, "the picture isn't made yet. In fact, it isn't even started. Why the check?"

"That's all right. Keep the check. All you have to do is to let me have Nazimova's next picture for a week as soon as it comes to town and I'll be satisfied. She played in 'War Brides,' and the thing was tremendously popular in my district. The people packed my house to the doors all the time it ran. So I'm not taking any chances on her next picture. I don't know what it will be and I don't care. Just give me credit for having paid for it," and Mr. Cooper sailed out.

So it's up to Madame Nazimova. One man has already bet a thousand iron men on her. Now she's got to see that he doesn't lose his money.

Strand Theater to Give Symphony Concert Daily

Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand Theater, New York, announces that the Strand Concert Orchestra which now numbers forty musicians, will be enlarged to full symphonic strength, and be known in the future as The Strand Symphony Orchestra.

Daily symphony concerts of one hour duration will be inaugurated Sunday, September 16, and will become a part of the regular Strand program from that date. The concerts will commence daily at 2:15 and at 2:30 on Sundays and will precede the usual presentation of motion pictures and vocal and instrumental soloists.

The owners of the theater attribute the wonderful success of that institution largely to the excellent musical program presented in conjunction with the pictures. The orchestra has been gradually enlarged and special efforts have been made to secure the best vocal and instrumental talent obtainable. When The Strand was first opened, in April, 1914, the orchestra was composed of sixteen members. This number was doubled in less than two years and when Mr. Edel took charge of the theater a year ago the orchestra was enlarged to number forty pieces, including the organists.

Mr. Edel was the first to put a large orchestra into a moving picture theater. In 1910, when he was given charge of the Alhambra Theater in Cleveland, Ohio, he had an orchestra of fifteen pieces. He has always been a firm believer in good music as a means of entertainment. Regarding his latest innovation he said:

"I am not inaugurating the presentation of daily symphony concerts in order to increase attendance to our performances. Everyone who visits the Strand must realize that one of our greatest problems is to take care of our patrons. We play to a daily average of 12,000 people. My greatest desire is to give the public the best entertainment at the lowest prices possible, and I think that by giving daily symphony concerts, as fine as the most discriminate music lover could wish, we are presenting the ideal form of entertainment, pleasing those who are familiar with symphonic music and cultivating and educating the ones who are not. I have met very few persons who do not love music, and on the other hand, I know that there are thousands of people in New York who seldom have an opportunity to hear real good music on account of prohibitive prices. In this connection, let me say that although the symphony concerts will increase the expenses of the Strand Theater over $35,000.00 a year, our prices will remain the same—15, 25 and 50 cents—and the patrons who come to hear the symphony concerts are entitled to stay as long as they please and attend the regular Strand show which follows immediately after the concert."

Suffragettes Use Films

The New York State Woman Suffrage Party has adopted films to aid its cause. The feature picture has been made for the organization by the S. S. Film Company of New York. This concern is making the film gratis for the good of the cause.

Charles D. Touchon is now connected with the Dallas Goldwyn exchange, acting as assistant to Manager L. B. Reny.

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

MANAGER R. D. SHIRLEY of the Muse, a large downtown theater in Omaha, Nebraska, is finding street car cards a successful advertising medium. He has tried them for a year and considers them nearly as effective as newspaper advertising. When the cards are changed weekly the service is $60, and monthly, $150.

Billie Burke, the clever comedienne, is making her debut at the Strand, New York, this week in her first Paramount picture. The film in which she appears is called "The Mysterious Miss Terry."

"On Trial," the first motion picture bought by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, made its initial appearance in Seattle last week at the Jensen and Von Herberg houses. They are the Seattle members of the circuit.

A fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the Freebody Park Theater at Newport, Rhode Island, last week and occasioned a loss estimated at $20,000. There was no one in the building at the time of ignition and the cause of the blaze is still a mystery.

William H. Swanson of the Swanson Theaters, Salt Lake City, has been appointed to supervise the motion picture publicity for the next Liberty Loan campaign for the state of Utah. Mr. Swanson has already been appointed chairman of the national motion picture committee for Utah by Mr. Brady.

Guy L. Wonders of the Wilson Theater, Baltimore, Maryland, who was so conspicuous in the formation of the American Exhibitors' Association in Chicago, and who was made its vice-president, was recently fined $25 and costs on the charge of failing to remove a censored part of "Atonement" before showing it.

Dick Travers, of Essanay fame, dropped in at the Cozy Theater at Tulsa, Oklahoma, last week while "The Phantom Buccanneer" was playing. In fact, he dropped in during each performance for two days and delighted people with his short talks. Mr. Travers was on his way to New York, where he is to appear in Lasky productions.

G. F. Spaeth, of the Fuller Theater, Kalamazoo, Michigan, started a solid two weeks' run of Greater Vitagraph pictures, beginning August 6. In starting the innovation he planned a newspaper campaign in which he used half pages each day in the Kalamazoo papers.

Thomas D. Soriero, manager of the Park Theater, Boston, has just concluded an advertising stunt which made such a hit, that in baseball, it would be considered a home run. The campaign started with the appearance of Muriel Ostriche, World star, at the theater. Then Manager Soriero advertised that he would give to the girl bearing the closest resemblance to Miss Ostriche a china set of 61 pieces which he placed on display in the lobby of his theater. The competition that developed was surprising, and Mr. Soriero got a lot of newspaper and tongue advertising, besides having his house filled at every performance.

Ingenious methods of advertising have been employed by Metro Film Corporation in getting "The Slacker," featuring Emily Stevens, before the public. One of the most unusual methods of catching people's attention with publicity about the film has been to drop it on their heads from an airplane. In Boston a young aviator was employed to fly over Boston and drop paper "bombs" on the folks below.

The Garfield Theater, 2844 Madison street, Chicago, has a subtle plea for clean pictures on the cover of its last weekly bulletin. It says: "If you have seen Douglas Fairbanks in "Wild and Woolly" we hope you enjoyed it. The surest way to encourage productions of similar wholesome character is to tell your friends about it so they can come in and see it, too."

The announcement of new organizations thus far completed or old groups reorganized as component parts of the American Exhibitors' Association are: Michigan State chapter, Detroit local, Chicago local, Buffalo local, and Indiana State chapter. General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn of Indiana has taken up offices in the Times Building, New York, and is pushing the work of mobilizing exhibitors under the new banner.

Manager Woodhouse of the Lagoon Theater, Minneapolis, is offering a prize for the best name submitted for a musical composition composed by Frank Pallma, director of the Jazz band which bears his name and which pours forth strains for the edification of Lagoon patrons. The contest is bringing forth a lot of names that musical compositions never thought of bearing before.

Gumbiner Brothers, who own a chain of theaters in Chicago and other cities, have added to their list by the purchase of the Orpheum Theater in Hammond. The theater, which was constructed in 1911, at a cost of about $100,000, has a seating capacity of 1,200 and has equipment for vaudeville as well as moving pictures. The new owners will make material improvements in the theater.

P. E. Coe, manager of the Louisiana Theater, at Baton Rouge, in getting out his last week's program addressed the following spicy remarks to patrons of his theater:

Somebody has said: "The greatest preacher of them all is the ant—and he says nothing! But then the ant has nothing to advertise. Theater Louisiana offers a good show every day. The best in pictures perfectly presented and projected. A comfortable house at all times. Typhoon ventilation; air changed twice every minute; fresh air, too, from fifty feet above the street. And last but not least, courtesy at all times and a marvelous ability to listen to criticism—sometimes called "kicks." These we do not get often, but they are appreciated when they come, and finally, be sure of this, that we are striving to please, and we thank you most heartily for your generous patronage in the past.

Miss Myrtle Stedman has been appearing at various picture theaters along an itinerary that was mapped out for her some time ago. The Imperial Theater at Great Falls, Montana, is the last picture institution to show its patrons this celebrated actress in the flesh and on the screen for the same dime. Miss Stedman's musical comedy experience make her an excellent entertainer on the stage as well as on celluloid.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Philadelphia through its secretary has announced the formation of a committee on motion pictures. The committee is to investigate the photoplay situation in the city and to provide suitable films for community centers, schools and churches. It was said also that it intended to inform parents and teachers concerning the standards of the motion picture business.

A move to eliminate paper displays the size of a house has been started by Minneapolis exhibitors. They are following the lead of the theater owners of other cities in cutting down on paper costs, and expect, by eliminating three and six-sheet displays, to effect a real saving in money, besides aiding the national move to conserve paper stock. One-sheets and photos are to take the place of the larger displays in the theater lobbies.

A change in the policy of the Standard Theater, Cleveland, has been announced by Manager Joseph Grossman. He has discontinued the regular Fox program of fifty-two pictures a year and in their stead has booked the Standard de luxe Fox pictures for one year. Despite the increase in cost Mr. Grossman does not intend to raise his admission price, which will still remain at 25 cents for afternoon and evening performances.

At a meeting of the Philadelphia local of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John O'Donnell; first vice-president, S. B. Blatt; second vice-president, J. J. Conway; secretary, C. H. Goodwin; assistant secretary, B. Schindler, and treasurer, H. Green. An intensive campaign has been started to increase the membership of the league during the coming months.

Four prominent Cleveland women, "home sentinels" of the National Defense Council, spoke in seven different Cleveland theaters last week, propounding the cause of the present war situations in localities where many foreign-born citizens live and where a certain amount of misapprehension is apt to exist. The Ideal, Case, Gordon Park, Lark, Grand Central, Market Square, and Luna were the theaters at which the women appeared.

The Pearl Theater, Hutchinson, Kansas, was badly damaged by a fire recently which broke out in a pile of rubbish while the house was being redecorated and remodeled. The rear of the building was completely destroyed and the stage setting, fixtures, chairs, etc., were consumed in a fire which raged for an hour before it could be stopped. Manager Featherby and his family have apartments above the theater and he had a narrow escape in rescuing his wife.

The Bijou Theater, Nashville, Tennessee, is one of the finest houses in the south devoted entirely to negro patronage. It is the black house of quality in Nashville, situated in the center of an extensive negro district. The Bijou seats 1,500 and is operated by the Bijou Amusement Company, with Milton Starr as manager. The building was formerly used as a first class road house for whites, but is proving very successful in its new role.

According to a decision which has been handed down by Supreme Court Justice Ordway in New York, moving pictures of current events cannot be regarded as newspapers, and are therefore not entitled to the constitutional liberty guaranteed the press. The decision became apparent when the Judge granted a temporary injunction restraining a moving picture concern from showing a picture in which a woman lawyer was filmed against her wishes.

The new Rialto Theater, under course of construction at Ninth and G streets, Washington, D. C., promises to be one of the finest in the south. It will have a twenty-five piece orchestra, seats for nearly thirty-five hundred people, and appointments as rich as those of a Fifth Avenue home, New York. There will be a large electric sign on top of the building supporting a huge illuminated clock. The Rialto is being built by the Tom Moore Amusement Enterprises.

Two exhibitors have been appointed to the censor board in Portland, Oregon, by Mayor George A. Baker. He has appointed seven, which is more than the ordinance on this subject allows. He expects, however, to amend the ordinance so as to provide for the increase in membership of the reviewing body. Nick Pierong of the Strand and Charles W. Meighan of the People's Amusement Company were the exhibitors appointed by Mayor Baker.

Louis Rosenbaum, manager of the Princess Theater at Little Rock, Arkansas, has stopped showing pictures on Sunday. After keeping his house open for three Sundays he was finally arrested on a charge of Sabbath breaking, and is now awaiting for his case to come up in the circuit court. Thirty members of the International Alliance of Theatrical State Employes and Moving Picture Operators signed a petition favoring Sunday picture shows in Little Rock, but their plea was voted down by the city council.

The Strand Theater in St. Paul has been purchased by Finkelstein & Ruben. Commencing Sunday, August 19, it will be opened as the New Garrick Theater. This makes Finkelstein & Ruben's tenth theater in St. Paul and Minneapolis. The New Garrick will be operated as a sister theater to the Garrick in Minneapolis, and will show first run Paramount and Artcraft pictures. The opening picture will be "The Little American."

The Man Inside the Booth

Doors in the Booth

I am getting ready to open a theater and I would like a little information as to the requirements for the doors in the booth. I have had a metal lined booth put in but did not have any doors put on the openings. The city fire chief says that I must have doors on these openings, and have a vent pipe run from the booth to the outside air. Is this required by law? If it is required, will you please tell me how to install them. There are three openings in the booth facing the screen and then there is one facing the lobby, besides the regular door to enter the booth. The other show here in town does not have these doors and I want my place to be right, and if I need them I want to put them on. Please let me know as soon as possible.—V. E. S., Kansas.

By all means you should have all openings to the booth covered with metal doors and these doors so constructed that they will close by gravity when released. They should be held open by a fusible link made from film. The doors or shutters should lap over the sides of the openings at least one and a half inches and should be made from the same gauge iron as that which is used in the booth, which should be not less than twenty gauge. They must be arranged to slide in metal grooves without binding. These grooves should extend below the openings at least three inches and extend above the opening twice the height of the opening plus three inches. There should be a stop placed at the top and bottom of the grooves. All shutters and doors in the booth should be held open by a master cord so arranged that it will have a link six inches over each top magazine and one over the rewind bench and one over the film box. Take four strips of film six inches long and punch a hole in them one inch from each end. Use a set of these at each place mentioned above for the fusible link. There is a regular fusible link made to melt at 160 degrees Fahr. but the film link will give better results and work faster than the regular link, and time counts in a film fire. The vent pipe should extend from the top of the booth through the roof about three or four feet and should have a hood at the top to keep out the rain. This vent pipe should be made from the same gauge iron as the booth and should be properly insulated from all wood work or other inflammable material. The vent pipe should be not less than fifteen inches in diameter and if possible should have a small ventilating fan installed in it to help carry the heat and gas from the booth to the outside air. This fan is not required by law but you will find it a great help to the operator in the booth. If the theater is arranged so that the vent pipe cannot be taken out through the roof then it should be taken out at the nearest point that is available. The laws of different states vary as to the requirements of the booths so for that reason I would advise you to write to the state fire marshal of your state and he will give you a copy of the laws and requirements so that you will know just what you have to do to have your booth pass inspection. In the smaller cities and some of the larger ones, too, this inspection work is left to the city fire chief or some of his assistants and as a general rule their information on the requirements of a booth is very vague. By all means have your booth and theater up to all the requirements of the law and then if you are unfortunate enough to have a fire you will be able to protect the patrons of your house. Never mind what the other fellow does—have your place right.

Having Trouble with Gears

I am an operator and have charge of two Simplex machines in my booth. The machines have been running for over three years and have never had any repairs on them outside of new sprockets, but I am having trouble with one of them now. The gears in the shutter shaft have worn so badly that they will have to be replaced. There is so much lost motion in them that the shutter streaks all the time. Would you advise me to try to change them, or would you have the manager send the head to the factory? He has ordered the gears and they are here, but as I have never had any experience on this kind of work I did not know what to do about it. We have no extra head to use and there is no repair shop in the town, so for that reason I would like to do the work if possible. I have a catalog on the repair parts of the machine but it does not give any instructions as to repairs. The parts that are worn are G 116 G and G 117 G. If you can tell me how to replace them I will be ever so grateful.—L. S., West Virginia.

Your letter with stamped envelope for reply was received and I wish to advise you and all other readers of this department that all answers to questions will appear in the columns of MOTOGRAPHY and that none will be privately answered. There is no fee charged for answers to questions in this department, and all questions and answers must come through this department. In regard to the trouble that you are having, I have always contended that all repair work outside of emergency work should be sent to the factory or to some first-class repair man; but there are exceptions to all rules as in your case, so if you cannot get another head to use while yours is being repaired then there is only one thing to do and that is try to repair it yourself. I believe that if your manager would write to the Simplex Company they would provide an extra head for you to use. If you want to replace the parts yourself then proceed as follows: To remove the complete governor or vertical shaft S-443-G loosen set screw in hub of gear G-143-G, then remove set screw in governor link holder and grasping gear G-138-G pull upwards. Vertical shaft S-443-G will come out, thus releasing the other parts.

To remove spiral gear G-116-G, follow the above instructions; then remove set screw holding collar C-193-G and pull the shaft out to the right.

To remove spiral gear G-117-G remove set screw out of end of gear. Spindle will slip out to the left, thus releasing the gear.

To replace the parts simply reverse the above instructions.

If you will write to the Precision Machine Company Inc., 317 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, they will forward you an instruction book on the Simplex projector which will explain to you the different parts and the repair of them. The above instructions are taken from this book.

Thinks Operators Should Join League

I am a reader of your paper, also the News, and I notice that Brother Sherman has started a Mis-frame League. I think that this is a fine idea and that every operator should join the league. But I want to enter a protest against another trouble we operators have that is in my mind just as important as a mis-frame; and that is the trouble operators are having with the service furnished to them for use by the several film exchanges. I am a member of the I. A. and I do not see why some action could not be taken to compel the film exchanges to send out their film with the proper amount of titles and subtitles on each reel. I had a six-reel show yesterday and the longest title on any of the reels was eleven frames. Two of the reels had no title at all and were not even marked. I had to run through these two reels to tell which one to use first. The service that we are using is about thirty days old, and if film comes to me in this condition at thirty days, I can imagine what shape that it is in at sixty and seventy days. I have complained to my manager and he in turn has taken it up with the film exchange, but it does not seem to do any good. About half way through one reel it had been patched and whoever patched it reversed one end of the reel and I had to stop and change the film. I do not see why something cannot be done by the operators with this kind of a firm. The film exchanges raise an awful howl if their film is punched or damaged in any way, but still they expect the operator to put up with any old kind of junk from them. I for one think that the operators should take some kind of action on this subject. What do you think? I would like to hear from the other operators of this department with their suggestions.—E. J. D., Chicago, Ill.

I agree with you in your protest about the condition of the service that is being sent out by some of the exchanges but I do not know what to offer as a remedy. The exchange managers as a rule are trying every way that they know to improve their service but there are some few vest pocket exchanges that will send out anything as long as it looks like film. If any of the operators have anything to suggest I am sure that every one is interested and would be glad to hear from them.

A settlement of difference over the wage scale and general conditions between the Exhibitors' League and Local No. 194 of Indianapolis has been made. Local 194 has been granted a split shift in all houses running more than four hours, also the operators have an option on the carrying of film. They do not have to carry film unless the pay for the same is satisfactory to the operator. A substantial increase in pay was also granted to the operators. An arbitration board went into session on Monday, August 13, but on Monday evening at the regular meeting of the local the operators voted to walk off the jobs as individuals unless their demands were granted. On Tuesday, August 14, the exhibitors got out an injunction which was served on the officers of the local and some of the members to prevent them from calling a strike but the message came too late and quite a few of the men did not show up for work on Wednesday. An agreement was reached on Thursday. Second Vice-president William F. Canavan of the I. A. conducted the negotiations for the operators, assisted by J. O. Benner, business agent of Local No. 194.

Print of First Kerrigan Picture

Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, and other officers and directors of that corporation, have seen a run of the first print of J. Warren Kerrigan's production of Peter B. Kyle's "A Man's Man." They express their approbation in very enthusiastic terms.

"A Man's Man" will be released through the Triangle Distributing Corporation in September. Prior to the release a special invitation showing will be made.

NEW KELLERMANN FILM

Picture to Be called "Queen of the Sea"—Work on Big Feature to Begin This Week

"Queen of the Sea" is the title upon which William Fox, the motion picture impresario, has decided for the new sub-sea photoplay in which Annette Kellermann will once more display her unequalled aquatic talents.

Weeks have been spent in arranging the details of the production preliminary to the actual filming. The script has been completed, most of the casting has been done, and the "locations" have been selected.

Miss Kellermann and a large company of players are now at Bar Harbor, Maine, and work begins this week on the new subject under the direction of John G. Adolfi, one of the best known screen generals in the industry.

George Bronson-Howard, author and plawright of note, wrote the story and the action will be entirely different from that of "A Daughter of the Gods," the tremendously successful fantasy in which Miss Kellermann also had the chief part.

In the making of "Queen of the Sea," Mr. Fox will have the co-operation and assistance of the Smithsonian Institute and the United States Fisheries Commission at Washington, and the British Museum. Scenes will be taken at the bottom of the ocean by means of a patented submarine apparatus which will furnish something extraordinary and unique in the way of entertainment.

It is Mr. Fox's intention that "Queen of the Sea" shall surpass not only any cinema he himself has been responsible for, but shall be absolutely the last word in producing for the silent stage.

That he is aiming at a high mark is shown by his statement that "Queen of the Sea" must eclipse such features as "The Honor System," "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "The Conqueror."

Elfie Fay to Smile Into Camera

It is rumored that Elfie Fay who returned recently from a five years' tour of the world at the head of her own company, will shortly appear before the camera.

Miss Fay was in several conferences during the past week with C. H. Christie, of the Christie Film Company and Don Bartlett, publicity man and scenario writer, but when queried later as to her future plans, refused to affirm or deny the report that she is to appear in a series of comedy-dramas under the direction of Al Christie.

It is significant, however, that immediately after Mr. Christie's last conference with Miss Fay and Bartlett, he jumped a train for California.

Best known as the star of "The Belle of Avenue A," Elfie Fay was starred in a number of musical plays, probably the best known being "The Southerners" and "The Land of Nod."

Conklin Now with Ince

William Conklin who played the leading role in "Golden Rule Gate" in support of Louise Glaum, has joined Thos. H. Ince and will be seen in the principal role opposite Dorothy Dalton in a picture now in the making.

Bessie Love is working on "Polly Ann," in which she appears in the role of an orphan.

New Helen Holmes Serial

Chapter Three of "The Lost Express," the Signal Film Corporation's new mystery serial, starring Helen Holmes under the direction of J. P. MacGowan, which is scheduled for release through Mutual Film Exchanges, beginning September 17, contains one thrill that wasn't down on the boards when the scene was started.

A scene was to be photographed showing Helen and two male members of the company driving across a railroad crossing directly in front of an onrushing train. The director had planned on shooting the scene of the auto crossing the tracks, and then, later on, was going to purposely wreck the auto on the tracks and take a close-up of the wreckage. In some unknown manner the driver of the car during the first trial scene misjudged the distance and the speed at which the train was approaching. The locomotive caught the rear hind wheel of the auto bearing Miss Holmes, and hurled it upside down forty feet away into a ditch. In some miraculous fashion the occupants of the car escaped with only a few scratches but the auto was smashed to bits. Needless to say, the director has a thriller far greater than he had counted on—for now the picture will contain the real wreck of the car instead of the make-believe scene combined with an actual view of the car driving in front of the train. As for Miss Holmes and the two members of the cast who accompanied her in the hair-raising drive which resulted in the accident—well they are just thanking their stars they are alive.

Kerrigan Breaks Leg

J. Warren Kerrigan, the star of the J. Warren Kerrigan Feature Corporation, had his leg broken last week by the fall of a horse he was riding near Santa Barbara. He had been taken to the Cottage hospital in that city, where he will probably be confined for the next six weeks.

Mr. Kerrigan had just finished his second Paralta play, Frederic Chapin's "Turn of a Card," and had gone out into the country about Santa Barbara in the cool of the evening for a ride with some members of his company. While crossing some open country about ten miles from the city his horse stepped in a gopher hole and went down so suddenly that his rider was caught unawares.

IRWIN DISTRIBUTES FUND

Vitagraph Doles Out Largest Profit Sharing Fund in its History—Experiences No Summer Slump in Business

The distributing organization of Greater Vitagraph, through its general manager, Walter W. Irwin, last week distributed to the members of its selling organization the largest profit sharing fund that has been divided since the inauguration of the profit sharing plan two years ago.

While the fund itself was larger, the amount received by each member of the selling organization was a few cents less than the amount received at the previous high record point, owing to an increase in the number of employes in the distributing end. Owing to this increase in the number of employes, the share of each was a trifle smaller than last profit sharing period, which ended on April 28.

The period for which the fund was just divided ended during the hottest part of the summer, on July 28 last. Figuring on all precedents, instead of being the largest profit sharing period, that just closed should have been the smallest period of the year.

But Greater Vitagraph has upset precedents in the distributing end of the film industry, inasmuch as the company failed to experience any summer slump in business. For a period of five weeks, business did shave off a trifle, but there was no such loss as thirty and forty thousand dollars a week in business, as has been experienced by the larger film distributing companies in the past.

The post summer business already has started with the Greater Vitagraph salesforce each succeeding week showing large increases in business over its predecessor.

General Manager Irwin bases the present rapid increase in the Greater Vitagraph business upon two essential points: First, the class of productions now being made at the Greater Vitagraph studios under the personal supervision of President Albert E. Smith, and second, the intensive sales methods being utilized by every member of the Greater Vitagraph sales organization.

That volume of business and the equitable treatment of all exhibitors is demonstrated by the strength of the Greater Vitagraph profit sharing fund. Prior to the establishment of the fund and the installation of wise selling methods by General Manager Irwin, Greater Vitagraph was doing business along lines peculiar to the motion picture industry, devoting the energy of its sales force to placing the product in a few theaters labeled as "high class."

After making a complete survey of the situation it was seen that the neighborhood house and the house of small seating capacity was for in the majority in the business, and that it was to these classes of houses that a distributor should appeal.

Rosemary Theby with Lyons and Moran

Rosemary Theby has recently signed a contract with Universal to appear in a series of comedies with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. This will be the second time that Miss Theby has appeared under the big "U" banner. Previous to her present connection, she appeared in a series of comedies under the direction of Harry Myers which gained wide popularity. Miss Theby may also be featured in dramatic roles after she has completed the work already laid out.

Butterfly Release of "Crook" Story with Action. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is a good picture, with action, suspense, and human interest. It is well photographed and well directed and should satisfy any audience which wishes a light, diverting picture for a summer afternoon or evening. It is a crook play, but without any unpleasant or depressing incidents. The plot has some unusual twists and will be followed with interest.

Bess Meredyth wrote the story and Elmer Clifton directed. Jack Mulhall has the leading role, Ann Kroman opposite. Al McQuarrie and Uard Lamont do good work as the burglar and his wife. Then there are Hal Wilson and Wilbur Higby as the respective fathers of hero and heroine. The photography and settings are good.

The release date is August 13.

The Story: Bob Moore, whose father owns a safe factory, is ambitious to perfect a safe that cannot be opened. The elder Moore is considering consolidating his business with that of John Hardin, also a safe manufacturer. Bob objects, although he is in love with Irene, Hardin's daughter. A burglar opens the safe Bob had believed impossible to open and instead of handing the man over to the police, Bob offers him a job in the factory, believing that with his co-operation he can perfect a burglar-proof lock. "The Eel," as the crook is called, becomes a valuable helper, but he finally yields to temptation and entering the Hardin home, steals a pearl necklace. There are a number of exciting scenes in which "The Eel" escapes from the police, but Bob is suspicious and goes to him to demand the necklace. "The Eel" gives it up. At the pleading of Molly, "The Eel's" wife, Bob gives the man another chance. They continue their work and at last perfect a safe that even "The Eel" cannot open. Then Bob consents to the consolidation with the Hardin company only when Mr. Hardin consents to Bob's marriage to Irene.

"Bab the Fixer"

Jackie Saunders in Horkheimer-Mutual Five-Reel Offering. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

TO audiences who enjoyed preceding numbers of the Jackie Saunders series, exhibitors may announce this as the best so far. It is full of humor and the typical Jackie Saunders tricks and pranks. The story contains varied situations, which give Miss Saunders a chance to appear as a western girl, a boarding school miss, as a society bud and a bride. Bab's boarding school adventures are amusing and not hackneyed. Unexpected twists are given the situations throughout the play. It is a very good comedy-drama, upon which the exhibitor, especially in the neighborhood house, can depend to please his patrons.

Arthur Shirley plays opposite Miss Saunders. The supporting cast includes many who have appeared in other Saunders pictures. Mollie McConnell, Ruth Lackaye, Henry Gray and Captain Peacocke have important roles. The acting is good. The settings are varied, the photography good. Sherwood McDonald directed the offering.

The Story: Bab is the daughter of a ranchman. She is a crack shot and a good rider and is happy in this western life. She and Richard Sterling, who owns a neighboring ranch, are engaged to be married. Mrs. Porter, Bab's mother, is wretched because her daughter is growing up in such uncivilized surroundings. Later, oil is discovered on the Porter ranch, and the family becomes very wealthy.

Bab and her parents go east to live. Bab is sent to a fashionable boarding school and her mother tries to prevent her writing to Sterling. Bab's father and mother quarrel and finally separate. Then Leroy Scott, an adventurer, tries to get Mrs. Porter to let him manager her investments. Scott swindles a number of women out of their money and prepares to run away. Bab, returning from school, learns of her parents' quarrel and tries to bring them together. She pretends to be dying, but her scheme does not work out as it should. She telegraphs to Sterling and the two are reconciled. Then she aids her father and outwits Scott, who is handed over to the police, and in the end her father and mother are reunited. Then Bab marries Sterling.

"Golden Rule Kate"

Louise Glaum in Five-Part Triangle Feature, Released August 12. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

IN "Golden Rule Kate," Louise Glaum is seen in the garb of a dance-hall girl, owner of a saloon. Known as "The Sage-Brush Hen" and a wonder with guns, she is feared by both men and women. Her better nature is awakened by the Reverend Gavin McGregor and she comes to realize that her dance-hall is disreputable, so she orders it closed forever.

The author, Monte M. Katterjohn, has provided a remarkable story with plenty of action. The plot holds up, and it loses nothing in its filming. There are plenty of humorous touches to awaken laughs. The feature has been excellently produced by Reginald Barker, who rarely makes a poor one. Miss Glaum deserves much credit for her splendid portrayal of the "Hen." She is clever in her gun exercises, and her acting commands attention. William Conklin is sincere as the minister and plays his part in a capable way. The supporting cast consists of Jack Richardson, Mildred Harris, Jack Gilbert, J. P. Lockney, Gertrude Claire, H. Milton Ross and Josephine Headley.

Mercedes Murphy, known as "The Hen," owns the only saloon and dance-hall in Paradise. She lives with her younger sister, Olive, and tries to keep the little girl away from the rough element with which she comes in contact. "Slick" Blaney, a sort of partner to the Hen, is deeply interested in Olive, unknown to the Hen. The Reverend McGregor is sent to reform the place. His coming is scorned by the Hen. Finally the minister gains her admiration and she orders the dance-hall closed and bars married men from the saloon.

It then develops that the innocent little sister has been betrayed, and the Hen, believing the minister to be the guilty one, determines to kill him. But the "Heller" learns of Blaney's duplicity toward Olive and kills him. The Hen, realizing that she has wrongly accused the minister, orders the saloon closed forever. The minister pleads with her and declares his love. The Hen falteringly answers, "Some day."

"Down to Earth"

Artcraft Release Features Fairbanks in His Own Story. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"DOUG" himself has wielded the story writer's pen in the creation of his latest medium, giving every evidence that he is a real adept as a plot layer. His story, having to do with the curing of a sanitarium-full of refractory patients who exhibit no discernable evidence of wanting to be cured, and the winning of a girl through sheer cave-man tactics, radiates the warm sunshine of the location in which it was laid, as well as cheerfulness, health and common sense. As an invoker of the therapeutic art a la nature and common-sense "Doug" figures as a walloping success, as he also does in the roles of physical culturist, and getter of laughs. He diagnoses the cases of these grotesque sufferers recruited from pampered society with an incisive truthfullness of the kind that makes them squirm. His curative applications are made on both the bodies and dispositions of the little group at his mercy and both treated to a dose of nature and normal living in the out-of-doors, are rescued from the effects of artificial living. To the grouchy dispeptic he prescribes a course of hearty laughing; the other remedies, which seem more like penalties to the unfortunate victims, are as appropriate.

Anita Loos' subtitles again glisten and effervesce with humor, as is their famed wont, her scenario being a typical Loos product, and this is giving it the highest praise. John Emerson's direction has fulfilled its biggest mission, transferring the story to the scene so that the characters and incidents are as real as life, and accounting for himself finely in the treatment of the little things so necessary in keeping the comedy interest filled in and without draggy spots. Fairbanks has a role that is typical of his other red-blooded and smiling characters, with the exception that his acrobatic stunts are not featured. He is too busy instructing the members of the cast in the fundamentals of exercising. All will feel delighted with "Doug" in this role, since it gives him free sway to depict, as he knows how, the dashing, bold, fearless and fun-loving all-American youth. In the support Eileen Percy makes the advantages given her tell. Not only does her charming personality do wonders for the part, but she gives a very true rendition of a real girlish American girl, making her moods from wounded pride to forced submission very amusing. Charles Gerrard is fine in his outlandish society fop part, and other members of a cast, which is one of well chosen extreme types, are William H. Keith, Ruth Allen, Fred Goodwine, Florence Mayon, Herbert Standing, David Porter and Bull Montana.

The exhibitor knows what the Fairbanks pictures do for him and it is a safe guarantee that "Down to Earth" will match any of the others in results at the box office. Because of the high quality and the adherence to the same general type of story and clever treatment the picture-goer knows just what to expect in a Fairbanks subject.

Five-Part Triangle Release Features Bessie Barriscale. Reviewed by George W. Graves

J. G. HAWKS' story, picturized by a no less competent director than Raymond B. West and enacted by Bessie Barriscale, whose work in this would stamp her as an actress of talent, even had she not already many big things on the screen to her credit, and a cast whose work is not ordinary, are some of the vital reasons for this picture's success. Mr. Hawks' story, about a little Dutch heiress whose fortunes are usurped by an imposter, is pleasant in its humanness; it holds very well throughout and allows for some very interesting character touches and comedy. It is not the kind of play that one could call highly dramatic, exciting or suspenseful, rather is it a story with a simple, fairly obvious plot, made very interesting through scenario construction and direction that is every whit worthy of the name. This includes not only the attractive handling of the cast, but a wonderful scenic investiture, upon which, it is easy to see, both time and money, as well as exceptional artistic taste, were lavished.

The little Dutch village, with its thatched roof houses, canals, narrow lanes, bridges, etc., proves to be an ideal setting and one which was used with great discrimination by both director and camera man for unusual artistic effects. Some very beautifully tinted and photographed night scenes greet the spectator at the very beginning of the picture and assure him that he is going to witness a production very far removed from cheapness. To complete the excellent atmosphere, some fine types were furnished the cast and draped out in the picturesque clothing of Holland.

Bessie Barriscale will win many more friends by dint of her delightful characterization of a girl who is not so much the hoyden that she is not all girl from tip to tip. Miss Barriscale always handles these exuberant, vivacious, girl roles with great charm, although she is by no means restricted to light roles, as some of her past performances in high tension dramas loudly testify. Among those in the support are Jack Livingston, J. J. Dowling, Howard Hickman, and Don Likes.

"Wooden Shoes" can be counted upon for satisfied audiences in most any locality. It is bright, entertaining, and all that the word "classy" implies in production.

"The Lost Express"

First Episodes of Signal-Mutual Serial with Helen Holmes. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

TO provide plots for mystery serials, there have been precious jewels, heroines and "the papers" lost many times. It remained for the Signal Company to begin its serial with the loss of an entire express train! This company, in which Helen Holmes is featured, has become so accustomed to playing with locomotives, freight trains and expresses that when it wished to add mystery to its adventure, it probably judged it fitting to lose a train. At any rate, this is a most original beginning for a serial picture, one which will fascinate that large number of viewers to whom railroad stories make an appeal.

The first three episodes of the newest Signal serial, released through Mutual, show that Director McGowan has not lost his skill nor Helen her daring. Nor have they nor their company become "stale." This is a railroad story, but it is not a repetition of previous situations. The mystery element is emphasized and a new viewpoint is taken in presenting the story. The plot is cleverly arranged so that good situations for picturization come about naturally. They are not dragged in as stunts.

A good point noticeable in all McGowan directed pictures, and marked in this, is their realism. The atmosphere, the "local color," seems true to life. The men in the picture look and act like the rough workers they represent, not like actors taking the roles. For this, of course, much credit goes to the work of the company of actors who have become identified with Signal. With a few additions, this is the same cast which has appeared before with Miss Holmes. They fill their roles well in the new story.

The excellent lighting effects are another pleasing feature of this offering. There is much fine photography of an unusual kind. Care, too, has been taken to give a pleasing introduction to each installment.

There is, of course, quick action and some daring stunts of the sort that win applause in the theater and the comment, "Great stuff." The story progresses smoothly and is interest compelling. We don't quite see how any "fan" can view the first installment, in which the express is lost, without a keen desire to return during the next weeks and find out just how it disappeared.

The serial, in short, should appeal to any exhibitor whose patrons respond to any serials. It is, if following episodes contain the originality of the first three, "sure fire" in houses where railroad stories are liked. And the addition of the mystery element should make it interesting to others who do not care primarily for railroad thrills.

Leo Maloney plays Pitts; Thomas Lingham plays "The Baron"; V. O. Whitehead is Valquez; William Brunton is Charles Bonner; Edward Hearn is Francis Murphy, the detective, and John McKinnon appears as General Thurston, Helen's father. Frederick B. Bennett is the author of the story.

The Story: Chapter one introduces Helen as the daughter of General Thurston, an inventor who has made a machine for granulating gasoline. Rival interests try to buy the invention and failing that, set a band of crooks, led by "the baron," to steal the plans. Helen's father is injured when the house is burglarized. Helen sends the plans and models to a city bank vault. The express train carrying them completely disappears between stations.

In chapter two, the search is begun for the lost express train. In the meantime, the gang has the models but find an important part of the blueprint missing. Their effort to get this gives the detectives a clue. But they get the paper.

In chapter three contains a number of thrills in which Helen outwits the gang. The fact that Thurston's secretary is a member of the gang is disclosed. The papers are recovered, then lost again.

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in Five Parts—Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS picturization of Edith Ellis' reputed play is a production that Vitagraph may with grace and assurance offer to the film renters as a feature every bit up to their standard in story interest and acting as well as "class" in production. The only thing that mars an otherwise perfect performance is the weakness of that part of the direction which controls the smooth sequence of events or the tempo of the action. But in this case this unskillful assembling and presentation of different parts of the action is not potent enough to seriously mar the entertainment in the spectator's light. It only makes the picture a little difficult in certain sections to watch. As far as artistic mounting and accurate, convincing sets are concerned, the picture stands head and shoulders above the ordinary made-as-cheaply-as-possible production. Some very beautiful painted subtitle backgrounds were used. They were original and "snappy." It is our opinion that things of this sort are always worth what they cost.

However, all this embellishment and care in externals is not for the purpose of focusing the spectator's attention on them so that he will overlook the fact of a weak story. Such is not the case, for the story is really "there." It pleased as rendered on the stage, and its humanness, unexpected turns and wonderful character work will do no less on the screen. There is even a little good melodrama introduced at a very advantageous point. Its engrossing story, the splendid character work and the handsome mounting are the strong points that make the offering really worth while. Marc MacDermott, as the suave, eccentric husband who returns after years of wandering to his family and takes up his duties in the kitchen without even his daughter knowing his real identity, gives one of the most remarkable performances of his long screen career. ## The Retreat of the Germans from Arras

Pathe Presents Excellent Pictures of Battle-Front Scenes—Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

VARIETY and vividness characterize these intensely interesting war pictures, which have been taken under the supervision of the British War Department and released through Pathe. They have been taken right in the midst of things as far as possible and show numerous phases of the life of the soldier at the front. There are views taken from aeroplanes and scenes of the guns in action, and there are pictures of soldiers at rest, and pictures of their pets and mascots. The desolation of the country after the German retreat and evidences of "frightfulness" and wanton destructiveness are shown and are thought-compelling. In fact, the pictures hold the interest in every foot of film. These pictures received their first presentation in Chicago, at Orchestra Hall, at regular theater prices, and as the chief part of a patriotic program. The auditnce at the opening performance was wildly enthusiastic. Col. Jamieson of the British-Canadian Recruiting Office, in Chicago, explained the military significance of the battle of Arras, before the pictures were shown. A Pathe film showing the various armies of the world before the outbreak of the war, and the current Pathe Weekly, forms the balance of the program at Orchestra Hall.

"Babbling Tongues"

Ivan Offers Moderately Entertaining Society Drama—Reviewed by George W. Graves

IT is evident that the producers of this society story, dealing with the evils of malicious gossip, and the results of the false imputations thereof, failed to realize to the fullest extent the bigger possibilities of the story. As it is the spectator can see that beneath the surface there is a theme that is both dramatic and novel, one that would have made the picture a real engrossing drama had it been brought out more distinctly as well as more coherently. After the picture is all over we realize that the producer has endeavored to show how "babbling tongues" can turn a perfectly innocent woman out of her home and force her to become what they have long decided she was, and that these same busybodied spreaders of scandal can take an equally innocent young man and force him to become what they have preordained, a wife stealer, but we also realize that all of this, instead of being brought out with dramatic "punch," is quite snowed under a deal of surface action. The author's obvious intent is revealed in one scant subtitle and scene at the end and the previous action, instead of giving an idea of the underlying motive of the author, leaves one mystified in this respect and likewise in regard to the actions of the characters.

The story holds well in the beginning reels, where we are shown how the young man, Paul, is taken into the elderly husband's house out of gratitude, the youth's affection for the latter (which is generously reciprocated) and the feeling of friendly and brotherly affection which the young wife, Therese, and Paul have for each other. The scandal-mongers construe this as passion, and so at last the husband, through unfortunate incidents pointing to the young people's guilt, is forced to be suspicious himself. The frequency of these incidents and their unnaturalness makes it appear that the "babbling tongues" could not bring about the disaster shown at the end of the film without the frequent aid of "fate," and so it is the co-operation of the latter and "babbling tongues" which precipitates the final situation. If "fate" had been dispensed with, at least in a measure, as well as much action not affecting the outcome, the picture would have been more true to life.

As it stands the picture will entertain, but if the surface action had been stripped of its superficiality and intelligently connected with the underlying theme it is our opinion that it would have actually "gripped." There is some good talent in the cast, and this helps enormously in making the picture what it now is—a mildly entertaining subject. James Morrison, Grace Valentine and Arthur Donaldson had the most important roles, all rendering fine performances. Some of the smaller parts were not so well handled.

"Do Children Count?" Essanay Series with Mary Mcalister. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE children in this story counted when it was a question of awakening patriotism. Although the title does not indicate it, this number is a patriotic one, aimed against pacifists and slackers. It is a comedy drama, with a timely appeal, and is very well presented. The story, acting and photography, all are of the best. It will delight any audience, entertaining grown-ups and youngsters alike. The star, Mary McAlister, is supported by Ellis Paul and other clever youngsters, well directed, and by several skilful older players, John Crasser and Violet Craig chief among them.

August 22 is the release date.

The Story: The Erlings are the leaders of their town's "peace-at-any-price" propagandists. However, their small children, Daisy and Bobbie, are strong for war play. Recruiting officers, in order to frustrate the parents' plans, pursuade the children to enlist as honorary soldier and Red Cross nurse. The newspapers publish the story of the pacifists' children enlisting and it is read during a big peace meeting. Daisy hotly replies to her parents' scoldings with the statement that she'd rather enlist then than have to be conscripted. This puts the matter in a new light to the peace advocates and there is a rush to the recruiting offices.

Butterfly Offering Is Melodrama of Mystery—Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

ONE character is thoroughly detested by everyone else in this photoplay. During the course of the story he is murdered and the finger of suspicion points to each of the leading characters in succession. Evidence narrows down the suspects to one and things look very dark for him when he is saved by a surprising witness and the mystery is solved by a confession by the real criminal. On this theme the Butterfly release of August 20 is built. The result is an ordinary melodrama, with a certain amount of excitement and a story which holds interest without much effort.

The power of this picture to please depends largely upon the audience. Patrons who demand originality or plausibility will not like this, but on the other hand, the class of audience which likes mystery, and murders, deep-dyed villains and romantic heroines will be entertained by this. It is well made enough to appeal to this type of patron, but not good enough for the more intellectual class.

Donna Drew is announced as the featured player, but her role is really a small one. Charles Hill Mailes, Gretchen Lederer, Chester Bennett, Val Paul and Joseph Girard appear to advantage in leading parts. Joseph Swickard directed the play from a story by E. Magnus Ingleton.

The Story: Cathcart, a rich man, lacking in moral principles, marries Margaret Dennis, a beautiful widow, against the wishes of Jim Dennis, her son. Margaret is very unhappy as Cathcart's wife. A number of people have reason to hate Cathcart. One night, during a thunder storm, Cathcart is murdered. Jim, who had come to visit his mother and who had threatened to kill Cathcart, is under suspicion. He is brought to trial and declares that he had taken refuge from the storm in a barn about a mile from the Cathcart home at the time the murder was committed. He declares that a ragged boy, who slept in the barn that night, can testify to the truth of this. His lawyers, therefore, try to find the boy. The boy is located and proves to be a girl who, fond of adventure stories, had decided to run away and find romance. The girl's testimony frees Jim, and she finds her romance in the love of the man she had saved.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

READY TO CLIP AND USE IN YOUR PROGRAM OR ADVERTISING

Universal Program

Hands in the Dark—(WARREN KERRIGAN FEATURE)—(TWO REELS)—AUGUST 30.—Helen Brewer has the bad taste to fall in love with a poor clerk. Daddy Brewer, hated as a miser and collector of precious jewels, throws him from the house, and hears not the pleas of his daughter Helen. That night he is killed and robbed. Mutely accused by his cigarette case, found in the room, Howard is tried and convicted. Helen goes to the woods with her aunt and butler, and the day of the execution they are aroused by forest fires. The actions of the butler arouse Helen's suspicions and she follows him, pistol in hand, to find him digging the precious rubies of her father from their hiding place. A wild ride to town then follows, over fallen trees and through leaping flames, but she saves her lover and the butler is imprisoned.

Jungle Treachery—(TWO REELS)—BISON—SEPTEMBER 1.—Betty Briggs is tired of her East African home, where she lives with her father, Nathan, a squatter on English territory. Bob McPherson, the son of Big Bill McPherson, territorial surveyor to the English Government, is tired of college and against the advice of his father organizes an expedition to survey inland 100 miles, for which he is to receive five thousand pounds. When Nathan receives word of the coming of the white men he sends Betty to see what they are there for, but she slips and sprains her ankle. Bob hears her cries and goes to her aid. Nathan sends his men to fight the crew, but the Englishmen are successful. A lion, however, attacks Nathan, and he is fatally wounded. Before he dies he sends for Betty, begs her forgiveness and confesses to Bob that it was he that kept the white men out. When Bob returns home Mrs. McPherson goes with him to be introduced to Big Bill.

The Nightcap—NESTOR—(ONE REEL)—AUGUST 28.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. Eddie goes to lodge and leaves Edith home with her mama, who spends the evening giving her child advice. At the "lodge," which is really his club, Eddie and the fellows enjoy an evening of billiards and divers highballs. When they leave Eddie invites Lee to spend the night with him, but the last car is gone so they commandeer a cab which stands alone, and somehow reach home. Eddie discovers that he has lost his key and they must enter by the window. Eddie has only one clean pair of pajamas, so Lee dutifully dons Edith's lacey night-gown. Soon mother and Edith come home, see the head and arm of Lee, and think the worst. Eddie wakes up, thinking of burglars, grabs a pistol but soon drops it. Mother-in-law grabs the gun and takes a shot at Lee. Explanations follow and wifie and Eddie embrace.

Busting Into Society—JOKER COMEDY—(ONE REEL)—SEPTEMBER 1.—Rupert is only an honest hod carrier, but he loves Lizzie. The poor girl, though, dreams only of wealth and fine clothes and turns him down. Papa comes home with the information that his lottery ticket has copped the grand prize, and the whole family move into a brown stone front. They try hard to break into society and give a big dinner for the Grand Duke Larry. Larry, however, has only eyes for the silverware, but is foiled in his plans by the brave Rupert, hovering just outside the window. When the officers of the law have taken the culprit away the reunited family sit down to do full justice to the ducal dinner, with Rupert the prospective son-in-law and the hero of the hour.

Why They Left Home—JOKER—(ONE REEL)—AUGUST 30.—Ira and Jack stop for oil and when they drive on Flossie gives her card to Ira, the "human" in charge of the station. Ira falls in love with Flossie and follows her to the city. He is followed, in turn, by Mary, his ex-sweetheart, who is secretly in love with Jack. Both of them wander into a theater where Jack and Flossie are playing and Ira interrupts their performance on the stage, much to the amusement of the audience. Hank, property man, then tells Ira that Flossie has children older than he is and has been married three times. Mary happens along and the two are re-united.

Scandal Everywhere—VICTOR COMEDY—(ONE REEL)—AUGUST 31.—The soubrette at the hotel is watched by the management to keep her from flirting. She leaves, and outside meets Max and his wife who are just arriving. She flirts with Max and that puts the detective on Max's trail. He spies on Max through a hole in the ceiling, Max shoots at him and then goes up stairs where he finds the soubrette. He orders drinks and they are served by the detective in the bell-hop's uniform. The detective calls Max's wife and a lively chase starts with Max shooting at the detective. Max jumps at the chandelier and goes through the floor. Later he meets his wife again and she takes him in charge.

Universal Screen Magazine—No. 34.—Number thirty-four opens with boy scout scenes, showing them engaged in agriculture—then scenes taken in the New York Aquarium, showing fish taken from all parts of the seven seas. How to make a powder cake is shown for the ladies' benefit, and from there a jump is made to the lumber industry in the California redwoods. Miracles in Mud conclude the reel.

The Winning Pair—(THREE REELS)—GOLD SEAL—AUGUST 28.—Bitter enmity springs up between Ezra Moore and John Croft, and they dissolve partnership, each to set up in the shoe making business for himself. Years later Ezra Moore's daughter and John Croft Junior, "Jack" for short, fall in love, but both fathers have the gout and the way of the young lovers is not set with roses. Jack is disinherited by his dad, so Beatrice gets him a job as shoe salesman for her father's factory. The two children then begin a campaign to reunite the fathers, and are finally successful, war orders and salesman's reports playing a large part in the happy ending.

Jerry's Eugenic Marriage—(ONE REEL)—HORSLEY—AUGUST 30.—Featuring George Ovey. Disconsolate, with only Pete, his old time chum, for companionship, Jerry reads of the recent wedding of a man to a millionairess effected through a newspaper want ad. To him comes the thought that he might be able to put through a similar deal. Jerry writes an ad calling for a beautiful wife, accomplished and affectionate, and clearly states he has no objection to one of wealth. Jerry selects the picture of Marie as his prospective bride and wires her to come. Marie joins Jerry and together they go to a minister. Jerry offers him stamps for his fee. The ceremony is about to be performed when the clergyman demands Marie's Eugenic certificate. They agree to visit the Eugenic Bureau. Marie is put through a severe test that results in her rejection by the physician. She departs for the railroad station to return to her home while Jerry decides that matrimony is a pretty tough proposition. He consoles himself with the fact that he has made a profit from postage stamps contributed by expectant candidates.

Jerry Tries Again—(ONE REEL)—HORSLEY—SEPTEMBER 6.—Disappointed over his failure to marry Marie by reason of the ruling of the Eugenic Bureau, Jerry's only consolation is a large and growing accumulation of postage stamps he received in answers to an advertisement he inserted in a daily paper for a wealthy wife. Jerry meets several candidates for his lot in life and leads them to the Eugenic Bureau where one after the other they are disqualified. Jerry finally makes the mistake of his life and sends for six girls to meet him at one time. He leads his collection of would-be brides to the examining physician who promptly rejects all but one, a large healthy but heavy maiden. The disappointed girls are furious. They wreak vengeance upon Jerry with their fists and umbrellas but he escapes with his abundant prize to the minister. All seems clear for a happy ending when the minister demands Jerry's certificate. He rushes to the Bureau for examination. He is immediately rejected.

Butterfly

Straight Shooting—(FIVE REELS)—BUTTERFLY—AUGUST 27.—A Western story of the days of feuds between the big cattle men and the settlers. Thunder Flint, cattle king, resolves to drive the nesters from the country and to that end imports two gunmen, "Cheyenne" Harry and "Placer" Fremont. He sends warning to "Sweetwater" Sims by Danny Morgan, one of his cowboys, who delivers it to his beautiful daughter Joan and becomes converted to her cause. Next day Ted, Joan's brother, is killed by Fremont, and as she and her father grieve over the body of the boy "Cheyenne" Harry rides by. He tells them that it is not his custom to make war on old men and children, and takes their side. The cowboys raid the place that night but are defeated by the nesters who gather at the cabin, supported by some outlaw friends of Harry's whom he has persuaded to join them. The morning ushers in a new life to Joan and the nesters. Harry is invited to stay at the cabin, but he sends Danny in to Joan and sits by himself watching the sun go down and thinking out his problem.

Fox

Every Girl's Dream—(FIVE REELS)—FOX—AUGUST 26.—With June Caprice. Gretchen is the foster child of Mrs. Van Lorn, and is beloved by everyone. She has two suitors in the persons of Carl, the woodchopper, and Mynheer De Haas, the town lawyer and capitalist. She likes Carl best, which annoys both Mrs. Van Lorn and Hulda, who also loves Carl. Then Gretchen has her little dream. She is put into the stocks for a theft for which she is innocent, throughout the machinations of Hulda. Then a mysterious stranger comes through the village searching for a little lost princess, who is to be identified by a locket—and of course Gretchen wears the locket. Carl is the prince, and just when the celebration of the village is over news comes that the King is dead and that Carl reigns in his place. Carl introduces Gretchen to the multitude as his bride and just then Gretchen falls on the hard floor—wide awake—a foster child once more.

K. S. E. E.

Pants—(SCREEN TIME 65 MINUTES)—ESSANAY—SEPTEMBER 10.—Starring Little Mary McAlister. Wealth can't buy happiness. Little Betty has a luxurious home, an army of maid servants and the costliest of toys. But she hasn't what a child wants most of all—other children to play with. The result is that she runs away one afternoon and joins a group of children from the ghetto district on the beach. In play she exchanges clothing with a little boy. That evening Betty doesn't return home. Her maiden aunt—an over-zealous guardian—is frantic. She notifies the police. The same evening the father of the boy, who has lost his position and is facing starvation, decides to turn burglar. He steals into the home of Betty's father. The household is awakened and the intruder captured. At that moment the police arrive with the boy whom they have mistaken for Betty on account of the little girl's clothing which he wears. All are utterly bewildered. The denouement comes with Betty's entrance at this juncture, garbed in the boy's clothes. She likes the boy and on her plea he and his father are liberated. The experience teaches Betty's father that his little girl should have more than his wealth can afford her; that is, other children to play with.

A Trip to Chinatown—Selig—(Two Reels)—Hoyt Comedy—August 20.—The comedy has to do with the adventures of a race track tout and a policeman, who seeks to arrest him for giving wrong tips on the races. The tout visits Chinatown where he takes a whiff of the pipe. Reviewed in next issue.

Efficiency Edgar's Courtship—(Screen Time 65 Minutes)—Essanay—August 3.—Efficiency wins success in business; why not in love? Edgar Bumpus, a rising young man, applies this reasoning to his courtship of Mary Pierce. He first eliminates Wimple, his closest competitor, who plays a guitar, by learning to play a saxophone, which makes louder music; and by sending Mary flowers and candy each time Wimple calls on her. The plan works O. K. until the saxophone disturbs Mr. Pierce's slumbers. He and Edgar clash and the latter is forbidden to visit Mary any more. Edgar immediately employs a clipping bureau to send news items to Mr. Pierce which tell of the troubles young girls get into when their fathers refuse to let them have beaux. One eloped with a milkman; another disappeared. This has no effect upon Mr. Pierce, however, except to make him hate Edgar more; however the youth's persistence finally wins Mary's love. Then Edgar plays his trump card. He gets Mary to sign a legal agreement to forfeit $10,000 to him, unless she marries him. The two then confront Mr. Pierce with this document. Rather than lose the money, he consents to lose his daughter, the only stipulation being that Edgar will throw away his saxophone. Thus efficiency triumphs.

Mutual Star Productions

Reputation—(Five Reels)—Mutual — September 3.—Starring Edna Goodrich. Constance Bennett is reared in a small town by a maiden aunt and is the sweetheart of John Clavering, son of the local grande dame. Constance goes to New York where she becomes a model in a suit and cloak house. Edward Allas, her employer, forces his attentions upon her and Mrs. Allas, trusting her husband, becomes suspicious and later wildly jealous. Constance returns to the home town to escape the attentions of Allas and men of his type. Allas, however, follows her there. She has established a store of her own and before a crowd of customers, Mrs. Allas walks in and accuses Constance. The girl faces ostracism at home. She is turned out of the church. In despair she returns to New York. She meets Allas and visits the cabarets with him. They return to her apartment, where she traps him into an avowal of love. She has summoned his wife and exposes him. Allas seeks to retaliate and hires a woman to trap Constance. She goes to dine with them in a hotel and finds herself alone with Allas in the apartment. Clavering has returned from Mexico and has followed her. She battles Allas and Clavering bursts into the room. A pistol is fired. Allas is mortally wounded. Constance faces trial for murder and is acquitted. She returns to the home town as Clavering's bride.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

"The Divorcee"—(Five Reels)—Vitagraph August 27.—Wanda comes to Reno to visit her brother, but he is away on business, so she amuses herself by playing the up-to-date divorcee. She makes up a story which is believed by the colony. While horseback riding she meets a young minister, whom she takes for a cowboy. He works for the repeal of the divorce laws and she answers him in the press, while he is unaware of her identity. His friendship is fast growing into love and she breaks with the other divorcees, who tell him who she is. She is riding to meet him when she sees a hold-up and thinks the minister guilty of the crime. They are chased by the posse, and when the sheriff comes up to them her brother is also in the posse. Explanations are made all around and the clever girl is made welcome as an attractive and unmarried young woman.

Triangle

Wooden Shoes—(Five Reels)—Triangle—August 26.—Featuring Bessie Barriscale. Pampy lives in a quaint Dutch village, a coffee house drudge, and support of her invalid father. The latter, years ago, had married Pampy's mother at the cost of his inheritance. As he is becoming weaker and weaker, Pampy's father writes to America for his father's forgiveness. This petition is granted, but the wealthy New Yorker's letter does not arrive until his disobedient son has died. A letter enclosing passage money to the United States for Pampy falls into the hands of the grasping inn keeper and his wife, both of whom have ambitions for their daughter. The latter is subsequently taken to New York and palmed off on the millionaire as his grandchild, Pampy. Meanwhile Pampy, the genuine, through the help of a friend, comes to America, but is unable to locate her grandfather. At this point fate takes a hand, and the result is that the girl not only finds her grandfather but is also restored to her sweetheart. Of course the pretending usurpers are ousted. Reviewed in this issue.

A Pawnbroker's Heart—(Two Reels)—Triangle-Keystone.—With Chester Conklin, Peggy Pearce and Ben Turpin. A riotous, every-bit-up-to-precedent Keystone, as the cast, which also includes Glen Cavender and Caroline Rankin, suggests. Funny situation is close on the heels of funny situation and the laughs are spontaneous and sure. Eddie Cline, who directed the production, deserves credit for originality of the sort that has made the Keystone reputation. There are not as many thrills as usual in this number, but whatever is lost through this is more than made up for by the delightfully absurd Keystone situations and the acting of the famous slapstick characters. The story rests upon the troubles and misunderstandings of two pairs of married folks, with the scene laid for the most part in a pawnbroker's establishment. Burglars, clothing store dummies and many other strange elements enter into the turmoil, and it hardly needs to be said that all hands are all in when the finish arrives.

General Program

Selig World Library—No. 15—August 22.—Historic Monterey, California.—Monterey was the capital of California when the latter was a Mexican province. Latest African Fashions—Skirts made from bamboo leaves. Tuna Fishing in the Pacific—Many tons of tunnies are caught along the Pacific, where some attain a weight of 1,500 pounds. The Silk Industry of Japan—Mulberry leaves are the chief food of the silk worm, which came originally from China.

Between Man and Beast—(Two Reels)—Selig—August 20.—Blackmoor, an adventurer, trails Milbank, who has been left some valuable mines, into the jungle. With Milbank is his wife, little child and faithful native servant. The Milbanks locate the lonely cabin of his father and Milbank starts out to find the mines. Blackmoor sets fire to the cabin but the wife and child are saved by the servant. Mrs. Milbank falls asleep in the forest and an enormous ape carries away the child. Blackmoor has picked up Milbank's hat in which are the descriptions of the mining claims. Milbank comes back and with his anguished wife goes to find the child. They find that the ape has cared well for the baby, and in addition they find a rich mining claim. The claims described in the data Blackmoor has secured are worthless.

Her Salvation—(One Reel)—Selig—August 25.—Nance, a little Irish-American girl from the great East Side, works in a laundry where she meets Pat McGuire. Sandy McCarthy, a clean country lad, comes to the city to make his way and meets Nance. Mame Ryan loves Pat McGuire, who has no use for her. When Nance sees Pat strike a woman her love is killed and she ultimately loves Sandy and becomes his wife.

The Furnished Room—(Two Reels)—Broadway Star Feature—(O. Henry Series).—The Girl lives in the country and is told that she has a voice. She goes to the city to train it, and is told that her voice is a very ordinary one. Meantime the Boy stays in the country. The Girl is proud and struggles to exist in the big city, without owning her failure. The Boy hears of her plight and goes to the city to get her, but like the characters in Evangeline they miss each other by an eyelash. The Girl writes to him to come for her, but the letter is sent back to her. She thinks he does not care and attempts suicide. The Boy is about to attempt suicide when he is stopped by the odor of migonette. It is the girl's favorite perfume, and he knows she has been in the room. He learns all and goes to the hospital to find her and they live happily ever after, as you knew they were going to do all the time.

Her Peignoir—(Sparkle Comedy)—(One Reel)—Ami Simple and his wife are proud of their happy and eugenic marriage. One morning Mrs. Simple sees a stunning new peignoir in Vogue, decides to have one and goes to her dressmaker. Ami comes home to lunch and finds a note which tells him that she has gone to have her peignoir cut out. Ami, of course, thinks it is a terrible disease and rushes to the hospital where he finds another Mrs. Simple. The doctors cannot tell him what a peignoir is and they think she must have gone to a specialist. Ami is overcome and resorts to John Barleycorn. When Janice gets home she is asked by the neighbors if the operation is successful, and explanations follow. When Ami wends a crooked path home he, too, must hear the explanation, at which he falls to the floor.

Tough Luck—Jaxon Comedy—(One Reel).—Pokes and Jabs are behind with their board and are held up by the boarding house keeper at the point of a pistol. Jabs tells her that they have money hidden in their room and she agrees to wait till they go up and get it. Mrs. Ham goes to market and returns just in time to catch the delinquents about to skip. Jabs escapes, but Pokes is caught by the hair of his head and made to work out the double board bill as cook, waiter and scrub woman. Pokes tries to escape one night, but Mrs. Ham hears the commotion and, mistaking it for burglars, notifies the police. The cop arrives just as Pokes drops out of the window. They grapple and in the scuffle the cop loses his helmet, revealing Jabs. Mrs. Ham from the window recognizes the pair and is furious. Looking about for a weapon of vengeance she seizes the packed trunk and hurls it at them. It hits Pokes in the head. Jabs does his duty and arrests Pokes, who appears in court the following morning a wiser and smaller man.

Ivan

Babbling Tongues—Ivan Film Productions, Inc.—With James Morrison, Grace Valentine, Arthur Donaldson, Paul Capellani, Richard Tucker and others. Therese Moreau and her husband, Jose, are a devoted couple, although the latter is many years the wife's senior. Jose, out of gratitude to a deceased friend, takes the friend's son Paul into his home. Paul, a struggling playwright, comes to love both the husband and his wife as true friends. His affection for the latter, however, is misconstrued by the scandalmongers, who publish broadcast that the young people are enjoying secret love under the husband's nose. Although this is all false, rumor at last comes back with force on Jose, and, honest though he is, some suspicious appearing circumstances give him the right to accuse his wife and Paul. Some complications set in, with Jose vacillating between the beliefs that Paul is guilty and that he is innocent. Through an injury sustained in defending his and his wife's honor because of a slur cast at her, Jose dies, believing Paul and Therese guilty. After the death society makes short work of Paul and Therese, who, cast out upon the streets, have nothing left but one another's sympathetic love. Reviewed in this issue.

silent drama. Miss Hansen in the role of Mary Archer, manicure girl and protege of Devil McCare, appears more captivating than ever and her powers of winning the hearts of America's theater patrons has never been disputed.

"Devil McCare" will be released through Art Dramas and is the fourth of a series of Western pictures produced by Crane Wilbur under the direction of Lorimer Johnston. Mr. Wilbur is strongly entrenched as a box office magnet and it is safe to say that in his new pictures he will add materially to his following of devotees. Comedy situations in "Devil McCare" are many and varied while thrills abound. But with all the difficulties encountered and overcome in his lovemaking with Mary Archer, Devil displays a rare gift of winning through personality rather than physical force.

Chicago Notes

PICTURES are again to hold the stage at the classiic Auditorium. The official Italian war films, called "The Italian Battle Front," will open there for a 12 days' run, August 23.

Max Goldstine, manager of the local Artcraft office, has been in Milwaukee for a few days on business.

Roderick Ross, printer to the film trade, has left on an extended trip which will include Halifax and New York.

Alfred Hamburger, who owns fourteen moving picture theaters in the city, filed two $50,000 damage suits in the Circuit court recently against Nathan Ascher, another of Chicago's biggest theater magnates. Attorneys who filed the suits stated that one was for breach of contract and the other for slander.

Ralph O. Proctor, of the Standard Film Corporation and president of the former Rell Fellows Club, is in the effete east on business.

"The City of Purple Dreams" has arrived in Chicago. It is the new Selig production from the coast, directed by Colin Campbell. It is said to be a very unusual production.

Manager Weil of the classy Castle, took twenty cents from each person who saw "The Little American" at his house during the past two weeks, and he played to capacity business all the time. "If I could have this picture exclusive, I could hold them out with it for six months," he said.

Meetings were held last week of the organization and finance committees of the Reel Fellows' reorganization committee. The latter committee also held a meeting at the Hamilton Club last Tuesday, just when MOTOGRAPHY was going to press. A complete report of the progress of the new Chicago club will be given next week.

The "Honor System," one of the new Fox Standard Pictures, began a two weeks' run, August 20, at the Studebaker Theater. During the morning trade showings will be given at the Michigan avenue house in order to allow some of the other Standard Pictures to try their wiles on the phlegmatic exhibitor.

A special meeting of the Advertising Film Producers' Association has been called for Monday, August 27, at the studio of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago. The matters to be discussed at this conference will have to do with changes in the constitution and by-laws, standards of practice, campaign for 1917 and 1918 and various other matters of general importance pertaining to moving picture advertising. The Advertising Film Producers' Association is the recognized moving picture department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Major General Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., commanding officer of the central department U. S. A., and the members of his staff were the guests of John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation at a special review of six hundred feet of pictures showing the landing of the Pershing expedition in France, last week, at the Mutual executive offices in the Consumers building. The picture, the first showing of the arrival of the Pershing troops abroad, reached Chicago at 10 o'clock this morning as part of the current Mutual Weekly. General Barry evidenced keen interest in seeing the film and a special showing was arranged for him and the army officers at his headquarters.

Fill Up Our Soldiers' Pipes

America's fighting men need tobacco to make trench life a little more comfortable. Here's a chance to treat the boys at the front.

"Our Boys In France Tobacco Fund" has been organized to furnish "smokes" for the American soldiers and sailors in active service.

All labor and administrative expenses are contributed so that every cent you give goes to pay for tobacco, which is purchased in large quantities at a low price.

One dollar buys four packages of tobacco and sends them to France. Each package, costing twenty-five cents, has a retail value of forty-five cents and keeps a man in "smokes" for a week. Every dollar sent to "Our Boys In France Tobacco Fund" buys a bundle of tobacco that would cost $1.80 at your cigar store.

In every package is a post card addressed to a contributor to the tobacco fund. In accepting the package, the soldier or sailor agrees to send on the card a message to his benefactor in the United States. According to the plan, every person who gives a quarter gets his receipt from a fighting man in France.

The work of this fund is approved by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy.

Send as many dollars as you can spare. Write your name and address clearly.

Exhibitors Organizing to Aid U. S.

STATE CHAIRMAN OF NATIONAL COMMITTEE HEARD FROM—ALL AT WORK

THE prominent motion picture exhibitors who were recently appointed as state chairmen of the National Committee by President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, at the request of the president of the United States, have promptly taken up the work of organizing the exhibitors in their respective states for the purpose of utilizing the films and screen to spread broadcast throughout the nation information in regard to the plans and purposes of the various departments of the government during the period of the war.

Of the forty-eight chairmen appointed by President Brady on July 3 only four have not been heard from, this delay being due to the fact that the exhibitors appointed in these localities are away from home and therefore not aware of their selection as representatives of the National Committee.

In a majority of the other forty-four states and the District of Columbia the organization of exhibitors is now well under way and in several states conventions of the exhibitors have been held which have established new records for attendance, indicating their desire to aid in this patriotic work.

New Hampshire Takes Initiative

One of the first state chairmen to take up the work was Charles H. Bean of Franklin, New Hampshire, who brought the subject to the attention of his fellow exhibitors in New Hampshire in the form of a circular letter which was sent to every exhibitor in the state.

Dear Brother Exhibitors of New Hampshire:

At the request of Mr. William A. Brady, through the President of the United States, I have accepted appointment as State Chairman of the National Committee representing our state and it will be my duty to carry out such suggestions or requests as may be sent to me by the War Co-operation Committee of the National Association, comprising the most representative men in the industry, which is now considering plans, of which you will be advised in due course of time.

The President has honored and recognizezd the motion picture industry as a great force in assisting the United States Government in the present world crisis.

The exhibitors of the United States have been asked to work especially with the Committee on Public Information, and there will be two methods of distributing information: First, our screens showing slides and short films; second, four-minute talks in our theaters.

In view of the fact that the United States Government has been lenient with motion picture exhibitors on the recent proposed tax of 10 per cent of gross receipts, which will probably not be passed because Congress appreciates the fact that this tax would undoubtedly ruin and bankrupt many theaters and put many out of business, the same as it has done in Canada, every exhibitor in New Hampshire and in the nation should show its appreciation and patriotism on this occasion by doing his bit in helping lend the fullest support of his screen to our government.

The motion picture industry has been under severe criticism in the past—perhaps oftimes rightly. The industry is asking for special consideration by the people in the way of liberal legislation. I believe everything asked for, in reason, will be granted if the picture industry shows itself worthy.

Do your bit big and help carry on this splendid work. Enclosed find a card. Will you kindly fill out the same and mail to John B. Jameson, Concord, New Haven.

I am sure there will be a generous response from every exhibitor in the state.

CHARLES H. BEAN,

Representative for the Motion Picture Exhibitors of New Haven.

P. S.—Enclosed you will find copy of letter from President Wilson to Mr. William A. Brady.

The postal card referred to contained the following pledge:

"I pledge myself that I will do all I can to help with my screen and theater in this great world crisis.

Name .....

Theater .....

Town or City.....

League Holds Rousing Meeting

In a report to President Brady on August 20, State Chairman Bean advises that he has received answers from ninety per cent of the exhibitors in the state, and he feels confident the rest will respond, as several are known to be away from home on business trips or on vacations. A convention of the exhibitors of New Hampshire was held at Manchester on Friday last, presided over by Mr. Bean and despite a pouring rain there was the largest attendance ever recorded by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of that state. A resolution was adopted offering the fullest possible support and co-operation to the President by the motion picture theaters of New Hampshire. Ernest H. Horstman of Boston, treasurer of the Exhibitors' League of America, addressed the meeting, setting forth the many ways in which the members of the state league could assist the government at this time.

Idaho's Active Too

Similar activities have been undertaken by Herman J. Brown, state chairman of the National Committee in Idaho, who has advised President Brady in a letter, dated August 13, that he has already undertaken the organization of exhibitors in accordance with the suggestions contained in the announcement which accompanied his appointment.

The circular which State Chairman Brown, who is president of the Idaho Theater Men's Association, sent to the theater owners and managers contained the following pertinent statement:

Your president has accepted the position of state chairman of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, at the request of Mr. William A. Brady. This means a whole lot of work and no pay for me. It means that I will have to do ten times as much as any other exhibitor in the state in the government war co-operation matters. I accepted this for the good of the industry in this state and to help increase its growing dignity. We now have a chance to make the motion picture

A Remarkable Service for You

FOR YOUR benefit, MOTOGRAPHY has inaugurated a remarkable new exhibitors' service.

INFORMATION

You may ASK US ANYTHING that has to do with the business and we will do our level best to secure for you the desired information.

USE CUTS FREE

You can borrow, free of all expense, any of the cuts you see in MOTOGRAPHY to run in your programs or other printed matter. Simply ask us for the cuts immediately after they appear in the magazine.

We will aid you in your advertising—write it for you, if you wish—and help in the making of your programs.

BOOKINGS

We will make any booking you may desire, or give you information regarding bookings you wish to make.

We will get reports from exhibitors on the business done on any picture you contemplate running and want to be dead sure of.

If there is anything you want to purchase or get prices on, ask us and we will help you to the best of our ability. Give us detailed information.

Ask us if you would like some practical aid in making your house pay, or making it pay MORE, also in regard as to how to build, remodel, and so forth. Ask us about screens, organs, ticket venders, or any form of theater equipment.

IT'S YOUR TRADE PAPER

In short, MOTOGRAPHY will tell you anything that can be found out, and will do anything possible for you that you cannot conveniently do for yourself.

Remember: MOTOGRAPHY is YOUR TRADE PAPER, to help YOU and our other 9,000 exhibitors first, last and all the time.

WRITE MOTOGRAPHY.

business a respected business—to take it forever out of the clutches of the petty politicians, to attain a power that will mean the death of the bum politicians that attack us. We have this chance, but it means that we must get in and realize that an organization can't live on wind and shirkers. You will soon be called on as I will be called on to get busy for the United States government.

The organization will have to report the theaters who are doing the work of the government, which says, "We depend on the motion picture theaters as on no other institution." It will also have to report the theaters who refuse to do the right thing. I have already assured the President of the National Association that Idaho will be on deck 100 per cent strong.

Letters Received From Other State Chairmen

Letters have also been received from the following state chairmen advising as to their plans for organizing the exhibitors in response to the appeal of President Brady: Jo. E. Rickards, Phoenix, Arizona; H. M. Thomas, Omaha, Nebraska; A. B. Nomand, Shawnee, Oklahoma; H. T. Nolan, Denver, Colorado; C. W. Meighan, Portland, Oregon; A. W. B. ## To Fight Music Tax

A special meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn was held Saturday, August 25, at the Duffield Theater, Fulton and Duffield streets. The music tax was the matter that brought the members together. Over twenty Brooklyn exhibitors have already been sued for $3,000 each for illegal infringements of the copyright law.

William Bland, executive secretary of the association, in the letter sent out inviting members to attend informed them that it was only a matter of a little time before every exhibitor in Brooklyn would be served with papers, and that a decision on the problem was imperative.

The following theaters are members of the association, which is grooming itself to fight the music tax:

Acme, Alhambra, American, Antoinette, Arcade, Astoria, Atlantic, Avon, Belmore, Broadway Lyceum, Bunny, Central, Century, Classic, Cleveland, Central, Colonade, Colonial, Concord, Crescent, Criterion, Decatur, Dorchester, Duffield, Eagle, Eden, Electra, Empire, Evergreen, Franklin, Fulton Auditorium, Garden, Gates, Globe, Graham Palace, Grand, Happy Hour, Hendrix, Huntington, Hyperion, Imperial, Irving, Kerman's, Kingston, Knickerbocker, Lee Avenue, Lincoln, Linden, Luna, Manhattan, Manor, Marathon, Margareth, Marcy, Majestic, Midwood, Miller's, Miller's Saratoga, Montauk, Mt. # "What the Picture Did for Me"

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

SEVENTY AND SEVEN (Essanay Black Cat)—"These two-reel Black Cat pictures are wonderful to fill out a program. The acting is fine."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit Mich.—Foreign neighborhood.

Seventy and Seven (Essanay Black Cat)—"A good production. Business ordinary in good weather."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

The Barrier (Rex Beach Pictures)—"A picture that is full of action and holds your attention from start to finish. It drew well without a popular star featured in it. Plenty of fights and touches of pathos with a little comedy here and there. Mostly exterior settings. It is well directed and the photography is good."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

The Barrier (Rex Beach Pictures)—"A sure money-getter for any house. A wonderful production. Cast great."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.

---

Souls Adrift, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"Fair picture. Star not suited for role. Business fair."—W. S. McLaren, Majestic Theater, Jackson, Mich.

---

Souls Adrift, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"Just a fair picture, with fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

---

Souls Adrift, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"Another winner on the World program. A well liked star, a good story and a title that means something to the box office."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

---

Youth, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"Fair in pleasing quality and star fair in drawing power."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—High class house catering to better classes.

---

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Mary's best. Fair drawing power, owing to previous runs in the neighborhood."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

---

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"The best Pickford-Artcraft that has been released. Advertise it big."—C. Taylor, Rialto Theater, Kewanee, Ill.

---

The Little Duchess, with Madge Evans (World) "Very good. Will please the grown-ups as well as the children. This little girl is clever and worthy of being starred."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"Except for the action in the last two reels, this picture would have been a bloomer. Drew well."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—Catering to better classes.

---

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A good drawing star in the kind of picture the people like. Business great."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

---

In Again, Out Again, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"Broke house record for single booking. A knock-out."—J. W. Allendar, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

---

Down to Earth, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"One of Douglas Fairbanks' best. The star is always a good drawing card. I can recommend this picture to any exhibitor. It pleases everyone, at advanced prices."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

---

The Rough House, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"Fully up to standard. Audience expressed their approval by their continued applause. Business—top—held out for last show."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

---

The Rough House, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"If you want a comedy that will keep them laughing book this. Star is great. Business was good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

---

The Winning of Sally Temple, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"A costume picture. It did not hold the interest. The patrons left before the finish."—C. Taylor, Rialto Theater, Kewanee, Ill.

---

The Roadside Impresario, with George Beban

(Paramount)—"Pleased generally without being exceptional. Beban is well liked."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—High class house catering to better classes.

---

The Heir of the Ages, with House Peters (Paramount)—"Five thousand feet of film with pictures on it that interested no one."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

---

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"The title drew the fair sex in multitudes. Only a fair picture, but the star is popular."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

---

The Little Boy Scout, with Ann Pennington (Paramount)—"Rather thin story but its nature is pleasing and it has fair merit in drawing power."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.

---

The Reward of Patience, with Louise Huff (Paramount)—"A very good production which brought ample box office receipts."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

The American Beauty, with Myrtle Stedman (Paramount)—"Well liked by a fair audience."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

The Call of the Cumberlands, with Dustin Farnum (Paramount)—"A fair picture only. Audiences are growing tired of 'feudism' pictures."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

---

Snow White, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Capacity business. The picture did not please generally. Too childish for grown-ups and over the heads of children."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

---

Madame La Presidente, with Anna Held (Paramount)—"I see no excuse for inflicting such pictures on the public. It should be rejected by all exhibitors."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

---

Nearly a King, with John Barrymore (Paramount)—"Did not please. No variety in the star's acting. The name 'Barrymore' is not a sufficient drawing card."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

---

The Feud Girl, with Hazel Dawn (Paramount)—"Hazel Dawn does not please here. Shallow story with too much 'feudism."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

---

Madame Bo-Peep, with Seena Owen (Triangle)—"The star photographs well and knows how to act. This picture is A Number One, for a program feature. The title does not help it, but theaters catering to a regular patronage will find this offering pleases."—Charles H.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in MOTOGRAPHY's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

Madame Bo-Peep, with Seena Owen (Triangle)—"A very good picture but not a good drawing card."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The Prince and the Pauper, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Such pictures as this are always sure to please. Truly this is an artistic triumph."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas—High class patronage.

Gretna Green, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"One of the old productions but it should be played by any one booking these older pictures. Picture in good condition."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

The Black Wolf, with Lou-Tellegen (Paramount)—"The star is not known. Story is impossible. Went over fair."—C. Taylor, Rialto Theater, Kewanee, Ill.

Big Timber, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A very pleasing offering and business good."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

The Law of the Land, with Mme. Petrova (Paramount)—"A fair picture. My patrons did not like it. Star's emotional action poor."—H. C. Andress, New Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Mysterious Miss Terry, with Billie Burke (Paramount)—"Very well liked. Played to S. R. O."—H. C. Andress, New Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Heir of the Ages, with House Peters (Paramount)—"Get ready for a dull night when you run this one. The star is not known and the title scares one from entering. Has a prehistoric prologue to help pad it into five reels."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Pudd'n-head Wilson, with Theodore Roberts (Paramount)—"A splendid picturization of Mark Twain's work. Theodore Roberts in one of his best roles."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Clown, with Victor Moore (Paramount)—"This star is a great favorite and is especially well liked in this great heart-interest story."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Unknown, with Lou-Tellegen (Paramount)—"A very poor picture. Star has no drawing power whatever."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Mice and Men, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Excellent business. Always a full house on Marguerite Clark features."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

At First Sight, with Mae Murray (Paramount)—"A good average release. Business satisfactory."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

The Saw Dust Ring, with Bessie Love (Triangle) "A good picture but dragged out. Would make a good two-reel picture."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Sudden Jim, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"Not a very good picture for Ray, but we did very good business with it."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The Desert Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"Business great. Hart always pleases. Gives us classics in westerns."—R. E. Falkenburg, Majestic Theater, Lexington, Nebr.

The Girl Glory, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"A very good picture that is different. Star is great, photography fine, business good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Sin Ye Do, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"Excellence of quality marks this offering. Do not hesitate to recommend it."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

A Gamble in Souls, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"An excellent star pitifully miscast. Poor story, faulty staging and poor direction."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Manhattan Madness, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"Played to a good house but the patrons were disappointed. 'A poor picture,' was the comment."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Nick of Time Baby (Keystone)—"The audience howled over this and went away talking about it. Keystone, please make more like it."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Secrets of a Beauty Parlor (Keystone)—"A dandy comedy, to a dandy business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Social Secretary, with Norma Talmadge (Triangle)—"This picture took well and played to a good house in spite of warm weather. The star is popular."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Secrets of a Beauty Parlor (Keystone)—"A clever comedy. Good laughs. Fine settings and photography."—R. E. Falkenburg, Majestic Theater, Lexington, Nebr.

Her Circus Knight, with Ora Carew (Keystone)—"Business fair only on all Keystone comedies. They attract children only. Too much rough stuff."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea (Universal special)—"A novel picture that pleased generally and drew exceptionally well."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—Catering to better classes.

Son of the Gods, Chaplin Revue (Producer unknown)—"One of the worst impositions ever foisted upon an exhibitor."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Eternal Sin, with Florence Reed (Selznick)—"Very sensational, but proved attractive and business good for two days."—D. M. Bain, Royal Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

The House of Cards, with Frank Mills (Art Dramas)—"A very good picture. Pleased the audience and brought fairly good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Scarlet Letter, with Stuart Holmes (Fox)—"A big drawing card. Fine picture but too heavy for a frivolous audience. Good business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Scarlet Letter, with Stuart Holmes (Fox)—"Good business. Patrons divided on merit of the picture. They seem to want modern pictures."—R. E. Falkenburg, Majestic Theater, Lexington, Nebr.

The Innocent Sinner. with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"A fairly good picture. Fight scenes could be cut down. Star good. Business fair."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Tangled Lives, with Genevieve Hamper (Fox)—"A poor picture, not recognizable as Fox production. Good business, however."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class neighborhood.

Sister Against Sister, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"One of the best of the regular program pictures. Good business in spite of warm weather."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class neighborhood.

The War Bride's Secret, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"Best feature we have played recently."—Harley Train, Pastime Theater, Blue Mound, Ill.

The Vixen, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"We always get a full house on Fox pictures."—Harley Train, Pastime Theater, Blue Mound, Ill.

The Slave, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Story is a night-mare. No compliments and just the reverse. People laughed at it. Star draws well but is poorly directed."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—Catering to better classes.

Melting Millions, with George Walsh (Fox)—"Successful business owing to the popularity of the star, who is a second Douglas Fairbanks."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Siren, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"This did not appeal forcibly. Hard featured characterization. Business fair."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Her Greatest Love, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"No better than an ordinary program picture, nothing extra at that. Patrons greatly disappointed. Not worth the advanced price the producer asks."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

A Modern Cinderella, with June Caprice (Fox)—"Light comedy-drama. The star is a great favorite here. Played to a good house."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The New York Peacock, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Played to big business. Not much to the story, but fine as to photography and settings."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas—High class patronage.

The Derelict, with Stuart Holmes (Fox)—"A good picture but it did not draw for the simple reason that a villain is featured."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

A Tale of Two Cities, with William Farnum (Fox) "A good picture, very well liked. Played to capacity business."—H. C. Andress, New Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Iron Heart, with Edwin Arden (Pathe)—"A good picture. Good photography. Pleased all. Good business."—Carl W. Andre, Palace Theater, Kewaunee, Wisconsin.

Sunshine and Gold, with Marie Osborne (Pathe) "Excellent business. Little Mary Sunshine has always pleased here."—R. E. Falkenburg, Majestic Theater, Lexington, Nebr.

Prudence the Pirate, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe) "Her weakest production. Business only fair."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Her New York, with Gladys Hulette (Pathe)—"A splendid picture. The work of the Badgley child rivals the star."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Joy and the Dragon, with Marie Osborne (Pathe) "Do not be afraid to boost this. Full house in spite of much opposition on this night."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

A Matrimonial Martyr, with Ruth Roland (Pathe)—"One of the Pathe-color pictures and popular on that account. Shallow story but good acting."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas—High class patronage.

The Flower of Faith, with Jane Grey (Pathe)—"A series of thrilling stunts without a tangible story. Patrons not pleased."—Mrs. M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The World and the Woman, with Jeanne Eaglies (Pathe)—"Just about the limit in pictures. A conglomeration of ideas with nothing definite brought out."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Sunshine and Shadows, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"Capacity business always on this star's features. I consider her one of the cleverest of child actresses."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Crime and Punishment, with Derwent Hall Caine (Pathe)—"A remarkably well acted picture but it did not please, especially on account of the sordid story."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Jockey of Death (Pathe)—"Played this to capacity house. Pleased old and young alike. Full of interest and thrills."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Romantic Journey, with William Courtney (Pathe)—"My patrons considered this a poor picture. Good acting on the part of the star is its only redemption."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Saint, Devil or Woman, with Florence LaBadie (Pathe)—"Ordinary 'melo' offering. Nothing exceptionally sensational, and made no distinct impression. Business poor."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Arsene Lupin, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"They can't make them any better. Pleased all."—Carl W. Andre, Palace Theater, Kewaunee, Wisconsin.

Arsene Lupin, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"Direction, story, star and photography excellent—can't be improved upon. A great deal better than some so-called super-features that producers are asking advanced prices on."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

The Message of the Mouse, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Capacity business on this. A very good picture which went over big. Star is very popular."—W. S. McLaren, Majestic Theater, Jackson, Mich.

Richard, the Brazen, with Alice Joyce and Harry Morey (Vitagraph)—"A fair picture, but the audience seemed to like it. Business very good. A safe program 'bet.'"—W. S. McLaren, Majestic Theater, Jackson, Mich.

Phantom Fortunes, with Barney Bernard (Vitagraph)—"Business good. A poor picture. People were displeased."—J. Frank Stanley, Garden Theater, Newton, Ill.

Kitty Mackay, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"Picture fine. People were well pleased. Business doubled."—J. Frank Stanley, Garden Theater, Newton, Ill.

The Maelstrom, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph) "A very interesting picture. Audience well satisfied. Business very good."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

God's Country and the Woman, with Nell Shipman (Vitagraph)—"I consider this far above the average. Wonderful photography, intense action and realism. Box office receipts excellent. Everybody pleased."—J. J. Spielberger, Jr., Lyric Theater, Vinton, La.—High class patronage.

The Man Behind the Curtain, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"Fine. Everyone liked it."—H. A. Giles, Link Theater, Walkerton, Ind.

The Question, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"A good picture which played to good business."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

Whose Wife? with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"Splendid direction, beautiful star and fine photography combined to make a wonderful picture. Good business."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Innocence of Lizette, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Picture went over big as did all of the Minter features. This star is surely a winner."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Immigrant, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"In spite of city-wide opposition, we did fair business. Charlie is 'there' in this picture."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Torch Bearer, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"A fair picture but the last Russell for us until he gains more popularity."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Wildcat, with Jackie Saunders (Horkheimer-Mutual)—"This is a good comedy drama from start to finish."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

The Single Code, with Crane Wilbur (Horsley-Mutual)—"The star is good but this is a poor picture."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

The Heart of Texas Ryan, with Tom Mix (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Very poor picture for a high grade house.

Old type western that blows up completely at the end."—George A. Bleich, Empress Theater, Owensboro, Ky.—High class house catering to better classes.

---

The Prince of Graustark, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Pleased immensely. Good hot weather business. Essanay is surely improving."—R. O. Falkenburg, Majestic Theater, Lexington, Nebr.

---

---

The Golden Idiot, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Very good. Pleased capacity audiences but not as well as previous Washburn pictures. 'Honey' Daly was missed by patrons."—W. S. McLaren, Majestic Theater, Jackson, Mich.

---

Thou Shalt Not Covet, with Kathlyn Williams (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Fine, the best five-reel picture we ever ran. Good crowds on circus night."—H. A. Giles, Link Theater, Walkerton, Ind.

---

The Flame of Youth, with Jack Mulhall (Butterfly)—"One of the best pictures that I have run for some time. Plenty of action."—C. Taylor, Rialto Theater, Kewanee, Ill.

---

Like Wildfire, with Herbert Rawlinson (Butterfly)—"A sparkling comedy that took well with a mixed audience. Butterflies have been giving excellent satisfaction."—B. C. Brown, Star Theater, Viroqua, Wisconsin.

---

The Circus of Life, with Zoe Rae (Butterfly)—"Very weak plot. Business very poor with all Butterflies."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

---

A Wife on Trial, with Leo Pierson (Butterfly)—"It's a masterpiece! Every exhibitor should play it. Mr. Pierson is proficient in his part. Good business."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

Fighting for Love, with Ruth Stonehouse (Red Feather)—"A good picture. We played this some time ago."—Harley Trainer, Pastime Theater, Blue Mound, Ill.

---

The Untamed, with Mary Fuller (Universal-Star Featurette)—"Nothing extra. The star is O. K. Business ordinary."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

Mother o' Mine, with Ruth Clifford (Bluebird)—"Fine picture playing to a fair audience. The star is not well known."—H. C. Andress, New Lyric Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

---

The Boy-Girl, with Violet Mersereau (Bluebird)—"This would have been a good picture years ago. Miss Mersereau is very pleasing in her part."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

---

Behind the Lines, with Harry Carey (Bluebird)—"A fine picture which brought good business."—J. Frank Stanley, Garden Theater, Newton, Ill.

---

State Rights Men Organize

SOL L. LESSER SPONSORS "STATE RIGHTS DISTRIBUTORS, INC."

WITH the news of the organization of producers of pictures for the state rights market comes also the news of a combination of state rights distributors.

The organization has been formed for the purpose of purchasing outright negatives of special productions, either for the United States and Canada or for the world. The name of the new organization is "State Rights Distributors, Inc." It has been chartered for $50,000 in the state of New York. Manufacturers for the state rights field are already submitting their products to a temporary secretary and assistant manager of the organization, Leon D. Netter, whose office is at 524 Longacre Building, New York City.

Sol Lesser Originated Plan

Sol L. Lesser is the father of the idea of the new organization of the state rights men and has been elected its first president. Louis B. Mayer is treasurer and Louis Hass, of New York, vice-president.

The directors are:

Sol L. Lesser, of San Francisco; Louis Haas, of New York; Henry L. Dollman, of Indianapolis, Ind.; S. A. Lynch, of Asheville, N. C.; J. J. Allen, of Toronto, Canada; C. D. Struble, of Kansas City, Mo.; Louis B. Mayer, of Boston.

The purchasing committee consists of the following seven members. Five out of the seven will pass on pictures.

Nathan Hirsh, of New York; Louis B. Mayer, of Boston; Daniel M. Vandawalker, of Indianapolis; S. A. Lynch, of Asheville, N. C.; Leon D. Netter, of Cleveland; Sydney B. Lust, of Washington, D. C.; J. J. Allen, of Toronto, Canada.

Attorney for the organization, J. Robert Rubin.

Forty Offices Operated

All features purchased will be distributed throughout the United States and Canada through forty offices now in active operation. The entire United States and Canada are covered except the Minnesota and Colorado territories, both of which are being actively contested for. Definite announcement of the member finally chosen will be made within the next week.

The need of an organization of this kind has already been made evident by the fact that we already have under consideration negatives of five big productions. Business transacted through this organization will be done on a strictly cash basis.

Features will be extensively advertised on a national basis.

There is to be no discrimination shown as to distribution of pictures to exhibitors. Each exhibitor will be given an equal opportunity to exhibit films purchased.

This marks the successful culmination of the carefully laid plan of Sol L. Lesser, It allows the state right buyer the opportunity to buy big features on an equitable basis, and in turn rent same to the exhibitors at prices whereby they can make some money.

List of Members

Greater New York and New York State: Civilization Pioneer Film Company, with offices in New York and Buffalo.

New England States: American Feature Film Company, of Boston.

Ohio and Kentucky: Masterpiece Film Attractions, of Cleveland, Ohio.

California, Nevada and Arizona: All Star Features Distributors, Inc., with offices in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Canada and Alaska: Monarch Feature Film Company, with offices in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, St. John, Calgary and Vancouver.

Eastern Pennsylvania: Peerless Feature Film Company, of Philadelphia.

Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia: Supreme Photoplay Productions of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Legal Battle Looms

There appears to be an exceedingly lively possibility of legal complications as to the ownership of the motion picture rights in "The Burglar," which is announced for publication by World-Pictures Brady-Made. This is the screen version of a very successful stage play by Augustus Thomas, founded upon Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's widely read story, "Editha's Burglar."

The following letter from Alice Kauser, New York, received by Director General William A. Brady of the World corporation, seems to be the first step of a series intended to determine the exact status of the photoplay.

Having noticed extensive announcements of a forthcoming World picture based upon Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's story, "Editha's Burglar," and the play founded thereon, by Augustus Thomas, I should be very glad if you would inform me as to the authority under which you have undertaken the making of this picture, as I represent both Mrs. Burnett and Mr. Thomas in other negotiations to this same end.

Both Mrs. Burnett and Mr. Thomas assure me that they have given no authority whatever to the World Film Corporation, and have given no authority other than that which they vested in me for the negotiations that have now been in hand some three weeks, and were practically concluded at the time your announcements were made.

Your immediate reply will be appreciated by Mrs. Burnett, Mr. Thomas and myself.

At the offices of World Pictures it was stated that the film rights in "The Burglar," had been purchased in good faith from the owner, and that the photoplay would be issued on the regular World program October 22, with Carlyle Blackwell as the star and Evelyn Greeley and little Madge Evans as the "featured" players.

Jack Pickford in "Tom Sawyer"

Boys of all ages, from ten to ninety, will welcome the advent of Tom Sawyer, who seems to symbolize the real boy character as no other has ever done, who will strut bravely across the screen when Jack Pickford portrays the character in his forthcoming Paramount production. The fact that Louise Huff, the other member of the famous "kid" duo, will interpret Becky, is assurance that these two principal figures will be rendered to the last degree of perfection.

Injunction Against Chicago

Now comes a film company charging the mayor of Chicago and the chief of that city's censor board with something very close to treason.

The Fox Film Company has filed a bill in the United States District Court, asking an injunction to restrain Mayor Thompson, Major Funkhouser, chairman of the Chicago Board of Censors, and the chief of police from preventing the presentation in Chicago of "The Spy." It had been planned to open this production at the Studebaker Theater on Michigan Avenue on August 27. Major Funkhouser refused to issue a permit for the picture unless certain scenes were eliminated.

One section of the injunction bill states that the refusal of a permit for "The Spy" indicates Mayor Thompson's general attitude of opposition to the war and his repeated statements discouraging support of the United States in the vigorous prosecution of the war.

"The Spy" is the story of the adventures of a young American who is killed in his attempt to run down German spies in America.

Davenport Produces Film

With the private showing of the New York Central Railroad's new Safety First film, "The Rule of Reason," at the Rialto Theater, a once familiar figure in the motion picture directing field has returned to the firing line. Charles E. Davenport, who is the father of the Safety First film idea, directed this picture.

Mr. Davenport has incorporated in his latest pictures the same artistic touches as are to be found in all the large picture dramas. In teaching the lesson of Safety First, Mr. Davenport has not lost track of all the salient points that reach the human heart and sustain interest.

"I am back in the field again," said Mr. Davenport, "to make bigger and better pictures and to carry on our extended program of Safety First propaganda."

Varner Appointed by A. E. A.

The American Exhibitors' Association has appointed Harry B. Varner, of North Carolina, chairman of its legislative committee. Mr. Varner is the exhibitor who represented the theater men's interests in Washington on the 10 per cent tax and other questions. Mr. Varner has recently been in New York in conference with Manager John D. Williams, of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association. He then left for Washington to continue his work on the tax situation.

Mr. Varner is proprietor of several newspapers in the Carolinas, as well as an exhibitor. His acquaintance with officials at Washington makes him particularly valuable in representing the exhibitors on the pending tax question in Washington.

Billie Burke to Return to Stage

Billie Burke, now engaged in playing half the title role in "Arms and the Girl," for a Paramount picture, on August 20 will begin rehearsals of her new play by Clare Kummer, in which she will return to the stage.

Miss Burke has been away from the footlights for two years. Much of that time she has spent under the Klieg lights of the motion pictures, where she has scored a success in keeping with her position as one of the most popular stars in America. She is anxious to return to the stage, but equally anxious to continue her work in pictures.

Dorothy Dalton is ready to begin her first Paramount production under the direction of Thomas H. Ince.

HOW TO MAKE A THEATER PAY

ANY theater can be made to pay. It is simply a question of method. First, get your films. Second, advertise. Third, jolly up the community. Fourth, get enough people to come to your theater so that receipts always exceed the total of the expenditures, with some left over for heart balm.

This formula has never been known to fail.

Of course, there are incidental problems, such as making the people believe they ought to see your shows, but if you follow carefully the recipe given above you will always make money.

It's so simple the wonder is that nobody has ever published it before. We now make this gift to the world, "for the benefit of humanity."

HE WORKS WHILE YOU SLEEP

Charles Pettijohn, general manager of the new American Exhibitors' Association, went to New York from Indianapolis one day recently and jumped into his office in the Times Building and worked until 11 p. m. If everybody in the new A. E. A. keeps up with Charles it will be hard for anything to keep up with the A. E. A.

STILL DEALING IN KICKS

It is reported that the supply of chorus girls is very short in Chicago just now.

We think a good many of them have found employment listening to kicks instead of doing them.

Judging from appearances, we opine many of them are now picture house cashiers.

AN AWFUL LESSON

Members of Christy Mathewson's Cincinnati baseball team stopped fighting for and thinking about third place in the National League long enough to see Fox's "The Honor System," last week in their native city.

Immediately after the showing, which was by invitation, Manager Matty called the players into conference at their hotel. He seemed much perturbed.

"I was afraid that the picture might have affected them so much that the men wouldn't steal bases any more," Matty explained.

Press Rights Are Denied the Films

THE motion picture's most important defense against unscrupulous enemies and plotters has been its classification with the press. That the film producing business is a publishing business we have repeatedly declared and set forth in argument that was at least convincing to ourselves. And with that relation in mind, despoilers of film art have hesitated to carry their actions into conflict with the constitutional provision for freedom of the press.

In the face of recent court decisions which more or less completely deny the affiliation of press and picture, defenders of the film are called upon to redouble their vigilance. Just as pickpockets often successfully ply their trade in a court room, the parasites of industry frequently find in court opinions an efficient guide to more profitable—and safer—pursuit of illegitimate advantage. For the court, by very nature of its high calling, may only interpret the statutes, and cannot consider the ramifications of trouble that may follow upon its findings. The fault, if there be any, lies in the statute, not in those who explain it.

Some little time ago the United States Supreme Court, in an action brought against the Ohio censorship board, said:

> It cannot be put out of view that the exhibition of moving pictures is a business pure and simple, originated and conducted for profit, like other spectacles, not to be regarded, nor intended to be regarded by the Ohio Constitution, we think, as part of the press of the country, or as organs of public opinion.

The only remarkable thing about this decision is its exemption of the press of the country from the classification of "a business pure and simple, originated and conducted for profit." On this point we are forced to the temerarious position of disagreeing with the supreme court. There may be a few members of the press family that are not business, and not for profit; but they scarcely deserve to be classed as "organs of public opinion." They are, indeed, in all cases organs of private opinion—as must be all effort that is not supported by the public. The healthy, useful, influential press is as much a business pure and simple, organized and conducted for profit, as is any motion picture undertaking in the world.

Supreme Court Justice Ordway has just supplemented this decision with a ruling that still more emphatically denies the relationship of film and press. The court's opinion is that

> The fact that the defendant's films are photographs of actual current events * * * and are produced and distributed weekly and used as soon as possible after the occurrence of events, does not make them a newspaper; nor does it make them entitled to the protection extended to newspapers. * * *

In this action the plaintiff, who had been involved in some unusual events and therefore became the subject of a pictorial news "story," applied for an injunction against the maker of the film "weekly." The injunction was granted pending the outcome of a damage suit. In the court's opinion

> The defendants are exploiting the plaintiff's name and picture in their business for profit, and even if they are incidentally disseminating information as to the current views of the day, the plaintiff has the right to object. * * *
> The defendants argue that if this motion is granted it will seriously interfere with if not destroy their business, which gives information as to current events and innocent amusement to thousands; and they set forth at length the services they are rendering to the Government and to the Red Cross in connection with the present war—and the activities of good citizens in connection therewith. Even if this were true, the remedy is by an appeal to the Legislature.

That is rather an unfortunate phrase—that "Even if this were true." It sounds as though the court doubted the fact. We must presume that the court's expression is to be interpreted as "Granting that this is true." But the suggestion of a remedy in legislation is doubtless worth consideration. That may be the only way in which motion pictures can obtain equal privilege with the newspaper press. That they are entitled in all reason to such privilege is apparent; but the press is more than a generation old, and the pictures are less. That makes a difference. The world is accustomed to the exercise of press rights. In twenty years more it will grant camera rights as a matter of course.

Meantime there is, as the court suggests, the possibility of legislative relief and the present improbability of interference with news pictures which do not intrude upon what are now regarded as private rights. "It is not probable," says the court, "that any court will enjoin the use of moving picture films of current events of real importance because they happen as a mere incident to include among many the picture of an individual."

As it stands, the film newspaper cannot use the material that is free to the paper newspaper.

Incongruous Properties

ONE of the gravest faults of a few film producers is a spirit of "Let it go at that—it's good enough." This spirit is responsible for scenes labeled "Egyptian" which include, in their luxurious settings, Mexican potteries, Japanese cloisonne vases, Benares brass jardinieres, French carafes and Philadelphia carpets. It is responsible, too, for Police suspenders, Marshall Field sweater jackets and button shoes in fifteenth century pictures; for picket fences in the wilderness, for city "common battery" telephones in ranch houses.

We—and you, too—have seen historic armies provided with 1910 model rifles—and even automatic pistols. We have seen cannon that might have weighed several tons hauled briskly up a steep grade by a team of horses; we have seen prospectors lost in an unexplored country whose foreground plainly showed the twin ruts made by the director's Ford. But why enumerate a formidable aggregate of individually minute errors? Probably the majority of possible mistakes have been avoided; but too many have been made.

There is an unfortunate tendency to give the public credit for less perspicacity than we of the first part possess. That is a dangerous theory. The director who is aware of an incongruous setting but assumes that no one but he will notice it is trading too much on his egotism. Some in the audience are as sharp-visioned and as critical as he, and will not forgive him for his reflection on their observation and wisdom.

There is only one safe course for a director to pursue; and that is, of course, to be absolutely sure that all the properties in a setting correspond, and that every setting is free from intruding defects and is correct for its scene. There would be little excuse for repeating so simple and self-evident a rule did not the screen so frequently demonstrate its neglect.

Independent Producers Organize

"PRODUCERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION" FORMED IN NEW YORK

ORGANIZATION is in the air. The independent film producers have joined together in a co-operative organization, according to press reports from New York.

The new organization is to be known as the Producers' Protective Association and is said to have originated with William L. Sherill and some of the other companies manufacturing for territorial marketing. An application for a charter in the state of New York has already been filed and the organization will very soon elect permanent officials. William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, is acting as temporary chairman, with M. A. Schlesinger, of the Mayfair Film Corporation, treasurer, and Jesse O. Goldburg, of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, secretary.

Practically All Independents Join

According to reports, practically all of the film producers for independent marketing have joined or signified their allegiance to the new organization. These manufacturers are to make an attempt to remedy evils which have grown up in the territorial field, particularly the unclean pictures which are put out on state rights occasionally by unscrupulous, fly-by-night concerns. The new organization is determined to leave no stone unturned to eliminate all pictures which are objectionable to the public and a detriment to the industry.

State Rights Exchange Created

The Producers' Protective Association will also work toward closer relations and more definite understandings with the state rights buyers. For this purpose an exchange will be created and put in charge of a widely experienced manager. This exchange will aid the state rights buyers in securing desirable productions and will save him the trouble of investigating the productions of each independent producer separately, as all the pictures of member producers will be listed at the producers' exchange and a complete service will be provided for the prospective purchaser. No producer is, however, obligated to sell his productions through the producers' exchange.

All Films Passed on by Organization

Corporations will be admitted to the new association solely on merit, and all pictures must be passed by the general body. Membership is by corporation only, each one to name its representative and each to be given one vote. Fourteen concerns are said to be members of the new association already.

The temporary directors of the organization are Messrs. Sherrill, Schlesinger, Goldburg, Harry Rapf, president of Rapf Productions, Inc.; Dr. Shallenberger, head of the Arrow Film Corporation, and Joseph A. Golden, of the Triumph Film Corporation.

Miss Clark in "Sub-Deb" Series

"Bab's Diary" is a September Paramount release under the new Star selective booking plan. The series is the work of Mary Roberts Rinehart and the adaptations have been made with particular care so that none of the originality and flavor of the stories have been lost, while Bab, who has gained thousands of admirers among Saturday Evening Post readers, will become more than ever real in the hands of Miss Clark. J. Searle Dawley is directing the productions.

FILM MEN AT WAR MEETING

U. S. Chamber of Commerce Invites National Association to Send Delegates to "War Convention of American Business"

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has received an invitation to send delegates to a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, to be held at Atlantic City, New Jersey, September 18 to 21. The call for this meeting is issued by President R. G. Rhett, who sets forth in a statement accompanying the invitation the reasons for holding the meeting at this time and the subjects which are to be considered.

In view of the prominent part which the motion picture industry has already taken in connection with the war activities, the film men will be in a position to relate their activities during the past three months at this meeting, which is to be made the occasion for the business men of the nation to meet together in a convention to consider their part and share in the war, with a view to the formulation of generally approved lines of procedure. Consequently this is more than a special meeting and has been designated as "The War Convention of American Business."

The National Association will be entitled to several delegates at the meeting to be held at Atlantic City, and the invitation was presented for consideration at the last meeting of the board of directors, mentioned on another page of this issue.

Injunction Withdrawn

The injunction granted Mrs. Grace Humiston by Supreme Court Justice Ordway in New York to restrain the Universal Film Manufacturing Company from releasing the issue of the Animated Weekly containing pictures of Mrs. Humiston taken at the scene of the Cocchi murder has been withdrawn upon refusal of the plaintiff to provide a bond of $2,500. This was required to protect the defendants in the event of a final decision favorable to themselves, as the attorneys for the Universal immediately filed an appeal from Justice Ordway's decision.

Studios Enlarged

The U. S. Amusement studios, at Fort Lee, New Jersey, are being extensively remodeled and enlarged. The new plans will give almost double the floor space of the present arrangement. New lightings are being installed, extra scene docks are being built, and some large open air stages are to be shortly constructed.

The effect will be to practically make the place into an entirely new studio, with every modern improvement.

As soon as the improvements are completed, work will be started on another Art Drama starring Catherine Calvert.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION MEETS

Application for Membership by American Exhibitors' Association Denied—Mutual Film Corporation Resigns—President Brady Re-elected

The application of the American Exhibitors' Association for membership in the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been denied. This action was taken at the first meeting of the new body of directors of the latter body in New York on Monday, August 27. The application was denied by a vote of 24 to 5, only 29 of the directors voting. Thirty-two of the 42 directors were present at the meeting.

The other high lights of the National Association meeting was the election of William A. Brady to succeed himself as president, and the resignation of the Mutual Film Corporation as a member of the distributers' section of the association. This was referred to President Brady for action. Mutual's action, coming first, had no connection with the denial of membership to the American Exhibitors' Association.

Delegates to War Convention

The United States Chamber of Commerce sent an invitation to the National Association to send delegates to the big war convention to be held at Atlantic City, September 17 to 21. The delegates are to be appointed by President Brady. He was also requested by a resolution adopted by the association to appoint a committee to confer with the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of America in regard to future national motion picture expositions. A joint committee sat after the adjournment of the directors' meeting.

When interviewed by MOTOGRAPHY, General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn of the American Exhibitors' Association stated that the action of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry would in no way effect the organization or purposes of the A. E. A. He stated that the following communication, recently sent to the National Association, is still the exhibitors' attitude and will be re-tendered later if occasion requires.

A. E. A.'s Position

"To the president and directors of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry.

"Gentlemen: In order that the attitude of the American Exhibitors Association toward the National Association of Motion Picture Industry may be clearly understood, and that the directors may have definitely in mind our position with reference to what has been termed our application to affiliate with the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, I am instructed by our directors to write you the following:

"First—The American Exhibitors Association, on July 20, 1917, tendered, through William A. Brady, not as the president of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, but as the designated official, by reason of his selection by President Wilson, our hearty co-operation and services to help carry on the work set aside by our government for the motion picture industry during the present crisis. We are building a business organization of exhibitors to the end that this may be effectively done and results obtained.

"Second—We care not whether we have one or fifty vote either as directors or members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, because voting inside the industry cannot interest us.

"Third—We are asking nothing of you, and are offering only our affiliation and assistance in a stand with the other branches of the industry for what is healthful, and against that which unjustly attacks.

"Fourth—On the other hand, we will not, at any time, by any unit vote or combination of votes, permit ourselves to be bound to support any act, measure, or effort that is not for the best interests of real exhibitors of America, who comprise our membership, nor for or against any faction in any other branch of the industry that may hereafter develop.

"Fifth—We desire to have it clearly understood that our services are tendered, and that no application is made at this time for votes or for any change, in the by-laws of your organization.

"Sixth—We ask that the directors, at the meeting August 27, 1917, either promptly reject or accept our offer of affiliation, assistance and co-operation in such manner that our position may be clearly and definitely interpreted by our officers and entire membership."

The letter was signed by Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager.

In his remarks before the N. A. M. P. I. Frank Rembusch, organizer for the American Exhibitors' Association, stated that his organization was for the exhibitors "from hell to breakfast," and working for the exhibitors entirely, without being financed by any trade paper. An interesting story concerning the American Exhibitors' Association will appear in the next issue.

Before adjournment the directors of the National Association made plans looking toward the sending of new pictures to the American soldiers now on duty in France.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Vitagraph Ready to Show Its Christmas Week Feature Now if Necessary—Fourteen Companies at Work Bring Results

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, makes the declaration that Vitagraph is so far advanced in its production that the company could, if necessary, show its Christmas week feature now.

Some time ago Mr. Smith announced that Vitagraph would engage in the most active production era of its history, fourteen companies being at work simultaneously. Since that announcement, which was made about five weeks ago, all of these companies have completed the work they had in hand at the time and most of them are now actively producing pictures which will fill up the Vitagraph calendar for the remainder of this year.

John Robertson, formerly actor and director at the big Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn, has been brought back by Mr. Smith, having resigned from the Goldwyn staff after finishing "Baby Mine" with Madge Kennedy. Mr. Robertson directed Evart Overton in "The Bottom of the Well," a picture scheduled for Vitagraph's October program.

Thomas Terris, another well-known director, also has been engaged by President Smith and is directing Alice Joyce in a new Robert W. Chamber's play to be called "Anne's Bridge."

W. P. S. Earle is directing an O. Henry picture, "A Municipal Report," which will be made a five-reel Blue Ribbon feature. In this feature are Corinne Griffith, who has been Earle Williams' leading woman; Eulalie Jensen, "Mother" Mary Maurice, George Forth, Arthur Donaldson and William Dunn.

"Next Door to Nancy" is the title of a December picture in which Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald are working, Ashley Miller being the director.

Earle Williams, directed by Paul Scardon, has started work in "The Grell Mystery," a strong melodrama, in which he is supported by an exceptionally fine Vitagraph cast.

William Duncan and Carol Holloway, having just completed a five-reel "Wolfville" play, have begun work on another.

New Stars in "Soldiers of Chance"

Greater Vitagraph will head its September releases with a big, virile Oliver Curwood romance, "Soldiers of Chance," with Evart Overton, Miriam Fouche and Julia Swayne Gordon as the featured players.

The story, which breaths the very spirit of the great outdoors, is a typical Oliver Curwood creation, and a greater part of its locale is laid in the midst of the enchanting wilds of Central America. It tells of the devotion of a girl for her father over whom hangs the shadow of murder. Her unselfish love for him leads her to become affianced to an unscrupulous promotor who has a signed confession of murder extorted from her father and which he uses as a bludgeon to force the girl, Josephine Winton, to marry him on threat of exposure.

Despite the dictations of Cupid who bids her marry Billy Mountain, another victim of the promoter's dishonesty, and who meets her while bound on a mission of vengeance, she agrees to marry the promoter to save her father.

Many exciting adventures follow, involving a Central American revolution. Evart Overton, as Billy Mountain, the rebels' backer, is discovered in the enemy's stronghold in quest of his sweetheart and is sentenced to be shot. At the psychological moment the insurgents capture the city. The final denouement comes when Mountain, who is distracted by the girl's strange actions and refusal to marry him, overtakes the promoter who is fleeing with the girl. The promoter, in an attempt to kill Mountain, is himself slain by one of Mountain's followers. The man whom the father was supposed to have murdered then turns up in quest of the compensation promised him to remain "dead" and the father is exonerated. Josephine is then free to follow the dictates of her heart and the lovers' happiness is unalloyed.

Playing the role of Billy Mountain, Evart Overton again demonstrates that he is one of the most finished leading men on the screen. It is declared to be the best thing he ever has done. Julia Swayne Gordon, another Vitagraph favorite, plays the part of a Spanish senorita with all the grace and dignity generally associated to people of this type.

New Buying Organization

There have been numerous rumors of a new exhibitors buying organization to be formed for the purpose of buying world rights for big special pictures. It is understood that several of the leading exhibitors of the country who are not members of the First National Exhibitors Association will be in New York next week for the purpose of discussing plans for the formation of an exhibitors buying organization.

Several of the independent feature producers have been approached by representatives of the exhibitors and it is understood that offers have been made for some special pictures now in the making.

Public Needs Pictures With Humor

By George K. Spoor.
President Essanay Film Manufacturing Company

The motion picture industry, both manufacturer and exhibitor, must, and I know it will, accept its full share of the burden in facing the present war crisis. It has had to give generously of its players, its business heads and its technicians to the army at the front.

It remains for those who are left to do what they can to alleviate the conditions under which the world is staggering. Outside of material aid, I know of nothing so much needed, nothing of so great importance as to furnish the public with enlivening humor.

This will entail no sacrifice on the part either of manufacturer or exhibitor, as humor is greatly in demand at all times, but especially now that the nation is giving its sons to the battlefields of France. And what the public calls for is ever worth while.

It will, however, entail no inconsiderable effort upon the part of the manufacturer, as genuine humor is not easy to find and still harder to develop. But it is well worth the effort, both in the heartening of a depressed public and in supplying something for which there is so great demand.

Not since the civil war has there been such a dark cloud of depression settling over the nation. This cloud is bound to grow darker and more ominous as the war goes on and we begin to hear of the tragedies among our own troops at the front. Not even success of our forces can dispel the gloom, and not until peace is in sight will there be any perceptible lightening of the darkness of the days.

It needs no seer to discern that humor, in both literature and photoplays, is what is most needed to alleviate the tragedies of life and instill a cheer that will help to lighten the burdens of the time. It is up to manufacturers and exhibitors alike to attune themselves to the needs of the public and to supply the want.

Cheering photoplays are also needed for the men at the front. They must have something to laugh at to divert their minds from the gloom of the surroundings in which they are fighting the battles of the world.

Essanay already is striving along this line. It has aimed in the past few months, and still is aiming, to produce, not tragedies, but the light comedy pictures, plays that will not depress, but cheer.

It is not aiming at slapstick, though this may have its place, but the homey, comedy-drama pictures, which carry heart interest, fascinating plots, and at the same time a vein of genuine humor, photoplays that present normal life, life sane and real, with all its little touches of humor of the incidents of the every day world.

To do this it secured works of such humorists and cheerful fiction writers as George Ade, Henry Irving Dodge, Clarence Budington Kelland, Robert Rudd Whiting, George Barr McCutcheon, Samuel Merwin, Arthur Stringer and many others. Many humorists undoubtedly will be developed, as always during such times, and Essanay is ever on the lookout for them.

Not least of its efforts has been the one to develop its players in these lines and to seek others from both the stage and screen. Among its present staff of leading players who have shown a decided bent in interpreting the light comedies are Bryant Washburn, Taylor Holmes, who made such a success in "His Majesty Bunker Bean," little Mary McAlister and Jack Gardner, of musical comedy fame.

That Essanay's policy of producing pictures of the light comedy type, pictures filled with humor and comic situations, has been proven correct, is shown by the reception of such productions as the three Skinner plays, "Skinner's Dress Suit," "Skinner's Bubble," and "Skinner's Baby," "The Golden Idiot," "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," "Filling His Own Shoes," "The Breaker," "Little Shoes," and others of a similar type.

Mozukin in First Art Film

Ivan Mozukin, foremost actor in Russia and the star around whom is built the repertory of the films soon to be introduced in the United States by N. S. Kaplan and the Russian Art Film Corporation, will play the leading part in the first Russian Art Film release, "The Painted Doll." Arrangements are nearly completed for the first showing to the trade of this and other screen dramas produced by the famous Moscow Art Theater company.

The Russian star, Mozukin, plays the hero of the Francis X. Bushman type and the villian as conceived by Stuart Holmes with equal facility. He has a slight similarity to Douglas Fairbanks, but none at all to Charlie Chaplin. In many of his plays he appears "straight," but he does not hesitate to conceal his features with makeup when the role requires. So great is his versatility that in one of his most popular roles he creates a character at the age of eighteen years and carries through the various stages of the man's life to eighty.

In "The Painted Doll" Mozukin will be seen as a famous engineer with a record of achievement in big things. His wife frowns on his success in the profession he has chosen because it almost eliminates him from her social aspirations, for which he has no interest. They are separated for long periods of time and during one of these separations he becomes fascinated with the beautiful wife of one of his subordinates. To have her for himself alone he is forced to murder the husband. Then his wife gives birth to a son and in the torture that follows his efforts to forget the other woman and his crime he imagines that his son has been taken from him and he becomes insane.

Lillian Walker in Ogden Pictures Corporation's "The Lust of the Ages."

Novel Production Idea

The Ogden Pictures Corporation is adopting a new idea that will materially tend toward opening up wider possibilities in the art of producing photo-dramas. Every method of stage construction, including photography, technical direction and art setting, is being abandoned, wherever possible, and experiments conducted along new lines for the creation of effects and situations that have never appeared heretofore in photo-dramas. This applies equally as well to lighting effects.

One innovation which has already been employed in "The Lust of the Ages" is the elimination in certain parts of the production of "cutback" and the employment in its stead of dual scenes thrown upon the screen at the same time. These are not double exposures in the common acceptation of the word, but, in fact, consist of two separate sets of scenes and independent action photographed at the same time.

The idea of this originated with Harry Revier, director of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, and enhances the value of the story. The employment of this novel method is at times dangerous, since, unless it is properly performed, it would likely result in confusion, and naturally cannot be employed in every instance where a "cutback" or "double exposure" could be used.

"In brief," said Mr. Park, of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, "we aim, of course, primarily, to stage an unusual story and to have every picture bring forth something new, so that the photoplay world, which includes the fan public, will marvel still further at the wonderful possibilities of the screen."

Reorganizing Picture Club

As MOTOGRAPHY has previously told, the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago has been dissolved and a reorganization committee has been placed in charge of its affairs. A new motion picture club is to be organized and the commtitee has already made considerable progress in that direction.

Several meetings have been held at the Hamilton Club, under the direction of Richard R. Nehls, chairman; Ralph O. Proctor, president of the Reel Fellows Club; Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago branch of the M. P. E. L. of America and other prominent film men of the Windy City are at work on the committee organizing a new social club on a conservative and enduring basis.

The reorganization committee will hold its next meeting at the Hamilton Club on September 4. A complete report of this session will appear in MOTOGRAPHY.

Alice Brady Forms Company

According to reports from New York, Alice Brady has departed from the World Company and has formed a film concern of her own, incorporated in the state of New York for $250,000.

A studio has been secured near New York, it is said, and production is expected to begin immediately. Miss Brady plans to produce eight features a year, the first to be ready in October.

Beecroft Returns

Chester Beecroft, the well known film expert, has returned to New York after an adventurous trip abroad where he made some remarkable foreign connections.

On the way from England to Norway the ship on which Mr. Beecroft was traveling was torpedoed by a German submarine. First reports stated that all on board were lost, but Mr. Beecroft's arrival in New York have tended to prove that the news of his death was "greatly exaggerated."

Hobart to Write for Paramount

Added to the already large and constantly growing list of noted authors who are writing original photoplays for Paramount and Artcraft stars, is George V. Hobart, one of the most successful of American playwrights, who has just been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players—Lasky Corporation to prepare exclusive screen material for that organization.

"The Conqueror" with William Farnum

A mistake was made in last week's MOTOGRAPHY. In speaking of "The Conqueror," one of the new Fox Standard Pictures, credit for playing the role of General Sam Houston was given to the wrong Farnum. It should have been "Bill" instead of Dustin.

Madame Petrova, who has formed her own company.

Petrova Leases Studio from Selznick

Petrova Picture Company, the organization that will produce and market Madame Petrova's personally-supervised pictures, announces that the distinguished Polish actress has leased from Lewis J. Selznick the Biograph Studio, New York City, until arrangements have been completed for a permanent Petrova studio. The production of her first picture will begin September 3.

Madame Petrova has selected George Irving to direct her first picture. Mr. Irving was chosen because of his splendid work in the direction of "The Witching Hour" and "Jaffray." Another example of his art will be seen in "Raffles," John Barrymore's recently-finished picture.

Two unusually strong stories are now being prepared for production. One is a story written by Madame Petrova, which furnishes a splendid vehicle for her talent; the other is a popular novel full of dramatic situations. These two stories will be the first Petrova pictures. Both will be in seven reels.

Since the announcement to the trade of Madame Petrova's intention to produce her own pictures, four of the biggest releasing companies have made advance offers for her productions. The policy of the company is to confine its efforts at present solely to making the picture, leaving the distribution for later settlement, but in view of the big offers now being received, on which advance payments of $100,000 have been tendered, the company may decide that it is to its advantage to make an early decision.

An interesting feature of the arrangement between Madame Petrova and Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Picture Company, is that unless both approve of the picture it will be "scrapped." In case one or the other disapproves of the completed picture, it is agreed that Madame Petrova will freely devote her time to the making of a picture to replace it, and that Petrova Picture Company will contribute the necessary money.

Lincoln Entertains Press Men

Three automobiles carrying about eighteen trade paper representatives smoked through the city of Springfield, Mass., and dusted the roads for about thirty-five miles west of the town on Saturday, August 18, to storm the country home of E. K. Lincoln, prominent photoplay star.

The fact that the aforesaid persons were invited according to the strictest codes of etiquette did not lessen in the least the business of storming. They answered the cordial welcome of E. K. in the joyful tones that mark the desk hound out for a day in the open, and straightforth proceeded to be at home.

Lincoln proved a wonderful host. He said: "You'r here to enjoy yourselves. Now hop to it," or words to that effect, and his instructions were carried out to the period. His 4,500 acre estate contained a lake or two, tennis courts, real woods, automobiles and the majority of the best food this year.

E. K. had thought of everything long ahead and had it ready—even to the pasteboards and circular celluloid disks which helped to while away the midnight oil. T. E. Letendre, Mr. Lincoln's representative, chaperoned the party and took good care of the boys, seeing that none of the autos hit above the fifty-mile-an-hour mark on the way to and from the elusive New Haven railroad.

About half of the guests were obliged by duty to return to New York Monday morning, but the envied rest stayed until Tuesday afternoon. Those who made the trip were: Gerald C. Duffy, Picture Play Magazine; William Barry, Motion Picture News; Peter Milne, Everyweek and Longacre Lampoon; Edwin La Roche, Motion Picture Magazine; Charles R. Condon, Motography; Ben Grimm, Moving Picture World; C. A. Kracht, Morning Telegraph; A. Cormier, Exhibitors Trade Review; Walter McKeagh, Motion Picture Classic; William Beecroft, Exhibitors Herald; G. Thompson, Dramatic Mirror; N. Boneil, Clipper; Colgate Baker, New York Review; Jack Edwards, Billboard; Louis Haines, "Nothing But the Truth" Company; Lumiere, photographer, and T. E. Letendre.

Mary Miles Minter in "Charity Castle"

Mary Miles Minter, the "Crown Princess" of the motion picture, whose success in heart interest drama has been of a phenomenal sort, is starred in a new five-act dramatic fantasy, "Charity Castle," produced under Mutual-American auspices for release September 3. It was written by O. Doty Hobart, a magazine and scenario writer of national reputation.

Director Lloyd Ingraham, one of the leading men of his profession, studied the play for several weeks with Miss Minter and the author before it was decided to place "Charity Castle" in rehearsal, but in this instance, as in many others, Mary's voice was the deciding one in the matter.

"I don't base my judgment on the technic, though that is excellent," said Miss Minter, as the discussion of Mr. Hobart's play ended, "but upon my own instinctive feeling that it will act. If I am able to feel the heart throbs in the story from merely reading it in script, I know that I can make it live and breathe on the screen.

"Enough said," snapped the director. "Book 'Charity Castle.'"

This story is one of pretty sentiment in which Miss Minter, as "Charity," the pretty little girl of the slums, superior to her surroundings because of her innate understanding of human nature, overcomes great obstacles and brings order out of chaos by sheer force of her fascinating personality.

The play provides striking contrasts and is alive with intense situations and striking climaxes, in each of which Mary strongly features. Miss Minter is at her prettiest and most appealing when she figures as the arbiter of human fortunes through the exercise of her extraordinary charm. In this play she succeeds in converting a grouchy old millionaire from his grouch and makes a human being of him.

The process is one that may be watched with intense interest by all who are interested in the power of mind over matter. Charity's mind is a child's mind, unsullied by contact with the world's impurities, and because she is the personification of charity she is able to sway the actions of men and women old enough to be her grandparents, bringing them to realization of the verities and to enjoyment of the happiness that is derived from good works.

M. P. E. L. Heads Hold Meeting

An important meeting of the officers and executive committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America was held in New York Saturday, August 25.

Many things demanding the attention of exhibitors have occurred since the Chicago convention which necessitated consideration and the establishment of a definite policy for their handling.

The music tax question, the deposit system and new plans for extending the power and effectiveness of the League were considered.

Chicago was represented by quite a delegation, which included such well-known theater men as Joseph Hopp, Peter Schaefer, Alfred Hamburger, Robert Levy and William J. Sweeney.

Rothacker on Red Cross Committee

Evan Evans, director of the bureau of motion pictures of the American Red Cross, has appointed Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, as a member of the advisory committee of the American Red Cross bureau of motion pictures.

Mr. Rothacker has accepted and will assume these duties in addition to his duties as a member of the War Co-operation Committee, appointed by President Brady of the National Association.

Taken in the offices of Paralta Plays, Inc., on August 20 when Mr. Walthall singed his contract with Paralta, under which he will make his art productions under his own management at the Paralta studios in Hollywood. He will release through Triangle Distributing Corporation on the star series booking system.*

WALTHALL WITH PARALTA

Popular Actor Gets Unusual Contract With Paralta—To Head Own Company and Be Star-Manager and Producer

Henry B. Walthall has become a star-manager at the head of his own independent producing company. He will fill the same relation to the screen in America that is occupied by Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Cyril Maude to the legitimate stage in England. He will personally select the subjects for production and be the final authority in connection with each photo-drama in which he appears. He will be in fact a star-manager-producer, a factor entirely new to motion picture productions.

This situation was brought about on August 20 through negotiations conducted between N. William Aronson, Mr. Walthall's personal manager, and Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc.

Mr. Walthall will head a corporation to be called the "Henry B. Walthall Pictures Corporation," now being formed.

Mr. Walthall's pictures will be made at the Paralta studios in Hollywood, Cal., and will be released by the Triangle Distributing Company on the star series plan.

Mr. Walthall left for Los Angeles, planning to stop over one day in Chicago to complete some personal business. His first vehicle has been selected and will be put in production the moment he reaches Hollywood. Who is to be his director and camera-man Mr. Walthall would not state before his departure, but he did say that Mary Charleson, who had been his leading woman in several productions in which he had recently appeared, would continue to play leads in his new company.

Mr. Walthall is regarded by competent critics as one of the most finished actors on the screen. Many players of position and prominence in the legitimate theater speak of him as the most talented actor on either stage or screen. He worked with Mr. Griffith during the time that director was producer for Biograph and went with him in 1913 to the Majestic Motion Picture Company.

With Biograph he made a great hit as Holofernes in "Judith." With the Majestic Company he played the boy in David Wark Griffith's "Avenging Conscience," founded on Poe's "Telltale Heart," which many regard as the greatest picture ever produced by Mr. Griffith. Mr. Walthall also made a big hit as the Confederate colonel in Mr. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation."

During the past two years Mr. Walthall was leading player for Essanay, appearing in this company's feature plays.

Strenuous Work in "Fighting Trail"

An idea of the strenuous life lived by Miss Carol Holloway in the making of the Vitagraph serial, "The Fighting Trail," is indicated in the fact that the little star wore out completely three wardrobes in the seven months' work. Boots, skirts, flannel riding shirts and sombreros all gave way under strain of the dare devil stunts performed by the little star in the wilds of the Sierras. When the salesmen in the big sporting goods house in Los Angeles greeted her with the question, "Well, what is it this time?" she would reply, "Same things," and buy the outfit all over again.

Miss Holloway, having ridden through fifteen episodes in "The Fighting Trail," felt equal to anything in the way of a riding part that might come her way. It was with much joy, therefore, that she received the manuscript of "Dead Shot Baker," the new five reel feature in which she will play opposite to William Duncan.

Most folks are satisfied to receive a raise in salary at the completion of a job well done, but Director William Duncan did much better than this in "The Fighting Trail," Vitagraph's great all-outdoor serial. Mr. Duncan directed the picture and also played lead with Miss Carol Holloway. One day Duncan was summoned to the office of W. S. Smith, manager of the Vitagraph's Hollywood studio.

"I told you, Bill, I was afraid that last episode you shipped was draggy," observed Mr. Smith. "I knew the Eastern office would not stand for it." Mr. Smith sighed and so did Mr. Duncan. Then picking up a telegram from his desk the studio manager told the star to read.

"Duncan serial stuff great. Authorize you to give him an increase in salary to take effect at once." The wire was from the home office in New York.

The secret of Duncan's success in finishing "The Fighting Trail" seven days ahead of schedule time lies in his remarkable capacity for work and indomitable courage in the face of overwhelming obstacles. On one occasion he established a screen record of thirty-six scenes between dawn and dark, and on another he worked the serial company for twenty-four hours, in eight hour shifts, he alone being on the job all the time. And in addition to directing the picture, he played the leading role with Miss Carol Holloway.

Julius Stern, president of the L-Ko Comedies, is in the White Mountains for a month's stay.

Exhibitors Advertise Goldwyn Heavily

NEWSPAPER SPACE USED LAVISHLY AS NEW COMPANY TAKES FIELD

JOSEPH GROSSMAN, lesse and manager of the Standard Theater, Cleveland, has signed a contract for Goldwyn Pictures and inaugurates first run service in Cleveland on September 9, with Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus."

Mr. Grossman is one of the ablest exhibitors in America and his showmanship has proved immensely successful largely because of his understanding of the vital importance of daily newspapers in motion picture advertising and promotion. Over a period of years he has been one of the largest, perhaps the largest, users of space in the four newspapers of Cleveland—the Plain Dealer, Leader, Press and News—and these dailies that blanket their community have packed the Standard Theater to its capacity limit.

Eagerness of big exhibitors to inaugurate their fall season with Goldwyn Pictures has resulted in the prereleasing of "Polly of the Circus" in several cities at the solicitation of managers and owners of theaters.

Robert Lieber of Indianapolis will begin his season at the Circle Theater with "Polly of the Circus," on August 27, and Jones, Linnick and Schaefer will play this attraction, beginning the same day, in the Colonial Theater, Chicago.

Prints of "Polly of the Circus" are now arriving at all of the Goldwyn offices throughout North America and will be shown at once to exhibitors in the various territories. This unusual photo-spectacle is stimulating Goldwyn's contract bookings throughout the country and seems destined to take its place as one of the finest achievements of the screen.

C. E. Whitehurst, president and general director of The New Theater, Baltimore, has closed a contract for all Goldwyn productions for that fine institution. Like all alert exhibitors, Mr. Whitehurst promptly planned to enlist the services of the Baltimore newspapers.

The New Theater begins its Goldwyn releases simultaneously with their presentation in other cities, "Polly of the Circus" being presented on September 9 and "Baby Mine" on September 23.

Displays Introduce Goldwyn in Canada

Men who have had a long and intimate knowledge of the motion picture industry express amazement at the enthusiasm with which exhibitors signing contracts for Goldwyn Pictures advertise and exploit these new productions in their local communities. The scale on which this is being done in various parts of the United States and Canada is greater than has ever before been attained by a new company.

In Calgary, Alberta, Canada, N. B. Wright, manager of the Regent Theater, and one of the foremost exhibitors in the Dominion, is carrying half-page advertisements in every newspaper in Calgary and spending several thousand dollars in a period of three weeks merely to tell the Calgary public of the Goldwyn stars and productions. Mr. Wright has contracted for all Goldwyn productions for a period of one year and releases "Polly of the Circus" September 9.

First Trade Showing in South

Approval for the type and quality of Goldwyn productions was voiced by leading exhibitors in the south, who last week attended a trade showing of "Baby Mine," starring Madge Kennedy, at the Goldwyn offices in Atlanta. This showing was held under the direction of Arthur Lucas, southern manager.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, which never before has stated a star's salary or the cost of a production, because so many elements of the industry are habitually inaccurate in these matters, declares that "Polly of the Circus," released September 9, cost $25,000 and that this amount was deliberately invested in the production to give exhibitors a great profit-making picture.

Such pictures as "Polly of the Circus," whether obtained by accident or design, invariably have been separated from a company's other productions and released to exhibitors at advanced rental prices or played directly to the public at higher prices of admission.

The owners of Goldwyn, watching the growth of Margaret Mayo's photo-spectacle, have from the beginning intended to give the exhibitors this and other productions which would bring the public flocking into the motion picture theaters, feeling that this policy of liberality would establish Goldwyn more quickly than anything else that might be done. There is no secret psychology in a policy of this kind, for it is merely a sane mercantile system which assumes that patrons who are satisfied with a company's product will return again and again to buy from the same company, providing the goods sold maintain the high standards established in the beginning.

It is confidently predicted that this production will attract huge audiences and such skilled and far-seeing showmen as Mitchel H. Mark, Harold Edel and their associates in the New York Strand predict that the initial Goldwyn production will break all attendance records at that house for any week since the opening of the Strand three years ago.

"Eternal Magdalene" A Screen Achievement

When Maxine Elliott returned to America from the battlefields of western Europe to become a star in Goldwyn Pictures and make her screen debut she at once expressed a desire to be cast for an emotional role in which the dramatic element was uppermost.

"I do not feel like playing society comedy or the lighter roles with which I have been identified," she said. She desired particularly to get away from drawing room roles which she believed exploited her beauty at the expense of her dramatic ability.

In "The Eternal Magdalene" it will be found that Miss Elliott did not overestimate her own powers, for she does the most distinctive work of her career. This picture also serves to introduce Arthur Hopkins, producer of many stage successes, into the cinema field as a director for the films.

It is doubtful whether there has ever been a motion picture that embodied so many claims upon the sympathies of an audience as the story so successfully told in this production. In a word, it might be termed a great morality play worked out and acted in a modern environment and made to touch the lives and the environment of every person who sees it.

Miss Elliott is supported in this production by Charles Dalton, McKay Morris, Maude Colling and Marguerite Marsh, sister of Mae Marsh.

"Nearly Married" Started

Edgar Selwyn has provided the next starring vehicle for Madge Kennedy, which is the picturization of his successful and delightful comedy, "Nearly Married."

For some time now the author has been preparing his comedy for picture presentation, elaborating the story so as to carry out completely its detail in continuity, and work on the production is now under way at the Goldwyn studios, where Madge Kennedy is again in the hands of the directors.

OCTOBER ARTCRAFT RELEASES

Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar and William S. Hart in Three Extraordinary Box Office Productions for October

One of the greatest arrays of motion picture attractions ever offered in one month by a distributing organization was last week announced by Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation as the October releases of his company. Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar and William S. Hart, three of the most powerful box-office names in productions extraordinary are scheduled for release by Artcraft during this month.

The first offering will be Douglas Fairbanks in a photoplay entirely different from anything in which he has appeared on the screen to date. The original title of this picture, "Fancy Jim Sherwood," has been changed to "The Man From Painted Post."

A comedy drama of exceptional action and true Western atmosphere this photoplay offers the energetic Douglas new opportunities to disclose not only situations of typical Fairbanks construction, but incidents of stirring dramatic qualities. In addition to an exceptional supporting cast this film presents the most notable collection of champion cowboys ever assembled for a motion picture. Frank Campeau, Eileen Percy, William Lowery and Rhea Haines appear in the chief supporting roles. Joseph Henaberry is the director, assisted by Millard Webb and Victor Fleming, head of the Fairbanks photographic department, is the cameraman. The film is now rapidly nearing completion.

Artcraft's second October offering marks the return to the screen of Geraldine Farrar, the favorite of the screen and operatic stage. "The Woman God Forgot" is the title of her new production from the pen of Jeanie Macpherson and staged under the personal direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

Supporting Miss Farrar are such popular motion picture artists as Wallace Reid, Hobart Bosworth, Raymond Hatton and James Neill, as well as the famous Russian dancer, Theodore Kosloff. This photoplay is undoubtedly the most elaborate ever produced for Artcraft and that it will create a country-wide sensation is confidently anticipated.

As its third release in October, Artcraft announces its initial Hart-Ince offering, "The Narrow Trail," a typical William S. Hart subject written by himself. The great popularity of this Western "Bad Man" is the result of unusual ability and individuality. As leading lady to the star, Sylvia Bremer, who appeared with him with notable result in "The Cold Deck," adds her exceptional talents to the general merit of the picture. In addition to its swift action and human interest appeal, the photoplay offers various startling feats in horsemanship amidst beautiful mountain country.

"The World for Sale" Finished

The first of the Sir Gilbert Parker novels to be screened by Blackton Productions, Inc., for release by Paramount Pictures Corporation, has been completed, so far as the actual taking of scenes is concerned. This is "The World for Sale," and in book form proved one of the best sellers of the day. It is now being titled and cut and will be assembled as rapidly as possible.

Margery Wilson, in the circle on the left, will soon be seen in "Mountain Dew," her first starring vehicle, which will be ready for release early in September.

SEPTEMBER TRIANGLE BILL

First Fall Releases, Scheduled for September 2, Include "Ten of Diamonds" and "The Man Hater" —Other Attractions

"Ten of Diamonds" by Albert Cowles and "The Man Hater," a Saturday Evening Post story by Mary Brecht Pulver, are listed as the first fall releases from the Triangle Film Corporation, appearing on the program for the week of September 2.

"Ten of Diamonds," which is being featured at the Strand Theater, New York City, this week concerns a girl of a cheap tenderloin cafe who is metamorphosed into "a lady" at the caprice of an idle young rich bachelor, who aims to play a trick on society by presenting her as a wealthy tourist spending the winter in New York. He also intends to use her as a weapon of vengeance against a society man who has humiliated him. The woman from the streets upsets these plans, however, by becoming mistress of her own destiny. The cast includes the featured players of "The Flame of the Yukon," one of the most successful of Triangle plays.

"The Man Hater" was published as a story by Mary Brecht Pulver in the Saturday Evening Post of June 9. It is issued as a picture by Triangle on September 2. Winifred Allen has the role of the fascinating man hater. She is supported by Jack Meredith, Harry Neville, Jessie Shirley, Marguerite Gale, Robert Vivian and little Anna Lehr.

The Triangle comedies for this program are "His Fallen Star," with Harry McCoy, Frederick Bertrand, Gladys Tennyson and Eddie Sutherland, and "His Foothill Folly," with Ray Griffith, Eleanor Field and Frank Bond.

"His Fallen Star" is the story of astronomers looking for a new star and of a young genius, Harry McCoy, who invents, with the aid of a box of fireworks, one for them. The inventive youth thereby wins the near-sighted astronomer's daughter as a bride.

The other comedy, "His Foothill Folly," is a burlesque of the western bad-man pictures. This Keystone gunfighter has his own private graveyard, his own particular brand of stimulant and his evangelical girl. It is described as a melodrama of laughter.

"A Shanghaied Jonah," featuring Maude Wayne, Billy Armstrong, Guy Woodward and the mermaid contingent of the Keystone camp is the Keystone two-reeler that will enlighten picturegoers during the first week of the fall. It is the fable of the ill-fated Jonah brought up to date.

A production which is considered by Triangle officials to be of unusual box-office merit is "Idolaters," starring Louise Glaum, which will be issued on the program of September 9. In this play Miss Glaum returns to the adventuress type that first brought her into prominence as an emotional actress. On the same bill Bessie Love will be featured in "Polly Ann," the tale of an orphan who becomes, in turn, slavey, barnstorming actress and heiress.

Cohan in Telescoped Photoplay

"It is a photoplay within a photoplay within a photoplay, with characters in each separate photoplay laughing at those in all the other photoplays." Such was the description of George M. Cohan's second Artcraft picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," given recently at an advance showing by a well known critic.

The film was staged under the direction of Hugh Ford and among the well-known players in the cast are Anna Q. Nilson, Mrs. De Wolfe Hopper, Joseph Smiley, Russell Bassett and others of equal popularity, some of whom appeared in the original play.

Milton Sills Joins Ivan

Milton Sills, who was accorded the stellar honors by his wonderful characterization of the role of Joseph Stanton in "The Honor System," has been engaged by the Ivan Film Productions to create the leading role in "Married in Name Only." Edmund Lawrence, the director of the new production, has expressed great satisfaction in the acquirement of an actor of the renown of Mr. Sills, and the role ascribed to him best serves to bring out the talents Mr. Sills has so capably demonstrated he possesses.

Milton Sills, splendid actor now with Ivan.

Milton Sills was born in Chicago and was educated at the University of Chicago. After a varied career he became leading man in many Broadway productions, among which are "This Woman or This Man" and "The Happy Marriage," both by Clyde Fitch. He was also with Blanche Bates in her famous success of "The Fighting Hope," in the great plays, "Mother," "The Rack" and "Diplomacy," and the two well-known Belasco successes, "The Governor's Lady" and "The Man Inside," in the legitimate drama, "Panthea," with Olga Petrova, in "The Law of the Land" and "Just Boys," as well as many other productions which have enjoyed great success. Deserting the legitimate for the screen, Mr. Sills created the leading male roles in productions such as "The Deep Purple," "The Pit" and "The Arrival of Perpetua." For the other companies Mr. Sills made some of the big features, the most successful being "Under Sunny Skies" and "The Woman Who Lied." Mr. Sill's greatest success on the screen is the remarkable characterization of Joseph Stanton in the twelve-reel production, "The Honor System," which has won him national renown as being among the foremost leading men we have in this country today.

Enid Bennett Finds a Story

It is whispered that a final selection for the first Paramount picture starring Enid Bennett, the charming little Australian actress, has been made at the Thomas H. Ince studios, in California. It is furthermore reported that the story is one embodying all of those qualities which are most eminently suited to the capabilities of the star.

Enid Bennett is a serious sort of young person, but not without a fine sense of humor, which enables her to depict a character at once appealing and attractive with rare charm.

She is one of the three young stars who came under Paramount's banner when Mr. Ince affiliated with the organization. The other two are Charles Ray and Dorothy Dalton.

MUTUAL OPENS NEW SCHEDULE

"Two-a-Week" Plan Begins September 3—Sixteen Five-Reel Features Either Completed or Nearly So

Mutual opens its schedule of two star productions a week September 3, when it releases "Reputation," the first of the series of feature productions starring Edna Goodrich, celebrated stage beauty and "Charity Castle," the first of a new series of Mutual-American pictures, starring Mary Miles Minter.

The studios producing features for Mutual release have spent a strenuous summer in preparation for the elaborate plans to put on the market two five-reel features a week. Mr. Freuler and the executives of the various producing companies have been in close touch all through the hot season, selecting stories, supervising direction and overseeing the most minute detail of production in order that there might be no hitch in the "two a week" plan and that the standard of the releases would conform to the high plane which the executive chief of Mutual had laid down.

That the preparations have been made carefully is evidenced by the fact that before the middle of August, Mutual was in a position to announce a release schedule of two five-reel features a week for eight weeks. Every one of the sixteen productions is either completed or in the last stages of completion. Extensive precautions were taken to guard against an eleventh hour rush to keep up with the strenuous schedule and consequent neglect of the details of production.

"Reputation" is from the story by John Clymer. Miss Goodrich carries the roll of a small-town girl who goes to the city to "make good" and returns, unblemished, but with a reputation. The play is admirably suited to Miss Goodrich's particular talents.

"Charity Castle" is a five-act dramatic fantasy in which the winsome and charming Mary Miles Minter plays the role of fairy princess. It is another modern fairy story, different to a marked degree from the others in which Miss Minter has starred and which have been such box office successes. The public likes to see Miss Minter in appealing, little girl roles as evidenced by the thousands of dimes which have crossed the ticket window in theaters throughout the land. In "Charity Castle" she is a child of the slums, who takes her little brother and her smile to the home of a confirmed crab. The old grouch turns his gloomy domicile into "Charity Castle," with Miss Minter as the princess royal.

Mutual's schedule for the week of September 3 carries one comedy, a one-reel Cub starring George Ovey. "Jerry Tries Again" shows Jerry's further efforts to secure a bride via the want ad route. Like "Jerry's Eugenic Bride," applicants fail, one after the other, until a particularly fat one gets by the examining board. Jerry is saved from matrimony when he finds that the regulations of the eugenic board necessitates his own examination.

Charles Ray made another personal appearance at Clune's Broadway, Los Angeles, recently and once more found out in what high esteem he is held. Charlie is nearly finished with his first feature under the new contract with Thomas H. Ince, and it will be released by and introduce Charlie to the Paramount program.

"Arms and the Girl"

"Arms and the Girl," in picture form, starring Billie Burke, and to be released shortly by Paramount, is taking on the nature of a big spectacle. Last week the scenes in Beaupre, the Belgian village where the action occurs, were "shot" on the lot of Famous Players' Fort Lee Studio.

The stage production of "Arms and the Girl," showed all interior settings and the incoming German troops were talked about but never seen in bulk. In the picture, the whole invasion of Beaupre is to be shown on the screen. A complete village has been erected, in addition to a real Belgian railway station with a real Belgian train on the tracks.

Joseph Kaufman, who is directing the picture, engaged 500 extra people for use in the invasion scene.

Hoffman Establishes Chicago Exchange

Although warm weather is still with us many distributors are announcing their fall releases. Among them is M. H. Hoffman, who has just left for Chicago to establish another Hoffman Foursquare Exchange.

Prominent in the list of M. H. Hoffman-Foursquare fall releases are "The Fringe of Society," "The Silent Witness," "Madame Sherry," "Her Fighting Chance," "Should She Obey," "A Trip Thru' China," "The Bar Sinister" and "The Sin Woman."

New Kitty Gordon Play

The next Kitty Gordon play for World-Pictures Brady-Made will not be published until mid-November. The title is "Her Hour," and it narrates the heart affair of a beautiful stenographer and the boss. The drama is already completed but must take its turn upon the far ahead World schedule.

"Beanstalk" in St. Louis

"Jack and the Beanstalk," William Fox's big spectacle which concluded its run on Broadway on August 26, opened at the Belasco Theater in Washington, D. C., on that date. A week later the picture will also go into the Garrick Theater in St. Louis, while still showing in Washington.

All of which proves another wonderful feature of the films. They have violated still one more tradition, for it is now possible for a thing to be in two places at once.

Scenes from Fox's brilliant and remarkable production, "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Texas Guinan, musical comedy star, who has forsaken the footlights for the screen. She will appear under the Triangle banner.

Texas Guinan in Triangle Plays

Texas Guinan, whose name and personality are known wherever musical comedy thrives, has deserted the stage for the studio and will shortly be featured in Triangle pictures.

As "The Merry Widow," "The Belle of Avenue A," "The Hoyden" and "The Kissing Girl," Texas Guinan has drawn a following of theater patrons from coast to coast who will be eager to see the favorite on the screen. It is believed that the star possesses a personality that will be effectively projected from pictures. She is noted for a spontaneous charm, the ability to establish an intimacy with her audiences, and a smile that has flashed from the pictorial section of virtually every magazine.

The title of Miss Guinan's first picture has not yet been announced. She is at present engaged in learning the requirements of acting before the camera at the Culver City studio, and has already become a great social favorite in the film colony.

Miss Alice Rodier, a member of the Washington Square Players during last season, has been signed on a contract by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, and henceforth will be seen in Greater Vitagraph features. Miss Rodier, a petite young girl and an attractive blonde type, has had considerable experience in motion picture work, having played in a number of the O. Henry pictures.

FOX RELEASES VARIED

Fall Plays Featuring Miriam Cooper, Virginia Pearson, George Walsh and Dustin Farnum Show Great Diversity

Miriam Cooper, Virginia Pearson, George Walsh and Dustin Farnum, four of the most eminent of the William Fox stars, are announced as the players starred in the first four feature releases during September. This group of films consists of:

A picturesque comedy drama of a thrilling romance in Mexico; a mystery photoplay of suspense and action built around present day life in New York City; a refreshing and fast moving story of a love affair which began in a Chicago cabaret and ended with a wedding ring in a Balkan principality, and a powerful visualization of a big man's struggles in the great snows of the northwest.

These are the productions, with the dates of their release: September 2, R. A. Walsh's drama, "Betrayed," with Miriam Cooper; September 9, Virginia Pearson in "When False Tongues Speak"; September 16, George Walsh in "The Yankee Way"; September 23, Dustin Farnum in "North of Fifty-Three."

"Betrayed," like all of R. A. Walsh screen plays, has a score of the deft, unusual touches which helped single out "The Honor System," which Mr. Walsh also staged, as a distinctive contribution to the celluloid drama.

While it is necessary to dwell lightly on the story of "When False Tongues Speak," that the novel twists shall remain undisclosed until the screening, the fact that the script was written by George Scarborough is conclusive evidence of its merit. Mr. Scarborough is the author of a number of famous stage successes, among them "The Lure," "At Bay" and "The Heart of Wetona."

"The Yankee Way," which will be sent forth on September 16, is described as a "star-spangled comedy." It presents the genial George Walsh as Dick Mason, a young millionaire who happens into a cabaret just in time to end one flirtation and start one of his own.

"North of Fifty-Three," as the title implies, was taken from the story of that name by Bertrand W. Sinclair. The picture, with the inimitable "Dusty" Farnum as "Roaring Bill" Wagstaff, will undoubtedly have the same wide vogue as that enjoyed by the novel.

Air Cooled Camera

Now the air-cooled camera! Again is necessity the mother of invention.

So intense was the heat in the glass-enclosed studios at Fort Lee, N. J., that an entire day's work on "When False Tongues Speak," taken at the height of the torrid spell, was ruined by blisters on the film.

Director Carl Harbaugh, who was in charge of this picture starring Virginia Pearson, learned of the misfortune when the film was developed in the big Fox laboratories. Next day, which was just as hot as the previous one, he retook all the scenes. To make certain of successful results this time, he set an electric fan on a perch just above the camera. Directly in front of the fan he placed a cake of ice and then let the cooling breezes blow against the camera box.

Thomas Edison couldn't have wanted a better invention.

RUNNING SMALL TOWN HOUSE

Washington Exhibitor Writes Clever Letter on Difficulty of Making Small House Pay—Analyzes Situation and Tells Problems

The following interesting letter has been received by MOTOGRAPHY from F. J. Potter, manager of the Ruby Theater, Chelan, Washington, and gives in a clear, humorous way many of the difficulties this exhibitor has contended with. It also analyzes the general problems of the small town house, although from rather a pessimistic viewpoint. It has so much snappy phraseology and punch that we print it all herewith:

Editor MOTOGRAPHY:

Your request for an article on "My most successful stunt" and "A drive against the daily problems" comes at a most inopportune time, as I am about to take the trail for the harvest fields to gather in a few seeds with which to pay house rent and film bills while friend wife keeps one eye on the "house" and the other on the window to grab any stray 20-cent pieces that may be out taking the evening air without a guardian.

You can talk about "business as usual"—believe me, this is it—with the accent on the "as usual." We opened this house three years ago, July 1, to fair business, and beyond a few spasmodic runs due to unusual conditions, business has gone steadily down ever since. Were it not for the fact that every business house in town has suffered the same way, I would be inclined to think that the fault lay in the management, but I am sure that the man who could have done better with this house than I have done, under the same circumstances, would be a very exceptional man. I will make one exception to the houses whose business has declined—the garages and excursion boats—and I think this is very significant of the trend of the pleasure-seeking public; away from the theater and a-straddle of anything that will take them whizzing from one place to another.

Harder and Harder to Interest People

It is becoming harder and harder to interest people in screen stories. They have become so all-fired intelligent and critical that it is a man's size job to pick and choose to suit their tastes and their tastes are so fickle and change so quickly that what will suit them one day will be hooted at the next. They will come honking up to the theater in a big six and a cloud of dust and breeze in, full of noise and peanuts, with a jaunty air of "Oh, well, we'll just stop in a minute while the radiator cools and Charlie gets some gas," and in the middle of a big scene they will scatter the rest of the peanuts on the floor and beat it for the Lake Shore Drive with its tantalizing smell of the other fellow's smoke.

To some people the smell of a mixture of Zerolene and 35-cent gas is more fragrant than a Havana. The most demoralizing part of their occasional visits is the effect on the rest of the audience. They all begin to fidget and wish they were out on the road in their own car, if they have one, and if they haven't, they divide their attention between following the story on the screen and figuring how long it will be before they can make the first payment on one.

The Motor Menace

The conditions in this town are peculiar. The town itself depends mostly on the tourist trade, and of late years this trade has come by way of cars, trucks, busses and flivvers, and instead of stopping over at the foot of the lake, as they used to, they drive their cars right onto the dock, take the fastest boat to the head of the lake and whizz back the same day, taking in some of America's grandest scenery at one fell swoop, and are off on another gas-consuming spree before the cushions have had a chance to air out.

Add to the Motor Menace the popular "no-spend" propaganda that is being spread by over-zealous conservationists and throw in a little meddlesome Methodist maniacs to keep the pot boiling, and a modern theater has a fat chance to pay the light bill, say nothing of the rent and the films. All the foregoing applies to any small house situated similarly to mine, where war supplies are not being manufactured or dealt in and where the prosperity to certain trades and classes naturally attendant on war conditions does not obtain.

I have seen last month picture houses that suffered real damage from crowds trying to get in, night after night, and I will wager that not one out of ten knew what was on the bill, but it was in a Navy Yard town, and that furnishes the key-note to the picture situation today.

Picture House Attendance Phychological

The dominant factor in picture house attendance is now, as it always was, psychological, purely. You can say what you like about the popularity of any certain star; the play's the thing; importance of personal service; attractiveness of exteriors and what not, the fact is that you can create a desire—in some cases an unnatural one—only about so many times in any given number of people, and then they will get wise and follow their natural bent.

It's like catching a frisky colt in a nice cool green pasture with a pan of oats—he likes oats, especially when they are rattled enticingly in a tin pan, but you have to be constantly changing the bait to get him interested, and after awhile he is wise to all the traps you can think of and stays at a safe distance and shakes his head. I think pictures now are where vaudeville was a few years ago. Every one in the producing end is racking his brains to think up something new, and that's a pretty sure sign that people are getting fed up on pictures. It's getting so now that the big houses pay twice as much for the incidental entertainment and attention as they do for the main (?) attraction—the film.

People who do not live close to these picture palaces do get a taste once in a while and the gorgeous decorations, the lofty ceilings and the swell orchestras only make their little home town house appear cheap, no matter what the picture is. I have had Clark, Pickford, Fairbanks and Farnum in well projected plays that did not arouse any marked interest and yet when some of my patrons came back from the city they would rave over so-and-so in such-and-such, saying it was just wonderful, when we had the same picture a week before they left, spread over the bill boards and in the paper. The point is, they have seen an entirely different picture, or think they have, which amounts to the same thing, and they have seen it under entirely different conditions and they unconsciously compare the home house to the city house, with disastrous results to the former.

The point is perhaps better illustrated by the fact that tourists and occasional visitors never fail to compliment us on the appearance of our house and our projection as well as the program, because to them it is new, while the home grouch fails in his appreciation because it is so familiar to him and the memory of that visit "to the city" is still so vivid.

Isn't Using Stunts Any More

I think there was a time when I used stunts to put a picture before the people, but looking at it from this date I am inclined to believe I was just having a little fun at my own expense; the people would have come, anyway. They were better off financially, the house was comparatively new to them and they had not been "fed up." These "stunts" have been written rather elaborately in western publications and would suffer from repetition, I am afraid, so I will not offer them to you stale.

As far as the "drive against the daily problem," it has resolved itself into a "sit tight game," with no big bets on the side and a persistent cultivation of the oft neglected virtues of patience, caution and hopefulness. For us there are no more of the big "Spectacular films," none of the $50 a day stuff—no, not even $25—our film rental for three shows a week averages $18 and our receipts run about $35, so you can see where we get off. God only knows what it will be this time next year.

Regretting that I do not feel fit to give you a nice "editorially acceptable" article on the subjects asked for, and thanking you for the implied compliment, I am,

F. J. POTTER.

Emily Stevens at Work on New Special

Emily Stevens has begun work at Metro's Super-Feature studio on her first production made under the new agreement between Metro Pictures Corporation and Oliver Morosco, whereby Miss Stevens remains away from the speaking stage for six additional months before beginning her annual New York engagement and tour of the country.

The new production is as yet unnamed. Earl Fox has been engaged as the star's leading man in the new production, which will consist of seven acts.

The sort of stuff that makes Americans respected in every clime, and which is asserting itself today in the preparations for the great conflict, is featured in Charles Ray's first Paramount picture, which is being produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

For the Exhibitor "Who Cares"

Motography surely is a valuable magazine for the industry and the section styled "What the Pictures Did for Me" is incomparable for the exhibitor "who cares."

We file each comment which applies to our particular program and feel sure we have saved many dollars by rejecting doubtful pictures which failed to "go over" elsewhere.—Lewis Hepinger, manager Orpheum Theater, Clarion, Pennsylvania.

"Reputation" Released September 3

Edna Goodrich, celebrated star of the speaking stage, returns to the screen on September 3, in "Reputation," a five-reel dramatic production released by the Mutual Film Corporation.

"Reputation" is the first of a series of Mutual Star productions featuring Miss Goodrich. "Queen X", "A Daughter of Maryland" and "American Maid", are already completed or on the way to completion and will be announced as part of Mutual's "two a week" release schedule for early fall presentation.

"Reputation" is the story of a small-town girl. It is from the story by John B. Clymer, scenarioized by Mr. Clymer. Miss Goodrich fits well into the character of Constance Bennett, reared in a provincial atmosphere by a maiden aunt, who goes to New York and becomes the prey of men who lavish their affections indiscriminately. She is superb in the scene where she fascinates the he vampire and leads him into a confession of love for her, and she gets an excellent opportunity to display her talent for highly emotional acting in the scene where, trapped in a hotel apartment, she gives him the battle of his life.

Fox Producing "Les Miserables"

One of the most welcome of the many important announcements William Fox has made this year about his motion picture plans and productions, is that a complete and superb cinema version of "Les Miserables" is under way.

Work on this great photodrama has gone forward for some time at the big Fox studios in Fort Lee, New Jersey. The results are showing daily that the subject will be a masterpiece of screencraft. William Farnum, the gifted favorite of the silent stage, is appearing as Jean Valjean in Victor Hugo's classic. Mr. Farnum is infusing a fineness of characterization into his portrayal of the immortal Valjean which is worthy of the wonderful novel from which it is taken.

The photoplay is being screened under the direction of Frank Lloyd, who has contributed some of the best pages in film literature, among others, "A Tale of Two Cities." Mr. Lloyd is a scholar always, and no one need fear inaccuracy in the transformation of "Les Miserables" into celluloid form.

The company of supporting players has been chosen with circumspect care. Special attention is being given, also, to the photography as the book requires scores of night scenes. Mr. Fox is desirous of producing in "Les Miserables," a drama which shall be the perfection of workmanship and shall have the highest artistry in addition to the inherent power of the story.

Hugo's master composition was many years in the writing and was not published until the author was sixty years old. The book really represented the efforts of a life work. Directly it came before the public, it was hailed everywhere as something fine and big.

Long Contract for Art Dramas Star

On account of the demand of exhibitors using Art Dramas, contracts were signed this week with Catherine Calvert, stipulating that she will appear as star in all forthcoming U. S. Amusement-Art Dramas.

Miss Calvert, who is the widow of the late Paul Armstrong, famous playwright, has appeared so far in three Art Dramas, and in that time has won admirers all over the country. Exhibitors using the pictures in which she appears say that she is one of the best drawing cards they have. Since her film debut, which took place in "House of Cards," letters have been coming in to the exchanges almost daily, urging that the star be put on contract, so that Art Dramas users might have her pictures exclusively.

Her fourth Art Drama, "Behind the Mask," which was directed by Madame Blache, from the story by Charles Dazey, has just been completed. The role she has in this calls for great emotional ability, and those who have seen it proclaim it a triumph of screen art. Another production has already been started with Miss Calvert as star.

Catherine Calvert's career on the stage was extensive and varied. She started in "Brown of Harvard." At the end of that play's run she signed with Paul Armstrong, who had noticed her work, and appeared in his play, "The Deep Purple."

She was next season co-starred with Holbrook Blinn in "A Romance of the Underworld." The following year she brought "The Escape" to New York, taking the leading role, which Helen Ware had played in Chicago to a whole season of packed houses.

The work of directing Miss Calvert in her forthcoming Art Dramas will be done by Mme. Blache or by Hubert Blache, himself. The best possible supporting casts will be selected for each production and it is the intention of the company to make each Catherine Calvert picture practically an all-star feature.

Officer and Idea Arrive Together

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, and Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, noted author and Episcopal clergyman, were arrested on Long Island last week Sunday, charged with violating the speed laws. They were taken to the court at Great Neck and fined $25.

The policeman who made the arrest told the court he had been delayed fifteen minutes while Dr. Brady was having an idea.

Mr. Smith, in explanation, said that he and Dr. Brady were working out the plot of a new motion picture serial, which is to be produced by the Vitagraph Company, and they had gone motoring in search of inspiration. They were seeking a climax, he declared, but it would not come. He told the chauffeur to put on more speed, and still it would not come. He ordered still more speed and the car was drifting along about fifty miles an hour when, suddenly, Dr. Brady let out a whoop and said:

"I have it."

"At the same moment," said Mr. Smith, "I found that the officer had us."

CHAPLIN IN CONVICT ROLE

Comedian Wears Stripes in "The Adventurer"—Work on New Play Nearly Completed—Fairly Bristles With Laughs

Charlie Chaplin will next be seen as a bestriped convict in "The Adventurer". The last few scenes of his forthcoming picture are being "shot" at Los Angeles and Mutual's $670,000 a year comedian is at work, with sleeves rolled up, cutting the 20,000 or more feet of film which were taken in the course of the production down to the regulation 2,000 feet which will be seen on the screen.

Chaplin christens his own pictures and it was not until the forthcoming comedy was in the last stages of production that he decided upon the title. Even John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, did not know the name of the picture until the other day, when Chaplin sent him a wire, and Chaplin himself didn't know until a few minutes before he sent the wire.

Chaplin's titles, like his pictures, "just happen." They are selected, as the ideas are which go into his comedies, on the spur of the moment. All through the course of production the actor keeps his mind on the title until, as the final scenes are taken, the ideas he has accumulated crystalize.

Many scenes from "The Adventurer" were taken along the Sierra Madre coast range where Chaplin, in the role of an escaped convict, flees over the rocky coast pursued by armed guards, of whom big Eric Campbell is the chief.

The forthcoming Mutual-Chaplin special is declared to be quite the funniest thing that the international comedian has yet done. The idea around which it is built provides so many humorous situations and so many opportunities for Chaplin to work in those subtle bits of humor which makes his pictures so uproariously comical, that it cannot help being a masterpiece of comedy.

The idea on which "The Adventurer" was built was the one which he made his first start on the picture which eventually turned out to be "The Immigrant". He got started on the one, when the other popped into his head and he began to work, full steam ahead, on the new idea. In the meantime he evolved the idea of "The Adventurer," put a lot of new touches into it, so that really it could not be identified by the parent germ from which it is descended.

Latest Selznick Addition in "Scandal"

The first picture in which Constance Talmadge, who is the latest addition to the Selznick constellation, will make her appearance as a film star, in a powerful screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's sensational serial "Scandal," now appearing in the Green Book.

The screen version of "Scandal" is being directed by Charles Giblyn, and in the notable company which has been collected in support of the young star are Harry C. Browne, J. Herbert Frank, Aimee Dalmores, Ida Darling and Gladden James.

Work on the production has been going along steadily for the past two weeks in the Selznick Studio in the Bronx, and on the estate of Commodore F. C. Benedict, at Greenwich, Connecticut.

F. P. Goff is now road man for Consolidated Film & Supply Company, at Dallas, Texas.

Northcliffe Lauds Film Industry

Lord Northcliffe was the guest of honor at a luncheon given to the press last week at Sherry's, New York, by Official Government Pictures, Inc. The head of the British Missions in America delivered an address in which he stated that the film is outdoing the newspaper in carrying the truth of the war throughout the world. He made an appeal to the big editors to whom he spoke for recognition of the true worth of the official pictures now being shown throughout the country and about to be shown.

"As a newspaper man," Lord Northcliffe said—and he is probably the biggest newspaper man in the world—"I hate to confess it, but the motion picture is doing more for the allied cause than any other means of thought transmission. Not everyone reads the newspapers and those that do forget what they have read, but no one can forget what he has seen actually happen."

Among the large number of guests present were Lawrence Grossmith, Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theater; McDougal Hawkes, president of the French Institute; Colonel Hutchinson and Captain White, attached to the British Recruiting Mission; Captain McLeod Baynes, managing director of Official Government Pictures, Inc.; J. C. Grey, secretary to Lord Northcliffe, and G. G. Butler of the British Pictorial Service.

Ruth Roland in Mystic Role

"The Stolen Play," third of the series of four-reel dramas, the Falcon Features, has Ruth Roland as the star, with Wm. Conklin and Edw. J. Brady also among the principals.

"The Stolen Play" was written by D. F. Whitcomb and directed by Harry Harvey, supervised by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer. Lucy Blacke, Harry Southard, Ruth Lackaye and Makato Inokuchi are members of the cast.

The next Falcon Feature will be "His Unpolished Self," from a story by Horace Annesley Vachell, featuring Henry Ainley.

"The Dead Line" is one of the productions which will appear for independent release this fall. It is being made by Beatriz Michelena in the Santa Cruz mountains in California, with George E. Middleton as director. The rope tosser above is no other than Miss Michelena herself.

Public Judges Pictures by Director

"It is becoming more and more the practice of exhibitors to judge pictures by the director who makes them rather than by the star who appears in them," said an aid of Herbert Brenon's lately.

"This applies more to the out of town exhibitor than the one in New York, on account of the usual Broadway showing of big special attractions. It is easy though for the manager of the house using second and third run pictures to run down town and judge for himself as to the merit of a big production. But the exhibitor living outside of New York is in a far different position. He is forced to use other means in forming his judgment of the value of a production.

"In times past the most important of these outside considerations was the star playing the leading part. But so many good stars have appeared in poor or mediocre pictures that this indication of a picture value has become a misnomer and can no longer be depended upon.

"There is probably no one who studies picture conditions more closely than the wide awake exhibitor. He is constantly on the "qui vive" to discover new ways of aiding him in booking the right and proper kind of picture, both from an artistic and commercial standpoint. Consequently it did not take him long to discover that the most dependable indication of the merit of a production was the director. And it is becoming the practice for the real live exhibitor to place the director as the determing factor in his judgment as to whether he will book a picture or not. It is not in the least strange that the exhibitor who is constantly studying picture conditions should arrive at this conclusion, but it is strange to discover that the motion picture going public is beginning to think along the same lines."

New Mutual Branch Manager

The Mutual Film Corporation announces the appointment of George E. Jackson, formerly salesman, as manager of the Portland branch. He succeeds N. F. Dobbs, who has been in charge of the office temporarily.

Country Districts Like Pictures

A striking commentary on the hold which motion pictures have on the people of the country at present is provided by the distributing department of Vitagraph. Out of a batch of contracts which were received at the home office of the company last week, a number were from towns of less than eight hundred population.

The Bell Theater of Wesley, Iowa, a town with 466 residents, booked "The Battle Cry of Peace" for two days, and the same subject was booked by the Electric Theater of Ortley, South Dakota, for one day. Ortley has a population of only 175 people. The Idle Hour Theater in Eden Valley, Minnesota, a town of 740 people, also booked this feature for two days.

In Peever, South Dakota, which has 259 inhabitants, "God's Country and the Woman," a special Blue Ribbon feature, was booked for the Bailey Opera House for a day, and in Buxton, North Dakota, which boasts 400 residents, the same feature was booked for a day's run at the Buxton Opera House.

"The Fall of a Nation" had a two-day run in the Grand Opera House of Chetak, Wisconsin, which has only 700 population.

S. E. Morris Given Ohio Territory

Mr. Sam E. Morris, who has been a member of the Selznick executive staff ever since the formation of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, Inc., has been placed in entire charge of Selznick branches in the large Cleveland territory. This is one of the richest districts in the United States for Selznick contracts.

Under the Cleveland branch is included the entire state of Ohio and the eastern half of the state of Kentucky; a sub-office is located at Cincinnati. Mr. Morris has been Mr. Selznick's right hand man in the past in closing big deals for state rights pictures when Mr. Selznick was selling pictures on that basis.

Carmel Myers, one of the most beautiful women of the screen, has joined the forces of Jewel Productions, Inc., and made her first bow as a Jewel star in "Sirens of the Sea," at the Broadway Theater, New York. It is understood that Miss Myers will shortly be featured in an important Jewel Production.

Advance views of "Cleopatra," the big romantic and historical production which William Fox is making in California. And of course no one could be "Cleo" but Theda Bara herself.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

"Redemption" Selling Fast

TERRITORY for "Redemption," featuring Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, has been selling very fast lately. The De Luxe Feature Film Company has bought the rights for Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. The Exhibitor's Film Exchange has bought those for Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia. Jones, Linnick and Schaeffer of Chicago, bought the rights for the state of Illinois, and found the bookings were so heavy they have bought rights for the state of Indiana, and are negotiating for further middle west territory.

Discusses State Rights Market

Nat M. Spitzer, sales manager for the King Bee Corporation, during a recent discussion in his office, attempted to analyze the state rights market.

"In the first place," he said, "it lacks a proper foundation. Up to the present time business has been done by the average state rights distributor on a very loose basis. The general procedure seems to be to make a picture, and spend a little or a great deal of money upon it. This depends on whether it is the desire of the company to 'gyp' their stockholders or, if it is their own money that they are spending to cut expenses to the last detail.

"The next step is to splurge out in a lot of inconsistent advertising, and to spend more or less money unnecessarily, as the case may be. And the final move is to place an exorbitant price upon the rights for the various territories, and if the picture isn't 'there,' it gets cold, waiting for buyers. It's a bloomer. The company goes 'busted.' However another springs up in its place, for they're just like mushrooms; they come up over night."

E. & H. Grows in South

The E. & H. Film Distributing Company of Atlanta, Georgia, has moved from 65 to 73 Walton. The firm has purchased all the fixtures of the Artcraft office, which was formerly at this address, and at the same time took over all the films controlled by the Strand Film Company, consisting of around twenty state right features, including "The Ne'er Do Well."

The E. & H. Film Company consists of two men only, Chas. W. Harden and P. A. Engler. The company was originally organized to distribute "The Crimson Stain Mystery" serial in the South, which was handled by Mr. Engler with success. When the King Bee Film Company released the Billy West comedies, the E. & H. Company, realizing the merit of the pictures, purchased the rights for Georgia, Florida, Alabama and South Carolina. Commencing September 1, the company will distribute the Art Dramas program over the entire Southeast, including seven states.

"Man's Law" Going

The Overland Film Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, sponsers for the latest Irving Cummings picture, entitled "Man's Law," are in receipt of inquiries from all over the country relative to their new state right feature. Indication points to a fast and successful campaign in disposing of the state rights of this superfeature.

After the first showing, the rights to New York and northern New Jersey were sold to the Mammoth Film Corporation, Frank E. Backer, president. Harry G. Segal, general manager of the Globe Feature Film Company, Boston, purchased the same for the New England States. John Olsen & Company purchased the rights for Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. Negotiations are now pending for the sale of Canadian rights and the rights of the United States.

Jack Noble for State Rights

After ten weeks spent in the making of a special picture which represents his idea of the acme of motion picture production from the standpoint of direction, acting, story and photography, John W. Noble has completed his first important contribution to the state rights buying exchanges.

The drama is a clever presentation of a phase of the war, little understood by persons as far removed from the trenches as Americans.

Mr. Noble has been on the lookout for an exceptional story ever since the beginning of the world war, because of his belief that a powerful drama inspired by the terrible conditions in Belgium and France was sure to make its appearance sooner or later. He decided to make the story the basis of a special state rights production staged under his own management, and this he has done.

Comedy Series for State Rights

The Aubrey series of two-reel super-comedies, featuring James Aubrey, will be released on the state rights plan, says Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Company.

Beginning in October, a two-reel subject will be released monthly, for ten months. They will be sold as a series to the state rights buyers, with the provision that they be sold to the exhibitor in the same way. Arrangements are in the course of completion whereby the Aubrey series will be advertised in a big way through one hundred newspapers in the largest cities. The publicity attached to the series will measure up favorably with that given the best exploited serials.

Horsley Sells Canadian Rights

David Horsley announces the sale of the Canadian rights for Mary MacLaren productions. American state rights are in brisk demand with negotiations closed for six of the greater eastern states. The first of the Mary MacLaren pictures to be released will be "The Counterfeit Soul," a seven-reel feature directed by Thomas Ricketts.

Canadian Rights Sold

Three prints are to form the beginning of the booking activities of John C. Green of Galt, Canada, who has purchased the entire Canadian and Alaskan rights of "The Great White Trail," the new Wharton superfeature.

Mr. Green made a hurried trip to Ithaca last week and when he left with the prints, he also had contracted for more than a ton of advertising matter which is to be shot over Canada to prepare for the "opening engagement" of the picture.

Mr. Green is to distribute the feature through Regal Films, Ltd., of Toronto.

More "Parentage" Territory Allotted

In an official statement to the trade press, Frank J. Seng, owner and distributor of "Parentage," announces that the Peerless Feature Film Exchange of Philadelphia will handle this unique money-maker in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

To date, Mr. Seng says, he has found it advantageous to dispose of certain territories on a percentage basis, but a great many outright sales will be made and made as rapidly as the purchasers satisfy the owner of "Parentage" that they want to help the exhibitors make money and will co-operate with them to that end.

"Shame" First Noble Picture

John W. Noble's first production for the state rights market, entitled "Shame," has been cut and edited and will be introduced by a regular trade showing at an early date. Zena Keefe, who will be featured in the picture with Miles Welch as her leading man, plays the part of a beautiful young girl who is the innocent victim of circumstances brought about by war conditions.

Jules Burnstein is acting as business representative for Mr. Noble in the marketing of the picture, and will announce its initial showing through the advertising columns of the trade papers in the near future.

Acquire Rights to "Mutt and Jeff"

A deal was consummated this week whereby the Dispatch Film Co., H. M. Warner, president, acquired the comedy series taken from the newspaper carricatures, "Mutt and Jeff," for New York State and Northern New Jersey, from Bud Fisher Films Corporation. According to the present intention of Mr. Warner, the "Mutt and Jeff" series will be released on a basis of first, second and third showing. This is in compliance with the system established by this concern for the sale of all the features they have bought and sold in this territory.

Fisher Films Popular

The Electric Film Supply Company of Philadelphia reports heavy booking in the Mutt and Jeff comedies, which they are handling for the Bud Fisher Films Corporation. Approximately one hundred of the Stanley circuit of theaters of Eastern Pennsylvania have booked them solid. Thirteen theaters in Washington, D. C., are showing the Mutt and Jeff comedies weekly.

Sixty theaters are showing these comedies in the territory of the Rialto Film Company of Dallas Texas, on a yearly franchise.

Harry Berg on Trip

Harry Berg, of the Overland Film Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, has left on a transcontinental trip to visit the leading state rights buyers of the country. Mr. Berg, who is a comparatively newcomer in the state rights field has already established himself as one of the live wires of the industry. Before entering the picture business he had a comprehensive training in the theatrical game, having been connected with many of the leading producers and for more than a decade held a responsible position with a leading vaudeville manager.

L. D. Wharton in Hospital

Following an operation which confined him for two weeks in the Post Graduate Hospital in New York, Leopold D. Wharton, the author and director of "The Great White Trail," has entirely eliminated thoughts of the motion pictures business while he takes a much needed rest.

Arranging Fall Campaign

Klotz & Streimer, who are selling "Whither Thou Goest," are now arranging to release one subject a month on the state rights basis.

Mr. Klotz, president of Klotz & Streimer, Inc., is negotiating with two well known directors to produce for his concern.

Hiller & Wilk Marketing "Alma"

Conspicuous among several big feature pictures that Hiller and Wilk, film brokers, have arranged to handle for the early autumn is "Alma, Where Do You Live," the six reel-film version of the play of the same title.

Triangle Restores Music Cues

The music cue sheet accompanying each picture, which was lately eliminated from the Triangle service in order to ascertain whether or not it was of value to the exhibitor, has been restored in response to the demand for it.

In an effort to abolish all waste of expenditure the Triangle Distributing Corporation recently sent out a circular letter to all branches for the purpose of ascertaining the value of all material provided the exhibitor. No definite reports as to the need of the music cue could be obtained, so they were removed from the list until such time as a desire for them was expressed. Recently the exchanges have forwarded to the New York office requests from theater managers that the cue sheet be supplied as formerly. The supply department of Triangle immedietely made arrangements for its publication.

The number of requests indicate positively the value of this feature. It has become an essential part of the service provided exhibitors in connection with the showing of the picture. The Triangle policy of providing service men and every conceivable aid to theaters booking Triangle pictures demands a thorough investigation of the value of all material, insuring that effort is not being misdirected.

"The Spy" at Globe Theater

William Fox's revelation of German secret service methods in "The Spy" began a special engagement of two weeks at the Globe Theater in New York City on August 27. The run of this photoplay has been limited to a fortnight in order that the metropolis may see its importance at once—even before the projection of "The Conqueror," which was scheduled originally to follow "Jack and the Beanstalk" at the Globe.

Mr. Flaherty and Mr. Finch of K. E. S. E., at Dallas, have enlisted in the army.

NEWS FROM EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Big Exhibitor on Program and Staging

"IT'S a wise exhibitor that pays as much attention to the arrangement of the program for his photoplayhouse, and to the staging of pictures as he does to their booking," said John Zanft recently.

John Zanft, managing director, Academy of Music, New York.

Mr. Zanft is known throughout the theatrical world and the realm of the silent drama as Managing Director of the Academy of Music, New York, the largest theater in existence which is devoted exclusively to the projection of of screen plays.

Mr. Zanft also supervises the presentation of the programs throughout the entire circuit of William Fox theaters, in his capacity as general representative.

"The same importance attaches to the arrangement of a bill in picture houses as to vaudeville," Mr. Zanft continued. "The exhibitor who takes pride in his work will be surprised at the attractiveness added to his program by careful staging. For the man who shows first-run features, scruplous attention to lighting, lobby display, picture projection, musical accompaniment and a score of other details, is imperative to effective screening."

Mr. Zanft's knowledge of conditions in this field is the product of the long experience at the Academy of Music which has made him an expert. The Academy is the pre-release house for William Fox films in New York City, and is recognized as one of the foremost photoplay theaters in the country.

Much of its success in showing nightly to its record seating capacity of 3,400 is due to the artistic methods in stagecraft which Mr. Zanft is constantly displaying. Mr. Zanft and J. S. Stebbins, the house manager, see in the Academy's private projection room every inch of every subject booked prior to its production before the audience.

Mr. Zanft is thorough in his work. His colleagues will vouch for that. Many times he has seen a half-dozen one reel travelogues before deciding on the particular film to be rented. Also, it is no uncommon thing for Mr. Zanft to be at the Academy until the wee sma' hours of the morning arranging the details for the mid-week change in programme.

"The booking of a photoplay," Mr. Zanft declares, "is, or should be, only the beginning of the exhibitor's efforts—not the end of them. The voiceless stage is today as important from an art standpoint, and far more important from the commercial standpoint, than the spoken stage. It should follow, therefore, that the same pains be taken with the staging of a picture as of a legitimate drama.

"When we showed 'The Honor System' at the Academy, I put into effect plans for its presentation which had been the result of days of thought and experiment. The manager or owner of a theater who does not give the best that is in him to the staging of such a classic is guilty of gross neglect."

Mr. Zanft might have added that the elaborate manner in which he puts on all of the William Fox first-run photoplays has been the subject of wide comment among exhibitors everywhere who have visited the Academy.

The presentation of such a magnificent subject as "A Daughter of the Gods" was an especially important task. The selection of Mr. Zanft for this post was a particularly fine tribute by Mr. Fox and ensured the pleasing and effective staging which followed.

The above photograph shows one of the longest illuminated signs in the United States, measuring from end to end 150 feet. It was orginated by E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company, of New Orleans, for installation atop of the Strand Theater, the South's most beautiful photoplay temple, which the progressive amusement firm has given to the people of this city. The photograph does not give the Strand building full justice, as one will see by the wording of the sign that it was taken before the handsome structure was completed.

After the filming of a feature like "A Daughter of the Gods" is completed and a theater has been chosen for its display, chief labor comes in making the playhouse suitable in every way for the production. Hundreds of details need scrupulous attention if 10,000 feet of celluloid are to be shown under the most advantageous conditions.

The staging itself was a complicated affair and demanded a thorough-going efficiency and understanding of theatrical effects in all their variety. Mr. Zanft's ability in this direction is unquestioned. He has proved his skill and eminent fitness in the field again and again both before and since "A Daughter of the Gods."

In addition to acting as Managing Director of the Academy, Mr. Zanft also supervises the affairs of the entire chain of William Fox theaters. Those in Greater New York include the Crotona, Academy, Audubon, Riviera, Nemo, Bedford, Ridgewood, City, Comedy, Folly, Star, Jamaica, Bay Ridge and Riviera Roof. Outside the metropolis Mr. Fox has the Carlton and Terminal in Newark and houses in New Britain and Springfield, Conn.

Theater Built Out of Profits

A striking example of what can be accomplished by a wide-awake exhibitor who follows a well defined policy along lines of business efficiency has come to notice in the case of J. P. Kaufman and his "Palace of Pictures," at New Braunsfels, Texas.

This prosperous little theater was built entirely out of the profits that have come to Mr. Kaufman through the use of Universal service. In 1909, while still hardly more than a lad, young Kaufman opened a very primitive airdome in his home town, with the sky for a roof and canvas for walls to keep the more economical of the fans from watching the screen free of charge. He put in Universal pictures after looking the market over carefully. From the beginning the show prospered and at the end of two seasons Mr. Kaufman decided it was time to build a permanent house. The present cozy theater was the result, every part of the building being paid for out of the income derived from the box-office.

In the accompanying illustration Mr. Kaufman may be seen sitting in the center of the trio before the theater. On the day the picture was taken he was running a Butterfly picture, Herbert Rawlinson in "Like Wildfire" and the L-Ko Komedy "Chicken Chased and Henpecked."

Contrary to the custom of most small towns, Kaufman's Palace of Pictures opens at noon daily and plays a continuous program.

Exhibitor Upholds High Salaried Stars

By A. K. Pay,

Owner and Manager, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

I am gratified to see that Samuel Goldfish of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has come forward to champion the reviled star system. The attacks by writers and picture magnates upon the high salaries of stars have provided the magazines with humorous space fillers. I doubt if there are any exhibitors so gullible as to believe the star's salary is dictated by the producer's generosity. A player receives a salary proportionate to what he earns the exchanges, unless he happens to be one of those few who have been elected to stardom by pull rather than popular vote.

From the exhibitor's point of view the star is the most valuable factor of the picture. His name, not the name of the play, draws the crowd nine times out of ten. Furthermore, money expended upon advertising him gains cumulative results. When you have succeeded in interesting your patrons in a certain player, they will respond to the advertisement of his next feature regardless of its title or nature.

An instance which substantiated this in my mind, was the manner in which I advertised "The Hon. Algy." I knew that the title and the story would fail to interest westerners. On the other hand, I knew that Charles Ray had packed my house when I featured a week of plays starring him. So I blazed his name in glaring type and placed stories in the papers regarding his personality and the critics' opinion of him. I said nothing concerning the story. My result? I sold out the house for two days. This demonstrates the worth of a real star. My patrons were delighted with the play because their favorite was in it.

The same applies to features with Douglas Fairbanks or Wm. S. Hart. No one is attracted to the theater when they see a picture with a certain title advertised. They come because they are followers of these stars and know they will enjoy the acting no matter what the story may be.

I do not mean to say that the play itself is of no consequence. But it does not attract the crowds to the door. The star does that. The business of the scenario writer is to provide him with every opportunity for pleasing the public. Better stories are surely needed, but no producer is compelled to cut the salaries of stars to obtain the funds. I notice that the companies with the largest numbers of famous players are the very ones which are offering the most money for original screen material.

When an exhibitor contracts for a program he does so largely because of the stars thereon; when the program loses its best stars it is going to lose some exhibitors. I repeat that the public is interested in the screen star just as it is interested in the stage star. No one down front cares who wrote the play or directed it or photographed it.

After I have checked up the box office receipts after presenting two plays, one with a genuine star and one without, I say "the star's the thing!"

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

BY a deal long pending and recently consummated Marcus A. Loew, the big New York exhibitor, has gained control of the beautiful Stillman Theater, on Euclid avenue, near West Twelfth street, Cleveland. Mr. Loew has also bought the Valentine Theater in Toledo. Just what he proposes to do with the Stillman has not been disclosed yet.

The State Line Tribune, published at Farwell, Texas, has come out with a leading editorial denouncing the picture theater at that place as a firetrap and demanding that proper fire precaution and exits be provided.

The official British moving pictures of "The Retreat of the Germans at the Battle of Arras" are attracting record crowds at every performance at the Strand Theater, New York. The second and last installment of these pictures will be shown for a week commencing next Sunday.

At Cuero, Texas, the Yoakum Amusement Company has taken over the Fox Theater and will operate it with W. D. Evans as manager. The Yoakum circuit now consists of five theaters, the Fox at Cuero, two at Yoakum, and one each at Kennedy and Hallettsville, Texas.

Mr. Bostick of the Merrill Theater, Milwaukee, has eliminated all slides from his screen and substituted in their places trailers which are artistic and which tell more than slides could ever hope to. He has also inaugurated a special head for his feature picture which announces the title, who it was made by, special music, if any, and efforts at properly staging the film made by the theater.

This is the way a great number of exhibitors score big money in the country towns of Australia: "If there is any important event to take place in or around the town, the exhibitor wires for a cameraman in the city and has a little special photographed, which is screened the next evening.

The Bronte Theater, in Sydney, Australia, recently struck on a novel idea to raise gifts for wounded soldiers. A sign was displayed with the large words "Free Night" thereon, and underneath the writing: "If you bring along a soldiers' gift." The result was highly successful. Hundreds of soldiers' gifts were handed in at the door, including socks, cigarettes, balaclava caps, knee pads, etc.

A motion picture convention will be held in St. John, New Brunswick, September 7 and 8. Among other matters that will be brought up for consideration will be the tax against theater tickets which has imposed a heavy burden on Canadian exhibitors and which they propose to see if they can eliminate by united action.

Bryant Washburn, Essanay star who has played the leading role in a number of that company's most successful productions, got more publicity last week than he wanted. And picture stars are usually ready to permit the line-o-type man to pound their names into type as often as he can stand it. But this time it was different for they pounded out such vicious stuff. Washburn was accused of being a slacker and everything else that was bad and disagreeable. He was exempted by his examining board on the grounds that his wife and child needed his support. Someone, later, stirred things up by discovering that he possessed a healthy bank account and that his wife had refused a position with the Wholesome Film Company in order that he could claim exemption. And now it looks as though Bryant might have to give up acting for the camera in order to act for Uncle Sam.

C. E. Huston of the Arena, Toronto, Canada, is trying out a mixture of pictures and terpsichore with considerable success. The Arena, which is a mammoth building, used in the winter months as a skating and ice palace, has been fitted up as a dance hall with a screen at one end and the necessary projection machine loaded with film at the other. Both young and old are catered to in this way, for while the young bloods are dancing the elders sit on the side lines and enjoy the pictures.

The Fox Film Corporation is furnishing an excellent lobby display in Sydney, Australia, for "The Honor System." At the entrance to the lobby of one theater, huge iron bars were erected in the form of a prison door, and the services of a number of actors were secured, who acted various scenes from "The Honor System," behind the iron caged door. This made the lobby display very realistic and of course drew big crowds day and night.

Twenty-five suburban theater men of Omaha recently formed a new organization under the working title of the Exhibitors' Booking Association. The theater men feel that they have been stepped on often enough by the exchanges and think that by uniting they can get some of the things they have long been demanding. They hope to get a better and cheaper class of film and have declared war on the deposit system. The new organization hopes also to cut its advertising expense by combining the individual ads into one large one.

Percy B. Gebhart, proprietor of the American Picture Theater, at Decatur, Illinois, staged an unusual performance one day last week by admitting patrons free to see the first episode of "The Grey Ghost," a serial which is to be shown at his theater. Mr. Gebhart placed coupons in his newspaper advertising which admitted the holders free. Nearly 3,000 people were on hand for the first performance, and they enjoyed the film so much there is little doubt they will all come back for the next instalments.

Motion pictures are to take the place of the family cook book in teaching folk how to can and preserve fruits and other perishable food products as a result of the recent action of the Department of Agriculture. The officials in Washington have asked the motion picture exhibitors through the war committee of the industry to display during the next three or four weeks at the theaters in the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois films dealing with the canning, preserving, drying and pickling of foods. Their action was taken as a result of the reports received by the department that a large surplus of perishable fruits and vegetables was accumulating in the big population centers and that there was great danger that large quantities would go to waste. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has also in a general letter requested that all theaters insert the contents of the slides in house programs for a period of four weeks.

Greater Vitagraph gave a trade showing at the Rialto Theater, New York City, on August 20, of "The Fighting Trail," to which all of the prominent exhibitors of Greater New York were invited. In presenting the serial for the criticism of the trade precedents were upset in the manner in which the presentation was made. Owing to the limitation of two hours for which the Rialto could be obtained it was impossible to show the entire serial. To give the exhibitors a basis for criticism or commendation Vitagraph arranged to show four episodes of the serial taken without regard to sequence.

In a decision affecting the East St. Louis Light & Power Company the Illinois Public Utilities Commission holds: "Electricity for the operation of a motor-generator and other motion picture apparatus in a theater should be charged for at the power rather than the lighting rate where the theater operates from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m., practically continuously, and the load is practically uniform throughout, since the characteristics of the service rendered conform more nearly to those for power service than to those for lighting service."

Major Funkhouser, Chicago's interesting censor, is on the tear again. His latest whim has been to bar the snake from the screen. The Major evidently doesn't like to see snakes but to the sober audience they present no particular source of discomfort so long as they confine their activities to moving about on the screen. Chicago's censor, however, is not even going to permit them to do that. If a man sees snakes in the picture houses of the Windy City it will be because he has bathed his inwards very thoroughly from the flask in his hip pocket before buying his ticket.

Manager E. C. Bostick of the Merrill Theater, Milwaukee, is another of those disciples of live-wire advertising who are bringing prestige to the exhibiting end of the business. Last week in playing "Skinner's Baby," he mailed and distributed fancy postal cards typical of the announcements of a birth. They read: "Mr. and Mrs. William Manning Skinner wish to announce the arrival of 'William Manning Skinner, Jr.,' at the Merrill Theater." Manager Bostick followed this up by decorating the exterior of his theater with elaborate baby designs, as well as the star's name in electrics, then rigged his big lobby up as a typical nursery. In the center of the place he stationed a baby cab with a big doll. Needless to say the thing went over big.

Industrial motion picture films for use in the training camps of the National Army are sought by the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations, through the Bureau of Motion Pictures and Exhibits of the Industrial Department of the organization. The committee also has received a request for such films to be used in the prison camps of Switzerland, and proposes later to show these among the American and French troops in France. The present attendance at exhibitions provided by the war work council of the Y. M. C. A. in military training camps exceeds 250,000 men weekly, and the work is in a process of expansion. The association plans to entertain 30,000 or more of the prisoners in Switzerland.

In connection with the celebration of the thirty-first anniversary of the institution's founding, the First National Bank of Minneapolis, Kansas, last week gave a motion picture show to an entire county. Minneapolis is the county seat of Ottawa County and has about 3,000 population. The rest of the county has about 30,000 inhabitants. In order to call attention forcibly to the value of thrift, the officers of the First National Bank rented the Reel Theater in Minneapolis and booked "The Dollar and the Law," a Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, for a day. Prior to the date of the celebration, invitations were sent to every householder in the county inviting them to be the bank's guests at the showing of the picture and also at a luncheon.

Consider the poor theater masher. Isn't his lot a hard one? His tricks are fast becoming impossible, owing to warnings such as the following, clipped from the Weekly Film News of the Majestic and Colonial Theaters of Jackson, Michigan:

> The theater masher is a male creature who chooses a seat next to an unaccompanied woman, sits as close to her as possible, and accidentally (?) touches her with his hand or arm. There are many methods of flirtation and downright annoyance practiced by these idle, brainless creatures, but any woman who finds one sitting next to her will recognize the pest in an instant.
> If patrons who are so annoyed will report the case to the manager immediately, something can be done to give the fellow the lesson he needs or place him where he will have time to think it over.
> Should a man of this sort persistently annoy you, don't speak to him or glare at him; call the nearest usher or find the manager.

With the governor of the state and his staff, the mayor of the city, and General Clarence Edwards, commanding the Department of New England, and his entire staff occupying boxes, the official Italian war pictures, "The Italian Battlefront," were tendered an ovation at the Tremont Theater, Boston, last week, upon the premier presentation of these pictures in that city. The audience, with all standing room at a premium as early as 7:15 o'clock, over-stepped all bounds of restraint in its enthusiastic applause and easily duplicated the remarkable "first nights" in New York, Pittsburgh and Buffalo. A symphony orchestra accompanied the pictures. The colors of America and Italy were displayed artistically throughout the house and there were two most effective stage settings.

The following is a list of theaters and the plays they used last week in the loop district of Chicago:

Alcazar—"The Tides of Fate," with Alexandra Carlisle.
Band Box—"The Cigarette Girl," with Gladys Hulette.
Bijou Dream—"One Law for Both," with Rita Jolivet.
Boston—"To the Death," with Madame Petrova.
Casino—"The Lair of the Wolf," with Donna Drew.
Castle—"Seven Keys to Bald Pate," with George M. Cohan.
Colonial—"Down to Earth," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Kozy—"The Long Green Trail."
Lyric—"Peggy, the Will o' th' Wisp," with Mabel Taliaferro.
Orchestra Hall—"Retreat of the Germans, Battle of Arras," official war picture.
Orpheum—"To the Death," with Madame Petrova.
Pastime—"It Happened to Adele."
Playhouse—"Mr. Opp," with Neva Gerber.
Rose—"The Marriage Market," with June Elvidge.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

IN MOTOGRAPHY for August 11 was a communication from Brother Sam Fear of Anderson, Indiana, in regard to a signal device for projection machines. The editor of this department published this article and later received a communication from Oscar Day, of the Auto Signal Device Company, who takes exceptions to the article, claiming that he holds patent rights to this device and also claiming that his device gave perfect satisfaction at the theater where Brother Fear is employed.

It has been the policy of the editor of this department to try to give every one a square deal and this case is no exception to that rule. From all appearances there is a wide difference of opinion between Brother Fear and Mr. Day on the subject in question, and the editor of this department is interested no further in the case than to give the readers of this department any and all information that will be of interest to them. If either party involved in the controversy feel that the other party has done him a wrong, then he will have to appeal to the proper parties to have this wrong adjusted.

Signaling Device Gives Satisfaction

Mr. Day criticizes the editor for publishing Brother Fear's letter. But as the information came from a man whom the editor knows to be a first class operator and a member held in high regard by the members of his own Local, he (the editor) had no reason for not using the information given him by Brother Fear.

There is no question but that Mr. Day has a device that is giving perfect satisfaction wherever it is installed. Several of the devices have been installed in Indianapolis in the last week and from all reports from the operators using them they are giving perfect satisfaction. The following statements are taken from Mr. Day's communication to the editor:

I am not surprised at all at his statement that he got interested in my device, as the owners, managers and operators of the hundreds of picture theaters in which my operator's automatic signaling device has been installed in the past three months have been not only interested in my device, but by their unqualified approval and appreciation of it are largely increasing its sale.

I do not doubt that had you known the real facts in reference to his statements as to my device, and had you been informed as to the specifications and claims of U. S. Patent No. 1,223,771, issued to me, and the specifications and claims in my applications Nos. 169,767 and 178,197 for patent for improvements in automatic signaling devices, now pending, you would have declined to publish his communication, or at least you certainly should have done so.

Masterful Handling of Lights

Projection Department Motography:—I would like to have you give me a little help on a couple of propositions.

First, could you tell me how the operators in high class city theaters handle their dissolving stero and spot while running slides between performances. In order to make my question plain, I will describe how the operator in a high class Kansas City house worked his lights. Just as the last scene in the final reel of the show faded out, the "Coming Tomorrow" slide faded onto the screen, after about five seconds, the entire screen and slide was flooded with a soft red light (from the spot).

After the people had time to read the slide, it slowly dissolved, the house lights were turned on and the curtains came together in front of the screen. The red flood was kept on the screen end of the house all the time.

After about four minutes the house lights were turned out, the curtains were pulled away from in front of the screen, and a weather forecast slide was revealed to the audience. This slide faded out, the first reel started, and after the main title of the play and the cast of characters had been projected, the red flood, which had been burning since the end of the previous show, faded out.

The house was the Regent and the operator deserves much credit for such splendid work. Now if you can give me some idea of how other operators handle such things, I will be very thankful as I want to put on some novel lighting effects in my show, but they will be limited for I have no dissolver or spot, just two arcs, or machines. Yours truly, J. W. C., Kansas.

How Can You Do It

The lighting effects as described by you, I should judge, were worked as follows: As the last scene in the final reel faded out, the "Coming Tomorrow" slide was faded in from the second machine. A dissolver was necessary to produce this effect. The screen was then flooded red from the spot lamp, the light being faded in by a shutter on the lamp. The slide on the screen was then dissolved out and the house lights turned on.

The size of the red flood was then increased to light the screen end of the house. The weather slide was then faded in from the first machine and then out again and the film title faded in from the second machine. After showing the title and cast the red flood was faded out by the shutter on the spot.

You can produce the same effects with one exception, and that is increasing the size of the flood to cover the whole end of the house, by installing a set of dissolving shutters either on your machines or on the wall of the booth. I would suggest that you place them on the wall of the booth as they are easily installed and at the same time they are out of the way.

Use Your Tinner

Have your local tinner make a set of slides to fit over the slides and shutters of the port holes for your two machines, making them large enough so that they will not interfere with the workings of the port hole shutters. Have him make these large enough to take in the stero and M. P. ports with one shutter. Some toothed at the bottom of the shutter. Have these teeth and if your booth is made this way then have the dissolver shutter big enough to take in both of them.

Each one of the dissolver shutters should be sawed together at the bottom of the shutter. Have these teeth cut about one inch deep. The principal of the double dissolver is to cut out as much light from one lens as is admitted to the other lens and by doing this the dissolving effect is produced.

Connect the two shutters of the dissolver by an iron bar. Drill a hole in the center of this bar so that it may be fastened to the wall of the booth by a bolt run through the wall of the booth. Use washers on the bolt and tighten the bolt just so the bar will move free upon it.

Drill a hole at each end of the bar to fasten the shutters to the bar. Fasten the shutters to the bar with stove bolts and tighten the bolts so that the shutter will move free. The holes in the shutters will have to be slotted to allow the up and down movement on the bar. The bar should be fastened to the wall of the booth in such a position that one of the shutters will cover one of the ports while the other one leaves the other port open, and vice versa.

Use a Color Wheel

Mount a color wheel on the wall of the booth at each port so that the different colors in it will cover the stero lens on each machine. If you have no color wheels, you can make them by using two old steel reels. Take one side off the reel and leave the hub attached to the other side. Place the two sides together so that the holes match. Drill four holes, large enough for stove bolts, in the spaces between the holes in the reel and one inch from the edge of the reel.

Cover the holes in the reel except one with different colored gelatine and then bolt the two sides together. Leave the one hole open so that a clear light can be projected through it. Fasten the wheels to the booth with the hub next to the wall. You can get the different colored gelatine from any supply house.

After installing the dissolver and the color wheels I believe that you can produce nearly the same effects as the operator at the Regent is producing. Say that machine No. 1 is running, and as the last scene in the reel appears on the screen, light up machine No. 2 with the slide "Coming Tomorrow" in place in the machine. As the last scene in the film on No. 1 fades out, shift the dissolver so that it cuts off No. 1 and allows "Coming Tomorrow" to appear through No. 2. In five or six seconds turn the color wheel on No. 2 machine so that the red shows on the screen, with the "Coming Tomorrow" showing through the red.

Next turn the red on No. 1 machine so that it will cover the stero lens and by this time the audience has had time to read the slide "Coming Tomorrow." Then shift the dissolver so that it cuts off No. 2 machine and allows the red flood showing through No. 1. Then turn on the house lights, No. 1 still burning.

Thread up No. 1 machine on the intermission ready for the start of the next show. Place the weather forecast slide in No. 2 machine with the red color still covering the lens. Turn out the house lights and shift the dissolver so that it cuts off the red light on No. 1 machine and allows the weather forecast slide with the red color on No. 2 machine to show on the screen. Next start No. 1 machine and shift the dissolver so that it cuts off No. 2, allowing the title of the picture on No. 1 to show.

At this time you will cut off the red effect altogether unless you arrange the shutter on the dissolver for the No. 2 machine so that you can disconnect it from the bar that connects the two shutters.

By disconnecting No. 2 shutter you can leave it open and by pulling out the weather forecast slide leave the red light on until the title and cast of characters have shown on No. 1 machine and then close it slowly to give the effect of the red light fading out on the film.

If you do work it this way, do not forget to connect it back to the shifting bar before trying to use it again. These effects can be worked much better by using the two machines and the spot, but as you have no spot I think that you can do very well with the two machines alone.

FILM NEWSPAPER STORY

Crystal Photoplays Corporation Makes Initial Seven Reeler Out of Sensational Dollie Matters Case—Principal Plays Lead

"In presenting our initial production, 'Mother Love and the Law,'" says W. I. Burford, general manager, Crystal Photoplays Corporation, "we feel that we have all the essentials necessary to the success of a feature photoplay. Even if the story, upon which this photodrama is based, had not engrossed the rapt attention of millions of newspaper readers in the United States and Canada, even if it had never received one line of publicity, it would still be one of the most unusual stories that has ever been filmed.

"Instead of depending upon the fanciful imaginings of fiction, we have woven a photoplay around the story of Mrs. Matters in a powerful drama suggested by her own sensational fight for the possession of her baby, as it was told by newspapers of America.

"To adequately film such a sensational story, the best talent obtainable was essential, and in this matter we were very fortunate in securing as the director, George A. Siegmann, whose long association with D. W. Griffith has put him in a class by himself as a master director. As an actor, he needs no further introduction. His portrayal of Silas Lynch in the 'Birth of a Nation' and King Cyrus in 'Intolerance' have made him famous. In 'Mother Love and the Law,' Mr. Siegmann plays a very prominent role in the part of Mrs. Matters' attorney.

"O. A. C. Lund, formerly with the World Film Corporation, wrote the scenario and played the male lead, opposite Mrs. Matters.

"'Mother Love and the Law' will be released September 1 and is being sold on the state rights basis. The board of directors of the Crystal Photoplays Corporation have set aside a generous appropriation for a national campaign of advertising 'Mother Love and the Law.' It has been definitely decided to carry on an intensive campaign of advertising after the sale of territory to assist the state rights buyer to further market his picture.

"In my experience as an exhibitor, I have made a close study of the various pictures that at different times have been the most popular with the motion-picture-going public. Ever since I first read of the Dollie Matters case in the newspapers, I was fascinated with the possibilities latent in this puzzling case.

"Lost Express," September 17

The Mutual Film Corporation will release "The Lost Express," a fifteen chapter, thirty-reel photo-drama starring Helen Homes on September 17. "The Lost Express" was produced by the Signal Film Corporation under direction of J. P. McGowan. The production will be released a chapter a week for fifteen weeks.

Helen Holmes has won international repute by the thrilling escapades in which she has figured before the camara in a series of highly successful chapter dramas.

"The Lost Express" is built around a baffling scientific mystery. An express train, carrying a carload of highly valuable documents, leaves its terminal under armed guard. It never reaches the next station. Members of the crew are found, bound and gagged, in the bottom of a lumber wagon.

Miss Holmes is cast in the role of Helen Thurston, daughter of General Thurston, a rich old inventor, who has perfected a process for granulating gasoline, the formula of which an oil company has been unable to buy and for which it has offered a bribe of $50,000.

A gang of crooks, operating under the guise of investment brokers, accepts a commission to secure the formula. They perfect an elaborate plan for stealing the express train to secure the documents.

"The Lost Express" is full of thrills, otherwise it would not be a Helen Holmes serial.

For the first time in her career of exciting escapades, Miss Holmes goes to the bottom of the sea in a diver's suit. The fearless star isn't a bit afraid of water, but it just hasn't happened to occur before to her that she could get a thrill out of a trip to the bottom of the ocean. In several of her productions she has taken some dangerous leaps into the water, but this time she goes clear to the floor of the sea in regulation diver regalia.

The first few chapters of "The Lost Express" have been screened at the Mutual executive offices, Chicago, for trade press review and members of the reviewing staff in Chicago were enthusiastic in praise of the new serial.

Urges Exhibitors to Study Territory

The "Exhibitors' Plan Book" described as containing "money making helps for exhibitors" issued weekly by Greater Vitagraph's publicity department, in the most recent issue editorially urges upon the exhibitors of the United States to make a survey of the territory from which they draw their patronage. The argument advanced in favor of such a survey is that the exhibitors should be in a position to know just exactly how much they can afford to spend on film rental, salaries and general overhead expenses and make money.

The editorial which follows a caption "What are your prospects?" reads:

"How many of the exhibitors of the United States know just exactly what their financial possibilities are?

"How many of them ever have taken the trouble to ascertain the number of possible patrons there are for their theaters?

"How many of the exhibitors envy their competitors through whose doors they see patrons going in a steady flow and through this steady flow jump to the conclusion that the competitor has a private branch of the United States mint?

"This same competitor may be losing sums of money daily because he is paying an exhorbitant price for film rental. He has failed to make a survey of his prospects and, unless he is more far-sighted than many exhibitors, he will not realize that he has been persuaded to sign a film rental contract that is ruinous to him, until he reaches the bankruptcy court.

"But the exhibitor, across the street, who envies the big audiences, doesn't know that even the big audiences will not turn enough into the box office to pay the big film rental plus the overhead expenses.

"When the big men behind the United Cigar Stores Company figure on opening a new store they do not go about it haphazard. They pick what they consider the best possible location. Then they station a man with a box of little white pills at that location. Everytime a pedestrian passes the man places a pill in a box he carries for the purpose. After working for several hours he and his employes know just exactly how many persons pass that spot in a given number of hours.

"The United States government maintains departments for the purpose of assisting business men. One of these departments will give statistics showing just exactly the amount of money that goes into the box offices of motion picture theaters annually. In this, as in everything else, the law of averages holds. If all of the people in the United States pay a certain sum annually for motion picture entertainment the residents of any one territoroy will pay their pro rata share.

"It is upon this pro rata share that the exhibitors of that territory must depend for their living.

"If any exhibitor spends more money on his film rental, salaries and general overhead than his territoroy can afford, that exhibitor, by every known law of business, must lose money eventually."

Theaters Run Foursquare Films

Some of the recent New York Foursquare Exchange bookings are Keith's Prospect Theater, three days for "The Sin Woman"; The Harlem Opera House, "The Sin Woman," three days; the Park Theater, Bay Ridge, "The Sin Woman," for two days and the Apollo in 125th street, which also has contracted for this feature.

The Sheer brothers, of Cornoa, have booked "The Sin Woman" and "Her Fighting Chance," while the Tiffany, of the Bronx, has chosen "The Bar Sinister" for an early showing. The Garden Theater, at Webster avenue and 195th street, will show both "The Bar Sinister" and "The Sin Woman." And the Regent, in Fulton street, Brooklyn, has likewise selected both of these features. The Adelphia and Olympia, New York Broadway theaters, will shortly show "Her Fighting Chance" as will the American Music Hall, at Rockaway.

Little Star Re-Signs

Little Mary McAlister, the six-year-old star of "On Trial," "Do Children Count?" and other highly successful productions, has, through her parents, signed a new contract of lengthy duration with Essanay and will be featured in a series of five-part productions this coming season. The pictures will all be comedy-dramas, in accordance with President Spoor's policy of releasing productions of a lighter vein, only, in an attempt to offset gloom which the war has cast over the country.

Little Mary McAlister, miniature star with Essanay.

"Pants," the first of the diminutive celebrity's forthcoming screen vehicles, will be released September 10.

Tiny Miss McAlister's next production will be entitled "Young Mother Hubbard." It is a travesty on Old Mother Hubbard of Mother Goose rhymes. However, the fact is brought out, through a humorous interpretation, that had Old Mother Hubbard been Young Mother Hubbard, in these days of living's high cost, her cupboard would have been bare just the same. The date for the release of this comedy-drama will be announced shortly.

HEAVY FALL SCHEDULE

Metro Opens Season with New Productions for Thirteen Stars, Including Nazimova, Petrova, Emily Stevens and Ethel Barrymore

Metro's studios start the fall season of picture producing with work going at full blast. Every one of Metro's thirteen stars is busy creating a new character to add to the portrait gallery for the delight of his particular following, and each is surrounded by a small army consisting of supporting cast and studio workers, with a master director for every group.

The talents of both novelists and trained scenario producers have been enlisted to provide all these stars with adequate material and the public with good stories. Prominent among them are Louis Joseph Vance, Mabel Wagnalls, Octavus Roy Cohen, J. U. Giesy, Jackson Gregory and George Gibbs, novelists of worldwide reputation, and among the scenario writers represented are William Christy Cabanne, June Mathis, Lionel Barrymore, John H. Collins and George D. Baker, all author-directors of note.

Nazimova, the celebrated Russian dramatic star, has begun preparations for her initial Metro offering, "The Rose Bush of a Thousand Years," which George D. Baker will direct. Mme. Nazimova is now studying the historical atmosphere of the story. The star will have the part of a "daughter of joy" in Paris, regenerated by the influence of the mystic "rose bush of a thousand years" a miracle performing shrub.

Ethel Barrymore is engaged in the production of "Life's Whirlpool," an intensely dramatic story written and directed by the star's brother, Lionel Barrymore, formerly himself a Metro star. This five-part feature production, which will be presented by B. A. Rolfe, gives more scope to Miss Barrymore's magnificent powers than any photodrama in which she has yet been seen. In her supporting company are such well-known players as Paul Everton, Alan Hale, Walter Hiers and Ricca Allen.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have gone "on location" to make the exteriors of their new special production de luxe, as yet unnamed and unpublished, written by Max Brand.

The parts taken by the two stars in this production are "Two-Gun" Carter and Marian Bayne. A mountainous setting has been provided for the story.

"Draft 258," by William Christy Cabanne and June Mathis, is the name of the new patriotic production de luxe in which Mabel Taliaferro will have the leading role. "Draft 258" is the logical successor to Metro's feature photodrama, "The Slacker," and is being directed by Mr. Cabanne, also responsible for that important recruiting drama.

Emily Stevens is engaged in the production of a new super-feature, as yet unnamed, adapted by Mary Murillo from the story by Charles A. Logue. George D. Baker is directing this seven-act production, in which the star has the fascinating role of Nan Kennedy, a girl who becomes a crook in spite of herself and becomes involved in an amazing tangle of circumstances. The story has unrivaled dramatic power. Earle Fox, Frank Currier, Paul Everton and Ricca Allen are among the prominent members of the cast.

Edith Storey is hard at work on a picture version of "The House in the Mist," a gripping adventure story by Octavus Roy Cohen and J. U. Giesey, adapted by June Mathis. Tod Browning is directing Miss Storey in this, her first Metro offering. She is surrounded by a notable cast including Harry S. Northrup, Bradley Barker, Kempton Greene and Frank Fisher Bennett. James J. Dunne is assisting Mr. Browning in her direction.

Emmy Wehlen has just begun work in a picturization of Louis Joseph Vance's story, "Nobody," with William C. Dowlan as director and Benjamin S. Kutler as his assistant.

For Viola Dana has been chosen Joseph Arthur's old-time stage success, "Blue Jeans," a story that can never grow old. The part of June affords the little star with immense possibilities, both in charm and in dramatic power. Robert Walker, Sally Crute, Augustus Phillips and Clifford Bruce are included in the unusually strong cast.

Harold Lockwood has begun work in "Paradise Garden," another "book" story from the pen of George Gibbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, creators and co-stars of Metro-Drew comedies, are just completing a playlet devoted to the subject of food conservation. It is called "The Patriot" and is fully up to the Drew standard. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will continue to complete one comedy a week.

Mme. Petrova is the star in "The Silent Sellers," a powerful five-part feature production directed by Burton L. King. In this production Mme. Petrova has an opportunity to display emotional ability and also wears some very beautiful gowns.

TO ADVERTISE BRAND

Triangle to Emphasize Quality of Production Rather Than Stars, Directors, Authors, Etc.—H. O. Davis States Policy

Strict adherence to facts and constructive exploitation that will keep public and exhibitor alike informed of production activities in studios and plans, will be the keynote of future Triangle publicity, according to a new policy outlined by vice-president and general manager, H. O. Davis, of the Triangle Film Corporation.

After an exhaustive study of various advertising methods and the results obtained by them, Mr. Davis has concluded that both purveyor and consumer are more interested in the quality of the wares and means used to attain a high standard of film product than in the units that compose the whole. He maintains that even a harmonious combination of the efforts of writer, director and actor is not complete without the further blending of hundreds of additional producing and distributing details which are of equal importance to exhibitor and public.

According to Mr. Davis, advertising of stars and individuals will not be eliminated, but they will be subordinated to the finished production and the exploitation of the brand under which they are exhibited. In other words, Triangle's advertising and publicity will concentrate upon the effort to convince both exhibitor and public that Triangle pictures are well worth selling and seeing regardless of the performers who make up their component parts. Casts will be selected for their ability to play roles assigned rather than for their individual fame or personal reputations, and no whim of star or director will be permitted to interfere with the quality on the screen.

"The newspapers and magazines have fought this fight in the past," said Mr. Davis, "and I think it behooves film producers to profit by their experience. We buy a publication on its merit and because it has earned the reputation of stability and consistent worth and not necessarily because an individual is its editor or a contributor to its editorial pages. If we are enabled to enjoy the handiwork of a celebrated writer, incidentally, so much the better, but no publisher nowa-days permits his fate to rest in the hands of uncertain individuals.

"Triangle's reputation and the appeal of the Triangle standard to both public and exhibitor must be upheld by and based upon consistent perfection of quality."

Mary Pickford Has New Charity Plan

Mary Pickford has devised a new plan to raise money for her charities in addition to her own contributions; this is by making personal appearances at the theaters in return for the theater manager's presenting a check to the charitable institution. While in the northern part of California taking the exterior scenes for "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," her new Artcraft picture, Miss Pickford received an appeal to help an orphan asylum in Los Angeles. The exhibitor in a neighboring town was also the owner of a large truck garden. The two got their heads together and Miss Pickford made two personal appearances before his audiences; in return the farmer-exhibitor sent a car load of potatoes to the orphan asylum.

Vitagraph to Make Serials

Greater Vitagraph is to become an active competitor in the serial field, according to an announcement made last week by Albert E. Smith, president of the Greater Vitagraph Company. In making the announcement President Smith said:

"It is not alone my intention to make serials a part of our regular program, but in fact we are already working on a second serial which will follow up 'The Fighting Trail.'

"We are not yet prepared to announce the name of the new serial, but I can assure you that, notwithstanding the fact that every one who has seen 'The Fighting Trail' prognosticates that it will set a new high mark of success among serials, we expect that its successor will not alone equal but surpass this record.

"The story is by Cyrus Townsend Brady and myself, and as this is the first time I have collaborated with the doctor, I am leaving no stone unturned to make our collaboration successful.

"This in itself should set at rest any competitor's statement that we will not have a serial on our program continuously."

In arguing that an exhibitor should not book "The Fighting Trail," according to information reaching the offices of Greater Vitagraph Company, salesmen acknowledge that "The Fighting Trail" is probably the strongest and most melodramatic serial ever made, but that exhibitors should not book it because heretofore Greater Vitagraph has not been known as a serial producing company.

To give the lie to this argument, President Smith further announces that in the future Greater Vitagraph will make enough serials to run fifty-two weeks every year, so that all exhibitors can be taken care of on serial bookings at the Greater Vitagraph exchanges throughout the country.

Greater Vitagraph gave its first trade showing on "The Fighting Trail" at the Strand Theater on Monday morning, August 20. More than four hundred exhibitors of the Greater New York district were present, fourteen of whom signed contracts for the fifteen episodes of the serial before they left the theater.

Art Dramas Sold for South

One of the biggest deals ever consummated by Art Dramas, Incorporated, since its inception, has been closed by Arthur F. Beck, general manager of the concern. The deal involved the disposing of franchise rights on Art Dramas for practically the entire South. The states covered by the contract are North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee.

The company which purchased the franchise was organized by Atlanta capital solely to exploit Art Dramas. It is known as the E. & H. Film Distributing Company, and has central offices in Atlanta. Other offices in all parts of the large territory are being formed as fast as possible.

"Baby Company" at Work

The Babyland Film Company of Cleveland has started work on a ten-reel serial in ten chapters to be called "The Adventures of Jack and Jill." The roles will be played by children, most of them living in Cleveland.

Vivian Rich with Universal

Vivian Rich, one of Universal's latest acquisitions, is at present playing opposite Neal Hart in a five-reel feature entitled, "The Bumble Bee."

One of the first productions in which Miss Rich appeared was "The Country Girl" at the Herald Square Theater, New York. The same season she joined Gus Edwards in vaudeville and after a time with his company came with her mother to the Pacific Coast. That was in 1913, and she joined the American Company subsequently, playing under the banner of William Fox.

Vivian Rich, who is now with Universal.

Among the notable features in which she has appeared are "Holly House," "Pastures Green" and "The Little Troubadour," in all of which she played leads. Miss Rich also appeared opposite William Farnum in "The Price of Silence."

Vivian Rich is a great reader, and her dressing room looks like a small library. She has had some success in inventing scenarios. Nearly all outdoor sports appeal to her, motoring being a special hobby; but unlike most girls, she is a thorough mechanician and can overhaul her own car like a paid expert.

SOCIETY SEES 'EM MADE

Making Pictures One Thing to Look At, Another Thing to Do—Bar Harbor Enjoys Filming of Sea Queen

No army unit for service "somewhere in France" ever received the care in equipping bestowed on a modern motion picture company going out on "location," as it is known when a company quits the studio for outside work.

Every detail, not only for the making of the picture, is carefully gone into, but in addition the health of the organization is safeguarded to the nth degree. To have a principal or even an important extra get sick is ruinous and oftentimes causes long delays in the completion of the photoplay.

With all the millionaire society of Bar Harbor watching the making of "Queen of the Sea," the new William Fox sub-sea fantasy with Annette Kellermann, little thought is given to the enormous amount of preparation necessary to begin the picture. Society sees only the spectacular parts of the making of the film—the actual taking the scenes.

It does not realize that for months Director John G. Adolfi and his assistant, John W. Kellette, worked out the dramatic features, but spent an almost equal amount of time in preparing.

How thoroughly the preparedness went was shown during the taking of some water scenes in which hundreds of young women and men took the part of mermaids and mermen. They are compelled to remain for long periods of time in the icy cold waters of the ocean and even with the greatest of care accidents will happen.

To secure setting for "Queen of the Sea" days were spent in the Congressional Library at Washington and in many private libraries in an effort to make historically correct every detail of the picture. It was necessary to look up plates and descriptions of the time of Alaric the Bold, Clovis, Hermann, Marius, Sardanopolis, and others of the tenth century. Designs for costumes, arms and boats, not to mention all the other detail, had to be gathered.

Even Grecian mythology was invaded and every article used is not only historically, but fabrically, correct. Even the rocks had to have barnacles put where no barnacle had ever appeared before. Sea shells were manufactured. Rocks and reefs were found, but had to be trimmed with the animal life of the period in which the picture is cast.

Stalactite and stalagmite formations were studied in order that even the cave scenes might be absolutely right. After this was found it devolved upon the technical department to reproduce it.

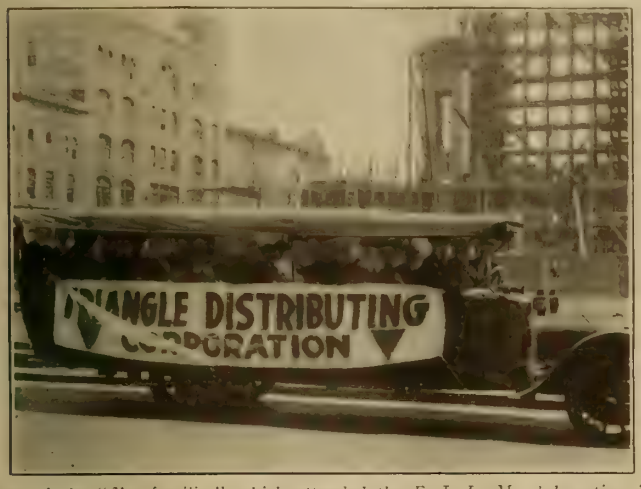
The Fox Film Corporation has in Bar Harbor a crew of stage carpenters, scenic artists and everything essential to the making of "Queen of the Sea."

Weather is, of course, one of the main things in the making of pictures. Foggy or rainy weather, unless it is called for by the scenario, results in untold loss to the producing company. The expenses go on just the same whether film is being ground out or not.

The director and his assistants are generally up hours before the company watching and studying weather conditions. If the indications are for the desired conditions the company is called and starts immediately for location. Oftentimes they go without breakfast, waiting for hours for the coffee wagon to arrive.

In making a picture like "Queen of the Sea," the weather conditions are not alone to be considered. Another element enters into it and this is the tides. There is a rise and fall of fifteen feet in the tide and this makes a location change at different stages of the water.

With work done for the day, the activities of the director, his assistant and his camera men do not cease. Director Adolfi and Mr. Kellette spend half the night planning out the work for the following day.



That society is interested in the making of "Queen of the Sea" is shown by the immense crowds which have daily witnessed the work from the vantage points afforded by the rocks. Everybody who is anybody in Bar Harbor society has driven out to the location and spent not one day but many.

Lawrence Joins Ivan

The Ivan Film Productions have further increased its directorial staff by engaging the services of the well-known director, Edmund Lawrence. Mr. Lawrence comes to the Ivan Films with a record of past achievements most notable in the annals of film history. Mr. Lawrence in directing "Married in Name Only," his first picture for the Ivan Productions, has the opportunity to display the exceptional ability which his varied experience has given him.

F. I. L. M. Club "Outs"

The Triangle Distributing Corporation was well represented at the first annual outing at Karatsonyi Inn, Glenwood-on-the-Sound, on August 18 of the members of the New York F. I. L. M. Club, composed of the film exchange managers. About 400 exchange men and theater managers attended.

Thirty employes of Triangle's New York exchange left the office at 12 o'clock in a big sightseeing bus, arriving at the Karatsonyi Inn at 1:30. Miss Flood of the Triangle office and Mr. Saunders, president of the F. I. L. M. Club and manager of the Metro Pictures Corporation, entered the prize dancing contest and took the second honors.

The baseball game was the feature of the program. Mr. Hoy of the Hoy Reporting Service, acting as umpire, found considerable difficulty in pleasing both exhibitors and exchangemen, and the disputes which arose gave added entertainment to the event.

The rest of the afternoon was devoted to swimming, and at 6:30 dinner was served.

"Doing Her Bit"

A patriotic play centering about the heroism of a little girl of the slums, to be called "Doing Her Bit," soon will be in the course of production at the Triangle Film Corporation's Culver City studio under the direction of Jack Conway.

An unusual setting to be used in the piece has just been completed at the ranch studio of the company at Hartville, in the Santa Monica mountains, and is an actual size reproduction of one of the splendid tenement streets on the New York east side. The interior settings will be fashioned from photographs of tenement homes supplied to the research department by the New York Bureau of Municipal Reforms.

The army and navy recruiting scenes occasioned a visit to Uncle Sam's local recruiting stations by the technical staff of the studio. Soldiers and sailors will be pressed into service to enact parts in the military and naval scenes if the authorities can be persuaded to let them become temporary movie actors.

An excellent group of five new "Ham" comedies from Kalem Company is promised by General Film Company for release in October.

Miller Directs Norma Talmadge

Charles Miller, who for two years directed many of Triangle's greatest productions, has been engaged by Joseph M. Schenck to direct the Norma Talmadge photoplays.

The first effort of Mr. Miller's new affiliation will be Grace Miller White's "The Secret of the Storm Country," where the original scenes of the story were laid.

Mr. Schenck's attention was called to Mr. Miller through the splendid work he did under the Triangle banner, for Bessie Love in "The Sawdust Ring," for Dorothy Dalton in "The Flame of the Yukon" and for Bessie Barriscale.

"Marriage Market" Filmed

The current World-Picture Brady-Made is "The Marriage Market," in which Carlyle Blackwell is the star and June Elvidge and Arthur Ashley are the featured players. The play is founded upon a well known best seller which was published under another name.

Herbert Brenon's Next Picture

Herbert Brenon believes that one of the secrets of his success in the picture world has been his belief in the importance of the author. Whereas others in the picture business have played up the star actor or actress to the sacrifice of the story of the picture, Mr. Brenon has always insisted that the story be superlative in interest and that the players come only second. That he has no intention of deviating from this method of picturization is indicated by his selection of "Empty Pockets," from the pen of Rupert Hughes, for his next Selznick production.

"It is an inspiration to a director," said Mr. Brenon in speaking of "Empty Pockets," "to take up a story written with the skill that Rupert Hughes possesses. The ground work is so well laid out for him. The situations are true and the conclusions logical.

"From my standard of judging things, 'Empty Pockets' is an ideal story for a picture. It would not lend itself to the star system. It has too many parts that require exceptional acting. It has not one role that stands out to the eclipse of all others.

"It is just the type of story I have been seeking for a long time. Those who liked my treatment of 'The Lone Wolf' will, I am sure, be even more pleased when 'Empty Pockets' is released.

"Barbary Sheep" Expected to Establish Stage Star as Popular Screen Favorite—Play Surpasses Fondest Expectations

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, last week announced that the next offering under this trade mark will be Elsie Ferguson's initial photoplay, "Barbary Sheep," adapted from the book by Robert Hichens. In speaking of the newest Artcraft production, Mr. Greene said: "Elsie Ferguson has performed her initial screen characterization with a result that exceeds even our own highly optimistic expectations. Upon viewing the first hundred feet of Miss Ferguson's first motion picture effort several months ago, I was particularly happy to see with what truly wonderful effectiveness this beautiful star of the spoken drama transferred her great art to the screen.

"The fact that Miss Ferguson is one of the most beautiful as well as talented actresses of the stage of course, did not necessarily mean that she would prove equally effective in motion pictures. Many well known favorites of the spoken drama have found to their great surprise that on the screen they were an entirely different person. But not so with Elsie Ferguson. Immediately upon seeing her first few scenes on the screen we realized the fact that if anything, this popular stage star was far more acceptable as a motion picture actress. We confidently feel that as a result of her own ability of adapting herself to motion pictures and the masterwork of Maurice Tourneur, her director, 'Barbary Sheep' will not only mark her triumphant film debut, but will instantaneously establish her as a favorite in the hearts of the patrons of high-class picture plays.

"The manner in which exhibitors are requesting bookings for this attraction is extremely gratifying and again accents the fact that the demand for a high grade star in a vehicle befitting her accomplishments is greater than ever. Elsie Ferguson has always been an exponent of the true dramatic art, which is an internationally recognized fact. In booking her photoplays exhibitors readily show that they are at all times on the alert for a picture that will elevate the standard of their theater.

"On the stage Miss Ferguson only appeared in the best theaters and this fact has been immediately realized by exhibitors throughout the country. No matter what grade of pictures an exhibitor has shown in the past the fact that he displays the name of Elsie Ferguson in front of his house means that he is catering to the very best clientele in his city. In other words the name of Elsie Ferguson adds dignity and prestige to any house and will stimulate the high-class patronage which every manager likes to see in his theater.

"Our exploitation department has prepared material for an extensive advertising and publicity campaign for this production. In addition our Exhibitors' Service Department is at the disposal of managers for special ideas to assist them in giving this super-photoplay exploitation in keeping with its importance, not only to the film world, but to the general theater going public." "Barbary Sheep" will be released early in September.

Blackton Resigns from Vitagraph

Having completed the taking of scenes for his first production for Paramount, "The World for Sale," a screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's widely-read novel, J. Stuart Blackton has formally resigned as vice-president and secretary of the Vitagraph Company of America, with which he was so long associated.

Commodore Blackton feels that inasmuch as he will henceforth devote all his time to his own productions, he would be unable to properly fill the offices he has held with Vitagraph.

Viola Dana to Star in "Blue Jeans"

Metro Pictures Corporation has acquired the motion picture rights to "Blue Jeans," Joseph Arthur's old stage success, for the use of Viola Dana. Work already has been begun on the screen version of "Blue Jeans."

Miss Dana will have one of the greatest opportunities of her career as June, a part which calls for extreme youthfulness at the beginning, and a display of powerful emotions as the story progresses.

Pretty Sally Crute, a favorite motion picture player, has been engaged to play Sue Eudaly in the special screen production which Metro Pictures Corporation will make of the old-time stage success, "Blue Jeans," with Viola Dana as star.

"Mr. Opp"

Fine Bluebird Production of Alice Hegan Rice's Book —Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

EXCELLENT is the only adjective which will fit the production Bluebird has given this story. It is up to the best Bluebird standard; in fact, it raises the standard. Excellent in acting, directing, settings and photography, it has all the sincerity and human appeal of the book from which it is taken. Lynn Reynolds caught the spirit of the author's work, and the result is a photoplay which shows how well a book may be picturized, even a book whose chief appeal is in charm and humanness rather than in a fantastic plot or breathless action. This is just a simple story, with the unexciting atmosphere of a country town. But it is sweet without sentimentality, true without sordidness

The fine directing of Lynn Reynolds is shown throughout, and he has a talented cast to work with. First honors go to Arthur Hoyt in the title role. Elise Maison's portrayal of the pathetic Miss Kippy is beyond criticism. There are a number of well played village characters, among them George Hernandez as Jimmy Fallows, Anna Lockhart as Mrs. Gusty and Neva Gerber as Guinevere. George Chesbro plays well the role of Willard Hinton, and Jack Curtis appears as John Mathews, the capitalist.

The Story: Mr. Opp has failed at a number of professions, but this has not injured his optimism or faith in himself. After the death of his father he remains in a little town to care for his sister, Kippy, who had been ill as a child, and whose mind, as a result, had never grown up. Mr. Opp founds a newspaper in the town and works faithfully for the promotion of the interest of the little village. He cannot make the paper succeed financially, and he tries to promote a coal mine in the vicinity. But this too fails. He falls in love with a girl of the village, but has to choose between her and his sister, Kippy, and refuses to give up Kippy. Then his paper fails, at the time the girl he had loved marries a man from the city. At last Mr. Opp's faith in himself and others is shaken. In the midst of his despair, the townspeople wake up to the fact that he had started the little boom the town enjoys, and they give a banquet in his honor. He is nominated as mayor, and again the joy in life returns.

"Madame Sherry"

Authors Film Comedy Released by Hoffman Foursquare Sept. 1. Reviewed by George W. Graves

AS a whole, "Madame Sherry," the Hauerbach-Hoschna musical comedy, as seen on the screen, will prove to be very laughable entertainment for those who enjoy musical comedy situations. Although the loss of the speaking voice hampers some of the comedy, the exhibitor need not do without the music, since the producers have arranged special scores to suit different types of orchestras. Those who saw the picture in a projection room realized that without music the picture was rather empty. Any music at all would improve the situation, but the scores especially prepared by the company should prove invaluable to the theater man who wishes to show the picture.

"Madame Sherry" is brimful of action from first to last, the acting is quite unusual and all the funny situations that characterized the stage play have been brought out with true musical comedy verve. There is nothing serious to find fault with in the story or direction and the picture has been produced in elaborate style. In the cast Gertrude McCoy is very fascinating as the niece of old Theophilus, and others in the cast who fall into parts naturally suited to them and furnish the audience with many a good laugh are Frank L. A. O'Connor, H. J. Quealy, Jean Stuart and Alphie James.

"Madame Sherry" makes a farce comedy that is presentable in most any theater. The name itself means much to the exhibitor in the light of publicity, since through piano or phonograph music, the press and the stage it has penetrated into most every community.

"A Trip to Chinatown"

Two Reel Selig-Hoyt Comedy Released Through K. E. S. E. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

A FANTASTIC comedy is this, out of the ordinary and frequently laugh provoking. Events take place during the opium dream of the hero, and therefore may be as impossible as they wish but there is, in fact, a more logical plot and closer sequence than in the preceding Hoyt-Selig releases. There have been more hilarious comedies, perhaps, but a certain originality makes this entertaining throughout. It is a very good number of the series.

The settings are fantastic and fitting. The cast of players is the same which appeared in the previous comedies and includes Amy Dennis, William Fables, James Harris and Fanny Cohen. J. A. Richmond directed.

The Story: The comedy has to do with the adventures of a race track tout and a policeman, the tout's enemy. Giving wrong tips on the races the tout seeks the seclusion of a "Chink" laundry, hits the pipe and is immediately transported to the Orient where he meets a beautiful Oriental princess. The policeman is discovered to be a slave in the palace.

Then things begin to happen. Seeking revenge on the policeman, the tout persuades the princess to match the slave with a gigantic wrestler, a swordsman and a fierce lion. The slave overcomes them all and wins the admiration of the princess. The tout makes his escape, is pursued, discovered, and—he awakens in the laundry and finds the policeman is again after him!

out for any audience at all interested in western dramas. There isn't too much gun play, just enough to be exciting. The characters are human and the right ones win sympathy, while the villain will be cordially hated.

W. S. Van Dyke, the director, has presented the drama well. The interest and suspense increases and the close is rapid and satisfactory. The acting of Jack Gardner, Ruth King and Carl Stockdale in the most important role is very good.

The Story: Mollie Andrews marries Dan Clark, a brutal sort of man who makes her very unhappy. He kills a saloon keeper in a quarrel one day and escapes from the country. Mollie goes back to her old profession of school teaching.

Constable Calhoun of the Northwestern Royal Mounted Police meets and grows to love the little school teacher, not knowing her history. One day Dan Clark returns and then Calhoun learns of Mollie's marriage. Mollie makes him promise not to harm Clark unless in self-defense. Later Calhoun learns that Clark is wanted for murder and that it is his duty to arrest him. His promise to Mollie troubles him. But Clark plans to kill Calhoun and in a figth both are injured, Clark fatally. Mollie is then free to marry Calhoun.

"The Lady of the Photograph"

Shirley Mason in Edison-K. E. S. E. Comedy Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AS either a comedy or a drama, this offering is likely to miss fire with the average audience. It hasn't enough real comedy, and the human appeal is lacking because the characters do not win the sympathy. Shirley Mason is popular and in this is as charming as ever. Her name will have some drawing power, and the audience will enjoy seeing her, although her role in this is not exacting. Raymond McKee plays opposite as Ferdinand Latimer, the younger son of an English family. He makes the character a vapid fop throughout, although, according to subtitles and the plot, the man is supposed to have some admirable traits. But as played, he and his romance will not win much sympathy.

ANNOUNCEMENT

HAMPTON DEL RUTH

EDITOR AND PRODUCTION MANAGER

MACK SENNETT—COMEDIES

With the exception of Miss Mason's role, the rest of the cast is also overdrawn. The society people have wretched manners and in general act as no people of breeding would ever do. This would perhaps go in straight comedy, but in a comedy drama, when the story calls for a certain sympathetic appeal, it is puzzling, to say the least.

The action of the picture is slow. The photography is generally good and there are a number of pretty scenes filmed. The cast of players includes Royal Byron, William Calhoun, Jane Harvey, Dudley Hill and Gerald Pring.

The story: Ferdinand Latimer, an English youth, disinherited because of his wild life, comes to America to win a fortune. Becoming despondent, he attempts suicide, but is saved by a young American of wealth. The American, John Brown, who is lacking in culture, is eager to get into society, and he offers the Englishman money if he will "coach" him in manners and aid him in winning the hand of a young girl, Marjorie Van Dam, whose photograph Brown has fallen in love with. To aid the plan, he has Latimer pose as a nobleman.

Latimer's problem is increased because he had met and fallen in love with Marjorie, whom he had met in England. In his disguise, Marjorie does not recognize him, and Latimer keeps his promise to plead for his benefactor. The arrival of Latimer's cousin from England, the news of the death of Latimer's elder brother and the fact that the fortune now comes to the younger brother, and the marriage of John Brown to his stenographer, leaving Latimer free to reveal his identity and his love for Marjorie, completes the story.

"Mother O' Mine"

Bluebird Offering Slow But With Some Appeal. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE basic idea of this play, the strength of mother love, always holds a certain appeal. There are many audiences which will overlook the faults in this story and enjoy the sentiment it contains. The picture, which Rupert Julian directed, is a typical Bluebird production in many ways, but is not so good as some recently released. It is very slow in action and it is not very convincing. The caddishness of the hero and his sudden reformation are both rather unbelievable. The first part of the play is very draggy, and its touches of humor and sympathy will not prevent its boring many patrons. The last three reels are much better, and the latter part of the picture is pleasing enough to send the audiences away in a good humor.

The play, in short, is very weak in its story. It is well acted, well directed and excellently photographed. It would have been a fine three-reeler. Ruby La Fayette as the mother of the story does much to give the picture charm. Rupert Julian's role of the son is acted in his usual fashion. It is difficult and not always sympathetic. Ruth Clifford does well as the girl of the story. Elsie Jane Wilson and E. A. Warren contribute good character parts. Elliott J. Clawson wrote the story.

The story: John Standing is the idol of his mother's heart. But when he goes away to the city and makes a fortune, he neglects his mother, who is lonely in the little country town. Finally, bearing gifts of knitted socks and jams and pies, mother comes to the city to surprise her son. She arrives during the midst of a party. The son is ashamed to acknowledge his mother before his fashionable guests and tells them that she is his old nurse. Mother overhears, but after the first pain, she forgives. However, that night she steals away and goes back home. Then the son realizes his caddishness, and, breaking his engagement to a society girl, he goes home to devote his time to his mother's happiness.

Some time later the girl and her mother call at the Standing home. A close friendship springs up between the two mothers, and the engagement of the young people is resumed.

"The Little Samaritan"

Erbograph-Art Dramas Subject Features Marian Swayne. Reviewed by George W. Graves

TO get right down to the point, this is the best Art-Dramas offering to come along in quite a time. The statement of the company's herald, which reads, ". . . the author, Rev. Clarence J. Harris, has constructed a story of simple charm and delightful appeal," is quite true. The story, in which an honest and earnest minister and the various members of his country church congregation figure, is entertaining and true to life. It deals a stout blow at hypocrisy. Among the characters dealt with there is none that cannot be found in any American country village. There is a grasping skinflint landlord who squeezes the last penny out of a poor old lady who is struggling along on a meager pension and trying to support a little orphaned girl named Lindy. Although the latter is snubbed by the other girls of the town because she is poor and her name is questionable, the young minister sees the good in her and helps to bring it out. Lindy, to save her guardian from the harsh old landlord, takes money from the church, intending to replace it later. The discrepancy is discovered later and naturally enough the girl's bitterest persecutor is the hypocrite landlord. But the minister proves he is worthy of his calling. He not only administers severe rebuke to the hard-shelled members of his congregation, but he commends the girl for her righteous motive and puts her in the place she deserves in the community.

Rev. Clarence J. Harris, the author, can congratulate himself on providing the screen with some good, enjoyable entertainment and teaching some good lessons on the side. Joseph Levering's direction accounts for a good deal of novelty and realism throughout. The picture is a good one from the standpoint of acting. It is evident that Marian Swayne is improving rapidly. The fans who have been watching her will probably agree that in the role of Lindy in this picture she has completed the best part she has yet done for the screen. Carl Gerard is very interesting as the young minister. Others in the cast are Lucile Dorrington, Sam Robinson, Bernard Niemeyer, Charles MacDonald, Mrs. Allen Walker and Olive Corbett. Most of these people, either naturally typed, or made up, help the country town atmosphere substantially through their characterizations.

Dolly Matters Starred in Crystal Photoplays. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

CAPITALIZING the notoriety of the star player, and using her own story as the basis for the photoplay, this state rights picture, produced by Crystal Photoplays, under the direction of George A. Siegmann, will have an undoubted interest for the many people who followed the sensational case in the newspapers. This publicity alone would make it a drawing card in certain localities. And although the play as presented is not particularly sensational, it will hold the attention and appeal to the sympathies of those it attracts.

Seven reels are allowed for the telling of a story which could be set forth in less footage and the result is a certain dragginess, especially in the first part. The latter part has more rapid action. The story is set forth in a straightforward, narrative fashion. Acting, the directing and photography are satisfactory, though not remarkable. The picture is best fitted for the middle class audiences. Critical patrons will not be enthusiastic over it, although some of them may accept it as a novelty, since it is to a certain extent a dramatization of a real life occurrence.

O. A. C. Lund wrote the photoplay and plays the part of Jimmy Harwood. Dollie Ledgerwood Matters plays the part of the persecuted heroine. George A. Siegmann, who directed, plays William Bernard, a sympathetic lawyer. Mabel Bardine in a "vamp" role, Patrick Calhoun as a dishonest lawyer, Thomas Flynn and F. D. Wood also have part in the story.

The story: In brief, the picture sets forth the career of Marion Leyden, who is adopted by a wealthy family, the Marshalls, and who, after the death of the wife, marries Mr. Marshall, much her senior. Marshall dies shortly before Marion's child is born. Marshall's brother and his family scheme to get hold of the fortune that is left. Knowing that Marion's baby is the rightful heir, they try to prove, before a law court, that Marion's own baby had died and that another had been substituted.

The trial scene.

In the first trial, they are unsuccessful, but they appeal the case, and through bribery, win, and Marion's baby is given to another woman. Jimmy Harwood, who had formerly loved Marion, comes to her aid. He obtains a record showing that it was not Marion's child which died, and although his enemies trap him and almost kill him, he escapes, and after a wild auto race arrives in time to win the lawsuit for Marion, and the baby and fortune are given her.

drama or any other kind, is only lukewarm as far as providing real interest is concerned. This is due not so much to the lack of a good plot as it is to ineffective, and, in some parts, decidedly amateurish treatment. It is evident that the scenario might well have been improved upon. In production, the picture is every bit up to a high standard as a program offering.

Montague Love has a part to which he is well suited, June Elvidge, who always gives sterling renditions, appears again very much to the advantage of the picture, and Arthur Ashley, William Black and Robert Broderick have prominent parts. "The Guardian" owes a great deal to these players who add to its stock of realism even when the story seems quite bound to detract from it.

On the whole, on account of the sincere work of the cast, the picture may be styled an acceptable program offering. There is at least plenty of action, and one or two thrills are provided.

"The Italian Battlefront"

Official War Pictures of the Italian Government—Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

PICTURES which show with wonderful vividness the difficulties which the Italian soldiers must overcome and the splendid fashion in which they are doing their share in the great war are these battle views in the Alps which have lately arrived from the scene of action and are presented under the direction of William Moore Patch. In Chicago the film is being given a most artistic presentation at the Auditorium Theater, with special musical accompaniment arranged by Carl Bernthaler.

The pictures are divided into three episodes, part one showing Italy's warfare in the Adamello, at the top of the snow-clad Alps, thousands of feet above the level of the sea; part two showing the battle of Gorizia; part three showing Italy's warfare in the sky and on the sea, the defenses of Venice, and the Italian aircraft, motorboats and submarines. Closing pictures show various Italian army units cheering the entry of the United States into the war. The subtitles of the pictures throughout are given in both English and Italian.

These views of the various phases of Italy's struggle are truly wonderful, and are very valuable for a number of reasons. They are thrilling and inspiring, and many of the scenes are remarkably beautiful. A master producer of a spectacular photoplay might have staged some of these scenes, especially among the snow and the clouds of the mountains. And in the scenes of aerial bridges there are real thrills which make "stunts" for the wildest serials seem tame and safe. But apart from this phase of the films is their educational value. Everyone should see them in order to understand what Italy is doing, and the seemingly unsurmountable difficulties which stood in her way. Italy has perhaps been given less thought by the average American than our other allies, and especially when she is playing so large a part at present in the war, this record of some of her achievements should be shown throughout the United States.

"The Little Duchess"

World Film Five-Part Subject Features Little Madge Evans—Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE smile of this sweet little child star, Madge Evans, is sure to find its way to the hearts of spectators. But she can do more than smile. She proves to be a very appealing little actress with real personality and a method that is quite free from stiffness or camera-consciousness. The story, by Julia Burnham,

Madge Evans in "The Little Duchess"

and produced by Harley Knoles, places the child in the predicament of having to live with her grandfather, an individual who never lifts himself out of a chronic grouch. He hates everybody and everything and his impatient tirades often result in black and blue spots on the anatomies of some of his terrified servants.

Looking back, we find that the old man believes his wife eloped with a secret lover years before. From the day of her disappearance until the arrival of the little girl "Jerry" not a member of the fair sex, young or old, has crossed the threshold of the acrid-dispositioned old Earl. Even "Jerry" is forced to don the clothes of a male. So the audience is treated to the perhaps unnovel but always appealing portrayal of a child's sweetness melting and neutralizing the hard-boiled-eggishness of a moody old grouch. The humanness of this situation is indubitable.

The story all the way through is really very entertaining. There is plenty of comedy on the side, delicate human touches abound, and the working out of the plot, showing that the Earl's wife had not been unfaithful at all, neither did she run away, is quite interesting. Harley Knoles did a very good job in direction. To his coherent and satisfying visualization of the story must be added praise for the effects he was able to secure with the child. Jack Drumier, playing the role of the crusty party, gives a very satisfying performance. Some of the names of those in a cast of all-around ability are James Davis, Patrick Foy, Sheridan Tansey, Pinna Nesbit and Maxine Elliott Hicks. The latter will be remembered for some excellent work she has done in "fresh" schoolgirl parts and the like in a number of pictures. Her work always carries realism and a few laughs.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship"

Taylor Holmes' First Picture, An Essanay-K. E. S. E. Release—Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

IT looks as though Taylor Holmes is going to take his place among the leading screen favorites as a result of his first picture venture. He fits so well into his role in this story, and the vehicle is so good that success seems obvious.

There is everything good to be said about this offering. It is excellently presented in every detail, and it is typical of the best in screen entertainment. Taken from the Saturday Evening Post story by Clarence Kelland, the play sets forth in a delightfully humorous fashion the love story of a young man who applies the principles of efficiency to courtship. The serious, pedantic methods with which he conducts his campaign to win the heart of his lady are presented in a skillful way by Holmes. His laborious playing of a saxaphone because he has decided that music will prove efficient in melting the heart of the heroine will cause ripples of laughter among any audience. This and other situations are not only funny in themselves but they have been given all the little subtle touches which have distinguished other Essanay comedy-dramas.

The supporting cast is unusually well chosen. Virginia Valli is at her best as the leading lady, and Rodney La Roque is a most effective foil for the hero. Ernest Maupain's playing of the father could not be better. The few minor characters introduced are as well selected. Director Windom's work merits only praise. Photography and settings are up to the standard. The appeal of the picture is to a high class audience especially, but it will be liked by any comedy-loving patronage. It will cause many chuckles and will banish war worries and other troubles from the minds of the viewers.

The Story: The subtitles tell the story in the first person. At the beginning of the picture a copy of the Saturday Evening Post is opened to the story as published. Through this is dissolved the smiling face of Taylor Holmes as "Edgar Bumpus," called "Efficiency Edgar." In the first subtitle he explains his title, and then the picture shows his early experiences and his success in office management. After he meets "the girl" he decides that marriage makes for the efficiency of the individual and resolves to "equip himself with a wife." For a time his love affair plays havoc with his office efficiency, especially when he dictates his appreciation of Mary's beauty into the dictaphone, to be transcribed later by his secretary, to his great embarrassment.

He conducts his courtship on business principles. He never sees the humor of his own conduct, and neither does the girl's father. But the girl, and the audience, does. At last he wins out, but whether on account of efficiency, or in spite of it, the audience must decide.

Italian War Films Draw

With film men generally skeptic as to the drawing power of war films, the official war pictures of the Italian government, "The Italian Battlefront," in less than a month's time have completely shattered many previous experiences.

Not only have the pictures played as capacity business wherever they have been presented, but at the Forty-fourth Street Theater, New York, the gross has exceeded that of practically every legitimate attraction on Broadway.

This business has been maintained so consistently at every performance that William Moore Patch, president and managing director of the Fort Pitt Theater Corporation, under the direction of whom the American Tour of the films has been placed, was last week negotiating for another theater in New York, in which to extend the run.

The pictures have been received with equally substantial support in Pittsburgh and Buffalo. They are now playing at the Tremont Theater, Boston, to sitting and standing capacity and at the Auditorium, Chicago, seating 4,000.

"Sirens of the Sea," a five-part super-feature of Jewel Productions, Inc., had its premier at The Broadway Theater, New York, on August 26.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

George George, elongated comedian generally found cutting up with George Ovey in Cub Comedies, doesn't know whether to laugh or cry. He wants to go to war in answer to his selection for the draft army but he rues the day he must perchance forsake the Horsley happy family of players.

Edward Sloman, the American director who guides the William Russell company, has purchased a pretty home in Santa Barbara. Sloman and his wife believe there is nothing too good for baby Hylda, hence the bungalow and the garden where baby can kick her sturdy little legs on the lawn and talk to the blue sky.

Mary Miles Minter, the American Film star, is too busy meeting the public taste in picture production to take a regular vacation, but on location she manages to slip away occasionally for a little trout fishing.

Max Linder, Essanay's famous French comedian, is reported to be nearly out of danger at the sanitarium in California where he has been lying desperately ill from an old war wound for several months.

A man named Skinner in Chicago celebrated the arrival of his first-born by going to see "Skinner's Baby," in which Bryant Washburn is featured. He was so delighted with the picture that he went home and named his baby Bryant Washburn Skinner.

Little Mary McAlister, the child star of the "Do Children Count?" series, was the guest of honor at a review of the 5,000 members of the Ft. Sheridan officers' training camp. The diminutive screen celebrity holds the rank of sergeant in the regular army. She wore her uniform and marched down the long line of soldiers inspecting them with the keen scrutiny of a veteran.

As an actor, Taylor Holmes certainly is a fickle cuss. He was spending his days out at Essanay imploring a girl to marry him while the camera was grinding out his first picture, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." Of evenings he appeared at the Cort Theater in "Seven Chances" as Jimmie Shannon, who loudly boasts that he would rather give up an eccentric grandfather's fortune than let one of the female of the species rope him in. Holmes admitted he dreaded every moment that he may get his contrasting roles mixed up.

Jay Belasco, who co-stars with Billie Rhodes, is among those drafted for the new army. Whichever company Jay is with will be enriched by his wit and jolly personality.

Gail Kane, the American Film star, will appear shortly in a role new to American actresses, a role created by the war, that of committeewoman of national food conservation. As a member of the recently appointed women's committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry she, in company with Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Ethel Barrymore, and other famous stars, will co-operate with the federal food commission to save the American people and the entente allies from possible food shortage.

Lee McGinnis, an American studio electrician, has joined Uncle Sam's industrial army. His proffer of services as a builder of government airplanes in the plant of a large Detroit motor manufacturer has been accepted.

If Washington will permit Robert Klein, for the past two years a character actor for the American, to give up his French citizenship, he will then take out American papers and enlist as a "Sammy." He served at the beginning of the war under the tri-color. He has made the necessary applications and is awaiting word from headquarters to act warlike.

The headlights of the pictures are above professional jealousies. The other day Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks both took turns entertaining Mary Miles Minter, gilded queen of the "Flying A."

The Minter Pickford soiree came about by chance. Miss Minter and her mother went to a theater to see something Miss Pickford too was seeing. The audience, seeing the latter, called: "Speech! Speech!" Miss Pickford responded, then seeing M. M. M., called: "Come, Mary Miles Minter, share the limelight with me." This she did, to the delight of all. The Minter-Fairbanks levee was planned. Mother and daughter Minter were guests of the Fairbanks in a Hollywood visit. After luncheon, "Doug" took 'em spinning in his new raceabout.

The little girl is a lady and the lady is a man. It's Mary Pickford with gingham and a mop imitating the stunning Julian Eltinge, with silks and walking stick. The latter is having his first films taken at the same Artcraft studio with "America's best girl."

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

The Curse of a Flirting Heart—VICTOR—(TWO REELS)—SEPTEMBER 7.—Because Max flirts all the time with strange women Mrs. Max thinks she may flirt with strange men. She goes into the park and flirts from behind her parasol, but the man, who is Max, discovers that he is flirting with his own wife and leaves. Then he flirts with a neighbor who is hanging out clothes, and Mrs. Max becomes friendly with the neighbor's husband. In order to avoid their wife and husband, each couple go to the picture show, where local scenes taken that day about town are shown. To the amazement of the quartette they see pictures of themselves in all the scenes of the different flirtations. "Never again for ours!" vow Max and his wife.

A Gale of Verse—JOKER—(ONE REEL)—SEPT. 8.—Lizzie Loose is something of a poet and leaves the farm to prove it. When she presents her verse to the editor a letter comes to him at the same time offering $100 to anyone that can get Lizzie back to the farm. A reporter is attracted by the offer and frames it up with the editor to send Lizzie to an empty house, where he will scare her out by a series of make-ups. Lizzie overhears them, and when she finds a gang of counterfeiters in the cellar of the house she thinks it is a fixed up affair, and cleans out the whole bunch. She gets the reward for the capture of the band, and then returns to free the reporter, held prisoner by the gang. "But you'll have to marry me if I let you out of here," she says, but the reporter is desperate and consents.

Officer, Call a Cop—JOKER—(ONE REEL)—SEPTEMBER 6.—Evelyn Dale bows to the police officer as she enters Chinatown to distribute literature for the Celestial's uplifting. Before she is out of sight Sweeney sees her kidnapped by a gang of Chinamen and though his spirit is willing his feet are weak until he bolsters them up with a glass in a familiar saloon. Then he goes in search of Evelyn, but lands in an opium den where he goes to sleep, persuaded by a pipe and pill. When the police raid the joint and rescue the fair Evelyn, Officer Sweeney is about to claim the credit when the pipe drops from his uniform and he is pinched with the rest.

A Dream of Egypt—(TWO REELS)—LENA BASNETTE FEATURE—SEPTEMBER 6.—Dorothy was a little girl whose passion was dancing. She loves to look at a big book in the library, called Mysterious Egypt. One day she gets a big shawl from the attic and dances Egyptian dances for her mother and that very day her father brings home the statuette of a little Egyptian dancing girl, which they place on a pedestal at the foot of the stairs. That night Dorothy dreams that she is a dancing girl, her mother is her sister and her father her sister's sweetheart. Her sister sells flowers in the markets where she is seen by a prince who takes her by force to his harem. Dorothy goes to plead with him and dances for him. He lets the sister go, but compels Dorothy to dance for him until she falls exhausted at the foot of the dias. Then she hears her mother's voice, "Wake up, Dorothy, you have fallen out of bed and pulled the covers with you."

The Empty Gun—GOLD SEAL—(THREE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 4.—In the midst of a raging storm Frank goes to the station to give the $10.000 worth of gold he has taken from the mine into safe keeping. At home his wife is reading that he has lied against her former lover in order to win her from him. The agent at the station will not take the money because two suspicious looking tramps are about. Frank returns home, leaves the money and returns to find out about the train. While he is gone a stranger seeks shelter in the shack and Mary discovers it is her old time sweetheart. She is playing with an empty gun, and he fills it for her. While Frank is on the road home one of the tramps attacks him but he overpowers him, exchanges clothes with him and goes on to the shack. The wind blows out the light in the shack just before he gets there, and Mary, thinking him a stranger shoots him. When the mask is removed she discovers that a higher court has freed her.

Looking 'Em Over—NESTOR—(ONE REEL)—SEPTEMBER 4.—Eddie coaxes Lee out for an evening at the cafe, leaving their wives at home. While they are enjoying themselves Lee's wife's brother and a friend arrive from the West and take the girls to a cafe for something to eat. The boys see them, become jealous and don waiters' uniforms so they can watch their wives. When the girls dance with the men their anger knows no bounds and they crown them with dishes of soft food. Peace is restored when the four of them get together and explain.

The Lure of the Circus—BISON—(TWO REELS)—SEPTEMBER 8. Bud wants to be an animal trainer, and his sweetheart thinks she would like to be a bareback rider, so when the circus comes to town, both of them join it. Lily is soon left by her horse in the ring hanging on to the end of a pole, and the boys make fun of her riding outfit. Bud is put at work training the baby lions, but the mother makes him uncomfortable and at the end of the first day Bud and Lily return to the blacksmith shop, wiser and happier.

Mutual Pictures

Outcast—(SIX REELS)—EMPIRE ALL STAR—SEPTEMBER 10.—Starring Ann Murdock. Miriam, a young and beautiful girl without near relatives, meets, loves and is betrayed by a handsome young adventurer who later abandons her to marry an old woman with money. When the child is born, Miriam finds herself without friends or funds. Compelled to take to the street for funds to save her child from starvation the girl sells herself for naught, because the child dies. Miriam buries her hopes with the baby and despairing of any future for herself adopts the life of a courtesan. Taken up by Geoffrey Sherwood, a London barrister who has been jilted by his fiancee, Miriam becomes Sherwood's mistress. She hopes that he may marry her but as time goes on and the influence of his former fiancee is re-established, this hope lessens. Valentine is married to a man of great wealth, but remains unhappy. Sherwood convinces her that all must be over between them. He then offers marriage to Miriam and after being wed in a little Scottish kirk they start for Buenos Aires.

Jerry's Whirlwind Finish—(ONE REEL)—HORSLEY—SEPTEMBER 13.—Susceptible Jerry becomes affected by the wiles of a park flirt who has also been lavishing attention upon a large and enthusiastic collection of bench-warmers, to say nothing of several park policemen. Jerry presses his suit with the fickle maiden, but when discovered by one of her policemen friends, is temporarily routed. Jerry is fortunate in finding a telephone wagon nearby where he procures a coil of rope and with the prowess of a sharp shooter, succeeds in lassoing the cop and the girl and pulling them backwards into a nice deep pool. A whirlwind chase ensues. Jerry drops from the second-story window of a house into the vacant saddle ordinarily occupied by a mounted policeman and dashes away. The cops in their flivver run out of gasoline, but make the grade by hoisting a sail and continue the chase. Jerry rides headlong into the arms of shoot-em-up-Bill, a heavyweight bad man who exhibits a $5,000 sack of gold. Shoot-em-up commissions Jerry and his horse for escape and together they ride into town. Shoot-em-up puts the gold in a safe, during which operation Jerry runs to a room overhead. Safe-crackers blow up the safe, the force of which shoots the gold up through the floor of Jerry's room into his arms. The mast on the flivver waiting below provides the means of Jerry's escape from yet another difficulty.

Who Was the Other Man—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 3.—Marion Washburn, the beautiful daughter of a United States Senator, while on a visit to Paris becomes engaged to Herbert Cornell, a Washington social favorite. Marion's father has but one objection to Cornell. He thinks the young man may have trifled away so many years of his life that the sterner essentials of manhood may have been neglected. In order to test out the young man, he entrusts him with the plans of an international canal for safe delivery in Washington. Cornell accepts the mission, determined to show his real mettle. Meanwhile Ludwig Schumann, secret agent of a powerful European government, is awaiting instructions from his government at the same hotel which shelters Cornell and the Washburns. Marion attracts the attention of Schumann, and the latter believes that he has made an impression on the beautiful American although neither have spoken, as yet. While Schumann is figuring how he can arrange to be introduced, a young business man—evidently a countryman of Miss Washburn—walks up to register at the desk where Schumann is leaning. The secret agent is amazed to note that the newcomer bears a perfect likeness to himself. He leaves the hotel, meditating upon the strange coincidence. The American signs the name "James Walbert" to the register. He also is wondering where in the world his double sprang from, when a small, dark man walks up to him and hands him a message. While he is opening the envelope, the messenger disappears. He has been mistaken for Schumann and is entrusted with a mission in the United States. These instructions bring him into an exciting series of adventures, during which he has time to fall in love with Marion and to defend his country.

Fox

Betrayed—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 2.—Starring Miriam Cooper. The story of "Betrayed" centers about Carmelita Carrito, whose worldly condition is that of a peon, but who remains an aristocrat and a coquette at heart, despite Carpi, her fat, filthy father. Carmelita has a lover, Pepo, but her affection for him goes a-glimmering when the great bandit, Leopoldo Juares, raids the larder of her home. Leopoldo's commanding personality impresses her in a never-to-be-forgotten way. After Leopoldo departs, Carmelita sits by the window looking silently at the soft Mexican moonlight. Gradually she falls asleep and dreams. An American army officer, William Jerome, is searching the neighborhood for Juares. Carmelita, fickle ever, is fascinated by the Gringo, and tells him that Leopoldo is to meet her at the brook. Jerome could creep upon the man and pick him off with a single shot. Leopoldo, however, intercepts the note and arranges a counter plan. He is enraged by the girl's duplicity. When he talks with her by the brook, he expresses fear lest she catch cold in the evening breeze and forces her to don his coat and put on his hat. An instant later, Jerome, seeing the pair through the bushes thinks Carmelita is Leopoldo and shoots the woman he loves. The American goes to his death before the firing squad. Then, with fainting breath, the heartless Carmelita whispers to Pepo, her first lover who has returned, that he must get the Americans at once. Carmelita awakes,—just in time. United States troopers, aided by Pepo himself, are closing in on her house. There the bandit, Leopoldo, has taken refuge. So Pepo captures the famous Juares and receives the reward; and he and Carmelita live in peace and happiness ever after.

K. S. E. E.

A Midnight Bell—SELIG—(TWO REELS).—Lemuel Tidd, chief of police and Ezekiel Slover, chief of the fire department are bitter rivals for the hand of Amy Grey. The two resort to all manner of tricks and deceptions in order to gain an advantage in sparking the village belle. When fire breaks out in Punktown, the fire department saves the chief of police in a marvelous manner and saves Amy Grey by a still more wonderful feat, by sliding down a stream of water from the fire hose. After both the chiefs have extended themselves to the limit, they drag themselves away from the noise and confusion to resume their listless lives and to give their future strictly to the duties of their respective offices, namely caring for the safety and happiness of Punktown.

Mutual Star Productions

Charity Castle—(FIVE REELS)—AMERICAN—SEPTEMBER 3.—Starring Mary Miles Minter. Reviewed in next issue.

World

The Guardian—(FIVE REELS)—WORLD-PEERLESS—AUGUST 27.—With Montagu Love and June Elvidge. Marie is the ward of Rokeby, a man who, though now honest and respected, was an expert cracksman in days gone by. She loves Harvey, who really is a very worthless character. Rokeby knows more about Harvey than Marie and forbids her to have anything more to do with the man. To get even Harvey, finding clues to Rokeby's past, exposes the latter, who is forced to go into hiding from the authorities. After trials on the part of both Marie and Rokeby things come to a happy conclusion, for the governor pardons Rokeby. Harvey is defeated all around, as Marie is more than willing, on learning his real worth, to give herself up to Rokeby, not as a ward, but as a wife. Reviewed in this issue.

Hoffman

Madame Sherry — (Five Reels) — Released Through Hoffman Four-Square Pictures—September 1.—A picturization of the famous musical farce-comedy. The story tells about the wild experiences of the nephew of a rich man who has made the latter think he is married and has children. Upon news of the arrival of every new child the uncle usually opens up and sends the boy a fat check. Uncle Theophilus at last decides to visit his young married relative, taking with him a niece who has been brought up in a convent. All kinds of complications ensue, but all smoothes out at the end, with the young fabricator marrying the niece. Reviewed in this issue.

General Program

Pioneer Days—Selig—(Two Reels)—August 27.—In June, 1812, England declared war against the United States and secured the aid of hostile Indians. At the foot of the Chicago river stood Fort Dearborn. After the war with England started General Wayne instructed General Heald to evacuate Fort Dearborn and to go to Detroit. Before he left Heald emptied out the surplus liquor into the river, dampened the surplus powder and threw the muskets into a deep well at the Fort. This infuriated the Indians so that as the pioneer train left the Fort and started overland for Detroit they were slaughtered by the massacre. Other historical data of pioneer days may be seen in the picture.

In After Year—Selig—(One Reel)—September 1.—The story of a woman whose youthful loveliness and charm begin to succumb to the ravages of time and whose soul surmounts the petty jealousies and ambitions of so-called prestige to become interested in the shadowed lives of the great cities.

Selig World Library—No. 16—August 29.—U. S. Government Weather Bureau—Rules for forecasting the weather and for measuring elevation. The Great Wheat Harvest of the U. S.—The U. S. leads the world in wheat production which is the most important of the cereal industries. Breeding Silver Foxes—Animals sought by trappers for their valuable fur are now scientifically raised on a big ranch. Arsenic Squads to Save Crops—Agricultural interests send men to destroy grasshoppers and army worms attacking crops.

Don't Lose Your Coat—(Two Reels)—Essanay—Black Cat Feature.—Out at Hick's Corner, Farmer Jones strikes oil and gets rich. He goes to the city to celebrate. At the hotel where the farmer stops a matrimonial agent is seeking to escape from a dozen women whose affections he has tampered with. While Jones is taking a bath, the crook exchanges clothes with him and, disguised as a farmer, gets away. Left with nothing else to wear, Jones is forced to put on the agent's clothes. He starts out to see the sights but the women, mistaking him for their Nemesis, make a dash for him. Then a chase begins which does not end until the farmer gets back to Hick's Corner.

Bragg's Little Poker Game—Sparkle Comedy—(One Reel).—Late one night Bragg gets a message that a poker game is in progress at a friend's, and manages to leave the house without waking his wife. Soon after a burglar enters the house, followed by a cop. The burglar gets into the twin bed vacated by Bragg and when the cop appears says "Hist! don't wake my wife." The policeman leaves the room determined to wait for the burglar. In the meantime the poker game is raided and all are arrested except Bragg, who escapes and arrives home only to be captured by the waiting cop. He protests that he is Bragg, but his wife, half asleep, says that her husband is in the next bed, and Bragg is led away. Later Mrs. Bragg finds out her mistake and the real burglar is taken by the police. At the station the members of the raided poker party who are all in one cell discover that in the scrimmage a pack of cards has been saved and, with additional partners, the game is continued.

The Stolen Play—Falcon Feature—(Four Reels).—Edmay, a famous blind playwright, is engaged to marry Sylvia, his amanuensis. Leroux, a dramatic producer, wants to produce the play, and goes to strange lengths to get it. He kidnaps Edmay and Sylvia and uses his hypnotic powers on Sylvia to secure a dictation of the play. Edmay he keeps in the wine cellar vault. Later Sylvia takes the leading role in the play, still under hypnotism. Leroux learns to love her, much to the anger of Alice Mason, his agent. Leroux comes to realize his sins, and restores Edmay and Sylvia to their homes, then hypnotizes Foster, a tool of his, and commands him to wall up the vault of the wine cellar, after he has entered it. When he is about to die Alice reveals herself to him, having hid in the vault to die with him. Then the story takes a different turn and concludes in an explanatory manner.

Chicago Notes

The new Billy West Comedies, produced by the King Bee Film Company, are attaining new popularity daily. At present they are being shown on the Lubliner-Trinz Circuit and the Ascher Brothers, and the Hamburger chain of theatres in Chicago.

Miss E. S. Corbett, one of the best known women in the film game, is again in the employ of Mr. I. Van Ronkel. Miss Corbett is now the booker of Bluebirds and is known by everyone in the film game as "Jim Corbett."

Mr. Edwin Silverman has been appointed as the western representative of the Butterfly features with headquarters on the 15th floor Consumers Building and claims that the representative exhibitors are daily signing on the dotted lines.

Mr. I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Chicago Bluebird's office, is almost heart broken at the loss of a heavy gold watch charm studded with 32 diamonds and which was presented to him by Salo Auerbach and Nathan Wolf when he sold The American Film Co. to the General Film Co.

The Butterfly management have made an onslaught on their contemporaries by engaging the best known and most popular salesman in film circles. The western Butterfly management now boasts among their formidable sales force: A. J. Gallos and F. P. Dillon formerly with V. L. S. E., and also J. J. Gilmore.

Arthur W. Metcalve, who played a prominent role in Bryant Washburn's recent Essanay production, "The Golden Idiot," as well as numerous other pictures, has resigned from Essaney and is now training in the Canadian army. Mr. Metcalfe joined the First Battalion, Forty-eighth Highlanders, and is at Camp Borden, Ontario, preparatory to sailing for the front.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, arrived in Chicago Thursday, August 23, on the Century and after a busy day left on an evening train for Universal City, California. He denied that his trip had anything to do with a reorganization of his western studio and expressed himself as being particularly satisfied with his future plays. "I saw a Lois Weber release before I left New York," he said. "It's wonderful. I never saw anything like it in my life. In the entire production (it is in seven reels) not a single studio set was used. Every interior was staged in some home suitable for the action of the play. A department store scene was taken in one of the most prominent stores on the Pacific coast. The film doesn't want for a thing in the way of realism and it holds your interest until the finish." Mr. Laemmle announced that he had signed Mildred Harris, who assisted Douglas Fairbanks in one picture, and Colleen Moore for his company. Lule Warrenton has rejoined the Universal, according to the producer.

Two Expositions for 1918

FIRST NATIONAL SHOW IN NEW YORK—SECOND IN BOSTON

THERE will be two big picture expositions in 1918.

The first national show for next year will be held in New York City in February and will be in the nature of a complete exposition representing every branch of the industry.

The second show will be held in Boston, beginning July 14, and will be in the nature of a convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. This latter show follows the schedule of the M. P. E. L. of America as determined at the convention held in Chicago this July.

Film Bodies Hold Joint Meeting

This arrangement was agreed upon in New York last week at a joint conference of committees representing the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. It will give New York City the first national show it has had for two years.

The committee had been appointed for the special purpose of consideration of the holding of future expositions. The matter was studied thoroughly from all view points and in the light of all the occurrences of the past and the above decision was reached.

Joint Committee in Charge

The promotion and management of both expositions will be under the direction of a joint committee, members of which will be designated by each organization and it is the purpose to plan these two trade showings so that they will compare favorably with the annual shows and expositions held by other leading industries of the country.

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was represented at the meeting by President William A. Brady, ex-officio, Arthur S. Friend, J. R. Brulatour, William L. Sherrill, J. A. Berst, Gabriel L. Hess and J. H. Hallberg. The National Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was represented by Lee A. Ochs, president ex-officio, Ernest H. Horstman, Alfred S. Black, J. H. O'Donnell, Eugene H. Clark and Frank Enger.

It is expected that permanent committees will be appointed within a fortnight so that preliminary arrangements can be made for the New York exposition in February which will include the selection of a building, date and manager.

No expositions of the picture industry have been held in New York during the past two years and it is contended that a well organized and conducted exposition, at which every big producing and distributing corporation, as well as supply and equipment companies, will be represented, showing the growth of the industry will attract big crowds and prove a money maker for the promoting organization.

Joseph Hopp, president Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League: "It seems to me personally that one big and successful national exposition would be sufficient. However, the capable men in New York have decided that the two can be conducted efficiently and I give over to their judgment. I was present in New York when the action was taken and they have some sound reasons back of their arrangement."

Richard Nehls, American Film Company: "It will be possible, I think, to have two successful expositions so far as the general public is concerned, in one year."

Ludwig Schindler, manager 1917 exposition in Chicago: "It is hard to tell about the proposition. I should worry. It won't affect me. I hope they make a go of it."

University Professor Aids Filming

Robert G. Vignola, who is directing "The Hungry Heart," in which Pauline Frederick is to star, and which will be a Paramount production for the near future, is a stickler for detail. He refuses to permit anything to go through that may develop criticism later, and for that reason, in the intricate laboratory scene which forms an important feature of the picture, he has used every possible precaution to avoid the chance of an expert finding fault with the arrangements.

To this end he succeeded in inducing B. J. Davis, Ph. D., associate professor of analytical chemistry at Columbia University, New York, to spend several days at the studio, arranging the paraphernalia, gathered from far and near, and instructing Howard Hall, who plays the part of the chemist in the story, just how the professional would handle the apparatus. E. D. Hans, another expert chemist and a graduate of Columbia, assisted Professor Davis in the work, and when they had completed the arrangements both agreed that the set was absolutely up to the minute, professional in every way and impervious to criticism from the most severe critic

Unique Clause in Petrova Contract

Among the details that have come to light concerning Madame Petrova's arrangements to star in her own personally supervised films, one that has aroused widespread interest among exhibitors, concerns the clause in her contract which provides that unless Petrova and Frederick L. Collins, president of Petrova Picture Company, both approve of a given production, it is to be "scrapped." In case of a disagreement over a finished picture, it is agreed that Madame Petrova will freely give her time to the making of a picture to replace it, and that the Petrova Picture Company will contribute the necessary money.

It is announced that this distinguished Polish actress has leased from Lewis J. Selznick the Biograph Studio, New York City, until arrangements have been completed for a permanent Petrova studio. The production of her first picture began September 3.

Two strong stories are now being prepared for production. One is written by Madame Petrova, and furnishes a splendid vehicle for her talent; the other is a popular novel full of dramatic situations. These two stories will be the first and second Petrova pictures. Both will be in seven reels.

Warren Finishes Picture

Edward Warren has finished a new picture which was shown last week for the first time after being completely assembled. Only directors and cameramen were present to see the result of their work.

Mr. Warren will personally do the cutting and the editing of the film and expects to have it ready for the trade showing in a couple of weeks.

Mr. Warren tells us that this will prove to be one of the prettiest and most pleasing pictures of the season. It has no crime, no sex reference, no problem, no villain, but is a delightful love story, with the widest range of scenes, from the miserable slums of the ghetto to the magnificent splendor of the millionaire's home, with laughter and tears, with comedy and pathos.

The settings—indoors as well as out—are of the usual Warren quality, which means that no details have been omitted to make them complete and realistic.

Not until it is completely finished and ready for the trade showing will the title be announced.

Billie Burke Play Complete

"Arms and the Girl," the latest Billie Burke picture for Paramount, has been photographed in its entirety.

This picture will be one of the most spectacular, according to the belief of those responsible for its production, ever turned out by Paramount. Director Joseph Kaufman has permitted no opportunity of enhancing the war scenes and rendering them realistic to escape his attention. One member of the cast who saw the battle of Arras in films, declared that some of the scenes were almost paralleled in "Arms and the Girl," despite that the director had not seen the actual war picture.

An army of extra people was employed in filming the war scenes, involving the invasion of a Belgian town by the German troops. Some of the night effects, when the invaders depart hastily for Paris leaving the formerly peaceful village disrupted and its inhabitants terrified, are said to be particularly fine. No little difficulty was experienced in taking these scenes because the lights were confusing and as a consequence several of the cavalrymen and motorcyclists piled up in a ditch, fortunately without injury to either man or beast.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography *publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. POLLY OF THE CIRCUS, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"This first of the Goldwyns is surely fine. Everything good can be said about it. It pleased our patrons very well."—Norman E. Field, Colonial Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The More Excellent Way, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"An excellent picture that played to only fair business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The More Excellent Way, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"The star is popular, picture splendid, business fine. What more could we wish for?"—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Ga.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"Morey should be starred in this. Excellent picture and good business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Captain of the Gray Horse Troop, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"One of the best program attractions we ever had. Turned them away."—J. C. Dipenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.—First run house on side street.

The Captain of the Grey Horse Troop, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"This is a wonderfully beautiful production. The stars are popular here. Business good."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Ga.

The Fall of a Nation (Vitagraph)—"Book this sure. This theater holds 1,500. We played to 4,500 on Sunday, the opening day."—J. C. Diepenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.

The Soul Master, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—This picture is great and drew good business. Star popular here."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

Her Right to Live, with Peggy Hyland (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture."—W. L. Brown, Star Theater, Underwood, N. D.

The Lost Man, with William Duncan (Vitagraph)—"We never played a picture that gave more universal satisfaction."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Courage of Silence, with Alice Joyce and Harry Morey (Vitagraph)—"The stars do not draw well here, but this picture should add to their following."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Georgia.

Aladdin From Broadway, with Edith Story and Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"My patrons thought well of this picture. Good business."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Georgia.

A Regiment of Two, and Happy-Go-Lucky (Vitagraph re-issue)—"The 'Favorite Film' re-issues of Vitagraph are drawing good houses for us and, better still, the patrons are pleased. The casts read like a role of fame."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Georgia.

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"An attractive title. Ran it on a rainy night to a fairly good audience. Had no complaints on the picture. A domestic triangle drama."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Little Girl Soldier, with Ann Pennington (Paramount)—"A nice picture but not a box-office attraction. I suggest that you advertise Owen Moore (Mary Pickford's husband), as co-star."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Her Own People, with Lenore Ulrich (Paramount)—"Seemed to please 100 per cent. Patrons are still talking about it as one of the best."—O. Korn, Grand Theater, Bay City, Texas.

His Wedding Night, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"These comedies do not reap an extra profit at the box-office for the extra price we pay. Are no better than the Fox or Keystone comedies."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Hearts Adrift, with Mary Pickford (Paramount)—"A real money-getter. The re-issue was trimmed too closely."—J. C. Diepenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.—First run house on side street.

The World Apart, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A fine picture, sure to please."—C. R. Wilson, Crystal Theater, Cherokee, Okla.

The Valentine Girl, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"This star is very popular here. Picture is good and brought good business."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Ga.

A Reckless Romeo, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"A fair comedy but no drawing card here."—J. C. Diepenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.—First run house in side street.

American Aristocracy, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"Don't be afraid to book this one. It is a repeater. It increased the box office receipts 100 per cent."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.—Town of 1,400 population.

The Criminal, with Clara Williams (Triangle)—"The star is not known. Our people don't seem to care for this kind of picture."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.—Town of 1,400 population.

The Children Pay, with Lillian Gish (Triangle)—"A large percent of my patrons said this was one of the best pictures I had ever shown. Capacity house."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Mystery of the Leaping Fish, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"The poorest comedy I have ever shown. Did not get a smile."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Girl Glory, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"Excellent picture. Drew capacity evening show. The star has personality."—R. V. Barkley, Crescent Theater, Statesville, N. C.

Peggy, with Billie Burke (Triangle)—"Return date, and drew better than first showing here. In a good vehicle, the star is a great drawing card."—R. V. Barkley, Crescent Theater, Statesville, N. C.

Love or Justice, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"A very good production. Capacity business. Triangle is unquestionably the most consistent program on the market."—R. V. Barkley, Crescent Theater, Statesville, N. C.

Time Locks and Diamonds, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"Very fine. They say Triangle can't produce good pictures now, but, believe me, they are doing it!"—H. G. Ford, Arcade Theater, Brookhaven, Miss.

Master of His House, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"Exceptionally fine. Desmond is going well."—H. G. Ford, Arcade Theater, Brookhaven, Miss.

Blood Will Tell, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"This picture is good but the star doesn't draw here. Business fair."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

A Woman's Awakening, with Seena Owen (Triangle)—"This is a good picture but the star is unknown."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Georgia.

Cheerful Givers, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"Was cheerfully received by a large audience."—M. H. Whitham, Alendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in MOTOGRAPHY's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

The Americano, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"A very good comedy. Everyone was pleased. Fairbanks always pleases."—W. L. Brown, Star Theater, Underwood, N. D.

Hands Up, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"A remarkable production which got big returns here. Book it!"—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sweetheart of the Doomed, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"Story full of intense situations and production excellent. Star in a different role, and makes good."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Last Act, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"A great picture to good business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Borrowed Plumage, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"An Irish costume play. Star drew well. The picture is very good of its kind. The story of an Irish girl, full of deviltry."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

In Slumberland, with Thelma Salter (Triangle)—"A nice little story but not a very good drawing card. Business fair."—Wm. Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Madcap Madge, with Olive Thomas (Triangle)—"A splendid picture. Olive Thomas is fine. Business pretty good."—William Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Truthful Tulliver, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A regular Hart picture. Business good."—Wm. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Square Deal Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"This is a high class western picture and was pleasing to my patrons."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Ga.

Daphne and the Pirates, with Lillian Gish (Triangle)—"Although the title is poor, this played to good business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

A Maiden's Trust, with Ford Sterling (Keystone) "Title poor. A good comedy."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Cinders of Love, with Chester Conklin (Keystone)—"A fine comedy but the print was in bad shape."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

His Naughty Thought, with Ambrose Swain (Keystone)—"Ambrose is popular here."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Secrets of a Beauty Parlor (Keystone)—"This is a number one comedy. Kept up continuous laughter. Well liked."—W. G. Shaefer, Vaudette Theater, West Point, Ga.

The Power of Decision, with Frances Nelson (Metro)—"A good picture with good drawing power."—Wm. Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

A Magdalene of the Hills, with Mabel Taliaferro (Metro)—"A fair production, not liked as well as most Metro productions."—Wm. Roper, Roper Theater, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

God's Law and Man's, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"Drew a big house and satisfied everyone. Photography excellent. Star very pleasing."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Secret of Eve, with Mme. Petrova (Metro)—"I have been urged to book this again."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Ga.

The Soul of a Woman, with Emily Stevens (Metro)—"Patrons complimented this picture, but too few of them paid to see it."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Ga.

Somewhere in America, with Mary Miles Minter (Metro)—"Somehow or other we did good business with this picture, which is very short (about three reels), due to the cut-outs by Chicago censors. The picture is only fairly good. The star appears a very few times during the whole picture."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Sowers and Reapers, with Emmy Wehlen (Metro) "Too much cannot be said about this beautiful little star, Emmy Wehlen. This is one of the most wonderful productions ever screened, good in every respect. Metro pictures are all very good but this is an exceptionally good one. This is what I and my patrons call one fine picture. I always give credit where credit is due, and many of my patrons said this was the best picture ever shown here. Boost it when you advertise it for it is worthy of all the praise you can give it. Business good in spite of the rain."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Filling His Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Fully ninety per cent of the patrons were pleased."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Heart of Texas Ryan, with Bessie Eyton (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Subject fine but unfortunately a bad print displeased a capacity house. Why doesn't someone slip this firm a tip to eliminate kicks on bad conditioned films? It is a pity a really good picture has to be injured by such negligence."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Land of Long Shadows, with Jack Gardner (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"The kind of a show for which we are always sure of a big house."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Tell-tale Step, with Shirley Mason (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"A very good show. Good house."—E. Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Golden Idiot, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Not a wonderful picture but it pleases. Has good outdoor settings around Lake Geneva. Washburn is very popular here in Chicago. The story is a comedy-drama. The title is not as good as it could be for a box-office winner."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Trufflers, with Nell Craig (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Not generally liked here. Business not up to standard."—J. C. Diepenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.

A Touch of Nature (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"A good attraction but did not draw on account of unknown stars."—J. C. Diepenbrock, Strand Theater, Sacramento, Calif.

What Money Can't Buy, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff (Paramount)—"Very clever picture but drew only fair business."—H. G. Ford, Arcade Theater, Brookhaven, Miss.

The House of Lies, with Edna Goodrich (Paramount)—"We haven't had a Goodrich picture in a long time and if this is a criterion, we will play them all. Drew a big house on a hot night."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Daughter of McGregor, with Valentine Gant (Paramount)—"Famous Players made an extra good one in producing this. Good business and the play was well liked."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Golden Chance, with Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"The stars are well liked here. A fair picture which pulled a good Monday crowd."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Ashes of Embers, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"One of the best pictures I've ever screened. Drew big and the audience was well satisfied."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Derelict, with Stuart Holmes (Fox)—"Wonderful characterization. When Fox gets away from morbid stuff his pictures are great.—R. V. Barkley, Crescent Theater, Statesville, N. C.

Wife Number Two, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"This might have been a good picture with a different star and director and a few minor changes."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Wrath of Love, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"Very good. Pleased almost everybody."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

Her Double Life, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"My patrons prefer Miss Bara in vampire roles. I don't agree with them, but they pay the fiddler."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Georgia.

The Island of Desire, with George Walsh (Fox)—"Ordinary."—W. E. McCurry, Elite Theater, Hartwell, Georgia.

Jealousy, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Good picture. Scenery great."—Wm. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

A well known film man states that MOTOGRAPHY is read by more of the executives in the picture business than any other trade journal. Here is evidence to show that not only executives and exhibitors read MOTOGRAPHY, but big actors as well. And Bill Russell, the American-Mutual star, seems to be finding plenty of food for thought.

Associated Theaters, Inc., Meeting

Locality trade meetings, for exhibitors only, are scheduled in the various Northwest states under the auspices of the recently organized Associated Theaters Inc. of Minneapolis.

As there is one officer located in each of the states affected, General Manager Hamlin has planned that each shall accompany him in their respective states when the mass meetings are held.

"This is in lieu of employing professional traveling solicitors, who are liable to make extravagant statements and also run up tremendous expenses," declared Mr. Hamlin.

"We have decided to begin operations when we have six hundred theaters holding stock and franchises with our distributing corporation instead of waiting until we have one thousand as at first planned." Mr. Hamlin continued:

This is a scattered territory and it is much more costly for the exchanges to get business than it is in the more congested districts. Hence our new plan of marketing and distributing.

Instead of traveling salesmen we will market entirely through a loose leaf sales sheet mail order catalogue containing all the dope on each film offered. Two weeks' afterwards the producer or exchange owning the film will be offered as many hundred days as we have secured orders from our members and at the price that each class house that orders can afford to pay.

We give all our members seven days' credit, but pay all our own bills to the film companies in advance. We also take the job of booking, shipping and inspecting off their hands.

If the price we offer for so many hundred days does not appeal to the producer or exchange and if they believe they can realize more net profit under the present system there is no harm done and any of our members who desire the film can get our permission to play it without any trouble or hard feelings.

We are not organizing to use a club on anybody. We are confident that our new plan will save the exhibitors fully forty per cent without cutting in on the net profits of the producers or exchanges.

Film Thieves Active

The film dupers are busy again. They are known to have duped and are renting not less than twenty-seven Greater Vitagraph productions. As a result President Albert E. Smith, of Greater Vitagraph, has engaged one of the best detective agencies in the country and has given instructions that no expense shall be saved in an effort to send the film thieves to prison.

President Smith has sent out a warning to all the exhibitors in the country to refrain from booking any of the duped prints and that the only way to be sure that they are not an unconscious party to a crime is to book all Greater Vitagraph products direct from the Greater Vitagraph exchanges throughout the country.

In the preliminary investigation President Smith has discovered that the films of several other companies are being duplicated and all the work apparently is being done by the same gang, judging from the similarity in the work, the printing and tinting.

Not satisfied with duping the films the dishonest distributers go so far as to practically copy the paper of the regular manufacturers, making ilt appear that the exhibitors are doing business with the real owners of the pictures.

The duped films are released simultaneously in Boston, New York and St. Louis. It is believed that there are duping plants somewhere near New York City and Chicago. It is for these duping plants President Smith's detectives are now seeking. They have several men under surveillance whose arrest is looked for at any moment.

Early investigations tend to show that to date the film thieves have limited their rental operations to a large extent to the suburbs of the larger cities of the country. This is largely accounted for by the fact that they rent the stolen product at such a low price that they cannot afford to pay traveling expenses to cover the smaller towns of the country.

Art Dramas' President Resigns

The resignation of Harry Raver as president of Art Dramas, Incorporated, has been tendered to the board of directors. His successor to the executive office has not as yet been announced.

Arthur F. Beck, general manager of Art Dramas, gave out the following statement:

Art Dramas has made wonderful progress under the able leadership of Harry Raver during his tenure of office in the executive chair, and we regret that, owing to the pressure of his production interests, Art Dramas must lose the services of a film man of Mr. Raver's comprehensive experience.

Mr. Raver's resignation of the presidency is in line with the recently announced policy of the heads of the producing companies, making pictures, for release through Art Dramas. Incorporated, to devote their entire time and attention to the details of production.

Art Dramas will continue along the same lines as heretofore. There will be no radical changes in methods or policies—at least, for the present. Our present releasing schedule will be adhered to and all production plans of contributing producers, heretofore announced, carried out as per program.

Regarding his resignation, Mr. Raver said:

My resignation as president and director of Art Dramas, Inc., need occasion no surprise, as I have for some time contemplated turning over the reins to one whose sole time and energy could be devoted to its multifarious details, leaving me free to supervise my productions.

My Art Dramas association has been pleasant and profitable and I am glad to say that the program has made excellent progress, through the efforts of no one individual in the organization but because every man has done his share, backed by a progressive and loyal group of territorial distributors who have expressed faith in the program by their patronage.

Grace Darmond in New Plays

There will be a number of startling innovations, many of which will be seen for the first time in the film industry, when the Technicolor Corporation's new picture entitled "The Gulf Between," appears.

It is in this picture in which Grace Darmond plays the stellar part. Miss Darmond has only recently returned from Jacksonville, Florida, where the film was made. "The Gulf Between" is a multiple-reel production and has been taken in natural colors, without the aid of projection of pictures in their natural colors on the screen.

Grace Darmond, captivating star of "When Duty Calls," made by the Authors' Film Company. Miss Darmond is one of the several stars that have been furnished the screen by Chicago.

It was on the strength of Miss Darmond's work in this production and the popularity which the young star's personality gained for her in Pathe feature, "The Shielding Shadow," that the Authors' Film Company placed her under contract for "When Duty Calls," the war film, which has just been completed at the Norma Talmadge studios.

Miss Darmond is one of the youngest and most beautiful of the screen's leading women. She played in stock companies until she entered pictures through Selig, three years ago, since then she played in the following productions: "Your Girl and Mine," "The Baby Millionaire," "A Texas Steer," "The House of a Thousand Candles," and "A Black Sheep," and has supported Tyrone Power, Otis Harlan, Henry Mestayer and many others.

Animated Sculpture Appears

Animated sculpture is the latest thing in pictures. The S. S. Film Company of New York is filming Helena Smith Dayton's "cartoons in clay" and they will be released through the Educational Film Corporation the early part of September. One of the subjects was run at the Strand Theater of New York and won admiration from the audience. The subject being made at present is Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," with unusual scenery and costumes.

The film made by the S. S. Company for the woman suffrage party was shown to Governor Whitman and his staff on August 29.

National Association Meeting

MANY DIRECTORS PRESENT—PRESIDENT BRADY'S SPEECH

THE first meeting of the recently elected board of directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which is to serve until the annual meeting in June, 1918, was held at the organization's headquarters, Times building, on August 27, with President William A. Brady presiding. The important actions taken at the meeting were reported in the last issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

Thirty-two of the forty-two members of the board were in attendance, the absence of the remaining ten being occasioned by the fact that they were out of town or on their vacations. This was the largest and most representative meeting of the board since the organization of the National Association in August a year ago. The following directors were present:

William A. Brady, William L. Sherrill, Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldfish, Walter J. Moore, Lee A. Ochs, Alfred Hamburger, N. C. Rice, C. E. Glemann, Alfred S. Black, Thomas Furniss, Eugene M. Clarke, Frank Eager, Louis L. Levine, Louis F. Blumenthal, J. H. O'Donnell, Dan Chamberlain, Hector Pazmasoglu, Robert Levy, J. A. Berst, Arthur S. Friend, P. A. Powers, Richard A. Rowland, J. E. Brulatour, J. H. Hallberg, Joseph F. Coufal, Arthur James, Wm. A. Johnston, Joseph F. Lee, Thomas G. Wylie, Fred J. Beecroft and George Irving.

Following the reports of the officers and committee, the members proceeded to elect new officers for the ensuing year, and the following were unanimously elected: William A. Brady, president; vice-presidents, Adolph Zukor, J. A. Berst, William L. Sherrill, Thomas Furniss, R. A. Rowland, J. H. Hallberg and Arthur James. J. E. Brulatour was re-elected treasurer and Frederick H. Elliott was re-elected secretary for the ensuing year.

The following companies and individuals were unanimously elected to membership: The Bray Studios, Ins., Producer Class C; Pathe Exchange, Inc., Producer Class A; Norma Talmage Film Corporation, Producer Class A; Selig Polyscope Company, Producer Class A; Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, exporter of motion pictures; Standard Engraving Company, engravers; Ogden Pictures Corporation, Producer Class B; Harry Rapf, Producer Class B; Mayfair Film Corporation, Producer Class B; Robert Welch, George Gould, Frances Klein, J. S. Judd, William McCormack, E. Kendall Gillett, H. A. Wyckoff.

The application of the American Exhibitors' Association for affiliation under Article 2 of the by-laws was denied, twenty-four being against the application and five voting for it.

The secretary's report reviewed the activities of the association since the last meeting of the board, and to the effect that practically all of the secretary's time, as well as that of the office staff, has been devoted to the work of the War Co-operation Committee in carrying out instructions from Mr. Brady, who was requested by President Wilson to mobilize the industry and in the perfection of the organization of the National Committee. It was reported that all of the twenty-eight state chairmen appointed on July 3 had accepted and were actively engaged in the organization of the exhibitors for the purpose of carrying out instructions received from the motion picture committees, the chairmen of which are in constant communication with the members of the Cabinet, Federal offices, Red Cross War Council, Council of National Defense, and the Four Minute Men.

A report was presented by R. H. Cochrane, chairman of the Advertising Trailer Committee, that at the Chicago convention of the National Exhibitors' League the proposition contained in the set of resolutions in regard to showing advertising trailers was rejected. Members of this committee were present and suggested that the committee should be continued in power, with a view to carrying out the plan at some future time.

State Rights Men Join

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation in an application for membership requested a new classification for exporters of motion pictures, which was granted, as was also the application of the Standard Engraving Company in new classification for engravers.

It was decided to invite all individual state right buyers to join the association as members of the general division, Class 5, entrance fee $10, annual dues $5.

President Brady's Speech of Acceptance

"I feel as I felt in Chicago, and I want it distinctly understood by the exhibitor directors who are in the room, that never in any way, shape, manner or fashion have I participated in any politics connected with the Exhibitors' League of America or connected with the American Exhibitors' Association, and I also make this statement in advance, that during the next twelve months, if I live, I shall follow the same rule—that I know nothing but good of the National Association as a whole. I know nothing of the quarrels that may come up between any of the factions in the National Association.

"I feel at the end of the first year of this association that we have accomplished wonders. We have succeeded in almost everything that we have attempted except one thing, that is, the complete organization of the motion picture industry as a national unit, and the principal reason why that has not been accomplished has been the troubles and dissensions amongst the exhibitors.

"I believe at this stage of the game that it is the duty of every exhibitor in the United States to get together in some fashion that you know better than I how to do, and form yourselves in one great big national group. I feel that it is a great mistake for the exhibitors, either as one association or two associations, either collectively or individually, to stand apart from the National Association.

"I received a circular this morning from the American Exhibitors' Association. In one of the clauses, in fact, the first clause, in summarizing what they intend to do, is this statement: 'Are the exhibitors of this country going to run their own business or are they going to see it run to ruination by senseless censors, idealists, reformers and self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of the industry?'

"After having passed through twelve months, I would like to ask the gentleman who wrote that sentence what he means by 'self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of the industry'? I have mixed up with fights in associations of this kind since I was twenty-five. Never in those years of experience have I seen men stand together at times when they were needed to stand together as these other 'self-seeking gentlemen in other branches of this industry.'

"I am not for any branch of this industry. I don't depend for a living upon any branch of this industry, therefore, I can speak fearlessly to any man in this room, and I say to you that the exhibitors who have been connected with this association during the last twelve months would not be men, would not be honest men if they did not testify to the fact that every time a proposition has come before this association that the exhibitors have received every bit of value they were entitled to.

"I testify here to every man in this room and to the exhibitors in America that the manufacturer, that the producer, that the distributor, that every branch here is willing to stand with the other branches, and I claim that those men are not against the exhibitor. I claim that they are for the exhibitor, that upon the success of the exhibitor depends their business, and never have I found one iota of an attempt to injure the exhibitor, but rather a unanimous and solid attempt to benefit the exhibitor; therefore, I say at the beginning of the second twelve months of this association, that we should all get together.

"Before we pass beyond this question of affiliation, you will have to take notice of the fact that it places your president in a very embarrassing position. As the American Exhibitors' Association in the letter, they tendered to me, as the representative of the President of the United States, offered their co-operation I accepted it, as I will accept the co-operation of any exhibitor, actor, director, producer or distributor in the United States. I will accept their co-operation without regard to any association that exists in the motion picture business. I received the appointment to mobilize the industry from the President of the United States as an individual, and I am not responsible to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, nor to the Exhibitors' League, nor to the American Exhibitors' Association, nor to any collective members or individual members of this association. I am responsible only to the President of the United States to mobilize this industry for effective co-operation with the different heads of the government in the prosecution of the war, and if in the carrying out of my national duty I am compelled to recognize any association or any individual, I shall do so."

Film Life at Training Camps

Relatives and friends of soldier boys who have enlisted, or been drafted into the great national army, will have an opportunity to see them at work in the training camps in pictures.

Kendall Banning, director of the Division of Pictures of the Committee of Public Information, has granted permission to the Hearst-Pathe News Cameraman to visit all of the cantonments throughout the United States, where the soldiers are training. Several cameramen will be assigned at various times to each of the training camps, where they will spend several days picturing the defenders of the nation in the preliminary work that they must undergo prior to their departure for the battlefields of Europe.

Men who are rookies today, and who may later occupy high positions in the world events, will be shown undergoing the grinding detail of camp life.

As rapidly as the pictures are taken they will be forwarded to Washington to be passed by the official censors, after which they will be shown each week in the releases of the Hearst-Pathe News.

More of "Bobby" Series

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, announces that the demand for the Bobby Connelly pictures has been so great he has decided to produce these one-reel subjects indefinitely. When the Bobby Series was first decided upon, arrangements were made to have it consist of ten subjects, each one to be a complete story in itself.

IMPORTANT—IF IRISH

DON'T be surprised if at any minute there appears upon the map a new organization called the S. P. I. No, it is not a new exhibitors' association, but the Society for the Protection of Irishmen.

This important body will be formed by Jack O'Toole and "Daddy" Hines. The former wears the crown at the Chicago Fox office and the latter is the kaiser of South Bend.

It is said that these two optimistic Irishers feel that the interests of the Irish are in need of protection. They will undoubtedly call upon Fitzpatrick and Flaherty and Heaney and Sweeney to back them up.

It is also said that the members will start a fight immediately for the uplift of the film industry. And the chances are that they will not be obliged to go outside their own membership for the fight.

PEACH AND BANANA STORY

BILLY WEST, King-Bee's king buzzer, walked into the studio at Bayonne last Monday and found a lot of charming young girls engaged for a scene at a seashore resort. One of the damsels fair to look at and with a wealth of "honest to goodness" blonde hair was sitting with her legs crossed "a la masculine." Something attracted Billy's attention and seemed to hypnotize him. It was a pair of rich colored yellow stockings worn by the blonde with the H. T. G. hair. After a critical observation (at a distance, of course), Billy called his director, Gillstrom, and pointing to the wild colored hose, exclaimed, "That's the largest banana I ever saw in my life."

Amend the N. A. M. P. I. By-Laws

DOUBTLESS the directors of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry had reasons entirely satisfactory to themselves—or at least to twenty-four of them—for rejecting the application of the American Exhibitors' Association. Such reasons, however, have not been made public.

Technical reasons exist, of course, in Section 1, Paragraph 3, and Section 2, Paragraph 2 of Article 1 of the by-laws, which specifically mention the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and therefore, at least by inference, exclude any other exhibitors' organization.

This, however, does not relieve the tension of the situation. It merely emphasizes the fact that the defect lies in the organization of the National Association, which should have provided for the possible dissolution of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

No man is required to forecast the future, nor to possess clairvoyance in arranging for present needs. But as an ordinary common-sense precaution, those who draw up by-laws should avoid mentioning by name any organization but their own. Disputes and dissolutions are entirely too common in human affairs to be ignored as a possibility of organization development.

Apparently, as the matter stands, the N. A. M. P. I. is bound to depend for its exhibitor membership and support upon the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. If the League disbands or dies a natural death, the National Association is left without even a provision any exhibitor representation whatever.

Presumably the founders of the National Association held the League in such high respect and admiration that they were unable to conceive of its failure, and so made no provision for those exhibitors who might prefer to organize another association, or to remain unattached. This shortsighted policy promises embarrassment for somebody before the affair is closed.

The League, notoriously mismanaged and incompetent to represent exhibitor sentiment, as a matter of fact never has represented it. Its claims of exhibitor representation were founded on wind. The League, a national body, never had enough exhibitor members to run the theaters in one big city; and now, split by dissention and abandoned by most of its progressive elements, it presents a sorry spectacle indeed as the "representative" of this big country's exhibitors.

The situation must be annoying to the directors of the National Association. They are unable (or think they are) to admit a new society of exhibitors, and it is not conceivable that they are satisfied with what is left of the old one.

The only way out of the difficulty, with justice to the theater owners of the country, is to amend the by-laws of the N. A. M. P. I. by substituting the words "a recognized exhibitors' association" for the phrase "the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America," wherever that name occurs.

The National Association may not wish to admit the American Exhibitors' Association to classified membership just now. It may consider that the A. E. A. was too precipitate or too audacious in its application.

That is as it may be. The amendment suggested is not so much for the benefit of the A. E. A. as it is a provision for the consideration of the exhibiting division of this industry.

It need not be said that the exhibitors should be represented in the N. A. M. P. I. It is equally obvious that they are not represented, since only an infinitesimal number of them belong to the League. So long as the National Association by-laws specify the League by name, the vast body of American picture theater men will have nothing to do with the National Association. And that does the N. A. M. P. I. more harm than it does the exhibitors.

The suggested amendment to the N. A. M. P. I. by-laws would give that body one more power which it lacks now. It would be able to cancel the membership of an exhibitors' association in the event that such a step should become desirable.

Chicago Needs Cleaning Up

THE ease with which Chicago's protege, Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, was defeated in court on two recent occasions demonstrates that the doughty censor is not playing up to form. Usually the major's decisions, while arbitrary and exasperating, are founded on enough logic to give him an argument. Lately he seems to have based his objections on his personal emotions—never a safe ground for judicial opinion.

It was because the major's censorial function ran so amuck that court relief was sought from his angry prohibitions. When he turned his high power to the protection of his country's enemies, even the long-suffering and patient film men felt in duty bound to expose the malice of his position.

There is a certain satisfaction in accomplishing the righting of a wrong, and overcoming the effect of arbitrary abuse of power. It is something like collecting a bad debt, or delivering a thief to justice. But as a business proposition, the satisfaction does not justify the cost. Being forced to resort to the courts to gain ordinary rights, assured by the constitution, is expensive in money and time. The favorable decision of the court only increases the exasperation, because it points definitely to the incompetence of the original trouble-maker.

As the situation stands in Chicago, the film men must appeal to the courts, pay heavy attorneys' fees, delay the showing of their productions, all to gain a worthless "permit" which should not be needed in the first place. Every court decision against the censorship is a proof that censorship is a ridiculous, unfair and hampering tax on industry.

Official Chicago is too busy just now with a renegade mayor to pay much attention to so small a detail as Major Funkhouser. But in the turmoil it should not be forgotten that Funkhouser's action in just one case demonstrated his connection with the Thompson machine that is making the second city a harbor of sedition.

If the public temper is any guide there should be little doubt of Mayor Thompson's removal from office. In the interest of good government it would be well to make a clean sweep of it, and let him take Funkhouser with him when he goes.

Titles Again

OUR recent remarks on film titles brought so many expressions of approbation from exhibitors that we believe there must be a good deal of feeling on the subject. Exhibitors have learned that they cannot hope for full attendance on a poor title, no matter how good the picture may be. On a few short words, therefore, may rest the success or failure of an expensive production.

High class magazine editors are usually pretty careful about the titles of their fiction, and the film title writer who has not fully mastered the art can do no better than to familiarize himself with the psychology of the story title as it is done by experts.

Vitagraph After Funkhouser

DECISIVE LEGAL ACTION TAKEN TO OUST CHICAGO CENSOR CZAR

ALBERT E. SMITH, president of Greater Vitagraph, has started an action in an attempt to put Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, Chicago censor, out of business.

On August 25 President Smith, through his attorney, Lewis F. Jacobson of Chicago, filed a petition for mandamus, in which the claim is made that the ordinance provided that second Major Funkhouser, as Second Deputy Superintendent of Police in Chicago, has absolutely no legal right to censor pictures.

The fight, on Major Funkhouser's authority, is based upon his refusal to issue a permit for the showing of "Within the Law" unless numerous eliminations are made in the picture.

Before starting suit the Vitagraph company held a private showing of "Within the Law" at the Studebaker Theater in Chicago. More than 1,200 of the most prominent residents of Chicago attended the showing, and after it the great majority declared that "Within the Law" was a splendid picture in every way and that not one scene should be eliminated. Not a single person present offered an opinion other than along these lines.

Immediately after the showing Attorney Jacobson gathered these opinions together and, armed with them, called upon Major Funkhouser and upon Herman F. Schuettler, general superintendent of police of the city of Chicago, and requested a permit to publicly exhibit "Within the Law" in the City of Chicago. Attorney Jacobson tendered the $9 fee, which is the charge for a permit, but both Major Funkhouser and Superintendent Schuettler refused to accept the money. Immediately after this refusal the petition was drawn up and filed.

After reciting a general description of the Vitagraph Company as a corporation, and asserting that it produced "Within the Law" at a cost of more than $300,000 the petition says:

"'Within the Law' is based upon the play written for the so-called legitimate or speaking stage by Bayard Veiller, a famous author, and the play was picturized by Eugene Miller and directed by W. P. S. Earle, all of whom are internationally and favorably known as producers of motion pictures having high moral and educational value.

"That the purpose of said motion picture play among other things, as was the spoken plan on the legitimate stage, is to depict that failure of social and penal institutions which sometimes brings about the conviction of innocent people of crime and their subsequent ostracism from society so as to shut them off from any chance for reformation and from leading a life of usefulness to society. Its purpose is secondarily to show the close relation between poverty and crime among women in the position of cause and effect

"That said spoken play, 'Within the Law' was witnessed by members of the State Legislature in Illinois, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin."

In the voluminous document the following clause is perhaps the most interesting as in it Major Funkhouser's legal right to cut films is directly challenged:

"Your petitioner further represents that the amendments in and by which it is provided that 'The Second Deputy Superintendent of Police shall not be a member of the Police force, under the direction of the General Superintendent of Police' is contradictory and illogical in its terms and provisions and is illegal, unconstitutional and void. That said Second Deputy Superintendent not being a member of the police force and not under the direction of the said General Superintendent of Police, he has no legal right or power to make any report to such General Superintendent of Police concerning the photoplay in question, which should in any way or to any extent influence or control the action of the General Superintendent of Police so far as it in any way relates to or affects the photoplay in question, any more than should the report of any other citizen who is admittedly not a member of the police force of this city.

"Your petitioner further represents and charges that any report made by the said M. L. C. Funkhouser, Second Deputy Superintendent of Police, made to H. F. Schuettler, General Superintendent of Police, had and has no official character and no legal value which should control the action of the General Superintendent of Police in the matter of granting or refusing a general permit for the photoplay in question; that the said Herman F. Schuettler, General Superintendent of Police, has and had no legal right to refer the matter of the granting or refusing of a permit to your petitioner for the photoplay 'Within the Law' to said M. L. C. Funkhouser, Second Deputy Superintendent of Police, nor

Use Motography Cuts Free

AS we have stated before, you are welcome to use MOTOGRAPHY cuts free of all charge. Simply go through the magazine each week and select the picture or pictures which you would like to use in your program or other advertising. Then write "MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago," as soon as possible and the half tones will be loaned to you gratis.

Important

It is impossible to keep the cuts run in MOTOGRAPHY on file for more than four weeks after the date of the issue. Therefore in order to be sure to be able to get the illustrations you desire, make your request shortly after you receive your paper—the sooner the better. We cannot guarantee to furnish cuts later than four weeks from date of issue in which the illustrations appeared.

It is to be remembered that MOTOGRAPHY cuts are of very fine screen, not adaptable for use in newspapers. They are, however, of great value in making a program attractive.

If you don't see the cut you would like to use, ask us anyway and we'll do our best to furnish it for you.

should he be wholly controlled by the action, decision or report made to him either verbally or in writing by said M. L. C. Funkhouser, as he has done and as he claims it to be his duty to do in future.

"Your petitioners further show that H. F. Scheuttler and M. L. C. Funkhouser in so refusing and neglecting to grant written permits to your petitioners to exhibit said photoplay in the city have acted in violation of their duty in the premises and have abused the power granted to them under the aforesaid provisions of the ordinances and amendments thereto, and that by reason of the refusal and neglect of the said H. F. Schuettler and M. L. C. Funkhouser your petitioner is unjustly deprived of the rights to exhibit said photoplay, and your petitioner further represents that as the results of such deprivation it is deprived of the gains, profits and incomes which it would derive from the exhibition of said photoplay in the city and from the sale of admission tickets to members of the public wishing to witness said photo exhibition, which gains, profit and income your petitioners represent would amount to approximately $100,000.

"Your petitioner further represents that the action of H. F. Schuettler and M. L. C. Funkhouser in so refusing to grant the written permit to your petitioner and in so refusing to accept the sum of nine dollars, tendered to M. L. C. Funkhouser for said permits in pursuance of the requirements of the ordinance in question, were not based upon the exercise of proper discretion and judgment in said persons or either of them, but said actions were abusive, unreasonable, discriminating, unlawful and arbitrary and in contravention of the law, and an abuse of the discretion and powers conferred upon the aforesaid persons by the ordinance of the City of Chicago, governing the exhibitions of photoplays in Chicago, and constitute an unlawful and unjust discrimination by such persons against your petitioner herein, and said action is in violation of your petitioner's rights and deprives them of their property without due process of law contrary to the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Illinois.

"Wherefore your petitioner prays that the writ of madamus issue directed to the said Herman F. Schuettler, Superintendent of Police of the City of Chicago and his successor in office, commanding him and his successor in office forthwith to grant written permits to your petitioner to exhibit said photoplay, 'Within the Law,' in the City of Chicago to all persons of all ages as provided by the ordinance in force in the City of Chicago governing the exhibition of photoplays of the kind herein described to persons of all ages.

"Fighting Trail" Splendid Serial

During the last week Albert E. Smith, president of the Greater Vitagraph Company, received a report from Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the distributing end of Vitagraph, that reports from the company's branches led him to believe that "The Fighting Trail," the big serial which Vitagraph releases on September 10, will be one of the most successful serial photoplays the industry has known. Mr. Smith says that the advanced bookings are greater than those obtained for any serial of which he has cognizance.

Under the instruction of Mr. Smith, the sales organization of Vitagraph has held back the release date until the members of the various branch staffs had seen the major portion of the serial. Mr. Smith is convinced that the picture produced under the direction of William Duncan is one of the finest film features he had ever witnessed either from Vitagraph or any other company, and he wished the salesmen to see it before they went out to talk business with exhibitors. The bookings thus far reported seem to justify Mr. Smith's belief that if salesmen regarded the serial as he did, they would have no trouble in convincing the exhibitors.

This is the first time, so far as is known, that an all out-door serial has been attempted, and trade paper reviewers who have been permitted to see some of the episodes in the Vitagraph projection room, pronounced it a splendid piece of work. The reviewer for the Dramatic Mirror wrote:

"This serial is so good all the way through and so evenly balanced that it would be difficult to select any one point as better than another."

Mr. Smith announces that Vitagraph has done everything it could possibly think of to give service to the exhibitors in making "The Fighting Trail" the success that he thinks it is entitled.

George M. Cohan trying to step on his opponent in "Seven Keys to Baldpate"; and on the right, Elsie Ferguson, the new beauty of the screen, in "Barbary Sheep."

TYPICAL ARTCRAFT PICTURES

"Barbary Sheep," Elsie Ferguson Production, Discloses Best Talents of Unusually Powerful Combination of Star, Director and Author

The combination of Elsie Ferguson, Maurice Tourneur and Robert Hitchens as star, director and author of the forthcoming Artcraft picture, "Barbary Sheep, has resulted in the production of a typical Artcraft offering, according to Walter E. Greene, president of that distributing organization. "If 'Barbary Sheep' does not establish a record in bookings in the way of initial screen plays of famous stage stars, I shall be greatly disappointed," said Mr. Greene, in discussing the new production.

Elsie Ferguson is undoubtedly one of the most powerful box-office attractions of the American theater. One of the foremost beauties of the speaking stage, her great art represents the true drama in its highest degree of merit. Her distinguished work in such theatrical hits as "Such a Little Queen," "Outcast," "Margaret Schiller" and many others of equal prominence has resulted in her present popularity. I feel that Elsie Ferguson's first appearance on the screen marks a distinct achievement for the patrons of the cinema.

In keeping with the star's accomplishments are those of her director, Maurice Tourneur, the famous French master of artistic production extraordinary.

Robert Hitchen's indescribable power in setting forth the mystery, the fascination, strange atmosphere of the desert was never more effectively displayed than in this novel, his greatest seller, since the "Garden of Allah." It is no ordinary event for a photo-play to boast of such names as Elsie Ferguson, Morris Tourneur and Robert Hitchens, although this is only in keeping with Artcraft's policy for "the biggest and best" in films. It is such pictures as "Barbery Sheep" that continually mark the advancement in cinema quality, photo plays that will attract and hold the patronage of best class of entertainment seekers.

Ann Little Supports Wallace Reid

"Nan of Music Mountain" is to be seen on the screen. This will be welcome news to the thousands who have delighted in the breezy novel which has long held a record among the best sellers. It will be a Paramount picture, and will have as its star none other than Wallace Reid, whose latest picture, "The Hostage," is a September 10 Paramount release. An announcement of particular interest in this connection is that Ann Little, former Ince star, and who will be seen with Conway Tearle in J. Stuart Blackton's forthcoming production of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The World for Sale," has been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky to support Wallace Reid in the picture. Miss Little will go to California in the near future to begin work.

Josephine Sedgwick with Triangle

Miss Josephine Sedgwick, who recently joined the Triangle Culver City Studio playing forces as a stock woman, has done such creditable work in the first production in which she appeared that she has been elevated to the rank of a leading woman and will play opposite Roy Stewart in the Western star's next picture.

In her new position Miss Sedgwick will be one of the youngest leading women enrolled under the Triangle banner, but she has been engaged in dramatic work since childhood. She was in vaudeville several seasons with members of her family as one of the "Five Sedgwicks" and has been before the camera two years. One of her sisters is a film actress, and she has a brother also engaged in film work. Her previous work in a Triangle picture was in support of Miss Belle Bennett in "Ashes of Hope," which will be released in the near future.

New Beban Play

While Patrons of the photodrama have grown accustomed to expecting genuine touches of human interest in all of George Beban's Paramount productions, it is safe to say that they will be agreeably surprised when "Lost in Transit" is shown, for it contains a greater amount of those features which appeal to human sympathy than anything in which he has heretofore appeared. September 3 is release date of "Lost in Transit," and the fact that it is from a story by Kathlyn Williams, also a Paramount star, is an added feature of interest.

Another notable point in this picture is that the two and a half year old star, Bob Whiet, who has already appeared in two pictures, has an opportunity in this story to prove that despite his tender years he is a real actor. It is impossible to describe his work—it is the essence of naturalness. Indeed the story was virtually written around the little fellow who comes close to George Beban himself in his claims for stellar honors.

Helen Holmes in her latest spine-shiverer, "The Lost Express."

Last Holmes Serial Is Best

Helen Holmes' latest Mutual-Signal fifteen chapter photonovel, "The Lost Express," the first chapter of which will be released on September 17, is without doubt the most thrilling adventure drama in which the intrepid young star has ever appeared on the screen.

The story, which was written by Frederick B. Bennett, is based on the amazing disappearance of an express train between way stations on an absolutely straight piece of railway track with no switches or sidings. How this train is disposed of by a band of robbers constitutes the mystery of a drama that is as full of mystery as it is of adventure, and which is engrossingly interesting in every one of its fifteen episodes.

The new photonovel has been directed by John P. McGowan, who has directed most of Miss Holmes' plays. McGowan knows how to get the right atmosphere in "outdoor stuff" and his genius in the selection of locations for "thrillers" is not to be outdone.

The story involves General Thurston, a distinguished American, who has invented a way of solidifying gasoline so that it can be transported in granulated form, and the efforts of a gang of foreign crooks to obtain the secret plans of the process form the basis of the plot, Helen Thurston (Helen Holmes) being the nemesis of the gang in pursuit of whose members she encounters the wildest adventures imaginable.

Included in the cast of "The Lost Express" are Leo D. Maloney, Thomas Lingham, William Brunton, Edward Hearn, Al. J. Smith, Andrew Waldron, V. O. Whitehead, S. A. Sues, R. V. Phelan, Clyde Roe, William Behrens, Charles U. Wells and Lauren Maxam, all regular actors in the star's support.

New Bluebird Arrangements

Bluebird has been busy during the past few weeks arranging plans to forward the interests of exhibitors who draw regularly upon the Bluebird program for a part of their entertainments. There will be a new arrangement of stars and a shift in directors to give every possible advantage to the details of production. The recent announcement that Mae Murray had been engaged to appear regularly among Bluebirds has given new interest to the series, and with all favorites among the regular Bluebird stars retained, there is assurance of strength and popularity in the heads of the playing staff.

Miss Murray and her director, Robert Leonard, are working on "The Princess Virtue," intended as the feature to bring Miss Murray to the series early in December. Wheeler Oakman will be her leading man, and among the other principals will be Jack Vosburg, Paul Nicholson, Jean Hersholt and Gretchen Lederer. Carmal Myers will be another new star to be introduced within a few weeks, with Harry Solter her director. She will first present "The Dynast," a story by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton, with Kenneth Harlan her leading man.

Violet Mersereau will make her next Bluebird appearance in "The Girl by the Roadside" screen version of Varick Vanardy's novel, with Theodore Marston her director and Cecil Owen, leading man. Dorothy Phillips, one of Bluebird's most dependable stars, will go through the season with Ida May Park directing. "Bondage," to be released October 15, will be Miss Phillips' next offering, William Stowell heading her supporting company.

Franklyn Farnum, who has been co-star with Brownie Vernon, will appear alone in future Bluebirds. "The Maverick," October 8, will be Mr. Farnum's first lone-star offering with Lon Chaney featured. Miss Vernon will, in future, have Herbert Rawlinson as her co-star, the Rawlinson-Vernon combination being scheduled in "Flirting With Death," for their first joint appearance, September 24.

Rupert Julian productions will be featured among Bluebirds hereafter with Ruth Clifford appearing as joint star with Mr. Julian. "The Mysterious Mr. Tiller," set for release September 17, will be their next program appearance, although they will be stars of "Mother o' Mine," the Bluebird Extraordinary, set for state right distribution starting September 3. Monroe Salisbury has been engaged as leading man in the Julian productions, making his first appearance in "The Desire of the Moth," October 22, with Mr. Julian and Miss Clifford starring.

Mazda Projection Proving Successful

H. H. Cudmore, general manager of The Argus Lamp & Appliance Company, manufacturers of the Sheck Universal Adapters for Mazda projector lamps, in company with R. P. Burrows, of the National Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Cleveland, who has been directly responsible for the commercial development of the newly designed mazda projector lamps, recently visited the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis and made several successful installations of the Sheck Universal Adapter in motion picture theaters. Successful installations were made in the Cozy Theater, Seventh and Smith streets, St. Paul.

This theater was especially selected as being typical of all motion picture theaters of six hundred seats and under, using alternate current where the Sheck adapter and mazda projector lamps will successfully replace carbon arc projection apparatus and effect a current saving of two-thirds the cost of operating carbon arc projection apparatus.

A successful instalaltion was made in the Gem Theater, St. Paul, also.

While in direct current installations mazda projector lamps do not effect the same current saving as in alternating current circuits, it has proven in this installation that at least 1,000 watts per hour are saved by the use of mazda projector lamps versus carbon arc.

Mr. Cudmore and Mr. Burrows contemplate visiting all of the prominent cities of the United States within the next few months for the purpose of making practical trial demonstrations of the Sheck adapter for mazda projector lamps.

Powerful Vitagraph Drama

"An Alabaster Box," the Blue Ribbon feature scheduled for release September 10 by Greater Vitagraph, is an adaptation of the novel of the same name. This feature introduces Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott as a star combination. It is seldom that two such prominent players are seen in one photoplay.

The story, which in novelized form had its vogue about twenty years ago, was listed as one of the world's best sellers and permeated even the smallest towns in the United States. It was particularly popular in the smaller municipalities, as the story dealt with folks in the rural districts.

"An Alabaster Box" contains some of the most effective characterizations seen in one picture in some time. From Miss Joyce and Mr. MacDermott in the roles of Lydia and Andrew Bolton, respectively, to the players in the most unconsequential roles, the types could not possibly have been improved upon.

Miss Joyce in a role that is fraught with dramatic possibilities, renders an interpretation of the self-sacrificing girl, that reaches the acme of emotional acting.

Marc MacDermott, in his long screen career, has contributed many noteworthy performances to the silver sheet, but in the role of Andrew Bolton, first the successful, respected citizen, then as the grief-racked, prematurely aged convict, he excels anything he has ever done in his tenure as screen star.

Included in the cast is little Aida Horton, Greater Vitagraph's three-year-old child, who as Bobby Connolly's leading lady in the "Bobby Connelly Series," has scored an instantaneous success.

Director Withey has provided some highly amusing comedy situations to relieve the heavy dramatic tension.

U. S. Navy Books Films

If a U-boat should sneak up on any battleship of the Atlantic fleet (wherever it is) and send it to the bottom, the Vitagraph Company would be loser by several hundred dollars, because practically every big ship now has on board one or more reels of Vitagraph film. Through a special agreement with President Smith the fleet is to be supplied with a weekly show, the first booking calling for ten subjects aggregating fifty-three reels.

Owing to the secrecy with which the movements of the fleet are shrouded and the changing locations of warships from day to day, George Balsdon, manager of the New York branch of the Vitagraph distributing organization, arranged with the officer in charge of motion pictures to ship to a given point, whence they are to be transhipped to the fleet.

Motion pictures now form the chief diversion for Uncle Sam's bluejackets. Practically every ship in the fleet has its own projection machine and all boast one or more expert operators, men who abandoned the theater booth for the navy. Each night shows are given on the decks of the fighting ships. The screen is stretched on two uprights at one end of the ship and the projection booth is located midships. Officers and men, the latter draped on guns, rigging, turrets and every other vantage point watch the film and make an inspiring sight.

The Vitagraph company booked its pictures to the fleet and no specific ship, so that before the reels are returned to the company any number of vessels can have had their use.

Second Evelyn Nesbit Play

A company of forty people has left New York for the Adirondacks where Miss Evelyn Nesbit, assisted by her son Russell Thaw and a cast of excellent players, will begin her second photoplay under the personal direction of Julius Steger.

The title of this picture is "The Greater Love."

Mr. Steger also announces the production following the Nesbit picture, which will be "Just a Woman," by Eugene Walter, of which Miss Charlotte Walker will be the star, appearing in the role she has created in the stage version of that successful play.

History in a Universal Language

By Julian Johnson

Herbert Brenon's screen production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," is the first big and significant record, literary or pictorial, which the Great War his inspired. It should be as enduring as the events which it reproduces are far-reaching.

One can think, immediately, of many pictures which the war has caused to be painted; of the multitude of books which the conflict has caused to be written; of the inspired poems, of the messages of authors from Maeterlinck to Kipling, of the earnest efforts of every great artistic mind.

But what have these men—and women—recorded?

Impressions. Nothing more.

To rely on the ever-ready motion picture phraseology, there has been but one "complete sequence" in the war; and but one enduring effect has been registered so far on the changeless film of eternity.

This sequence, effect, result, or what you will, is the Russian Revolution.

Be the Western finish what it may, regarding crowns and boundaries; be the final result the overthrow of a dynasty and indemnity, or be it pacifism and disarmament, Russia is free. She has changed from a barbarous despotism to militant democracy, and so far there is no promise of any single result in the war which will be so great.

And the nucleus, the kernel, the causation of all this, has been registered in Brenon's film. These absolute realities form the plot, the personality, the thrill, the suspense, the romance, the terror, the big living drama of "The Fall of the Romanoffs." The title of the picture itself is history.

Forgetting what the fall of the Romanoff dynasty means to the world, let us see what the picture means to motion picture progress.

It is the second of two great historic scrolls worthy of preservation for the instruction of future generations. The first was "The Birth of a Nation," in which Mr. Griffith made a long-dead day live again, and showed the horrors of fratricide in so convincing a manner that it is quite probable that this photoplay alone might prevent a civil war.

Here was a record of the past, made to live again by the touch of a man of genius. It is quite true that practically none of the present generation knew by direct personal contact anything about Civil War men and Civil War times, but the transcript was enough—it was art enough, humanity enough to plunge any twentieth century boy or girl unreservedly into the vents of fifty years ago.

Mr. Brenon, however, has taken the most significant episode of the moment, and has told its meaning in a universal language.

This is the first and only historical document which is equally understandable in Singapore, Naples, Belfast, New York and Clay Center. This picture is destined to go around the world, proclaiming what the Russian Revolution means to all peoples.

"To all peoples," you say. "What concern is the Russian Revolution to all peoples?"

Russia is, next to China, the world's most populous country. While the vast body of its agriculturalists have not been progressive, the nation is not at all to be compared to China in its inertia and lack of imaginative force. Contrariwise, Russia is the most potential country on the face of the earth. Its millions are children of imagination, invention and ambition. Even in their darkest hours of slavery, great poets, great composers, great painters and great generals have arisen among them, and the fame of their art and their valor has gone around the world. Liberty to Russia will prove a flame in a tinder forest; and an exposition of the source of Russian liberty, as well as the cause of Russian slavery, is of interest to every living man and woman who is above the level of tearing raw meat and wearing a gee-string.

Why? Because Russia, in peace, is going to be the world's most stupendous competitor. Her countless thousands are going to make life a matter of hustle for everybody else on the globe, and the pre-eminent question is going to be: "How did this happen?"

Brenon is telling how it happened.

It chanced that the greatest romance and the most unbelievable melodrama are wound up inextricably in the final throes of Russian autocracy, and the first struggles of the new-hatched freedom. Rasputin, the strangest, the most diabolic, the most gigantic figure since the Middle Ages, was the wielder of empire in empire's final wild flare, and Brenon's story picks up Rasputin at his very dawn and follows him to his doom. He is the central figure—the demon, if you please—of a great tableau of love and hate which embraces the Czar, the Czarina, the reactionaries, such revolutionists as Korniloff and Kerensky, and the beauties of the imperial court.

---

"The Rise and Fall of the Confederacy," is the title of a new picture now being filmed in Greenville, S. C. It will be a spectacular feature, on the order of "The Birth of a Nation," and will depict both the old and the new South.

BIG STARS IN BIG PLAY

Ann Murdock Heads Company of Celebrated Frohman Stars in "Outcast," Mutual Release of September

Ann Murdock, one of the foremost American actresses of her time, and also one of the most charming, is starred in "Outcast," a picturization of Hubert Henry Davies' drama, "Outcast," which was first presented in this country by Charles Frohman at the Lyceum Theater, New York, after an original production at Wyndham's Theater, London, had broken longevity records for the British metropolis.

Miss Murdock, who was the last American star to be signed by Mr. Frohman before his death in the wreck of the Lusitania, was selected to star in "Outcast" after analysis of the requirements by President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation and producing officials of the Empire All Star Corporation, which was formed for the purpose of presenting Charles Frohman's stars and plays through the Mutual Film Corporation exchanges. Miss Murdock's acting as Helene in Mr. Frohman's last play, "The Beautiful Adventure," and her success last season in "Please Help Emily" were factors in her selection.

Charles Frohman's busiest years were spent in collecting plays by the world's leading authors for his stars. When the Empire All Star arrangement went into effect all these plays and stars become for the first time available to photodrama. The result bids fair to prove revolutionary in the sense that no such a distinguished array of plays and players has ever before been available for picture purposes.

"Outcast" deals with the redemption of Geoffrey Sherwood, a young Englishman, and Miriam, a girl of unusual type, who has known life's vicissitudes. Sherwood has been jilted by a woman in his own set, who has thrown him over to marry a wealthy baronet. In this situation he meets Miriam, with whom he has much in common, though socially they are far apart. Miriam's patience and sweetness so impress Sherwood that he determines to do her justice. They are married, going to Argentina. The scenes are laid in London, New York, Paris and Monte Carlo.

The cast is one of the most distinguished ever used in picture production. It includes the names of well-known English actors and actresses.

Opposite Miss Murdock is David Powell, of Sir Herbert Tree's company at His Majesty's Theater, London.

In the cast are Jules Raucourt, Kathryn Calvert, Richard Hatteras, Herbert Ayling, Reginald Carrington, Kate Sargeantson, H. Ashton Tonge and V. L. Granville.

Patrons Prevent Manager's Arrest

By William Noble

A Sunday theater crowd interfered with the arrest of L. A. Ramsey, manager of the picture theater at Dewey, Oklahoma, August 26, when County Attorney A. C. Harrison and Deputy Sheriff A. E. Dunlap stopped the show.

The arrest of Ramsey was ordered by the county attorney on a charge of operating his house on Sunday. There is no ordinance forbidding Sunday theaters in Dewey, and such a demonstration occurred that Harrison called for police protection. The chief of police refused assistance, explaining that it was "not his affair." It was the second clash within a week between county authorities and Dewey citizens over Sunday amusements. The arrests and stopping of the show was made in accordance with the state law—which prohibits Sunday opening, which the city ordinance does not prohibit.

Joining in the great national spirit that looks toward the comfort and relaxation of the country's young men who have been called to war, General Film Company is to send all its spare magazines and other reading matter to the boys in camp and at the front.

"REPUTATION" RELEASED

Edna Goodrich Sympathizes With Character She Portrays in "Reputation"—New Plays Ready for Her to Begin On

"Scandal never gets busy with the homely girl," says Edna Goodrich.

"It is the pretty girl who sets evil tongues wagging and she it is who must perforce walk most discreetly through the highways of life.

"Scandal is the deformed child of jealousy and envy,

Edna Goodrich, Mutual star, in "Reputation."

two of our oldest inhabitants, and I think the worst phases of this disagreeable family's widespread activities are pictured in my new play "Reputation."

Miss Goodrich is intensely interested in her latest Mutual production, "Reputation," released September 3, in which she assumes the role of Constance Bennett, a pretty girl compelled to earn her own living and assailed in the scandal-mongering village she has chosen as her business location by all the wagging tongues and subtle innuendoes awaiting the pretty stranger in a small town.

The play is one that affords Miss Goodrich an excellent chance to display her versatility, for the situations into which she is forced by her ill-natured critics demand picturization of nearly every human emotion.

From the suspicious silences of the country village to the hustle and hurly burly of Broadway, Constance Bennett is pursued by harpies who try to rob the pretty girl of her reputation, and Miss Goodrich puts a vitality into the character that makes it one of the most striking recently seen on the screen.

The four new Goodrich dramas are by authors of distinction. "Reputation" was written by John Clymer, who wrote "Ashes of Embers," "The White Raven," "The Diplomatic Romance," and other screen successes.

"Queen X" was written by Assistant United States District Attorney Edwin M. Stanton, out of his experience in running down a New York smuggling gang.

"American Maid" was scenarioized by Hamilton Smith from a story by Julius Rothschild, and is, as its name indicates, a play that glorifies the American girl. This play is directed by Albert Capellani, famous Parisian director who staged "The Imposter," "Camille," and "The Common Law."

"A Daughter of Maryland" is a play with a southern heroine. It displays the southern girl in a heroic role. The drama was written by Samuel Morse and scenarioized by Anthony Kelly, author of "The Great Divide," "The Walls of Jericho," and other great screen successes.

Miss Goodrich is one of the best known actresses of the American stage. She made her first dramatic success as Paprika in "The Runaway" at the New York Casino, but in rapid sequence she scored metropolitan triumph as Madame Recamier in "Mam'selle Napoleon," Jinny Hopper in "The College Widow," Phyliss in "When We Were Twenty-one," Nell Ruthven in "A Gilded Fool," Madge Kederly in "What Would a Gentleman Do?" Grace Morton in "The Easterner," and leading parts in "The Master Hand," "The Native Son," "His Neighbor's Wife," "The Awakening of Minerva," and "Evangeline."

OFFICIAL U. S. FILMS

Official Films, Showing Work of Department of Agriculture, to Be Distributed by Universal Organization

The United States Department of Agriculture has arranged with Universal to distribute all motion pictures showing the work and activities of the department during the coming year.

This is significant in showing that the national government is fully alive to the power of the motion picture as an agency of enlightenment. It is also a striking endorsement of Universal's distributing facilities.

A number of pictures have already been completed by the Department of Agriculture, and others will be made with the co-operation of Universal, as the contract provides that the services of scenario writers, scenario editors, producers, directors, actors and actresses and others utilized in the manufacture and editing of films shall be furnished by the distributing organization whenever needed. Operators are also to be provided for the exhibition of pictures in foreign lands.

Some of the pictures already made show the work of the forestry bureau in fighting forest fires and caring for the immense tracts of wild land under government supervision. There are also many beautiful and picturesque studies of the agents of the department at work among the sheep and cattle ranches of the west, and a reel devoted to the work of road building under various circumstances is highly instructive, besides possessing many splendid bits of photography.

One of these features will be released every two weeks, bearing the notice, "Official Film of the United States Department of Agriculture, Distributed by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company."

Special advertising matter and lithographic paper will also be gotten out for the series in co-operation with the department. Charges for this service will be made reasonable enough to meet the purse of any exhibitor in the business.

Helen Holmes Serial September 17

Information that "The Lost Express," the latest railroad serial featuring Helen Holmes, will be released September 17, is welcome news to the many friends and admirers of the daring young woman. The serial is to be released in fifteen installments or episodes, each of which will be in two reels. Mystery, love, intrigue and heart interest are liberally dispensed throughout the serial, whilst the element of comedy so necessary to any picture has not been overlooked.

Exhibitors See Goldwyn Pictures

UNUSUAL ENTHUSIASM OVER NEW PRODUCTIONS

"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS," Goldwyn's first Production, by Margaret Mayo and starring Mae Marsh, has created exhibitor enthusiasm everywhere. Very enthusiastic reviews of the production appeared in the Chicago newspapers following the first pre-release of the picture at Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Colonial Theater. Among the contractsclosed in important cities during the week were:

Rialto Theater, Brockton, Mass.; Alhambra Theater, Utica, N. Y.; Strand Theater. Chicago, Ill.; West End Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Regent Theater, Paterson, N. J.; Garden Theater, Paterson, N. J.; Hamilton Theater, Philadelphia, Pa.; Park Theater, Philadelphia, Pa.; Colonial Theater, Harrisburg, Pa.; Jefferson Theater, St. Augustine, Fla.; Majestic Theater. Springfield, Ohio; Plaza Theater, Sioux City, Ia.; Regent Theater, Rochester, N. Y.; Regent Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.; Grand Theater, Reno, Nev.; Ascher Brothers' chain of theaters in Chicago: Cosmopolitan. Oakland, Frolic, Terminal, Columbus, Milford, Adelphi, Court, Metropolitan, Lakeside, Calo, Chateau.

Sign Goldwyn Contracts

That Goldwyn has kept its promise and made its fine productions available to the smaller exhibitors of the country is evidenced by the signing of more than a thousand contracts for the showing of Goldwyn Pictures in towns of from 5,000 to 20,000 in every part of the United States.

During the early days of the organization many inquiries were received by Goldwyn from smaller exhibitors expressing the fear that Goldwyn prices for quality productions might place them beyond the reach of the lesser houses. The Goldwyn reply was that the small exhibitor constituted the very backbone of the industry and that under a skillfully devised and adjusted price scale the interests of the small exhibitor would be looked after. Goldwyn desires to place its productions within the reach of all. It wants to furnish the little man of today with the kind of film that will draw patrons to his house and make him the big man of tomorrow.

Goldwyn branch managers, at the opening of their offices, were told to pay the closest attention to the small exhibitor, because Goldwyn knew that no large exhibitor could afford to ignore its product. What was a theory has been found also to be quite a fact. The large exhibitors throughout the country not only evidenced interest in Goldwyn Pictures, but quickly signed contracts for them and the smaller exhibitors, seeing that these big new productions were placed within their reach, promptly followed suit.

As evidence of the type of theaters outside of the large cities that desire Goldwyn's quality type of pictures for their patrons the following list of newly signed contracts will be enlightening as indicating the reach of Goldwyn Pictures at their very inception:

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Globe Theater; North Adams. Mass., Empire Theater; Anderson, Ind., Starland; Mt. Sterling, Ky., Tabb Theater; Ann Arbor, Mich., Arcade Theater; Mt. Clemens. Mich., Bijou Theater; Greensburg, Pa., Strand Theater; Everett Wash., Orpheum Theater; Marshfield, Ore., Orpheum Theater; Spartanburg, S. I., Flushing Theater; Redwood City, Cal., Oakland Theater; Modesto, Cal., Star Theater; Fresno, Cal., Kinema Theater.

Censors Applaud Four Goldwyns

Four Goldwyn Pictures productions have been seen and passed with enthusiasm by the National Board of Review—without the elimination of an inch of film, a change in a sub-title or even the hint of a suggestion as to editing or changes. The undisguised approval of the National Board for the Goldwyn Productions has resulted in their making a special report on each of the pictures they have seen—"Polly of the Circus," "Baby Mine," "Sunshine Alley" and "The Eternal Magdalene."

This is the general comment of the Board on Goldwyn's first picture, Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," by Margaret Mayo:

"'Polly of the Circus' is one of the most remarkable productions we have ever seen. It is more than a moving picture—in fact, it is not a moving picture, but life itself transferred to the screen."

And this is what the Board says about Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine," by Margaret Mayo:

"A light domestic comedy delightfully acted in fine tempo. The comedy situations are particularly well adopted to the screen."

Maxine Elliott in "The Eternal Magdalene," by Robert McLaughlin, elicits the following remarkable praise:

"The sympathetic screen version of this touching drama takes hold of one's heart. The evident sincerity of the cast will create an impelling desire in all who see the picture to have with them some part in spreading the gospel of human understanding as opposed to that New England rigidity that made 'The Scarlet Letter' possible. The world as a motion picture audience owes your company a debt of gratitude for the production."

And this unique comment on Mae Marsh in "Sunshine Alley," by Mary Rider shows how charm and refinements motion pictures quickly attract the attention of the better elements of the American public, as typified by their representatives on this examining board:

"A delicately acted play with beautiful Dickenesque setting. The composition of many of the scenes is in the highest degree artistic. The tone of the story is wholesome and fine."

Tom Moore Supports Mae Marsh

Casting Director Adolph Klauber has completed the list of principals for Mae Marsh's new screen vehicle, "The Cinderella Man."

Barring "Margie," which Mae Marsh will play, the most important part in the new Goldwyn film is "Tony." He is so-called "cinderella man," who lives all alone in his garret under the eye of his former butler, until "Margie" slips across the roof one Christmas eve from her own aristocratic house to bring him friendly cheer—and food. For "Tony," Mr. Klauber has selected Tom Moore—he of the brothers Moore, Tom, Owen and Matt.

In George Fawcett, Goldwyn has secured an admirable "Canner." Mr. Fawcett has done a great deal of screen work since first introduced to filmdom, and "fans" are familiar with his colorful and pungent impersonations in "Panthea," "The Crisis," "The Heart of Texas Ryan" and many other photoplays. Mr. Fawcett is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Cost of Serial Making

The cost sheets of "The Lost Express," the Signal-Mutual serial featuring Helen Holmes, under the direction of J. P. McGowan, resembles the itemized expenses of the erection and equipping of a large hotel or Government cantonment. Technical Director Clyde Roe has so far (and the serial is in the seventh episode) requisitioned 400 pounds of wire nails, over 150,000 feet of lumber, nearly a mile of electric lights wiring, furniture for 85 rooms, enough paintings and pictures to equip a good size gallery, all this in addition to four automobiles which have been smashed beyond further use, to say nothing of the rolling stock of the Salt Lake Railroad, which has been sacrificed to make thrills for the big serial.

Shot Ninety Scenes a Day

Work on the seventh episode of "The Lost Express," the Signal-Mutual serial featuring Helen Holmes, is progressing rapidly. Director General J. P. McGowan having shot 180 scenes in two days, which is establishing a record, when the exactness of the work done by the Helen Holmes company is considered.

NEW TRIANGLES

Triangle Holds Up "The Man Hater" and Substitutes "Idolaters" for September 2—September 9 Releases Include Bessie Love

Owing to the fact that the cutting and sub-titling of "The Man Hater," the Saturday Evening Post story starring Winifred Allen, has not yet been finished, that play has been taken off the Triangle schedule for September 2, and "Idolaters," starring Louise Glaum, substituted.

"Idolaters" is the story of a woman who worships the false god of vain success, setting aside all else to satisfy her ambition. The action parallels the lives of two women who are determined to win places for themselves on the stage. One proceeds to four-flush her way, the other to make good by hard work.

This is the production for which Triangle built an elaborate Egyptian setting, representing the apartment of "the peacock woman," played by Miss Glaum, who, as "vanity," wears innumerable gowns of bizarre fashion.

The tale of a ghost that turned human is the theme of "The Haunted House," an Allan Dwan production, featuring Winifred Allen, which will be presented on the program for September 2. The locale is a New England village, where superstition continues to stalk in the minds of the austere residents. Denied the ordinary pleasures of youth, the girl of the story devotes herself to imaginative fancies. Being of a sensitive, spiritual temperament, she believed the spirits of the wood commune with her, as they did with Joan of Arc. The mystery of the haunted house, which holds in awe the superstitious villagers, is not penetrated until one night a young desperado, seeking refuge, dares to invade its premises and finds the ghost to be exceedingly human.

THEATERS BOOK REISSUES

"The Disciple," Announced as First Hart Play, Reissued September 16—Dorothy Dalton in Support of Star

Eighteen leading theaters in the New York territory of the Triangle Distributing Corporation have booked the Hart-Fairbanks re-issues for an entire week's run, commencing with the release of "Double Trouble," the first Fairbanks subject, on September 2, and following up with "The Disciple," a Hart feature, on September 16.

Nine of these theaters are in New York and Brooklyn. They are: Proctor's, 58th street; Harlem Theater, 108th street and Fifth avenue; Proctor's, 125th street; the Eighty-first Street Theater, 81st street and Broadway; Broadway Photoplay Theater, 103rd street and Broadway; Fox's City Theater, 14th street and Irving Place; Halsey Theater, Halsey street and Broadway; Fox's Bedford Theater, Bedford and Bergen street; Fox's Ridgewood Theater, Myrtle and Seneca street.

The other nine houses, considered to be the most representative in their respective communities, are: Keith's Jersey City, Jersey City, N. J.; Fox's Terminal, Park Place, Newark, N. J.; Garden Theater, Elizabeth, N. J.; Proctor's Theater, Plainfield, N. J.; Playhouse, Passaic, N. J.; and Proctor's theaters in Albany, Schenectady, and Troy.

"The Disciple," said to be one of the best Triangle plays in which Hart has appeared, has been selected as the first re-issue. Dorothy Dalton and Thelma Salter appear in the supporting cast. Hart has the role of a "Fighting-Iron Parson."

Elliott J. Clawson is the author of a new five-reel comedy-drama, "The Cricket," now nearing completion at Universal City.

Over there on the left is Bessie Love in Triangle' "Wee Lady Betty," a recent unusual release. Below is the bizarre and beautiful "Idolaters," with Louise Glaum, released September 2.

Peggy O'Neill in Wholesome Film

Peggy O'Neill, well known as the creator of the title role in the big Broadway success, "Peg o' My Heart," has been signed by Wholesome Films Corporation to play the lead in that organization's first feature release, "The Penny Philanthropist."

Peggy O'Neill, who made a great name for herself on the stage in "Peg O' My Heart," and who is now playing in Wholesome's "The Penny Philanthropist," by Clara Laughlin, who is seen at the right with Ralph Morgan and Guy W. McConnell, producing director.

Miss O'Neill will have ample opportunity in this feature to display on the screen all that charm which has made for her success on the speaking stage.

Miss Clara Laughlin, one of America's best known women writers, is author of "The Penny Philanthropist," and Guy W. McConnell is in personal charge of production.

Miss O'Neill will have playing opposite her, Ralph Morgan, a young convert from the speaking stage, whose work in "Turn to the Right" was one of the best dramatic characterizations of the year. The story of "The Penny Philanthropist" is replete with a humanness, virile, and yet gentle, carrying a message of good deeds in a manner compellingly interesting and entirely unique.

"The Penny Philanthropist" will be released in five parts.

C. B. Hoadley has written a very amusing one-reel comedy, entitled "Dodging the Draft," just filmed at Universal City.

October Bluebird's Schedule

Bluebird plays for all of October have been definitely scheduled, and back of that are enough plays completed or under production, to fill the rest of the current year. Mae Murray, who will be directed by Robert Leonard, and Carmel Myers, screen-managed by Harry Solter, are not included in the October arrangement. These two stars will be introduced to the program in the first two weeks of November.

Ella Hall will furnish the Bluebird for the week starting October 1, "The Spotted Lily," being the definite title of a subject that has been previously referred to as "Bitter Sweet."

Franklyn Farnum will make his first appearance as a lone star among Bluebirds October 8, appearing under the direction of Joseph De Grasse, in "The Maverick."

Dorothy Phillips makes her regular monthly appearance October 15, appearing in "Bondage," then taking her place among the rotating stars. Ida May Park, who will direct Miss Phillips' future Bluebirds, created "Bondage," from a story suggested by Edna Kenton, completed and scenarioized by Miss Park. William Stowell, Gretchen Lederer and Gertrude Aster will be featured members of the supporting cast.

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford will be stars in "The Desire of the Moth," October 22, with Monroe Salisbury featured as leading man in the support. This is the first of "Rupert Julian Bluebirds" that will be especially featured among Bluebirds hereafter.

Violet Meresereau is completing at Bluebird's Leonia, N. J., studio John C. Brownell's screen version of Varick Vanardy's novel, "The Girl by the Roadside," as the October 29 release. Theodore Marston is directing the feature with Cecil Owen as leading man.

Auto Racers in Comedy

In the new or number three series of six one-reel Jaxon comedies just announced, the initial release carries about a dozen cut-ins of an honest-to-goodness auto world's championship race. This comedy, dated for September 14, is "Speed Demons." Besides Pokes and Jabs in their burlesque of automobile strenuousness, Barney Oldfield and Ralph De Palma figure as racers in deadly earnest. The automobile color for this film was obtained July 21 at Providence, R. I., when De Palma and Oldfield held their historic meeting before a tremendous crowd.

The first of Kitty Gordon's series of photoplays under her renewed contract with World-Pictures Brady-Made is titled "Her Hour," and work is already well advanced upon it at the Fort Lee studio.

Fox's wonder production of the world-known romance, "Cleopatra," with Theda Bara as the regal vampire of Egypt.

Pomp of Egypt Revivified

On the sands of Oxnard, a seaside city of Southern California, William Fox erected the most marvelous replica of the sphinx and the pyramids that has ever been attempted.

Word that Miss Theda Bara, the William Fox screen artiste, was to make certain scenes on this location for the superpicture, "Cleopatra," had been noised about, and tourists and natives flocked to this out-of-the-way place to witness one of the most gorgeous spectacles ever attempted. As one approached the sands of the desert he saw looming up in the distance, the inscrutable head of the sphinx and the triangular pointed pyramids in the background. One could safely believe that he had made a trip to the Egyptian deserts and was gazing upon the handiwork of the ancient Egyptians.

Long before the arrival of Miss Bara on the scene, an army of men were marshalled together and decked in the multi-colored costumes prevalent in the days of the "Siren of the Nile." More than two thousand men, mounted and unmounted, were scattered over half a mile of desert sands, which were dotted here and there with gaudy colored tents.

In the foreground was the tent of the queen, wonderfully comparisoned and decorated with a body-guard of giant Nubians whose black bodies glistened in the sunshine. War chariots lined the street, while the silver-pointed spears of Cleopatra's picked soldiers threw forth scintillating rays.

To the casual observer all seemed confusion. Hoarse orders were being shouted while squads of soldiers were being drilled as to the proper manual of arms of the day of Cleopatra. Seated on a nervously prancing steed, sat Director J. Gordon Edwards, darting hither and thither issuing instructions, and getting order out of chaos; and all the while upon this scene the face of the sphinx looked on unblinkingly, and gave one the feeling that behind its mask was again the vision of by-gone glories and pageantry.

Everything was in readiness, and when Miss Bara, arrayed in the ancient garb of the great Egyptian Queen, appeared, the word was given for the "take." Her gaudily decked chariot drawn by four black horses, dashed to the front of Cleopatra's tent, and Miss Bara started on her journey to meet Caesar. At a given signal, the thousands of soldiers lined the tented street, and with spears waving and vociferous shouting, Miss Bara, drawn by four horses, dashed through the sands towards the sphinx and the pyramids. At another given signal, the tents were folded as if by magic, and her bodyguard of horsemen and foot soldiers fell in line and followed their queen until the entire body disappeared over the sandhills.

Anita King, Horkheimer-Mutual

Anita King, for a long time known as "the Paramount girl," is now with the Balboa company at Long Beach, California, working in a Horkheimer-Mutual western picture to be called "The Girl Angle."

The Cub Comedy featuring George Ovey has just completed the filming of "Officer Jerry."

SHORT SUBJECTS POPULAR

Vice-President of Peter Pan Film Corporation Thinks Great Future Awaits Good One-Reel Pictures

R. M. Vandivert, vice-president and general manager of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, has recently returned from an extensive trip covering all the distribution centers of the United States. The purpose of this journey was to establish the exact status of the short subject upon the present day program. Mr. Vandivert has made a keen analytical study of the market conditions, and has submitted in his report to H. C. Allen, president of the organization, that there is a brilliant future in store for the short subject throughout the country, and that practically in every important distribution center exchange men are receiving numerous calls from their exhibitors for pictures of this type. In speaking of his trip, Mr. Vandivert said in part:

"I attribute this popularity of the short subject to the fact that the public is growing tired of the big feature plays, and is looking toward a lighter diet. There is too much attempt nowadays to educate the long-suffering public, and too little attention paid to their entertainment. They do not come to the theater to be instructed, but to be amused, and it is the new short subject which is doing just this and nothing more. That is the real reason for the rapid growth of their popularity.

"As regards our future plans, we have decided to launch into the short subject on a very elaborate scale. The first step toward this end was the moving of the studio from Chicago to New York, in order that we might secure closer co-operation between the production and the sales business. This arrangement will undoubtedly be a great benefit to us, as it will centralize all the work, and we can keep in close touch with all sides of the business.

"We have contracted for the services of one of the most virile and capable men in the novelty field, Mr. C. P. Jaeger, who is our director-in-chief. He is already widely known through his excellent work in connection with our Motoy comedies.

"We have given very considerable thought to the type and character of short subjects that we could add to our program of Motoy comedies in order to make the Peter Pan short features the leading factor in the independent field. To this end we have selected the Black Magic comedies, which are a series of novelties in which everything is black and white, the actors either in white against a black background, or in black against white. Nothing of the kind has been attempted before, and the pictures are finding an excellent reception.

"The Miroar comedies, the Shadographs, and the 'Honeymooners' are our other releases, the last being a series of foreign pictures which Mr. and Mrs. Richard Schayer are taking on their wedding trip around the world.

"Our sales plan is already complete. Commencing September 15, the Motoy comedies and the Black Magic will be released as a single reel, alternating each week with Shadographs and Miroar comedies as a single reel. In addition to this, the 'Honeymooners' will be released in a 1,000-foot reel each week, thus enabling us to give the exchanges a weekly output of 2,000 feet of high-class, novelty pictures.

"The quality and reliability which has characterized our pictures in the past will be maintained, and under this new arrangement our service to the exchanges will be vastly improved, for the centralization of the work cannot but be a material aid in this respect."

Larger Quarters for Art Dramas

Southwestern Art Dramas, Inc., distributors of the Art Dramas program throughout the state of Texas and the southwestern territory, has taken larger and more convenient quarters at Dallas, Texas.

The company was forced to do this in order to keep up with the constantly increasing business, which has expanded at a surprisingly rapid rate under the capable management of F. M. Sanford, president and manager, and L. C. McHenry, vice-president and assistant manager. These men are veterans in the business of film distribution, and by strict application of their policy of fair play, cordial treatment and sound business principles have commanded the respect and gained the business of exhibitors throughout the territory.

"Artists to the Film Industry"

MOTOGRAPHY has received some samples of remarkable work in film titles and slides made by Hoover, Hobson and Breuer, "artists to the film industry," 253 West Forty-second street, New York. The work is unusually fine and high class from the standpoint of art and design. The firm has a corps of artists who devote all their time and talent to film work of various kinds.

Mary MacLaren and her sister, Catherine, are taking active interest in Red Cross work in Los Angeles. Dressed as Red Cross nurses the star and her sister have been instrumental in amassing a large sum for the organization.

A bit of fun during the filming of Artcraft's "Barbary Sheep," featuring the capable stage star, Elsie Ferguson, who is seen driving the "car-horse," a little Arabian boy hired for the pose by Studio Manager Lowe. Director Maurice Tourneur is holding the "whip."

Charlie Chaplin in his newest tragedy, "The Adventurer."

No Date for Chaplin Release

The date of the release of "The Adventurer," Mutual-Chaplin Special No. 12, has not yet been set and will not be decided upon until the film reaches the executive offices of the Mutual Film Corporation from Los Angeles and is viewed by President John R. Freuler personally.

REBUILD BURNED STUDIO

Jaxon Film Corporation's Progress Unchecked by Destructive Fire at Providence, R. I.—New Studio Already Under Way

By a fire that started from undetermined causes at 3 a. m. on August 23, the extensive plant of the Jaxon Film Corporation at Providence, R. I., was seriously damaged. By 2 p. m., Frank A. Tichenor, president of the company, had arrived on the scene from the New York office, and at 3 p. m. work was resumed at making pictures. On the second day following, Saturday, President Tichenor had ground broken for rebuilding.

The fire destroyed the main studio building at the plant but left the laboratory unscathed. The company is enabled to make shift to go along with its regular work from having an outdoor studio and a small indoor studio left. The work of making Sparkle comedies and Jaxon comedies for release through General Film Company will therefore not be interrupted. A serial which the company is producing will not be delayed much. However, considerable film which is being handled on government contract was destroyed in the building which was burned, entailing a setback which will be costly. Arrangements have already been made to replace this film.

The new building which President Tichenor so promptly started is to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. The company has also a studio at Jacksonville, which can be used if necessary.

The discovery of the fire was made by the night watchman at the end of making a round, and it was at the second station of twenty he had visited. Defective insultaion of electric wiring is supposed to have caused the fire, but this has not been established.

Pictures at National Theater

The National Sylvan Theater, nature's beautiful amphitheater at the base of the Washington monument, has been utilized for the first time in its history, for the presentation of motion pictures.

Permission to use this natural theater has heretofore been repeatedly refused for pictures but government consent was obtained for the holding there of a monster patriotic rally, under the auspices of the Bureau of Commercial Economics of the Department of Public Instruction, with a special band concert by the United States Soldiers' Home Band and the first public presentation of the new multiple-reel photoplay, "The Man Without A Country," made by Thanhouser and offered by Jewell Productions for a nation-wide patriotic campaign and aimed particularly at the army draft shirker.

"The Man Without A Country" was written by Edward Everett Hale in the summer of 1863, designed in the words of the author as "a contribution, however humble, toward the formation of a just and true national sentiment of love to the nation."

In 1898 when the United States went to war with Spain, the publishers of The Outlook reprinted it, in their wish that the nation should not shrink from the duties of a nation.

The picture will be shown throughout the country as a warning to slackers.

Powerful Russian Play

"Rasputin, the Black Monk," is the title of a newly completed World-Picture Brady-Made about to be published on the World program. This photoplay has been in preparation for several months under the direction of Arthur Ashley, with a most unusual assemblage of star players including Montagu Love, June Elvidge, Arthur Ashley, Henry Hull, Julia Dean, Irving Cummings and Hubert Wilke.

In "Rasputin" the unbelievable career of the self-appointed monk who so influenced the Czar that for years he practically swayed the destinies of the Russian people is followed from its peasant beginning to its tragic end.

Against a grim background of intrigue, debauchery and wanton disregard of human rights is drawn a story of love, devotion, self sacrifice and heroism of a very striking quality which finds its happy ending in the crash of revolution and the beneficence of national liberty.

"Rasputin, the Black Monk," is described as an exceptionally "big" picture in theme and production. Several immense scenes have been built outside the studio from photographs brought to America by returning representatives of World-Pictures Brady-Made who had been in Petrograd for a long time prior to the culmination of the movement for freedom. In addition to the star cast large numbers of "extras," horses, etc., are employed in the several imposing spectacular episodes.

Nance O'Neil in Brenon Play

Nance O'Neil, the noted actress who is seen as the Czarina in Herbert Brenon's "The Fall of the Romanoffs," has been a star almost ever since her first appearance, and has toured the country with great success for many years. At the present time she is playing one of the leading roles in "The Wanderer," a play which opened at the Manhattan last season and in which Miss O'Neil's acting created a sensation.

NEW FAIRBANKS PICTURE

"The Man From Painted Post" First Aircraft Release in October—Star in New York for New Production

Douglas Fairbanks' latest play, which has been in the course of production during the past month in Wyoming, is now completed.

Replete with the swift action and thrills of a story dealing with the cattle rustling days of the west, together with the most beautiful scenic displays of Wyoming, the latest Fairbanks-Aircraft picture discloses the popular exponent of the smile in a role said to be quite different from any of his previous screen efforts. In addition to being a typical Fairbanks vehicle of the rapid-fire variety this story allows Douglas a great opportunity of proving his dramatic ability. Various scenes of tense interest afford the popular star a chance to display his versatility as an actor. In contrast to these situations are many humorous bits showing the experiences of Douglas as a supposed "tenderfoot" among the cowboys.

The photoplay is based on Jackson Gregory's recent magazine story, "Silver Slippers." Staged at the Riverside Ranch, near Laramie, Wyoming, where 160,000 acres of land and 30,000 head of cattle were placed at the disposal of the players, this film presents the actual "color" of the story. This is the first time a picture has ever been produced in this territory, which for scenic beauty depicting the real west, is unexcelled. Supporting Douglas in the most important parts are such well-known artists as Eileen Percy, Frank Campeau, Rhea Haines and William Lowery. In a series of scenes displaying the thrills of bronco-busting, roping steers and other western accomplishments are the champions of the recent Rodeo held at Cheyenne, Wyoming, presenting the world's greatest experts.

Work for Better Films

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures is formulating plans for a series of round-table conferences in co-operation with the Scudder School of New York. The purpose of the conferences will be to secure for the members of the National Board a clearer comprehension of the point of view of the makers of motion pictures.

Some of the leading directors are expected to address the conferences and it is hoped that a more complete understanding of their work by the National Board will result. Such conferences will also furnish an opportunity to demonstrate to the directors what, in the minds of the National Board, a "better film" consists of or does not consist of, as the case may be. It is hoped that the producing directors will come to see that the "better films" movement is not a movement for educational pictures but on the contrary one looking to the production of the highest types of film entertainments.

"Too Much Women," is the title of a new Nestor two-reel comedy in which Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have the leading parts.

"Les Miserables" September 9

Prints of Pathe's new edition in eight reels of Victor Hugo's immortal classic, "Les Miserables" have been sent to all the company's exchanges and it announced that the picture will be released as a special feature on September 9.

S. Barrett McCormick of the Circle Theater, Indianapolis, and the Sievers interests of St. Louis are among the important exhibitors who have booked "Les Miserables" in its new form.

The engagement of "Les Miserables" at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, was extended to three weeks and drew big crowds.

This little Australian star with the sparkling eyes, gleaming teeth and rippling laugh is to be Bill Hart's ornamental opposite. Her name is Sylvia Bremer and the story here tells you all you ought to know about her.

Leading Lady for Hart

As William S. Hart's leading lady in his initial Artcraft picture, "The Narrow Trail," Thomas Ince has selected Sylvia Bremer, the popular Australian actress. Miss Bremer has won fame, not only on the stage of her native country, but in a series of plays that enjoyed long periods of financial and artistic success in America.

Her mother sought to subdue Miss Bremer's enthusiasm for the stage by sending her to a settlement called Baggadilla, 700 miles from her home in Sydney, where she could play with baby kangaroos to her heart's content, but where she was forbidden everything flavoring of the stage for its environment. She ran away and later played leading roles in such well-known American successes as "Bought and Paid For," "The Argyle Case," "Under Fire," "Under Cover" and "Ready Money." She came to America with this quintette of successes to her credit, her scrap book of press notices overflowing, and a determination to prove her worth to American managers and audiences. William A. Brady gave her the opportunity she wanted, and a season with Grace George in "Major Barbara" followed.

The pictures that were sent from America to her native Australia had always possessed a fascination for the young actress, and it was only natural that she should seek a chance to appear before the camera. Thomas H. Ince, noting the excellence of her work with Grace George, sent her West to appear in support of Charles Ray in "The Pinch Hitter."

Breaks Theater Records

Mary Miles Minter in "The Gentle Intruder," Mutual-American production, broke all records of the Strand Theater at Buffalo on August 11, according to Manager William A. Dillon.

VITAGRAPHERS FOR OCTOBER

Albert E. Smith Announces Pictures Completed and Prints Shipped for October Outlay—Galaxy of Stars in Pending Releases

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, announces that the October list of Blue Ribbon features will be as follows: October 1, "Princess of Park Row"; October 8, "The Love Doctor"; October 15, "Dead-Shot Baker"; October 22, "The Bottom of the Well"; October 29, "The Flaming Omen."

According to Mr. Smith's announcement, these pictures have all been completed and prints are now being shipped to the branches of the Vitagraph distributing organization.

Mildred Manning, who recently scored so strongly in the part of Mary in "Mary Jane's Pa," with Marc MacDermott and Eulalie Jensen, is the heroine of "Princess of Park Row." The story is described as a melodrama with appeal. Wallace MacDonald, who has been seen with Miss Manning in O. Henry pictures, is featured with her in this feature.

Earle Williams is the star of "The Love Doctor," which is described as a "different" story. It shows more of the Vitagraph stars than have been brought together in any one picture in several years. In addition to Mr. Williams there are in the cast Evart Overton, Corinne Griffith, Patsy DeForrest, Adele De Garde and Webster Campbell.

"Dead-Shot Baker," the Vitagraph president's announcement reads, is the first of several features to be made from the "Wolfville" tales of the late Alfred Henry Lewis. It is a combination of several of these stories of the "bad" West and presents William Duncan in the title role. Miss Carol Holloway, who did the big Vitagraph serial, "The Fighting Trail," is his leading woman.

Evart Overton heads an all-star cast in "The Bottom of the Well," the fourth Vitagraph for October. This story will introduce, in its early stages, Vitagraph's famous boy, little Bobby Connelly, and Aida Horton, the three-year-old leading lady, who is appearing with him in the Bobby Connelly series. There also will be in the picture Alice Rodier, erstwhile Washington Square player, Agnes Eyre, Adele De Garde, Ned Finley, Herbert Prior and Bigelow Cooper.

"The Flaming Omen" will present Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman, who formerly was Alfred Vosburgh. Mr. Vosburgh changed his name recently at the suggestion of President Smith, because, while he is a Scot, he felt that the name had too much of Teutonic rumble. "The Flaming Omen" is an unusual story with mysterious and little known Peru as its locale. Mr. Smith declares that for a five-reel picture it is one of the most costly Vitagraph ever has produced, owing to the fact that the providing of props and settings a la Peru entailed an extraordinary expense.

Delays Stage Work for Screen

An agreement has been reached between Metro Pictures Corporation and the Oliver Morosco forces whereby Emily Stevens, the celebrated star of both screen and stage, will postpone her annual New York engagement and tour of the country in a stage production, until early in 1918, for the purpose of continuing in Super-Feature pictures for Metro.

"From Front to Back"

Mary Pickford to Referee Match

Mary Pickford, the popular Artcraft star, has played many roles in her eventful young life, but at the Mason Opera House, Los Angeles, at the benefit given for the French Emergency Hospital fund, she will be seen in something absolutely different—namely, that of a prize fight referee.

Miss Pickford has offered to referee the terrific fistic encounter which is to be conducted by Charlie Chaplin and Eric Campbell, his "heavy."

Ovey in "One Wingers"

The fact that George Ovey, known the world over as Jerry in Mutual comedies, broke his arm in the production of "Beach Nuts," did not stop work at the Cub studios where his plays are made. Ovey rose to the occasion and ordered a picture featuring the broken arm and started to work with his arm in a sling. The fracture was the result of a fall during a "stunt." He was able to finish the few remaining scenes of the picture in production, took a day's rest and started on the "one arm" picture.

The crippled condition of the star may necessitate the suspension of boisterous comedies for a few weeks, but Jerry will remain on the screen.

The next Ethel Clayton play for World-Pictures Brady-Made is "The Woman Beneath," in which a New York society girl marries a rich westerner for his money and does not think she cares for him until he apparently "goes broke." Then she pitches in to help him, although he has been fooling all the time about that financial disaster, and shows him that under the society bud exterior she is pure gold.

A glimpse into the unique and entertaining Motoy comedy, "In Japland," which is one of the quaint and interesting productions in which the performers are active dolls.

Adds 100% to Motography

July 31, 1917.

Motography, Chicago:

I think the "What the Picture Did for Me" section adds a hundred per cent to the value of Motography.

Such things help to dig the motion picture industry out of the "dark ages" of filmdom.

It is much more pleasant to learn of the merit of a picture through the expressed opinions of exhibitors than it is to learn of it through the mutterings and curses of an audience.

Enclosed are some of my criticisms which I hope will help some as much as theirs help me.—
Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

CONTRAST IN SPY METHOD

Fox Production Featuring Dustin Farnum in "The Spy" Reveals Growth of That Institution Since Revolutionary Days

The present agitation against the foreign agents at work within the United States, whose plots are revealed in William Fox's graphic expose, "The Spy," calls to mind early American spy conditions different from those shown in the special film production.

During the Revolutionary War, General Washington arranged a system of espionage which extended for miles within the British lines. The martyr, Nathan Hale, was one of the foremost of the men engaged in this way for the American forces.

Another was Major Tallmadge, through whom all information was transmitted from the spies in Washington. At first this news was written in sympathetic ink, then a new invention, and imported by General Lafayette. This fluid disclosed its message only when the paper on which it was written had been dipped into another chemical.

Washington feared that the British might be in possession of the same kind of ink. He therefore wrote to Tallmadge that the spies "should avoid making use of the stain (ink) upon a blank sheet of paper which is the usual way of its coming to me. This circumstance alone is sufficient to excite suspicion.

"A much better way is to write a letter in the Tory style," Washington continued, "with some mixture of family matters, and between the lines in the remaining part of the sheet communicate with the stain the intended intelligence.

"Such a letter would pass through the hands of the enemy unsuspected, and even if the agent should be unfaithful or negligent, no discovery would be made to his prejudice, as these people are not to know what is concealed written in the letter and the intelligent part of it would be an evidence in his favor."

Another invaluable spy of Revolutionary days was James Rivington, editor and printer of "The New York Gazette," a paper which seemed to side completely with the Tories. But while he outwardly supported them, he was conveying to Washington secret information of prime importance.

During the Mexican War, Congress made provision for an annual appropriation of $50,000 for the "hire of interpreters, guides and spies for the army." This appropriation has been made consistently since that date.

Brenon Feature Ready September 6

Herbert Brenon took the last scene of his forthcoming production of the events which led up to and immediately preceded the Russian revolution, and which he has entitled "The Fall of the Romanoffs," at his studio on Hudson Heights last Wednesday.

And although it was finished but three days ago the assembling and cutting and titling has so far progressed that the picture will be completed in its entirety by September 6, when the private showing at the Ritz Carlton will be held.

Mr. Brenon is not a believer in leaving things to the last minute and so for a month or more the cutting and assembling has quitely been going on, and for the past week he has held long sessions each evening engrossed in the work of making titles.

Laemmle Returns from Vacation

Carl Laemmle, Universal's president, has returned to New York from the environs of the White Mountains. Mr. Laemmle will depart soon for a long stay in Universal City, where he will start rolling the ball of Universal's fall and winter program.

A historical moment—Kerensky addressing the Duma after the Russian revolution, in Brenon's "The Fall of the Romanoffs," and another unusual scene from that play.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

Photo Profits to Red Cross

NOW comes another evidence that the picture industry is giving real and generous aid to the country in every phase of the business of war.

Two weeks ago MOTOGRAPHY printed the news of the creation of a film novelty by Photoplay Magazine to be in the form of single reelers containing just such interesting subject-matter as is printed each month in the magazine itself. These films will be issued for state rights marketing and will consist of twelve reels, one released each month, under the general title of "Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement."

All the profits from these films will be turned over to the American Red Cross.

James R. Quirk, general manager of the Photoplay Publishing Company, has made the following statement regarding this laudable action:

In these strenuous times, when the whole civilized world is struggling in defense of humanity, when every man, woman and child is being called upon to aid the cause in which we have taken up arms, I feel that the least Photoplay Magazine can do is to contribute its bit toward alleviating the suffering of those who are stricken. The idea of making and distributing motion pictures of the stars as they are—unique and unusual views of the players "off the screen"—under the title, "Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement," was not conceived with a thought of profit. We aimed solely to increase and augment our service to the picture fans of the country—to give them, in motion pictures, glimpses of the things they have read about the players doing, in the pages of Photoplay Magazine.

I want to thank the manufacturers who have co-operated to make this idea a success. I am sure every one of them will be with us strong on this idea of increasing the public interest in the stars, and at the same time helping the most worthy cause in the world.

I am more than glad to assure every buyer of territorial rights on "Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement," that his money will not only secure for him what I sincerely believe to be the greatest box office attraction ever offered him, but also will enable him to participate pro rata on what I hope may be a generous donation for the relief of the sufferers of all nations.

Ogden Awards Franchises

The Ogden Pictures Corporation committed itself for the next twelve months to the policy of disposing of the Lillian Walker attractions, to be made eight in number, upon the state rights basis. To the state right buyers of the first release, "The Lust of the Ages," the Ogden Pictures Corporation is awarding the exclusive right to the remaining seven productions. "The purpose of this," said Lester Park, general manager of the company, "is to concentrate, as much as possible, the exploitation of Lillian Walker and not to divide our productions among several exchanges in the same territory.

"Consistent with this idea, we are co-operating with the state right purchasers of the Lillian Walker series to the extent of advertising to the exhibitors in their own territory and the issuing of advertising matter in connection with Miss Walker herself, as, for instance, there is being mailed by this company to photoplay fans, whose names are forwarded us by exhibitors, a cabinet photograph of Miss Walker. The initial order for these photographs has been for 2,500,000. In addition to this, we intend forwarding to every picture theater in the United States with a seating capacity of 1,000 or over, an oil painting of Miss Walker, 40x60.

"Miss Walker's second production is an adaptation of a popular novel, written by a man who is reputed to be the second most popular author in the United States. We have already purchased, nowever, the rights to the next seven plays, all of them adaptations of popular novels."

Discontinues Art Dramas

The Standard Film Corporation, R. C. Cropper, president, which has been distributing Art Dramas throughout the middle west, has discontinued the purchase of these features.

The reason given for this radical move on the part of the Standard is that during the past few months the Standard has come to realize the crying need for the open booking plan. Thousands of letters have been received by the Standard from exhibitors who are opposed to the contract system of booking and it was in response to these urgent letters and comments that the Standard took steps to encourage the Art Dramas producers to allow the distributing of the Art Dramas productions on the open market plan.

To date the Standard has purchased and is distributing twenty-five Art Dramas productions, including "The Rainbow" and "The Peddler," and it is understood that these subjects will from now on be sold on the open market plan. The Standard has in preparation a book which will list these subjects and carry full details as to their box office value, as proven by statistics compiled from results obtained with them by the exhibitors who have used them. This book will shortly be in the hands of the exhibitors of the Middle West who will be glad of the chance to book these Art Dramas, the Standard believes, according to their own judgment.

The future policy of the Standard has not been definitely announced, but it is believed that the opinion of the Standard's executives is that the exhibitors are very much interested in the really big State Rights features.

The Standard Film Corporation is one of the largest independent film exchange systems in the country and has offices at Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Omaha and Kansas City. R. C. Cropper, president, is a widely known film man, and the salesmanager, Phil L. Ryan, has come to the front with many original ideas on film distribution.

Sold for Eleven States

J. L. Adams, acting for the Deseret Film Corp., of Salt Lake City, Utah, and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation have signed contracts whereby "The Deemster" becomes the property of the Deseret Film Corporation in the eleven western states—including Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California, Arizona and Nevada.

This leaves only one group of states on "The Deemster" available. It has not been decided what policy will be pursued by the Arrow offices for the immediate future as nothing has been produced or obtained to follow the Hall Caine feature.

"The Deseret Film Co., it should be remarked in passing, is comparatively new in the field of distribution, but with the one feature, "The Eyes of the World," which it has handled it has achieved remarkable success, taking a gross of over $140,000 out of seven of the eleven western states.

John W. Noble Presents!

The usual interest awakened by the announcement that a well known director has decided to produce special pictures under his own management so that he can put his best effort into his work and not be limited as to time or money, has focused the attention of the profession upon John W. Noble, whose new state rights production, "Shame," has recently been completed.

That all successful picture directors are widely read and of exceptional mentality is proved by the exacting nature of their work and the constant demands made upon their ingenuity and resourcefulness. John W. Noble's mentality is truly remarkable. Equipped with a splendid education and combining, in a strange manner, a studious disposition and a strong love of outdoor activity and exciting adventure, he has continued to burn the student's midnight oil.

Having in mind the long list of notable John W. Noble productions, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in "Romeo and Juliet," "The Wall Between," "Man and His Soul" and "The Bridge," prominent in the foreground, it is only natural that the art should hail with delight the advent of this strenuous young genius as a producer under his own management, and show a live interest in his work.

Sixty-two Per Cent of World Sold

Although the Ogden Pictures Corporation's initial release, "The Lust of the Ages," in which Lillian Walker is starred, has been exploited, or offered for sale, through advertising in the trade journals for but three weeks and although but two weeks have elapsed since the trade showing of that production, sixty-two per cent of the entire world has been sold on this as well as the succeeding seven Lillian Walker super-attractions.

When a statement was requested at the offices of the Ogden Pictures Corporation of the territory sold, Jesse J. Goldburg, exploitation and producing manager, stated: "We do not intend either advertising or giving publicity to the individual territory sold, until the entire world has been disposed of; then we shall pound away through the medium of every worthy trade journal to the end that the exhibitors may know with whom to deal. In any event, although sixty-two per cent of the world has been sold, our contracts provide the release by the exchange cannot take place before September 25."

Goldwyn Exploiting Author's Name

The Goldwyn Corporation, which will distribute "The Auction Block," and all future productions made from the novels of Rex Beach, is directing the attention of exhibitors to the box office value of Rex Beach's name and the tremendous potential drawing power of a succession of film stories from his pen.

Years ago, when two-reel motion pictures were an experiment and five and seven reel features were unheard of, the head of the most successful producing firm of the day approached Rex Beach with a proposition to put several of his big novels into two-reel pictures but he shook his head.

As a consequence of his foresight, Mr. Beach now holds the sole rights to all of the stories he has written and will continue to reserve them in future. Thus Goldwyn is enabled to offer exhibitors a series of picture stories of cumulative excellence. Rex Beach's widely read novels of American life are probably more generally popular than the writings of any other contemporary author. This, it is scarcely necessary to say, can have but one effect on the drawing power of the film productions.

Mr. Beach's novels lend themselves remarkably to transmutation to film. They do not, as is the case with so many stories based largely on dialogue and situation, lose their action value in photography. The problem in Rex Beach productions is to compress the plethora of action into the limits of a seven-reel picture, not to pad out.

"One Hour" in September

A six part feature which has been eagerly sought by big distributors, and regarded as one of the fall plums in the picture line, has fallen into the control of M. H. Hoffman, Inc. Just before he left Chicago, M. H. Hoffman purchased from Harry Rapf the entire American rights to "One Hour."

This is the picture about which so much has been said by those privileged to view it privately. It is a sequel to "Three Weeks," and experts say that it is one of the best conceived and perfectly executed features of its kind which the public has seen.

"One Hour" is a love romance so distinctly out of the ordinary as to justify being placed in a class by itself. Some persons will be inclined to term it "sensation," for the reason that the events crowded into a single hour in the lives of the hero and heroine of the story are unique and extraordinary.

Mr. Hoffman has decided to distribute it late in September rather than to hold it until mid-October, as was originally planned.

"Foursquares" Going

Every Hoffman-Foursquare Exchange reports strong bookings for the week ending September 1. Division Manager Jerome Abrams, in charge of Pennsylvania, the Virginias, Maryland, District of Columbia and Delaware, reports every available print "working." "The Bar Sinister," "The Sin Woman," "Her Fighting Chance" and "Whither Thou Goest" have been going strong, says Mr. Abrams.

George W. Weeks, division manager of the territory comprising Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, is finding a large demand for Hoffman-Four-Square pictures. So is Sidney J. Baker, in charge of the Middle Western territory, which has its headquarters in St. Louis, 301 Empress Theater building; and Leo Dennison, 217 Erie building, Cleveland; and H. W. Smith, whose Cincinnati offices are located in the Strand Theater building.

Hy Gainsborg, manager of the New York Foursquare Exchange at 729 Seventh avenue, reports orders increasing in volume for the whole of New York State.

Milton H. Fahrney, creator and producer of Cub Comedies, featuring George Ovey, has completed "Jerry's Whirlwind Finish."

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Loew Buys Fine Cleveland House

MARCUS LOEW has just concluded negotiations whereby he will control the majority stock of the Stillman Theater, Cleveland's newest and most pretentious motion picture house. Mr. Loew has also bought the Valentine Theater in Toledo. Just what he expects to do with the Stillman has not been announced as yet.

Inasmuch as he is trying to get control of eight more houses in Ohio, it is generally supposed that he is to extend his vaudeville circuit, and will include the Stillman in his vaudeville chain. This will necessitate a change of policy for the Miles, the present home of Loew vaudeville in Cleveland. Loew's association with the owners of Paramount and Artcraft pictures is a good foundation to the story that the Stillman will be the local outlet for Paramount pictures. E. Mandelbaum, who built the Stillman and has managed it since its opening last fall, will retain his interest in the theater.

Odd Theaters in Odd Places

BY WILLIAM NOBLE.

If you heard, on unquestionable authority, that the houses of parliament were to be opened for two weeks at night as a public picture house, and that Mr. Asquith had become such a keen picture goer that a special seat was to be reserved for him at each performance, you would be rather startled, wouldn't you?

Yet in Moravia, the capital of the negro republic of Liberia, the solitary picture show of the town, and, indeed, of the country, is none other than the Liberian House of Representatives. The pictures are shown on two evenings of each week, and they are visited invariably by the dusky president, whose presidential chair is set aside for him as a free seat.

The picture craze has reached the Arctic regions, for at Haparanza, a little township in the extreme north of Sweden, and just on the Arctic Circle, there is a handsome little film theater patronized by Laplanders. It is frequently snowed up and unable to open for weeks at a time.

The South Sea Islands, another inaccessible part of the Globe, have likewise succumbed to the lure of the films. In the island of Tahiti here are no less than three shows and business is brisk. The South Sea Islander will sell his shirt, or, if he does not possess such a luxury, his girdle, for the price of a ticket for the pictures.

One of the queerest places in which a show has taken place is in the middle of the Arabian Desert. It was given three years ago by a party of European film agents, who were accompanying an Arab caravan from Smyrna across Asia Minor. A screen was rigged up from bed sheets and an acetylene lamp pressed into service for the lantern. The orchestra consisted of Arabs, and their instruments were tom-toms and camel bells. An hour's show was given, and the spectators, composed of some hundreds of Arabs attached to the caravan, grouped themselves on the desert sand, with the sky for their roof.

But possibly the most out-of-the-way picturedome in existence is the one discovered by Cherry Kearten, the well-known African traveler, in Uganda. It belongs to the Kabaka, or ruling chief, a nice, cultured youth, educated under an English tutor. He possessed both his own moving picture camera and his own private theater, and Mr. Kearten developed several films for him. And in the little picture theater, situated thousands of miles from civilization, the white men saw screened, to their amazement, films of English, French and American life, which the Kabaka has purchased during his foreign travels.

A 1,600 Seater in Chicago

Ascher's Metropolitan Theater is one of the finest in Chicago. It is the thirteenth link in the chain of fashionable photoplay theaters now being operated under the Ascher system.

This beautiful theater is located in the heart of the exclusive residence section of the South Side of Chicago, Grand boulevard and Forty-seventh street, and is the conception of the master architect, Henry L. Newhouse, under whose personal supervision it was built.

With the beautiful arrangement of the interior, the perfect acoustics, and the visual advantages of the large auditorium, it may well be said that the Metropolitan is the "last word" in picture house design.

On entering the theater, one is impressed by the beauty of the lobby. The entire color scheme is done in blue and gold. Italian Verdi marble finishes off the walls, while the floor is covered with black and white mosaic. A most impressive spectacle in the view of the lobby is seen in the huge dome that adorns the ceiling.

On entering the auditorium, one is amazed by the vastness of the general scheme, and when you realize that there are sixteen hundred seats on the one floor, there is little wonder that the sigh is so impressive. Unlike any previous attempt at lighting arrangement, one sees the large dome in the center of the auditorium, and as the lights come into view with its array of colors blending into rays of softness and beauty, a most amazing spectacle is presented. No other theater in the world can compare to the Metropolitan in point of decoration.

The building is so ventilated that the air is introduced and exhausted from the side walls, which eliminates the possibility of draft and dust caused by the action of the air.

Twenty exits have been built in the large auditorium, to insure safety.

Silk Stocking House in Northwest

One of the finest theaters in the northwest is the Dale of St. Paul. It is located in the silk stocking section of the best residence portion of the city. "I have had more millionaires in my house at one time than some people have seen in a year," said Manager J. B. Raisman to Motography a short time ago. "It was the Billie Burke serial that brought a good many elite patrons out."

COST $22,000

The Dale Theater cost about $22,000 to build. Its commodious auditorium includes a balcony and the entire house, including the eight boxes, seats 700 people. The admission price is ten cents for both children and adults. Fifteen cents is the price for the seats in the boxes. There are no five-cent seats. The theater was built and is owned by the Hill Amusement Company of St. Paul, a firm composed of I. B. and S. Raisman.

Manager Raisman opened the theater in May, 1914, with a children's matinee, the first special kiddies' show ever run in St. Paul. The support of the civic charity societies and the newspapers made these children's matinees a very decided success. A number of other exhibitors in the territory followed the lead of Mr. Raisman in presenting performances particularly for youngsters.

ELITE PATRONAGE

The Dale Theater relies entirely upon the elite patronage for its business. Metro, Paramount, Triangle and features from other leading companies are run. One evening a few weeks ago there were sixty automobiles run up in front of the house. The feature that night was Paramount's "The Gentleman from Indiana." At the leading legitimate house the same night there were not more than one hundred cars, in spite of the fact that the attraction was Julian Eltinge in "Cousin Lucy."

The music at the Dale is furnished by a five thousand dollar photoplayer, under the hands of H. L. Danz, one of the most talented musicians of the northwest.

INTERESTING CONSTRUCTION OF HOUSE

The construction of the Dale is interesting. It is built of brick and fire tile. The lobby has a tile flooring with marble wainscoting. Great care is used in the advertising matter displayed in the lobby of the house. Only two or three feature pictures are used and these are not put up unless high class in appearance. Manager Raisman has installed seven frames for still pictures—one frame for the stills of the shows for each day of the week. The decorative scheme of the house is old ivory and just a delicate touch of gold. The entire scheme is simple and there is not a bit of the over-decoration which mars the appearance of so many houses. The chairs of the auditorium are deeply upholstered and the stage is equipped with a panoramic garden set including a drop with a pergola effect. Excellent ventilation for the house is assured by the four pullman ventilators in the ceiling and an extra large exhaust fan.

RUNS WEEKLY "SCHOOL NIGHT"

"The success of a house and the satisfaction one gets from running a theater depends upon the service the house renders to its patrons," says Manager Reisman. "By service I mean the pictures themselves, the projection, and the courtesy of the manner with which patrons are treated. Of course it goes without saying we leave nothing undone which we think will please the people who come into the house.

"Every Friday night we have a 'School Night.' There are eight schools, including the high school and some private schools within a very short distance of my house. We have encouraged the students to come on Friday nights. We run on those evenings features we think will appeal strongest to the young people. Once in a while the high school boys get boisterous, but in general we have very little trouble. I put one young fellow out of the house a short time ago for creating a disturbance and told him that he could not enter again until he had apologized both to me and to the people he had disturbed. The boy soon came back and made his apologies manfully. I take pleasure in running my house, keeping it up to a high standard in harmony in every respect of the high class of people who are my patrons."

New Cleveland House

The Gaiety Theater, East Ninth street, near Superior avenue, is the first of a series of new picture houses to open in Cleveland for the new fall season.

While the exact date of the new opening is not known it is now in full swing. The opening performance was a real melodrama of the old fashioned type, called, "The Girl Who Doesn't Know." Nothing has been said definitely, but it is thought generally that the policy of the new Gaiety will be to specialize in melodrama of the "Jack Dalton, how dare you" type, that has been a popular form of entertainment from time immemorial.

Max Lefkobitz is the manager of the new house.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

A MOVEMENT is growing among screen stars to eliminate personal appearances in theaters. They feel that while it may, in certain cases, add to their popularity and swell the attendance of theaters on the nights on which they appear, that on the whole it detracts from the glamour and mystery that motion pictures must have, and because of that is not good publicity.

Professor Nicolai Borodin of the Russian mission, now in this country, has written a letter to Samuel Rothapfel, director of the Rialto Theater, New York, expressing his thanks that the relief fund for Russian wounded and prisoners of war is to be swelled by the exhibition of the Russian revolution films. Included in these pictures are a series of animated portraits of the Czar and his family, now on their way to Siberia.

The United Managers Protective Association is ready to make life interesting this season for theater ticket scalpers. Hereafter theater treasurers will not honor telephone calls asking for the reservation of seats. Nothing but signed orders from the people who want the seats will go. The old stuff of reserving tickets in well known names and then peddling them from doorways at exorbitant prices will be impossible under the new association measure.

A film exchange handling upwards of 250,000 feet per week is about to be opened in San Antonio, Texas. This is but one of the branches the war department of the Y. M. C. A. is establishing over the country to furnish healthful recreation for soldiers in camp and cantonment. In all there will be slightly more than fifty complete moving picture programs in circulation all the time from the Y. M. C. A.'s San Antonio office.

This is the time of the year when theaters all over the country are opening up and getting ready to start in again after the so-called dull summer season. And business is better than usual. Reports show a greatly increased attendance. Even the summer months were better this year than previously, all of which just goes to show that the war is not going to play such havoc with the exhibitor after all.

Joseph L. Hunter, a chaplain in the army, was a visitor recently at the offices of the World Pictures Corporation and as a result of his visit has received two more pictures for the entertainment of the troops about to sail for France. Mr. Brady presented him with two prints each of "The Whip," and "Bought and Paid For," the only two pictures Mr. Brady owns personally.

The transition of a grocery store, with its odor of prunes, molasses and cheese, into a modern and pretty picture house is almost as big a jump for the imagination to make as it is for reality. And yet this is what has happened in Bloomington, Illinois, where the J. T. Shields grocery store has been transformed into the new Fifth Avenue Theater. Customers who used to go over and ask for five pounds of sugar now stay for an hour to enjoy the entertainment C. J. Larkin, manager of this new house with a seating capacity of 500, has provided. The Fifth Avenue is the ninth picture theater in the city, but a high standard has been set by the management and it promises to do very well.

Exhibitors of Kansas are scheduled to hold their next convention October 15 and 16 in Manhattan, Kansas. An announcement to this effect was recently made by C. E. Glamann, president of the Kansas branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America. The program of the convention will include a trip to Fort Riley.

An ordinance that would prohibit smoking or the lighting of a match in theaters and motion picture houses has been introduced before the Indianapolis city council by Jacob Hilkene, commissioner of buildings, who says the passage of such a measure is necessary for the public safety. He suggests that a fine of not to exceed $25 be provided for each violation of the ordinance and that theater managers be made liable to arrest if they permit smoking in their showhouses.

The Casino Theater on F street, near Seventh, Washington, D. C., has been taken over by A. Van Roley of New York, who will present unusual photoplays there and possibly add a few acts of vaudeville. The formal opening of the new house under the new management was made with "Twilight Sleep" as the "cynosure of neighboring eyes." Dr. Arthur H. Rollnick delivered a descriptive lecture at the opening presentations of this feature, which was attended by women in the afternoon and men in the evening.

The Comerford management, which operates several picture houses in Scranton, Pennsylvania, is pulling a new one. The nurses in one of the hospitals in that city have what they call a Nurses' Sick Fund which they have hitherto maintained by holding a regular tag day. The trick this year is different. They are selling tickets on the street, at the regular admission prices, to any of the theaters of the Comerford management and keeping a percentage of what they sell.

Theater men of Oklahoma City in their official Theater Bulletin are complaining at the way their courtesy has been answered by some of the men in khaki. It is asserted that groups of men in uniforms have tried to "rush" their way past theater doormen of late. The playhouse managers, however, have put an end to that, but regret that their efforts to extend every courtesy to the soldier boys that could possibly be given was not received in the spirit in which is was given.

The ordinance abolishing moving picture shows on Sunday in Little Rock, Arkansas, and fixing a fine of from $25 to $50 for violators has been vetoed by Mayor D. M. Pixley, Mayor Pixley in giving his reasons for vetoing the ordinance, recently passed by the City Council, said that the measure carries an excessive penalty for violations. He declared the ordinance is an attempt to take vengeance on Louis Rosenbaum, manager of the Princess Theater, and that by vetoing the measure he prevented the exercise of political spite against one man. The Mayor gave as a further reason for his action that he didn't want to place any obstruction in the way of wholesome Sunday recreation for soldiers.

B. R. Miles of the Dean Theater, Williamsburg, Pennsylvania, has entered suit against the Adams Express Company for the sum of $488 for alleged unreasonable delay in getting a film to his theater. The express company was especially notified of the importance of getting the film to the theater for a special date but failed to get it there. As a consequence Mr. Miles had to close up his house and turn people away on a feature program he had advertised heavily.

"Hitch the movie to the symphony" is the new slogan of the big picture houses of America. Many of the ablest musicians and orchestras in the country are to be found today in picture houses. The Strand and Rialto of New York make a specialty of the music end of their entertainments and spend more time on that than on the selection of pictures. The combination of good music and good pictures cannot fail to please the most fastidious audience, and simply means more power to both

No one has any doubts but that it is not fair play for a theater to twist its advertising in such a way as to draw from the patronage of another house by implying it is running a film which is in reality running at the other house. This charge was brought against the Brunswick Amusement Company of Duluth by W. M. Abrahamson of the Zelda and Savoy Theaters of that city, and an injunction was granted preventing the former company from using the words, "The Slacker" in its advertising of a similar film.

The role of the moving picture as an aid in the educational field is growing with a rapidity that is startling. A safety campaign launched all over the state of Ohio by the safety department of the industrial commission is but another evidence of the growing favor of the screen as a means for imparting knowledge. The educational picture, itself, has just been completed and was made to show how accidents in factory and workshop can be prevented. Its initial showing was before the commission at the Majestic Theater in Columbus.

The management of the Royal Theater and the merchants of Gering, Nebraska, are experimenting with a free ticket plan which will continue in effect until October 27. Under the operation of this scheme purchasers of goods are receiving tickets with what they buy, entitling them to one admission on each ticket to the Monday night and Saturday matinee shows of the Royal Theater. As tickets require no extra outlay of cash the bills being footed by the business men engaged in the plan, it is expected to prove a satisfactory trade inducement.

A threatened walkout of about seventy union motion picture operators of Indianapolis was prevented recently by exhibitors of the city who secured a temporary restraining order from Judge T. J. Moll. The strike order, according to members of the union, occurred when the exhibitors organization refused to grant the union demands for a double shift of operators and what they term better working conditions. The exhibitors declared they have been ready at all times to arbitrate any differences, but they insist the operators' demands are unreasonable. An agreement which the operators had with the exhibitors has expired and the operators are demanding more pay and better working hours.

A good deal of trouble seems to have resulted in various parts of the country in advertising "The Slacker," and "The Man Who Was Afraid," when these two films were the headliners at rival showhouses. It is easy in advertising the one to steal the fire of the other—or rather to steal the thunder of the other man's advertising. The Turner and Dahnken circuit of theaters in San Francisco recently played up "The Slacker" in big advertising displays. At the same time the management of the Strand secured the K-E-S-E feature and advertised it as "A Slacker," "The Man Who Was Afraid." The Metro Pictures Corporation, who put out "The Slacker," immediately sought and obtained a temporary restraining order preventing the defendants from using the term "Slacker" in connection with a photoplay.

Efforts of the legislative committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Pittsburgh have resulted in a favorable revision of the tax on picture theaters in that city. Heretofore all theaters were compelled to pay a license of $35 per month, irrespective of their seating capacity, provided they ever charged more than 10 cents admission. Under the new ruling theaters having a seating capacity of less than 450 are permitted to charge a maximum price of 20 cents without any additional tax. The new graduated schedule reads as follows: 200 or less, $10; 300 or less, $15; over 300, $25; providing that when the seating capacity of the house exceeds 450 the maximum charge of admission is not more than 20 cents.

The theaters in the loop district of Chicago and the pictures they headlined last week are given below:

Alcazar—"Mary Jane's Pa," with Marc MacDermott.
Auditorium—"Official Italian War Pictures."
Bandbox—"The Folly of Sin," drama.
Bijou Dream—"The Marriage Market," with June Elvidge.
Boston—"Grafters," with Jack Devereaux.
Castle—"Down to Earth," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Colonial—"Polly of the Circus," with Mae Marsh.
Kozy—"The Golden Heart," with Zoe Rae.
Lyric—"The Heir of the Ages," with House Peters.
Orpheum—"Betsy Ross," with Alice Brady.
Pastime—"The Eagle's Nest," with Edwin Arden.
Playhouse—"Mother o' Mine," with Ruth Clifford.
Rose—"Down to Earth," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Royal—"Dare Devil Kate," with Virginia Pearson.
Star—"The Devil's Assistant," with Marguerita Fischer.
Studebaker—"The Honor System," with Miriam Cooper.
Ziegfeld—"The Sin Woman," with Irene Fenwick.

W. C. Jackson, owner of the Savoy Theater at Nicholasville, Kentucky, is at war with the ministers and devout church people of that town because he keeps his theater open Sundays. Mr. Jackson told a committee headed by the divines that he had the same right to keep his theater open on the Sabbath that the proprietor of the bathing beach had in keeping that amusement place open. Whereupon the ministers turned upon the bathing beach operator and prevailed upon him to close it, but the Savoy is still tipping the lid to screen fans on Sunday. The church people are now circulating a petition asking that the theater be closed.

The Exhibitor and The Story

THEATER MEN CAN CO-OPERATE WITH PRODUCER—NEW YORK MANAGER TALKS

By Mildred Considine

A PERSONAGE high up in the performer realm of the industry recently said that it would sound trite to say that the lack of good material for stories was the real reason that the picture business is not making more progress at present.

I don't think so at all! In fact, it would seem to me that there has not been anywhere near enough importance attached to the quality of material from which pictures are made.

Producers are just waking up to the fact that they have been overlooking many phases of the fundamental element in good picture making!

Heretofore mediocre stories have in many cases sufficed. There have been produced many wishy-washy stories that haven't even inspired the people engaged in making them with anything but tolerance.

The personage mentioned above also said that the cleverest writers were not writing scenarios! Why should they? So many producers have ignored the fact that they are an important adjunct to the film business for so long that they have learned through experience to look elsewhere for their markets.

Weak Point in Film Organizations

The weak point is in the organizations of many of the producing companies. Their scenario departments have employed the same people to write for them so long that their material has a sameness that the public is beginning to resent. But these people are "in." By that I mean that they have become fixtures and their names associated with their different companies, and woe is unto the free lance writer if he attempts to poach on their preserves, even if it has been proved that he can deliver the goods! Men of well-known reputation have had to stand aside for others whose knowledge of writing was conspicuous by its absence, who lacked creative force and originality but who were on the inside track because they were the brother of the man whose sister married the cousin of the president of the company!

Is it any wonder that the film business is facing a crisis?

Herbert Brenon, the well-known director and producer whose dynamic force of expression is the underlying current and dominant factor in all of his productions, launched an opinion that should imbue every producer with a new enthusiasm and added strength of purpose.

I questioned him regarding the advisability of allowing the exhibitor an opportunity of influencing the producer in his choice of pictures before the production.

"Exhibitor Will Become Dictator"

"The exhibitor, more than any one else, is the logical man to suggest the policy of the producer," Mr. Brenon averred, decidedly, "and I personally wish that every exhibitor in the country would write me after the showing of one of my productions and tell me candidly what his public thinks of it. Its criticisms are invaluable in determining the commercial as well as artistic value of a picture.

"The exhibitor's power is limitless, but I don't think that he realizes as yet what a scope is within his hands. However, I am fully convinced that eventually he will become the dictator!"

"Which do you think is the most important factor in the building of a successful picture?" I asked him.

"The story," he answered, without hesitancy, "for it is that which has the direct appeal, first and last, as it is the agency through which the actors, director and everyone else concerned apply their art. The director has his inspiration from the author, and the more human and real the character of the story is, the easier his task. Sometimes one single line in an author's manuscript supplies an entire new train of thought to an imaginative director!

"Good Story Aids Every Department"

"The actor loves his part in the picture more if he is portraying a story that rings true, and the camera man shares in the joy of the actor and director if he knows that he is holding a mirror up to nature! Even the developer, as he sees the figures emerge upon the blank strip of negative, is attracted by the powerful or strange situations in the dramatic fabric of the production!

"In the advertising department, too, how much better and easier it is for them to grasp something tangible and real, rather than impossibilities and anachronysms, improbable situations and other false notes in which even those whose duty it is to advertise it have no faith themselves!

"On occasion after occasion, a great cast has been assembled either on the stage or on the screen, directed by a man of understanding who used accurately in every detail a vehicle perfect in technic and yet one that falls in public estimation and appreciation because the story itself lacked realism!

"If a story is trite and unappealing, the result is a commercial failure, and upon the commercial prosperity of the exhibitor who in his turn depends upon the patronage of the masses for his livelihood, depends the entire foundation without which no producer can hope to lend himself to the making of successful pictures!"

Sounds logical, doesn't it? So get busy, Mr. Exhibitor!

What Exhibitor Can Do

What can you do? Study the stories of the plays you show in your theater. Notice their effect on your audiences. Then write to the producers and give them your conclusions. They will be glad to get them. Kick hard and righteously when you are required to give your patronage a weak-kneed, unsatisfactory story, no matter if everything else about the production is excellent. That's the way to get the plots of plays improved, and to you, Mr. Exhibitor, the producer will listen with care and with one eye on the speedometer of the company's income.

If writing is an effort for you, kick to the salesman and to your exchanges. These will in time reach the seat of the trouble—the source of stories at the producing companies.

Remember, Mr. Exhibitor, watch your stories.

New Marine Feature

A new and remarkable film production has just been made on the rugged and beautiful Santa Barbara Islands by the Marine Film Company. The title is "Lorelei of the Sea," and it stars the capable Tyrone Power. Inglis and Hansen are exploiting the feature.

Tyrone Power, star in the Marine Film Company's spectacular "Lorelei of the Sea" (upper left), Philip Hansen, general manager of the company, and Frances Burnham, the charming feminine lead.

The Santa Barbara Islands are rocky and wild and provide beautiful settings for a play. It is inhabited by seals, wild sheep, wild goats and pelicans. Some of these animals are shown in the film and in one scene a real whale is discerned in the background.

One of the features of "Lorelei of the Sea" is a snappy scrap between John Oaker, as the heavy, and J. Belasco, the juvenile lead. During the melee, the latter had a tooth knocked out and instead of returning to the mainland to have it repaired used chewing gum to stick the molar in when he appeared in any scene.

Tyrone Power, the star of the feature, is well known throughout the country as a powerful actor. He was born in London and has achieved many notable stage triumphs, such as his performances in "The Servant in the House," "Julius Caesar," "The Magistrate" and "The Only Way." He formerly toured with Julia Marlowe, Beerbohm Tree and Mrs. Fiske. Two of his best known screen plays are "Where Are My Children?" and "The Planter."

Mr. Power does some remarkable work in "Lorelei of the Sea" in which he appears as a big seal fisher, a man of mystery..

CRITICISMS FROM EXHIBITORS

Triangle Establishes Bureau—"Length of Run Should Not Be Prescribed," Says Davis; "High Standard Only Criterion"

Standardizing a consistently high quality in pictures is the only solution of the short and long run problem, according to H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Triangle Film Corporation.

Co-operation is the keynote of the statement and Mr. Davis indicates that in the future the three corners of the Triangle will be the producer, exhibitor and public. He recognizes the vital importance of a better understanding between producer and exhibitor, and inaugurates a campaign of studio service that is unique in the development of the industry.

"The short and long run controversy is the perennially blooming subject of conversation in the motion picture business," says Mr. Davis, "and many theoretical solutions of the problem have been advanced, but there is only one way to keep a production on the screen for a longer period than is now ordinarily allotted, and that is to make it so good that those who see it will want to see it again, and their interest will stimulate a desire on the part of their friends also to enjoy it." Mr. Davis continued:

Schemes have been formulated to make exhibitors take pictures for a stipulated period, but never has anyone guaranteed to the exhibitor that the picture will be patronized during the time he has it, or that it will be profitable for him to show. The exhibitor has been taking all the chances, and when experience has taught him that his confidence has been misplaced, he is forced to bear the loss alone. When exhibitors discover that certain productions are of such a consistently high standard that they automatically create a demand for themselves, the short and long run problem will have been solved for all parties concerned.

The Triangle Film Corporation immediately will organize an exhibitors service department at the Culver City studio, which will be maintained solely for the purpose of studying exhibiting conditions and co-operating with exhibitors from the studio end. The individual and community needs of the exhibitors will be investigated from every viewpoint, and sincere effort will be made to determine the most satisfying kind of pictures and the methods of production that will best please exhibitor and public alike.

Right now I want to take occasion to appeal to every exhibitor in the country to communicate their needs, suggestions and complaints to me at the Triangle Culver City, California, studio, and I will see that they are given immediate attention by this department. We do not expect to satisfy or please every exhibitor, but our efforts will be directed toward securing the best results obtainable for the majority.

Can't Ge t a Clear Picture

Projection Department Motography: I have a little trouble. I have two Power's 6A machines, motor drive, 220 volts with a Power's inductor, I have a mirror screen with a 15x18 picture at 115 ft. throw. I do not seem to get a clear picture on the screen. There is a blur in the picture. I have moved the shutter back and forward and lined up the machine, but do not get any results. Could you tell me what the trouble is?—C. T., Pa.

Your letter is not very clear. You do not say whether the blur shows on the screen when using one Machine or whether it shows on the screen at all times. If it shows only when using one machine, I would say there is something wrong with the objective lens of that machine. Possibly there is a speck of dust on the lens or a drop of oil has hit it or the lens may have become too hot and melted the cement between the combinations of the objective lens.

Take out the lens and examine it carefully and be very sure that it is perfectly clean. If the blur occurs with both machines it is probable that something outside of the machines is causing the trouble. I know of a case where an operator had no end of argument with the manager of the house over a shadow that was showing on the screen and the manager contended that the trouble was in the lens of the machine, but the operator took out the lens and examined it and used every means that he ever heard of to clear up the picture without any result. They were using a mirror screen and one evening the manager happened to be watching the picture and a street car passed in front of the theater, the manager noticed that the shadow on the screen changed for a second or two and this set him to thinking.

By watching the shadow on the screen he very soon discovered that the trouble was caused by a street light that was situated straight across the street from the theater and that the light from that lamp was causing all the trouble on the screen. The curtains at the doors were not hung high enough and allowed a small amount of light to reflect on the mirror screen.

I merely mention this incident to give you an idea of what might be causing you your worry. If you cannot clear up your trouble through the objective lens, then write to this department, giving me the diameter of the objective lens, and its exact back focus. To get the exact back focus of an objective lens proceed as follows: With the picture in exact focus on the screen, measure with a rule the distance from the back combination of the objective lens to the surface of the film tracks on the aperture plate. Be very sure that you have the combinations turned the right way in the objective lens tube. More than one operator has come to grief through cleaning the combinations in his lenses and then putting them together wrong, result: a blurred or out of focus picture on the screen.

Thinks Converter Would Reduce Light Bill

Motography, Projection Department: May we kindly ask you to give the following question your consideration: Besides being interested in the above theater, the writer has an interest in a down-town theater. This theater buys direct current of 220 volts. This is the so-called power current for the heart of the city and must be used when operating the projector. The voltage across the arc is 56 or something in that neighborhood. The difference is all destroyed in the rheostat.

We wish to put in a converter and figure the saving would be considerable. We would still lose the electricity required to run the motor of the converter. The question now is: Can this 220 current be run through storage batteries and there screened out to allow 56 for the projectors and gain the difference (or any appreciable amount of difference in form of energy in the storage batteries. If such is feasible can you refer me to parties making such batteries?—O. D., Ohio.

My advice to you would be to install a D. C. to D. C. generator set for your theater down town. If there is a storage battery that is made to take care of a projection machine I never heard of it, and I do not believe that you could use one to any advantage even if there was one. Get a generator set and you will save money and get far better results than you are getting now with rheostats and it will be no time at all until the set has paid for itself in what it will save on your electricity bill.

Has Valve Attachment

Projection Department, Motography: Inclosed find a drawing for an attachment on a Power's upper magaine valve. I have saved a few stops with this attachment. It will not allow the film to slip out of the valve opening when the upper magazine door is open. I am also sending you one to try out for yourself and explain to the boys of the projection department, which I think you can do better than I can myself.—Phillip J. Guam, Jr., Local No. 223, Buffalo, N. Y.

Your letter and attachment was duly received and I am very much obliged. The attachment is a very handy article for the operators who are using Power's machines of the 6A type. The later model Power's have an attachment that holds the reel in such a position that the operator has very little trouble with the film jumping out of the valve when the magazine door is open. (Magazine doors are supposed to be kept closed while film is in the machine.)

The attachment that Brother Guam sent to me was made out of aluminum and a drawing of it in full size is given below. The attachment can be made out of almost any kind of sheet metal of 1/32 to 1/16-inch in thickness. The pinion for the hinge is made from a

This device—an attachment for a Power's upper magaeine valve—saves stops.

No. 6 wire nail. The nail is used as a form to bend the flaps of the two parts of the attachment to make the hinge. The two slots are cut out to allow the attachment to be fastened under the two screws that hold the magazine valve in place. These two small screws will have to be taken out and longer ones used in their place. Operators having the 6A machines will find this a handy addition to their machines. Come again Brother Guam, and many thanks for the sample that you sent me.

"A Step in the Right Direction"

The following letter has been sent out to the managers of the different theaters by the Triangle Distributing Corporation's Cincinnati office, and if all the exchanges would follow the policy of this firm there would be less cause for complaint from the operators and a considerable amount of film damage eliminated. Following is the letter:

Mr. Manager: The cause of seventy-five per cent of the damage to film is due to reels being bent or cupped inwardly, together with burr or rough surface left on the reel sides where the holes are stamped out. Ordinarily the damage is done as the film is leaving the top magazine or in rewinding. A bad reel has been known to cause this damage when the rewind was out of line.

As a remedy, we have gone to considerable expense in replenishing our stack of reels, so that the wear and tear on our films to this extent may be lessened, and as it is equally to your advantage as it is to ours that our film be always in as good condition as possible, we request your cooperation and that of your operator in returning our film on the same reels on which it was received.

We are sure that your operator will be only too glad to comply with our request, but, although we do not sell reels, should our film not be returned on our reels, we shall be reluctantly compelled to make a charge of one dollar for each reel not returned.

Hoping to receive your full cooperation in this matter, we beg to remain, with best wishes,

Triangle Distributing Corporation,
W. H. Hickey, Manager.

Daylight Photography in Dressler Play

The problem of daylight studio photography, always a perplexing one even in California, has been solved in the New York climate and latitude by the Dressler Producing Corporation, makers of Marie Dressler Comedies for Goldwyn distribution. The solution was reached by the simple application of the Goldwyn rule: Take plenty of time for everything.

"Tillie, the Scrub-Lady," Marie Dressler's first new comedy, has just been completed in the Goldwyn Studios at Fort Lee. Without exception, every scene was photographed by daylight.

To accomplish this much desired end, Miss Dressler and her players put in four times as much time as is usually required for a two-reel comedy. Vincent Bryan, who directed the picture, was not content simply with sunlight—he had to have it in exactly the right spot so that the shadows could be properly placed.

There were many disconcerting and not altogether inexpensive waits. Sometimes for hours, even for days, the company stood about the studio praying for sunshine. Often it was necessary to defer the completing of a scene while a cloud the size of a continent or two passed over the face of the sun.

All of this was productive of a splendid result, however. The finished film is without the flat tone so often observed in even the most carefully photographed subjects acted under mercury lamps.

The notable comedienne, Marie Dresler, in Goldwyn's "Tillie the Scrub-Lady."

The Dressler Producing Company plans to follow similar procedure in all of the comedies to come. Eight a year will be released through Goldwyn, each featuring Marie Dressler in her funniest screen creation, Tillie. All are to be written and directed by Vincent Bryan, Miss Dressler's chief recruit from the Charlie Chaplin forces.

"The Bride's Silence," new American-Mutual mystery play, with Gail Kane appearing September 10.

NEW GAIL KANE PLAY

Star's Latest Vehicle on Unusual Mystery Story Founded on Plot Taken From Real Life—Release Date September 10

Gail Kane, the Broadway star who is making a series of pictures for Mutual release at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc., Santa Barbara, is starred in "The Bride's Silence," a five-reel mystery drama, scheduled for release September 10.

"The Bride's Silence" is the fifth of Miss Kane's Mutual productions. It was staged under the direction of Henry King, who was responsible for "Souls in Pawn," the highly successful Kane release of August, and "The Upper Crust," the absorbing comedy drama which preceded it.

The story is by Daniel Frederick Whitcomb, author of "Little Mary Sunshine," and more than two hundred other successful motion picture productions. It was selected by Miss Kane and Mr. King as a play aptly suited to Miss Kane's dramatic talents, and the lovely star shows to great advantage in the role of the suspected young wife. The story is based upon a real experience which Mr. Whitcomb found in his experience as a New York newspaper reporter.

The story involved a prominent New York family. The son of the family was found dead. The daughter of the household was seen leaving the scene of the crime with a blood-stained dagger. She later married the prosecuting attorney and it was revealed from time to time that she knew something more of the unsolved crime than she had admitted.

Her husband and her father drove themselves nearly to distraction before it became known that the young man had been slain by a girl he had wronged and that the sister had withheld that fact to shield the family name. Miss Kane is supported in "The Bride's Silence" by Ashton Dearholt, a stage and screen actor of note, Henry A. Burrows, James Lee Farley, Robert Klein and Lewis J. Cody.

Pictures at Wisconsin Capital

Motion pictures are already active in helping out war measures, serving to draw the crowds in which it is sought to arouse patriotic interest. On the evening of August 17, in Madison, Wisconsin, a Hoover food celebration was held upon the lawn of the state capitol. A screen had been suspended where everybody within visual range could see, and upon this was thrown the World Film Corporation's imported picture play, "Mothers of France," of which Sarah Bernhardt is the star.

The big gathering was addressed by Charles Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin. Many booths were erected skirting the lawn for Red Cross exhibits, food preservation examples, comfort kits and other matters appropriate to the occasion, and the evening was further enlivened by a military band concert.

Children's Likes and Dislikes

YOU can learn some very interesting and invaluable facts about what children like in films in the story by the manager of a big middle west social center which will appear in the next issue of MOTOGRAPHY. It will also throw some light on the question of educational films.

And besides that it is a mighty interesting story to read. It's title is "Penny Pictures for 100,000."

"Little Miss Optimist"

Five-Part Paramount Featuring Vivian Martin Released August 26. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE author of "Little Miss Optimist," Gardner Hunting, has provided Vivian Martin with a story which contains a dash or two of tense melodramatic coloring, yet one which is not without the human interest and wholesomeness that we have beeen educated to expect in the Vivian Martin pictures. A story that has humor, human interest, suspense and exciting dramatic action, and above all carries conviction, is sure to hold an audience for five reels. Such a story is "Little Miss Optimist." All these different elements are found in just the right proportion and the result is that there are no monotonous or draggy spots.

Miss Martin plays the role of an optimistic little waif who, though in mean circumstances herself, is always ready to help those who have falen by the wayside. At one time her generosity leads her to give a precious battered dime to a half-starved young man. This coin figures prominently in the rest of the story, finally convicting a man of murder and saving the falsely accused. A pretty love theme involving the down-and-outer who becomes successful and the girl, who is finally turned out of her home, the former being able to reciprocate the latter's kindness, runs all the way through. The complication which has the girl's brother accused of murder, dealing with the fateful part the "lucky dime" has in revealing the identity of the real murderer, is handled very delicately and coherently. It makes a fine bit of suspenseful melodrama. The fact that the thief and the real murderer is outwardly a "pillar of the church" makes any solution seem all the more hopeless.

Robert Thornby's direction renders the whole picture intelligible and convincing to the spectator. The action is brisk and interesting, and novel effects in sets, lighting and photography are noticeable. Tom Moore, one of the best juvenile players on the screen, excels as the hero. Charles West, Ernest Joy, Charles Gerard and Helen Bray have conspicuous parts in the cast. The acting to be seen in the picture is of a very high standard.

"Little Miss Optimist" is a brisk, well-balanced, thoroughly entertaining story, with the magnetic star in a role that will surely please.

"The Law of the Land"

Paramount Subject Featuring Madame Petrova Released Aug. 12—Reviewed by George W. Graves

"THE Law of the Land," based on the play by George Broadhurst and directed by Maurice Tourneur, features Madame Petrova in the role of a wife who has to bear with the cruelties of a husband who is no less than a beast. She married the man—taking the yoke of her mother's weakness upon herself—a marriage purely for money, but had been strictly upon the level with him. Because he has not been able to win his wife's love or even her respect he vents all his brute wrath upon her and their little boy whom he delights to maltreat purely to cause his wife suffering. This intolerable condition soon reaches its bursting point, Margaret shoots her husband to prevent him from beating the boy "so he can't stand," and so we have a murder at the very start of the story. Complications are brought in pointing to Morton, Margaret's lover of bygone days, as the guilty party, evidence proving his motive being found by the detectives. Other evidence, however, bespeaks the wife's guilt. The rest of the carefully worked out and intensely human story deals with the maneuvers of Inspector Cochrane, of the police force, who discovers the wife's guilt but at the same time her real innocence. The result is that he closes the case as one of accidental shooting. The inspector's whole decision really is influenced by the baby voices of his own twin infants over the 'phone, showing what trivial things will sometimes influence weighty matters. The inspector is forced then and there to acknowledge that one person is as human as another.

"The Law of the Land" is the strongest play to appear on the Paramount program for some time, and Madame Petrova likewise has one of the biggest roles she ever essayed before the camera. She is every bit equal to this role and has ably caught the real feeling of the unfortunate woman and made the spectator realize the terror of her struggle.

Inasmuch as it was necessary for the spectator to be in sympathy with the struggling woman, even though she is a murderer, the star had to embody and radiate all the qualities that would stamp the character as noble and pure-minded—to express the real mother love. Mme. Petrova made her character one of wonderful subtle expression. The part of police inspector, played by Riley Hatch, is made persuasively human by the latter. This actor scored a big hit all the way through. Others making up the cast are Wyndham Standing, Mahlon Hamilton, J. D. Haragan and T. Vivian.

Maurice Tourneur's direction gives the picture all the artistry and realism that would be demanded by the most exacting picture-theatergoer. "The Law of the Land" is well up to the dramatic average reached by the very best Paramounts.

Triangle Five Reel Play Released August 26. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE story for this, written by James W. Adams, is one of those entertaining semi farces that has not only situations to amuse but those that will afford some dramatic tension. Jack Devereaux, is featured in the role of a rich man's son whose father is intent on teaching him some lessons in sagacity, who becomes mixed up in a scrape with grafters using the Mann law to further their ends, thinks his sweetheart is unworthy and finally saves his father from the same grafters who try to take advantage of the old man and force him for blackmail to the extent of $5,000. A number of satisfying "serves you right, villains," situations at the finish will prove amusing to the spectator.

National Association's All-Star

National Association's All-Star Picture—Reviewed by George W. Graves

TO the exhibitor looking for something novel and completely different from picture offerings that tread the beaten path the all-star productions of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry should have a strong appeal. The National Association's idea, it seems, was a very fortunate one, for it works out with extremely favorable results. The idea is to comprise in offerings of substantial reelage to be released now and then, a sort of compendium or review of a series of big scenes taken from successful screen plays featuring the different screen notables of the world. At the trade showing at the Strand Theater, New York, the scenic excerpts from the popular films were divided into such classes as love scenes, hair-raising thrillers, fight scenes, comedy scenes, etc. Before release these cuttings, it is thought, will be amplified, so that a five-reel feature can be made out of each class.

At first consideration, the idea of collecting a series of excerpts from big film successes, showing stars in scenes typical of their character of portrayal, even though it might be of value as a study or historically, conjures up the thought that such an arrangement must be flat and quite out of the question as entertainment for picture theater audiences. But the results contradict such an unfavorable speculative forecast. The all-star venture proves to be something of real worth. Most of the clippings show the stars at their best and the shots have been judiciously selected. Just enough of the action is shown to make the individual scene comprehensible.

Some of the popular stars figuring in the pictures are: Francis Bushman, May Allison, Harold Lockwood, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Madame Petrova, Henry Walthall, Clara Kimball Young, Anita Stewart, Edith Storey and Charlie Chaplin.

It seems that the audiences, at least for a while, will be eager to accept the all-star pictures as five-reel features, but only experimentation will show just how the public will accept the pictures. It is a pretty safe prophecy, however, that as short specials these pictures can invade the theaters successfully for a long time to come.

"Charity Castle"

Mary Miles Minter in Pleasing American-Mutual Offering. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris.

MISS MINTER plays a child's role throughout this, her latest feature. The production is quite up to the standard of the series and will please the most difficult audiences. Directed by Lloyd Ingraham, enacted by an excellent cast, and beautifully photographed, the picture is a very good one for any theater, excellent for the neighborhood house or for a children's matinee.

Although the plot is not very original, or very convincing, the humor and the good acting make it thoroughly enjoyable. Miss Minter is at her best as the heroine, and her acting is marked by sincerity and skill. For a change, she is allowed to be a child to the end of the story and the audience is spared the overworked finale in which a child-bride appears, her hair still in curls. Little Clifford Callis as the small brother is a dear little chap and will be well liked. Alan Forrest, as the disinherited son of a millionaire, has an unaffected, wholesome personality which fits well into the spirit of the story. Ashton Dearholt, as the cattish secretary plays a character role cleverly, while the humor of Spottiswoode Aitken, as the Shapespearean actor, is delicious, and George Ahern and Gordon Russell as his pals are fine. Eugenie Forde, Henry A. Barrows and Robert Klein complete the excellent cast.

A scene from "Charity Castle."

September 3 is the release date.

The Story: Charity and "The Prince," her little brother, are the children of a poor widow, caretaker of an apartment building. They are imaginative children and like to act out fairy-tales. They attract the attention of Merlin Durand, a wealthy youth who has an apartment in the building. When their mother dies, young Durand keeps the children with him.

Just at this time, Merlin and his father quarrel and the elder Durand cuts off his son's allowance until the latter proves that he can earn a week's salary. Merlin tries to get a job but is unsuccessful. Charity learns of his trouble and determines to help him. She realizes that the fairy story he has told her about the old ogre and his son really concerns his father and himself and she and her little brother set out for the father's home to plead Merlin's case.

They arrive just after Durand has left for a resort and while the servants are planning to play truant. They hide themselves in the house and when the servants have gone, take possession. At night, Bill, a burglar, enters the house and Charity asks him to stay and "protect" her and her brother. In the morning the party is enlarged by the arrival of Sam, a "bum," and Lucius Garrett, a stranded actor. Charity makes them at home and then sets them to work. In the midst of their fun, the owner of the house returns. But Charity explains things satisfactorily and Durand gives the guests the positions of the runaway servants and adopts the children. Later, Merlin comes back home with his week's salary, is delighted to find his wards there, and after he is reconciled with his father, everyone is happy.

"A Stormy Knight"

Franklyn Farnum in Bluebird Comedy Drama. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris.

THE photographic effects are so unusually fine, and the story begins in a fashion so interest-compelling, that one feels a keen disappointment as it becomes far-fetched and at the end trivial. The beginning furnishes an excellent setting for a mystery story. The hunting lodge in the mountains, a storm at night, the entrance of the girl and her wounded companion, the wild auto ride for the doctor, and the disappearance of the two strangers, these give the story a fine start. Added to the action and the mystery element, there are the beautiful scenic effects, the coming of day after the storm, the views taken from the mountain top, showing the sea of clouds below, among other pictures is excellent.

After that, the hero goes back to his city business and the production proves that it cannot live up to its good beginning. The hero sees again the girl and the man and follows them; to become entangled in other adventures. But there is so little reason for some of their actions that one soon suspects it is a frame-up and is not entirely surprised to learn at the end that the entire scheme is a plot of the father and the girl to entrap the hero, who is determined not to marry, into a love affair. They are successful, and the picture ends with a marriage held under rather unconventional circumstances.

For most audiences the picture has enough appeal. They will accept it as a light adventure play and enjoy its good points, probably without worrying about the fact that it could be much better and that it is rather imitative of certain popular pictures starring a better known comedian. Franklin Farnum and Brownie Vernon and their supporting cast play their parts well. Elmer Clifton directed the story, which was written by Jack Cunningham and put into scenario form by Waldemar Young.

The Story: John Winton has declared that he will never marry. Aside from his business, his chief interest is in hunting and he spends many weeks in his hunting lodge among the mountains. One night, during a storm, a girl comes to his lodge, accompanied by a wounded man. Winton goes through the storm for a doctor, but when he returns he finds the strange guests gone. A note from the girl, left in her glove, tells him that they have been taken away by force.

In the city, he again sees the girl and follows her to a supposedly deserted house on the outskirts of the city. He hears her cries for help, but she and her pursuers leave the house before he can confront them. A number of times later he sees the girl under strange circumstances. He falls in love with her. She leaves messages for him at his office, and finally agrees to meet him but will not give him a clew to the mystery. Finally Winton captures the gang, runs away with the girl and marries her. Then he learns of the plot to capture his interest.

"The Lust of the Ages"

Ogden Pictures Corporation Drama in Seven Parts. Reviewed by George W. Graves.

LILLIAN WALKER, more charming than ever, returns to the screen in a picture that on close examination from every angle has practically no weaknesses, a photodrama that is a big and most pleasant surprise. The surprise and wonder start with the first clicks of the projector and endure through the seven reels, while the spectator sits transfixed at the strength, beauty and true artistry with which the theme—a theme as old as the world itself but ever assuming new aspects with the progress of time—is treated. Next to holding the spectator's interest throughout the length of a production, there is nothing like getting his attenion at the very start. "The Lust of the Ages" does this as it is seldom done. It commences in a methodical, masterly way, presenting its theme and purpose at once and employing some strikingly novel double-exposure and double action scenes. The double exposure and original camera work continue through the picture and aid in stamping it with the seal of a painstaking, elaborate production. Really director Harry Revier hardly needed any surface aids, since he has already made the picture big by his competent superintending of the work of the cast and the skillful dramatic interpretation of Aaron Hoffman's story.

The story as produced has a "soul" and a meaning. It is a strong moral propaganda, and because propaganda and story have been welded so consistently together and made to register so well as entertainment, "The Lust of the Ages" is way above the ordinary screen attempts seen on every hand to deliver a moral lesson and still maintain a live story interest. There are copious sub-titles, but they are inserted at just the right places to keep the underlying theme alive in the mind of the viewer. The story is a visualization in episodic arrangement of a book, tracing the "lust of the ages" through different periods in the world's history, bringing this same lust for money and power down to our present time and showing it in its present ugly form—autocratic organized selfishness. This visualized book had been presented in the beginning scenes to a money-mad youth by his sweetheart, whose past bitter experience had inspired her to write the book. After reading the volume the young man's vision is wholly changed and the picture closes with his acknowledgement of this fact to the girl.

Among the pictorial episodes are: a story of primitive peoples dwelling in the "Valley of Content" before money was known; a short sequence showing lavish scenes in the "Hall of Mammon"; and a story setting forth the martyrdom of two lovers of old who made a sacrifice in vain to cut off their country's plans for world domination. This story connects with one touching on conditions of the present day. From the pastoral beauty of the first tale of the simple shepherd folk to the stirring scenes of lust, battle and destruction in the other episodes, the spectator is held totally enthralled by the director's masterful handling. It is truly a difficult task to make a picture of separate episodes upholding a foundational propaganda register as live, interesting entertainment, but Mr. Revier has done it with freedom and assurance.

Lillian Walker makes every one of her numerous roles stand out. Miss Walker's magnetic screen personality seemed more remarkable than ever before to the writer. The star has had so many comedy and light dramatic roles in the past that her excellent emotional work in this is very noticeable. She is a beautiful figure in many tasteful close-ups. Miss Walker took advantage of the chance to do big things in the picture. Jack Mower, who played opposite, will be the cause of much lost feminine sleep. He does well with all the roles he assumes in the story.

"The Lust of the Ages" is above the ordinary program picture. It is all of a big "special" and will rank high as a state rights money getter for the three best of reasons—a worthy story, superlative production, and a widely known and talented star appearing at her best.

"Idolaters"

Triangle Five-Part Drama Released September 9. Reviewed by George W. Graves.

"IDOLATERS" is a worthy successor to "The Wolf Woman," a wild "vamp" picture which made a hit some time back. The play, by John Lynch and Monte Katterjohn, is a real, old-fashioned, deep-dyed "vamp" story with all the accoutrements that custom has associated with such stories—serpentine gowns, gaudy Oriental atmosphere, sparkling wines, etc. The plot takes a tragic trend and ends with the death of both the vampire and her victim, who has forsaken the best kind of a wife. The latter has the real sympathetic role of the picture and has it from the start.

The gradual luring of the husband from his good wife with its results is true to the custom of "vamp" stories, and it might be decidedly nauseating were it not for the fact that there is something about the play, as with most movie plays of the type, that keeps the spectator from taking thing too seriously. Perhaps it is because, if there is such person in existence as a vampire, her actions and habits are so overdrawn in the movies that the character assumes a humorous nature.

Louise Glaum is a wonderful type for the featured role of the picture. She holds the center of the screen at all times. Her suberp handling of the part keeps the spectator amused and entertained for the reasons cited above. Dorcas Matthews in the role of the deserted wife, George Webb, as the husband, and T. S. ## "The Silent Witness"

Authors Film Presents Seven-Reel Play—Released Through Hoffman-Foursquare. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE person falsely accused of murder, the suspense and mystery surrounding the hidden evidence supporting the alleged murderer's guilt, versus the glaring and open circumstantial evidence, the clever solving of seemingly unsolvable perplexity, and the sensational trial, are all ingredients of this adaptation of the stage play by Otto Hauerbach. Pictures dealing with proving the innocence of the falsely accused have been served to the public oft and in many forms, and they range from the plotless surface drivel to the interest-compelling play with a fine story convincingly executed. "The Silent Witness" comes in the latter class. A real story, able direction and realistic acting are all attributes of "The Silent Witness." The story is told in seven reels, and even if judicious paring might reduce it to a shorter length for the sake of time or convenience the picture holds attention very well just as it is.

The cast, headed by Gertrude McCoy, contains several players who appeared in the original production Miss McCoy has a role which gives her every opportunity. It is a deeply emotional role and the star, who by the way, was one of the pioneer players of the screen, shows us vigorously that she really can act when she has the proper advantages and environment. Frank O'Connor, as the district attorney, handles his part with ease of expression and action and convinces generally. Junius Mathews, too, as the boy accused of murder, is sincere and has ability. Others having conspicuous parts are Jack Sherrill, Helen May, Fred Graham and Albert Philips.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

THE gowns Gail Kane, the American star, wore in the current production of "Souls in Pawn" are to be sold to the highest bidders at a Red Cross bazaar in Santa Barbara. Miss Kane is now in San Francisco keeping dates with modistes for an entire new wardrobe for her next production, "Wit," which will be begun in a few days, now that her sixth "Flying A" piece, "Southern Pride," has been completed.

Whenever Fritz Schade, Keystone comedian, is asked for an autographed photograph, he immediately responds with one labelled, " 'Keystone' Fritz Schade,—Cute, Clever, Nifty."

Vivian Rich, formerly with the American Film Company, is now leading lady with Neal Hart at Universal City. She is now working in "The Bumblebee." a five reel drama.

Mary Miles Minter recalled her "Littlest Rebel" days recently in a scene in "Her Country's Call." In the story, Mary grasps a trumpet to awaken the Home Guards when the border raiders are charging. Director Ingraham had expected a pantomine, but Mary sounded a regulation bugle call. She had done it before on the speaking stage.

Maxine Elliott's first Goldwyn picture is "The Eternal Magdalene," an adaptation of the famous stage play of that name.

Alfred Vosburgh has changed his name to Alfred Whitman, for screen purposes. Thus we have as leading man in Director William Wolbert's company and playing opposite Mary Anderson, Alfred Whitmen instead of Alfred Vosburgh.

Pearl White has been adjudged the favorite screen player of Porto Rico, through a contest held by the San Juan Times. She received a total of 297,617 votes, 30,000 more than her nearest competitor.

Juanita Hansen, recently a Keystone comedienne and previous to that the leading lady in the American thrill serial, "The Secret of the Submarine," is combining her film experience by playing opposite Crane Wilbur in a five-reel comedy full of screen stunts, to be seen on the Art Drama program. Miss Hansen has never used a "double" when difficult or dangerous scenes are wanted by her director.

Claire Alexander, who has been playing the girl leads in the Cub comedies featuring George Ovey, will be seen in a leading role in the next Baby Marie Osborne feature, "The Child of M'sieu."

John J. Haues, who has been the casting director at the David Horsley studios, is going to play the leading juvenile roles in forthcoming Cub comedies, with George Ovey.

Geraldine Farrar has a portable dressing room, which she finds most convenient when in the mountains for the filming of exterior scenes. It contains all the comforts of the diva's dressing room at the studio, even to the telephone, which, on any location is connected up so that Miss Farrar may talk with her friends by long distance in her leisure moments.

In the supporting cast for "The Narrow Trail," his first Ince-Artcraft photo-drama of frontier life, Wm. S. Hart will have more than a score of the cowboys who have contributed such notable bits of realism to many of his productions. Some of these rugged "types" Hart regards as his very own, as they have appeared with him continously ever since he made his debut as a screen actor under the direction of Thos. H. Ince.

Norma Talmadge is a very dainty and attractive sort of person, but she doesn't consider herself too fragile to hoe her own row, in the garden as well as in life. Here she is in her womanalls at her home at Beechurst, Long Island. If you would like to borrow this cut for your program, just ask MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago, and you will receive it without a cent of cost—unless some other live manager sees it first.

Bessie Love and Mary Pickford had their first meeting one day recently. Said Mary to Bessie, "At last I think I have found some one who is shorter than I!" Said Bessie to Mary, "O, surely I am taller than you!" So they measured, and with Marshall Neilan as referee, the decision was that Bessie is one-quarter of an inch taller than Mary.

Mary Miles Minter, rides an unbroken cow pony in "Her Country's Call," a coming American publication.

George George who plays with George Ovey in Cub Comedies was one of the first members of the David Horsley forces to be drafted. He believes he will be eligible for a commision in the quartermaster's supply division, for although he claims no military experience, he does boast of knowing the personal peculiarities and proclivities of his childhood intimates—Missouri mules.

Lester Cuneo, the popular "villain" who has for the past year been in the support of Harold Lockwood in Metro wouder-plays, has been listed in the first draft call, and may be obliged to leave Metro's Hollywood, California, studio in a short time for training. He has put in no claim for exemption.

Jack La Mond, assistant cameraman at Metro's studio has volunteered in the Marine Corps, and has been made a quarter-master sergeant. The enterprising Sweeney boys, Jimmy and Bill, who volunteered for naval defense some time ago, are still at the same studio, but have received $1.87 each in salary from the government as a reminder that they are subject to call.

Francis X. Bushman's valet, Clifford Merritt, was called in the first draft, and is waiting to hear the result of his examination. David Thompson, floor manager, has been releasing Philip McNeil, one of his assistants, for the purpose of giving boxing exhibitions to the soldiers one afternoon a week.

The Fox company is spending barrels of money on "Cleopatra" and Director Edwards has his star, Theda Bara, and a huge company of supporting artists and extras, both black and white, at Balboa beach where big sets have been erected and a number of ancient boats built. It is amusing to see Cleopatra in an ultra-modern limousine watching the hundreds of "Nubians" and "Romans" around the lunch wagons while Caesar and Anthony sit in an automobile nibbling sandwiches.

If the Kaiser's U-boats had to depend upon Mary Garden for their good wishes they wouldn't get many. Miss Garden hasn't any use for the things, but just now they are annoying her particularly by keeping her in Paris when she feels she ought to be well on her way to the United States and her first motion picture appearance as the star of "Thais" for Goldwin.

Douglas Fairbanks is writing the words and music of a new marching song, which he hopes to submit to Sousa with a request that he take it abroad with him and play in the trenches.

Charming Mollie King, the Pathe star, will soon be to the front again in a serial, "The Seven Pearls." Creighton Hale, who made a hit in "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Iron Claw," helps her through innumerable perils and daredevil escapes.

Helen Holmes with a cameraman and an assistant autoed to Ventura, a distance of seventy odd miles, to get a sunrise effect and she got back to Los Angeles in time to snatch two hours sleep and then worked all day with her director, J. P. McGowan.

BIG DIRECTOR IN CHICAGO

By special arrangement with N. William Aronson, the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation has secured the services of Oscar Eagle to direct their first production featuring Charlotte, the international ice skater.

Mr. Eagle has directed Vivian Martin, Robert Warwick, Gail Kane and Jack Barrymore and was associated for nearly two years with Triangle. His first picture experience was obtained in Chicago, where he was director general of the Selig studio. Previous to his picture experience Mr. Eagle was for eight years stage director for Liebler & Co. and was associated with David Belasco for five years. Mr. Eagle arrived in Chicago August 27.

NEW CHICAGO OFFICE

"It's a Jewel" has struck Chicago. Leon J. Bamberger, general publicity man of the Jewel Productions, Inc., was in town this week establishing a Chicago office for the new exchange.

The Jewel Productions, Inc., is not a producing company, and has no ambitions along that line. They buy features and sell them to the exhibitor. They are more than willing to relinquish the trouble attendant upon high-salaried stars to their competitors.

The Chicago offices will be on the fifteenth floor of the Consumers Building, and Eli Van Ronkel will be manager. Mr. Van Ronkel is at present assistant manager of the Blubird Photoplays, Inc., and was formerly assistant manager of the V. L. S. E. He is a brother of I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Chicago Bluebird Exchange.

Chicago Notes

DOUGLAS Fairbanks hit the city on his way east last Tuesday and, as usual, created a good deal of interest. As usual, also, Max Goldstine, Artcraft manager, and W. K. Hill and S. J. Stoughton, of the Paramount office, were on the job and gave the vigorous star and local film and press people some excellent entertainment. A complete story of the affair will appear in next week's MOTOGRAPHY.

"Billy" Hamburg has moved his offices to 102 North Fifth avenue. His company specializes in picture frames and lobby decorations.

Anita Loos, story writer to Douglas Fairbanks, and the latter's director, John Emerson, were in Chicago on their way east September 1.

Reports come from good authority that Oliver Morosco is negotiating for the Studebaker Theater, evidently for the purpose of making it his center production for the middle west.

"Seven Chances" has closed at the Cort Theater after a long run. Taylor Holmes has gone back to the north side, where he is making eyes at the camera for Essanay again.

I. Van Ronkel, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays, announces that he will give 15 per cent of the gross receipts of the week taken in the Playhouse Theater to the tobacco fund for soldiers, where the latest Bluebird picture, "A Stormy Knight" will commence Saturday, September 1, and will stay there until Friday.

The Lieb-Harris Players have ended their successful stock run at Wilson Avenue Theater, near Broadway. This stock season this summer took the place of the usual pictures.

Jones, Linick & Schaeffer have made a success out of the combination of pictures and vaudeville at the Colonial. The first of this bill was Goldwyn's first picture called "Polly of the Circus" with Mae Marsh and some snappy circuit acts.

Again the Lincoln theater at Belmont and North Clark Street, has been reopened. The machinery of the house was put in action on August 30. Finn and Heiman now have an interest in the house.

Three new salesmen have been taken on by manager J. E. O'Toole of the Fox office: Joseph Wolfe, Thomas A. Lee, who will cover Milwaukee, and Arthur de Sourmeaux.

"Daddy" Hines, in the directory at South Bend as George H. Hines, was in the city last week gathering up some choice pullers from Jack O'Toole and Cresson Smith of Fox and Metro respectively and respectfully.

Jack Lyons has taken over the work at the Fox Exchange formerly handled by Miss Jane Corbett, who, as announced in MOTOGRAPHY last week, has resigned from Fox to accept a better position with I. Van Ronkle, manager of the Bluebirds.

The drive against Major Funkhouser and the city authorities made in connection with Fox's "The Spy," which was forbidden a permit, was engineered by C. W. Eckhardt, a representative from the home office in New York. "The Spy" now has a free road, due to an injunction granted against the city.

The official Italian government films will continue at the Auditorium theater until Sunday, September 9. "The Italian Battle Front" is the title given them and the pictures are very unusual. The symphony orchestra of forty men, directed by Joseph Raffaelli, will continue to harmonize with the pictures.

WHEN STAR MEETS STAR

Olga Petrova, who recently formed her own company under the name Petrova Picture Company, and who is now making her first personally supervised picture, "The Greater Way" is not content with receiving $10,000 per week, besides 50 per cent of the profits, but will also gather in a few extra pennies by writing her own scenaries.

Recently, at the opening of Adolph Bolm's Ballet Intime, Mme. Petrova went "back-stage" during the intermission to congratulate Roshanara upon her success.

"Although I have never had the pleasure of meeting you," said Petrova, "I should have recognized you at once, from all I have heard about your marvellous hands; no two women in the world could have such wonderfully long fingers."

"And if you had entered my dressing room heavily veiled," replied Roshanara, "I should nevertheless have recognized you at once from having seen you on the screen, for no two women in the world could have such a beautiful figure."

DANCER IN "BIG V" COMEDIES

A. B. Conkwright, for the past four years well known to Broadway as a professional dancer, has become one of Director "Larry" Semon's famous riot squad of dare devil comedians and acrobats who are making comedies at the Vitagraph studios. Conkwright is also kwown to fame as the originator of the auto-ped craze being the first to ride one on the streets of New York. He is going to demonstrate his skill by riding one in a forthcoming comedy.

Mr. Conkwright started his career as a fashion model in Chicago at the Meyer-Both studio, where Stuart Holmes also was a model at that time. Among models at this studio who are now famous are Alice Joyce, Anna Nilsson, Bobby Connelly, Justine Johnson, Kay Laurel and Madge Kennedy.

Exhibitors Aid Government

ALL THEATERS CO-OPERATE WITH MOTION PICTURE WAR COMMITTEE

REPORTS which are being received from the State Chairmen of the National Committee, appointed by President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, indicate widespread enthusiasm in the plan to mobilize the exhibitors through the country in aid of the Government's war policies.

48 States Working

Striking evidence of this fact is contained in an announcement from President Brady to the effect that every one of his appointees in the forty-eight states have now accepted and are busily engaged in making up lists of the picture theaters so as to inform their managers of the plans of the War Co-operation Committee, and that they may be prepared to show on their screens slides or trailers received from the motion picture committees of the National Association acting in conjunction with the members of the Cabinet and the various Federal Departments, the Council of National Defense, the Red Cross War Council and the Committee on Public Information.

Rapid progress is being made in the organization of the exhibitors in many states following the successful campaign which was inaugurated last June under the auspices of the National Association and the Exhibitors' League in connection with the Liberty Loan, and the splendid service rendered by the industry in this instance will be greatly augmented in the future as new theaters are being listed which have only been opened during the past few months.

Smallest Theaters Help

In this connection a novel plan as set forth in the following letter has been successfully worked out by Herman J. Brown, state chairman of Idaho, which will interest the chairmen in other states.

I have made arrangements to reach villages so small that our association has no record of the theaters and managers. I did this through letters to the postmasters and was surprised that fly specs on the map all seem to be on deck with some place to show pictures and someone to show them. The postmasters call personally on the reluctant exhibitors.

My experience has convinced me more than ever that the screen has the press skinned a mile, as "burgs" of 150 population have a show at least once a week, but no paper within a hundred miles.

State M. P. E. L. President Writes

C. W. Meighan, state chairman of Oregon, has made notable progress in the organization of the exhibitors, according to report contained in the following letter to President Brady:

This will acknowledge your favor of August 4 and will also acknowledge my appointment as chairman for Oregon of the Motion Picture Committee on War Cooperation. In pursuance with the instructions contained in your favor of the 4th, I am now having prepared with all possible care a list of representative motion picture exhibitors from every city, village, town and hamlet in our state; men whom I know will be pleased to serve with unselfish devotion the cause which you have so generously undertaken to promote.

It may interest you to know that even before you formed the National Committee, our exhibitors in Oregon were exerting every possible effort to cooperate with the Government. That their work was effective is attested by the fact that the screen in Oregon is given great credit for the splendid over-subscription this state showed in Liberty Bonds, Red Cross subscriptions and for the fact that it stands first among all the states in the matter of voluntary enlistmens. Our Portland district is the only one in the United States, I am told, which contributed so many voluntary enlistments that no men at all were taken by the Government on the first draft. Concerted work on the part of motion picture theaters is credited with contributing largely to this splendid showing.

I tell you this so you may know that to every extent within the power of our exhibitors in this state, you may count upon our fullest, heartiest and most cheerful cooperation.

As state chairman I shall look forward to your various communications and suggestions from time to time and shall be more than pleased to have an opportunity to put them promptly into execution.—(Signed) C. W. Meighan, Chairman of the Oregon State Committee for War Co-operation; President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oregon; Manager, People's Amusement Company.

Central and Eastern States Busy

The western states are not the only ones in which active work is under way, many of the middle west and eastern states are being organized by the state chairman and in some localities this campaign apparently affords the first real opportunity for perfecting an exhibitors' organization.

H. M. Morrison of the Majestic and Princess Theaters, Hartford, Conn, and state chairman of the National Committee, is now engaged with plans for effecting the first organization of exhibitors in that state. Mr. Morrison is vice-president of the Hartford local, which comprises all the theaters in the state capital, and similar organizations are proposed for New Haven, Bridgeport, Waterbury, Stamford, New London, Meriden and Danbury. Chairman Morrison will issue a call for a general meeting of all the exhibitors of the state at an early date, when the purposes of the War Cooperation Committee of the National Association will be placed before them by President Brady, who is to be invited to attend the conference as guest of honor.

THEATERS WORK FOR U. S.

Secretary of Agriculture Houston Communicates With Houses of Several States to Give Information on Food Question

Hon. D. F. Houston, secretary of agriculture, is the second member of the Cabinet to take advantage of the offer made to the Government by the War Co-operation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry for utilizing the screen to disseminate information during the period of the war.

The Department of Agriculture, acting in conjunction with the Motion Picture Committee of the National Association, has arranged for the display, during the next three or four weeks, at picture theaters in Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Rhode Island, of lantern slides dealing with the canning, preserving, drying and pickling of perishable food products. This action was taken as a result of reports received by the Department that a large surplus of perishable fruits and vegetables was accumulating in the big population centers and that there was great danger that large quantities would go to waste.

Letters to Exhibitors

The following letter has been sent by the Secretary of Agriculture to exhibitors:

The help of motion picture exhibitors in your State is urgently needed at this time in bringing before their patrons the importance of conserving perishable fruits and vegetables. I am informed by agencies of this Department which are in close touch with conditions that in your State a large surplus of perishables is accumulating, much of which will be wasted unless extraordinary effort is made to conserve for later use that which cannot be promptly consumed In the emergency which our country is facing, the waste of any of this food would be deplorable.

I am taking the liberty of enclosing four gelatine sheets dealing with the canning, drying, preserving and pickling of perishable products. You will be rendering a definite public service, and the Department will greatly appreciate it, if you will place these between cover glasses and project them on your screen between motion picture reels, for a period of from one to three weeks, depending upon the number of runs you make, your patronage and other local conditions. It is important that they be shown immediately. While it would be preferable to display all of them at each show, they may be divided, if necessary, using numbers 1 and 2 during one program and numbers 3 and 4 when the program is changed. Since it was necessary in order to save time and expense to provide gelatine slides, will you please ask your operator not to leave them in the machine long enough to melt them?

The loyal support which the entire motion picture industry is giving to the Government in this emergency convinces me that you will be willing to assist it in this important matter.

Approved and recommended by the Committee of the Motion Picture Industry co-operating with the U. S. Department of Agriculture.—S. A. Lynch, Louis L. Levine, W. R. Rothacker.

The National Association Committee requests all theaters to insert the contents of the slides in house programs for a period of four weeks.

The text of the four slides which the Department has asked the exhibitors to show is as follows:

WAR MESSAGE NO. 1

Let nothing be wasted. Preserve, can, pickle or dry all surplus perishable fruits and vegetables possible to lessen the world's food shortage.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 2

Canning and drying are very simple processes requiring small cheap equipment. Easy to do in a city house or apartment.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 3

Tin cans are scarce. Put up perishable foods in glass jars or bottles. Dry such vegetables as beans, carrots, beets, peas or okra.

WAR MESSAGE NO. 4

Dry fruits and vegetables in the sun, in or over a stove, or by an electric fan. Pack in plain or paraffin paper bags or cartons, in empty cereal boxes or coffee cans.

Each of the slides contains the following:

For instructions, write to the State Agricultural College, your County Agent, or the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

JOHNSON WITH TRIANGLE

Will Have Dictatorial Powers Over Triangle Productions From Time They Leave Scenario Department Until Ready for Marketing

Julian Johnson, until recently editor of the Photoplay Magazine and a former Los Angeles drama critic, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the Triangle Film Corporation, and is en route to Los Angeles to assume his important post.

The position was created for Johnson by H. O. Davis, general manager and vice-president of the Triangle Film Corporation, and is one of exceptional responsibility. He will be held responsible for all pictures produced at the Triangle Culver City studio from the time they leave the scenario until they are ready for marketing.

"It is a new department for us," stated Mr. Davis. "No such position has been open in our company until now. I saw the need of a final supervisor, or editor-in-chief, and I simply created the post. Of course, I first made certain that we could obtain Mr. Johnson's service.

"He will act as sort of a middle-man between our script editor, Mr. Cunningham, and myself. His word on the stories will be final, and a picture will not be released until he has placed his O. K. on the film following the cutting operation.

"In this way we hope to bring our production department up to a standard of efficiency never before attained. The new system will, I think, eliminate a lot of waste and will work for the betterment of Triangle pictures.

"Mr. Johnson is rated among the best newspaper and magazine writers of the country, and my opinion of him is best expressed by the dictatorial powers which have been granted him."

Ontario Exhibitors Organize

The exhibitors of Ontario are organizing under the leadership of M. Mannist, of the Royal Theater, Fort William, Ontario, and when their organization is completed they will apply in a body for a charter in the American Exhibitors' Association. Mr. Mannist is a wide-awake exhibitor who recognizes that the only way the exhibitor can accomplish any reforms is through concerted action with a body that is composed entirely of exhibitors who have no connections with the manufacturer.

He is avowedly opposed to the advance deposit system, which method of doing business by the producer is being fought by the American Exhibitors' Association.

H. B. Varner, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Exhibitors' Association, has been in New York for several days attending to matters connected with the A. E. A. He left for Washington where he will look after legislation which affects the exhibitor.

THE MYSTERIOUS MISS TERRY, with Billie Burke (Paramount)—"This first Billie Burke Paramount feature proved a very good drawing card and satisfied the audience very well, although personally I cannot see much to the story of the play."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Exile, with Mme. Petrova (Paramount)—"Petrova's third Paramount picture is an Arabian story and very interesting but it does not seem to satisfy the audience. A frequent complaint is made that Petrova wears costumes too much alike in every picture. We hope that for her new productions she will have a new wardrobe."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Love That Lives, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Very good and well liked. Had very good business."—E. Dyost, Colonial Theater, Orange, Calif.

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—""Nothing to brag on. This star is not as popular as she was."—E. Dyost, Colonial Theater, Orange, Calif.

The Crystal Gazer, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"Improbable. Poor drawing card."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Crystal Gazer, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"Star does some clever work but the picture becomes tiresome. Excellent supporting cast."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Kiss, with Owen Moore (Paramount)—"Good picture, played to good business."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

The Kiss, with Owen Moore (Paramount)—"A splendid offering. Just enough comedy to make it go big. Why don't producers make more comedy-dramas? They always please."—Albert Metzger, Fairy Theater, Knox, Ind.

The Moment Before, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"An out of the ordinary story. Miss Frederick is excellent, though the role scarcely shows off her ability or beauty."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

An Innocent Lie, with Valentine Grant (Paramount)—"The star is splendid in the Irish characterization. Good story. Fine business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas—High class patronage.

Big Timber, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A good picture. Ran it on a rainy night to fair business. An outdoor story."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Little Pal, with Mary Pickford (Paramount)—"A pretty good picture. The star draws well here. Good business. This one is good enough for any theater. Every patron well pleased."—G. C. Stoner, Grand Theater, Springfield, Minn.

Molly Make-Believe, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Anything with Marguerite Clark is sure to be attractive. Capacity business."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Bungalowing, with Victor Moore (Klever Komedies-Paramount)—"Decidedly among the best there is in comedy. The name, Victor Moore, is magnetic here."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Bray Pictographs (Bray-Paramount)—"Called the 'screen magazine.' Very instructive and entertaining."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Bobby Bumps, cartoons (Paramount)—"These are certainly original in their clean comedy and have proved a big drawing card for me."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Witchcraft, with Fanny Ward (Paramount)—"The majority of my patrons kick against costume plays. This is fairly good."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Miss George Washington, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"S. R. O. One of the best productions."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

The Black Wolf, with Lou-Tellegen (Paramount)

—"Attendance fair. Star not popular."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

The Plow Girl, with Mae Murray (Paramount)—"Excellent production. Attendance good."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

Her Own People, with Lenore Ulrich (Paramount)—"A very good production."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

The Winning of Sally Temple, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"Excellent picture. Attendance good."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

The American Consul, with Theodore Roberts (Paramount)—"A fair picture. Theodore Roberts is too old for the role."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

Each to His Kind, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"Poor production. Patrons do not like this star."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

Out of the Wreck, with Kathlyn Williams (Paramount)—"A good average. Pleased very well."—J. C. Welsh, Princess Theater, Boonville, Miss.

The Dupe, with Blanche Sweet (Paramount)—"A good story, skillfully handled, presenting the complex side of modern life. Blanche Sweet and Thomas Meighan are fine."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

The Golden Chance, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"An excellent picture, a society drama. This star has good drawing power. Business good."—Mrs. Nora M. Vincent, Bluebird Theater, Girard, Kansas.—High class patronage.

Hasimura Togo, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"It is surely remarkable to see this clever Jap in comedy. He is an artist and is becoming a good box-office attraction."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Amazons, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Good picture. Considering the cost of the film, the box-office has suffered."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—High class neighborhood.

Her Father's Son, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"A delightful comedy-drama. We didn't advertise it enough, consequently did not have as good a house as we should have had."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Atta Boy's Last Race, with Dorothy Gish (Triangle)—"An old-time theme, melodramatic in structure. Has many good points, the star for instance. Much pad-

Essanay Re-Issues Chaplins

Essanay is to put out new prints of all the Essanay-Chaplin productions. The first one will be offered on September 15, and one a month will be issued thereafter. "The Champion," with a screen time of approximately thirty minutes, will head the program. This will be followed by other equally humorous comedies, including "In the Park," "By the Sea," "A Woman," "Shanghied," "Work," "A Jitney Elopement," "The Bank," "A Night in the Show," and others. They will be distributed through the General Film Company, Inc.

Ann Pennington has begun work on her new Paramount picture, a charmingly written little comedy entitled "The Antics of Ann."

To Exhibitors of the United States:

DURING the last week we have received at our office nine telegrams and twenty-one letters from individual exhibitors of five states, all making similar complaints. The states complaining are Oklahoma, Indiana, North Carolina, Michigan and Wisconsin. Some of the larger advance deposit film companies are demanding of these exhibitors new contracts calling for larger deposits, and upon refusal of the exhibitor to pay same, they have threatened, and in some instances they have contracted with competitors for their programs.

This means that these companies are now trying to either seriously damage or put out of business the exhibitor who furnished them money in advance with which to manufacture their films, and to create their present attempted monopoly of stars.

Let every exhibitor in the United States, whether he be a member of the American Exhibitors' Association or not, send at once to this office a detailed statement of similar situations, so that the facts, figures and statistics may be compiled and that these companies may be given the publicity which they deserve in future bulletins which will be forthcoming from this office. Please act at once and furnish us complete information. If it becomes necessary for this organization to classify the manufacturers, we intend to do so.

Comedians to do Real Shooting

Two of Universal's leading comedians may soon be called upon to do some real honest-to-goodness shooting under the auspices of the Stars and Stripes.

They are William Franey and Milton Sims, leading fun-makers of the Joker comedy companies. Both were called in the selective draft and both, when examined this week, were passed by the medical examining board.

Screenshine

By Mel

ADDRESS IN CHICAGO BY DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

"This is terrible!

"You'll agree before I sit down.

"We got to be on that train in ten minutes, and I notice John and Benny are both in agony for fear I won't be.

"There is only one picture in ten worth seeing. (Loud applause.)

"Some day I'm going to make only one or two pictures a year.

"Chicago needs a big, beautiful, wonderful house just for pictures, like the Rialto or Strand in New York. There isn't a place here always giving the right kind of beauty and display to the productions for the screen.

"I don't know how I'm going to sit down, but the chicken looks mighty good and we got to be on that train!"

That's our idea of a darn good get-righ-up-and-say-it talk, right from the backbone and without even a so-called "story."

One evening last week we saw a piano player play the piano, talk with his girl on the first row, read a movie magazine and scratch the back of his neck, all in the space of two minutes—and the music sounded like it.

Sidney Abel, former Chicago Vitagraph manager, is now with the Select Pictures Corporation of New York.

A select company and so Abel a man ought to make a great combination.

MAKING A MAN OUT OF HER.

The generous sign writer who exercises his vari-colored art for the benefit of the Kenmore Theater on Wilson avenue added an "r" to the name of Olive Thomas when she was billed at that house and the big sign read, "Oliver Thomas in 'Whateveritwas'"

Bet the buxom little former Follies star would kick his paint buckets all over him if she knew the sign painter cheated her out of that much publicity.

In the picture house down in Clarkson, Mississippi, there is a little balcony used only by the colored patrons.

The manager calls it the "odor mezzanine."

A lady came into the Colonial in Chicago the other day and said she wanted the coolest seat in the house. So the girl gave her a seat in the Z row.

Why do directors do these things, evidently in their sleep? Always cast a mother with gray hair. Picture the girl's elopement at midnight from the old farm while Plymouth Rock chickens in the background peck and scratch when they ought to be at roost. How can the villain open a door, close a door, cross the room and stand behind a couple who remain unaware of his presence? Can't they hear nothing?

SUNDAY CLOSING IN MEMPHIS

New Mayor Instructs Police to Close Theaters, Soft Drink Stands, Pool Rooms, Etc.—Injunction by Picture Men.

By J. L. Ray.

Mayor Harry H. Litty, recently elected to office following ouster proceedings instituted against former Mayor Thomas C. Ashcroft, has set about the business of Sunday closing and enforcement of the antiquated "blue laws" with a rush. Statements were issued to the press the middle of last week to the effect that all laws governing the operation of theaters and moving picture shows on Sunday would be enforced to the letter, "not because they are right in my opinion, but because they are on the books," according to Mayor Litty.

The whole action is a result of a political turmoil of city affairs in Memphis, in which the mayor and several city officials were ousted from office, and the new mayor, evidently fearing a like fate, is playing on the safe side.

Police Inspector Hayes immediately issued orders to the police force, advising them of the mayor's order. The inspector was positive in his statement on Thursday preceding the effective date of the order that the amusement houses would be closed. He declared that his men would arrest the proprietors and require them to pay a forfeit, but that unlike other times when they have been arrested the theater men will not be permitted to return to their houses after making bond, but that after posting the forfeit the police would see to it that the houses stayed closed for the balance of the day. Complaints made to the city government that the laboring men would have no place of amusement to carry their families on Sunday other than the parks, etc., were answered by stating that former Mayor Ashcroft, so far as possible, had permitted the theaters to remain open, and had been ousted, and that every law on the statute books would be enforced to the letter to prevent a recurrence.

It was stated at the time that theaters which have been open on Sunday and have donated their profits to the Associated Charities would probably fight the order. Under a ruling of City Attorney Henry J. Livingston, so long as the profits went to charity they were within the law in remaining open on Sunday. It was hinted that the theater men and officials of the Associated Charities, which have benefited from the admission receipts, would join hands and test the validity of the order.

Sunday Injunction Prevents Closing

At a late hour Saturday an injunction was granted the theater managers, restraining city or county officials from closing the moving picture and vaudeville shows, and as a result Sunday, September 2, found the town "wide open" in so far as the theaters were concerned. Managers of two combination vaudeville and picture houses had complaints to make. The business of both these houses was hurt through the public's anticipation of a tight Sunday, which was brought about through the lack of publicity given issuance of the injunction, and the Sunday crowds were small in comparison to normal business, picking up, however, with each performance as the news spread. It was the last day of the first week at the Orpheum, and only about one-third of the seats were filled at the opening performance. The local Loew house had opened the season the day before, and suffered along the same lines as the Orpheum. The straight moving picture houses did not suffer to such a material extent. Followers of the screen productions, in their wanderings up and down Main street and in the neighborhood picture show localities, soon found their way to the bright lights over the film houses and a thriving business resulted.

Providing the injunction assumes a permanent aspect, the picture men have little to worry about. If, however, a vigorous fight is made against them, it will mean a revival of the strife arising some months ago when the Protestant Pastors' Association raised its several hands skyward to voice its earnest disapproval of Sunday opening. The Memphis managers are as hard a bunch of nuts to crack as one will find anywhere over the country, and when they set their heads on remaining open Sundays, they intend to remain open, regardless. The outcome of the fight will be watched with interest.

H. J. Brock Killed in Accident

Henry J. Brock, pioneer of the motion picture business and one of the most successful exhibitors in the country, met his death in an automobile accident at Kingston, N. Y., while motoring from New York City to his home in Buffalo, September 7.

Mr. Brock, who lived in Richmond avenue, Buffalo, was motoring to see his wife. He spent most of his time in New York, stopping at the Astor. His business headquarters were in the Candler Building. Looking after his interests in "The Manx Man," which Goldwyn purchased last week, kept Mr. Brock in New York later than he usually remained..

Mr. Brock was a brother-in-law of Mitchel H. Mark, president of the Strand Theater Corporation.

He was owner of theaters in various parts of Canada and Europe, and was one of the best known showmen in the United States.

He founded his fortune as the junior partner of the Mark-Brock Enterprises, an institution which founded the penny arcade system in the early days of motion pictures and of which Mitchel H. Mark, now president of the Strand company, was the senior member. The Mark-Brock Enterprises extended with the progress of the motion picture industry and acquired theaters and many rights all over this country and Canada. Mr. Mark withdrew from the firm, which was a Buffalo concern, and Mr. Brock succeeded to the growing business.

For the past few years Mr. Brock was wonderfully successful in the handling of feature films, and he controlled the rights to the best products of American producers for South and Central America, Great Britain, Canada and Australia. He operated on a large scale and was uniformly successful in this branch of the business. He owned or controlled a great many motion pictures in several countries and was considered a potent factor in that branch of amusement.

New Producer Ready

Arthur N. Smallwood, who will release the Aubrey Series of two reel Super-Comedies featuring James Aubrey, formerly featured as Heine in the "Heine and Louie Series," issued by Pathe, and in "Big V" Comedies by Vitagraph, announces that his producing organization has been fully recruited.

"The Warrior" With Maciste

The average feature exhibitor is well content when he can show his patrons a picture containing one or two bona fide "thrills," or in the parlance of the trade "punches." There has been keen rivalry during the past year among producers in their endeavors to furnish real "hair-raisers" in their offerings, but it remained for "The Warrior," with Maciste, star of "Cabiria," again in a heroic role, to be hailed unanimously by critics and public alike as the prize "punch" picture of the year. The seven part spectacle recently completed a remarkable run at the Criterion Theater, New York. The feats of strength and agility performed by the giant Maciste in his role of "The Warrior" seem beyond the accomplishment of mortal man, and the stamp of the superhuman is placed on the picture by his unbelievable feats.

"The Warrior," with Maciste, the giant of "Cabiria."

Picked at random from the variety of stunts which the Herculean picture player treats as child's play during his work in the film are the carrying of three good sized men with one hand, knocking down a full sized horse with one blow, uprooting a sturdy oak tree by the roots with his bare hands, leaping high over a parapet on horse back into the turbulent river below, and carrying upon his shoulders over the slippery crags of the Alps a gun carriage weighing five hundred pounds.

Lottie Pickford Again in Pictures

Lottie Pickford is coming back to the screen. The younger sister of the famous Mary has decided to come forth from her retirement of the past few years and again take her place in the motion picture scheme of things. Remembering her early success in "The Diamond from the Sky," an American production, Miss Pickford likes the idea of being the star of another serial and is negotiating with the Pathe Company, "The House of Serials," at present writing.

Miss Pickford, on her way from Los Angeles to New York, stayed a short time in Chicago. Her New York sojourn, its purpose an interview with J. A. Berst of Pathe, is to be of only four days duration. Then she will return to Los Angeles and the Pickford family, which includes her celebrated small daughter.

"I don't care what sort of a role I play, if I like the company and surroundings," says Miss Lottie. "I like serials. They certainly give the kiddies enjoyment, and the likes of the youngsters count in the picture business. I love comedies, comedy-dramas, I mean. I would like to play light comedy roles."

Lottie Pickford's distinguishing characteristic is her quick sense of fun. She has the wide grey eyes and black hair of the typical Irish girl and the ready wit, keen without malice. We hope she is never put in any gloomy plays.

Pickfords and pictures have a wonderful affinity, it seems. Even while Miss Pickford greeted her friends at the station in Chicago, a Pathe weekly cameraman lurked in the background and caught the scene, Lottie in the center, almost buried in roses, armed with a ukulele, and surrounded by newspaper people. Then, a few minutes later, on the way across town to catch the train for New York, Miss Pickford and her escort, C. W. Bunn, of the local Pathe office, were arrested for speeding!

Welcome back to pictures, Lottie, and good luck!

Love With World

Montagu Love has been re-engaged for World-Pictures Brady-Made under a contract covering the next twenty-four months. During this period Mr. Love will be either "starred" or "featured" in all productions in which he takes part, and the agreement also provides for a substantial increase in the monetary compensation for his services.

Fairbanks Film Cut En Route

The new Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft picture, "The Man from Painted Post," was cut and assembled during the recent transcontinental trip of the Fairbanks organization from Los Angeles to New York City. As soon as the special car carrying the players and technical staff left Los Angeles, Director Joseph Henaberry, assisted by Billy Shay, immediately commenced work on the film in an improvised work-room. Throughout the entire trip the two worked many hours a day with the result that when the company arrived in New York the film was practically complete and merely required a few finishing touches.

"The Man from Painted Post" will more than please the thousands of Fairbanks admirers, it is expected, because of the fact that the picture is typically Fairbanks. Among his many athletic feats performed in this photoplay is a leap from the top of a porch onto the back of a horse, which is undoubtedly the most daring ever taken even by the reckless Douglas. The picture will be released by Artcraft early in October.

The Positiveness of Picture Vice and Virtue

MOVIE-GOERS want their characters stark, unmodified, villainy and heroism undiluted. So vanishes from the film all nuance, all complexity, all delineation. That, at least, is the criticism S. N. Behrman constructs in "The New Republic."

No doubt he is right. No doubt Intellect could weep for the crudities of picture composition, for the rough force that twists things as they are into things as the play-goers want them—or, worse still, as the producers think they want them.

The scientific dramatologist begs for half tones. Picture morals are almost invariably done in blacks and whites. The villain must be wholly bad in obvious ways. He cannot even make the slips that you and I may make occasionally without introducing other dark deeds to prove his vicious character. The heroine's virtue must not lag, or she ceases at once to be a heroine and becomes a villainess. And before the five thousand feet is done retribution must hurry in and take its stark, grim, uncompromising place. Unconditional surrender! Thumbs down for all malefactors and weaklings, great and small, and punishment within the hour.

It annoys the analyst that the films seem designed to please Mrs. Grundy, who is very particular on the point of morals. The estimable lady especially enjoys sex plays, because delinquencies meet punishment so much more prompt and drastic than that meted out in real life—which, it must be confessed, too frequently overlooks the matter of retribution altogether.

Considering Mr. Behrman's review as a guide to better work, we have the same fault to find with it that applies to all such earnest criticisms. Its author is what is called "intellectual." He must be or he could not so cleverly have handled his subject. And all these intellectualists—to their everlasting honor be it said—take it for granted the world's thinking machinery functions the same as theirs. They lack conceit enough to realize that they are of the few, and that the fine things they enjoy are for them alone. Of course they are not in the ultra violet; but their thought-wave frequencies are higher than yours and mine. The high-brow stuff, as we would say coarsely, is over our heads.

Because this is a business and not an art gallery, we can never take much time for the intellectual half tones—though the art gallery is infinitely finer in every way, and we all would rather work for a jury of artists than to compete with the amusement park and the pool-room as a "public attraction." You see, the very maintenance of this business—mark the word—depends upon the dimes of those who come to us to escape thinking of anything, and whose ability to appreciate half tones is, we fear, overrated by our critics.

Nevertheless, those of the finer sensibilities have some hope if they will be patient with us. Once, not long since, it was held that a motion picture was but a drab affair unless it was filled with motion. "Keep moving" was the recipe for success in the new art. One of our great masters (yes, we have had at least one) finally ended that by succeeding without it. It may be that some will arise with enough wisdom to be subtle and human in that direction.

For we of the human race are subtle—make no question about it. Those of us who are crooks, and black at heart, often carry a beneficent countenance and a proud and righteous bearing. Because even the worst of real life scoundrels has convinced himself that he is right and good. But the picture rascal knows he is wrong and bad, and so carries himself that all may know it. That is one of the discrepancies between little art and big life that so distress the leisured analysts.

We suspect that the picture made by the critic's recipe would gain much approbation among the intellectuals, and would lose money. Of course, being pessimistic about the public's intelligence, we may be wrong. Perhaps a properly made story, built on human standards instead of along the Billiken lines of things as they ought to be, would sound hitherto unplumbed depths of "common-people" perspicacity.

The question will be answered when some ardent soul, with faith in place of avarice, opens a "Little Theater" of the films. But it will be hard going for him who sells stock in the enterprise.

Stunts

IN the exhibiting business a "stunt" is any peculiar, unusual or spectacular method used to attract attention to the show, either in advertising it or in presenting it. Readers of MOTOGRAPHY will recall many such stunts, described in its pages by their successful originators, and it is unnecessary to give further examples here.

There seems to be discernable a growing tendency on the part of exhibitors to regard the practice of stunt-making as beneath their dignity. What ever may be the cause of this attiture, there is little in it that smacks of business sense, or of knowledge of human nature.

The public loves stunts just as much as it ever did. Every successful advertising campaign, on commodities from automobiles to chewing-gum, uses some method which would classify under that head. And it is obvious that the picture show business, with its ever-changing subjects and titles, offers wider opportunity to the stunt-maker than possibly any other line of effort.

Here and there, of course, we still see enterprising exhibitors using new and clever ideas to force their features—or, better still, their theaters—on the attention of the public. These scarce examples fare the better for their lack of competition.

But if opportunities to advertise the show in a novel manner are frequently, or we may say customarily overlooked, the chances to present the pictures in unusual ways are still more badly neglected. The exhibitor who simply puts a picture on a screen is not doing the most he can, but the least.

It is as safe as any general rule to say that the exhibitor who does more than merely to put on a picture is the one who rises to the top and who really makes money out of the picture theater business. Most of our biggest and most successful exhibitors have been stunt-users. Maybe they did not call their ingenious additions to the attractiveness of the picture by that name; but that does not matter. The fact remains that their rise was accomplished by their own intelligent effort, and not by the excellence of the pictures they rented from some exchange.

It is generally the little exhibitor who refuses to use stunts of any kind—who refuses to improve his musical equipment or use any sound or lighting effects or do any "crazy" advertising. And he and his profits are doomed to remain little—if, indeed, they do not dwindle to nothing and go out.

Ingenuity, we repeat, is the keynote of success in the picture show business—and, we regret to add, the rarest quality in the picture show business. The wonder is, not that some theaters are failing, but that so many manage to continue without doing any more show work than is required in paying rent and wages. Those exhibitors who like to complain that pictures are not as good as they should be must admit, on reflection, that they are pretty good after all to draw patronage without any help from the showman.

Penny Pictures for 100,000

BY H. E. DOWNER

Director Friendly House Social Center, Davenport, Iowa.

FRIENDLY HOUSE is the center of the most populous region of Davenport, Iowa.

The neighborhood is not a slum, although very many poor people live near. Most of the neighbors are people who take care of themselves and pay their debts, but have no margin left to furnish the culture, recreation and social life that a settlement house brings. In this overgrown box of a place, the audience room seats any number. We have had some audiences of 1,500 at entertainments arranged by the nearby public schools. In this auditorium when we purchased the building a very prosperous picture theater was being conducted. The settlement trustees and residents having a strong belief in the wholesome mission of motion pictures gladly took over the whole equipment, Motiograph, screen, booth and wiring and made ready to help the world in this particularly delightful way.

Friendly House of Davenport, Iowa, where thousands of children are entertained by pictures. Read this interesting story and learn some points on children's likes and dislikes.

Audiences of 3,000

The first Friday and Saturday of 1913 invitation audiences of perhaps 3,000 saw the first pictures at Friendly House. Our plan was to run the same pictures—five reels—to paid admissions Friday and Saturday evenings and to free audiences of children Saturday forenoon and afternoon. Our programs were secured from the General Film Company and were admirable. We asked for two reels of educational pictures, two of comedy and a topical reel.

We rubber stamped tickets for two showings in the forenoon of Saturday and three in the afternoon, distributing them through the public and parochial schools. We lined up the audiences at the front of the building and dismissed them through the side street exits. We handled crowds of children through the aid of good natured school folks used to such work. With the loss of novelty, a tremendous influence with young people, the attendance decreased. We were willing. Our attendance from January through April was almost 37,000, and while we were glad to reach so many it was a strenuous job all around.

We quickly found that our plan of having the two evenings pay expenses was a failure. The patrons of the pictures formerly run at our theater did not care for our offerings. They came once. Some stayed the five reels out. Others waddled out in search of something livelier, handing the settlement resident on the door something like "Nix wehrt." ("No good.") The programs were fine. In the interest of the educational feature of the occasion running comment by the "head resident" was indulged in when films seemed to need comment. This became burdensome to those of the audience who could read the titles and were following along all right. Fearing the effect of trying to graft the Rollo books of our boyhood days on these shoots of the new art lecturing the pictures were discontinued. As we went along we learned something about the new line of educational effort every once in a while. But even to this day some words of explanation are given when absolutely needed. The rarity of the effort brings attention from the audience.

Pictures of our brand soon demonstrated their ability to pay out. Ye ran away behind. The Friday film rental was cut off. When the project was well on the rocks with a deficit of $100, a check from an observant trustee floated the boat once more. The children brought armfuls of newspapers and old books. Treasured magazines dated back to the Civil War went into the junkman's wagon from the theater entrance.

Old iron helped, and scraps of rubber. Occasionally some man followed the children in through curiosity, took in the meaning of the whole thing, and chipped in. We printed coupon books and these had some sale. Finally our financial troubles through furnishing high grade pictures to the multitude were ended by the General Film people in the Chicago office telling us that they felt just like playing Santa Claus to Friendly House children all through the settlement season and there would be no rental bills. Since then we have pulled even. Our expenses have been $4.50 each Saturday to the operator, union rates for nine hours' careful work, the express charges on film from Chicago, 75 cents for three boys who work the piano, the same sum for the three boys on the door, $4 to $5 a month for current and an indefinite sum for carbons.

One Cent Admission

We changed the plan from free admission for children to a 1 cent charge, to the great benefit of the patronage in self-respect. The children call it the penny show and are quite satisfied that they get their money's worth. This charge of 1 cent is the usual settlement fee for the lessons in cooking, sewing, folk dancing and other activities. The head resident is becoming used to being pointed out in an audible manner in gatherings as "the penny show man."

Audience Sings From Screen

The patronage has the childish habit of coming well ahead of the hour for the doors to open that nothing be missed. We have consequently opened the doors earlier and keep them busy with a stereopticon and the piano. From 1:30 o'clock to 2 each Saturday afternoon we sing. All sorts of songs are thrown on the screen and the audience fills its lungs and sings. We have much patriotism and old time songs and the newer ones that the big sister sings to her "gent'l'men friends" in the evening. Pretty trashy, some of the songs, but when a bunch of children are going to look at your kind of pictures for three hours they ought to have a little leeway. We print the slides in the settlement drookery, where the programs and the journal of civilization, "The Friendly Chat," are printed. The audience grows rapidly. The youngsters drop into the chairs and join the chorus. It gets to be a big audience some Saturdays and a big chorus, close to a thousand of them sometimes, and they do sing.

The principal reason why they sing so willingly, I think, is because nobody asks them to. And they behave —surely they do. The strong arm business disappeared years ago. The discipline of the picture days is furnished by the head resident, who is too fat to be fierce, and his 90-pound wife. Occasionally there is an altercation wherein some patron gets a bit of a kick in what he calls his "slats," while another gentlemanly patron gets his hair yanked. But it is nothing serious. The bad actors are haled to the rear with much flourish and handed their pennies back with great publicity and set out in the cold.

The evening penny patrons are expected to go home at 9 o'clock unless under the parental wing and the wing has paid the adult gate money of five cents. Before we made this rule we were expected to care for small people until 10 o'clock while their parents joined the kaleidoscopic throng on the down town streets of a Saturday night. Our penny show became a sort of dry nursery for many small people who ought to have been home in bed. A pretty dry nursery it was for them, as many of them had already seen the pictures for three hours in the forenoon and three hours in the afternoon and the element of surprise had long departed. The only fun these small patrons had was telling the others in the row what was coming. "Now watch; now watch," etc.

Small Boy Relieves Audience

One of these all-day patrons through parental pressure created a ripple of amusement one evening. A small scrap of cheerfulness named Kathie Fischer was the star of the picture comedy. Snubbed by all of her story family, she determined to disgrace the household by going swimming with the boys. Watched by the audience, the cute little damsel ran to the creek where the boys were splashing, and commenced taking off one piece of small feminine apparel after another. There wasn't much raiment left and Kathie's friends were wondering a little when they were reassured by the small boy on the front seat. "But she don't take off her pants. She don't take off her pants," he yelped until he was reached and suppressed.

Some Children Prefer Educationals

Some of the children like to understand what they see and ask many questions. Comedy has its devotees, but many of the children have preferred the educational picture and tell about it with intelligence. The teachers in the nearby schools speak of how often the children refer to the Friendly House pictures in recitations.

General Film Furnishes Free Programs

The selection of the program has been entirely in the hands of the General Film folks in Chicago. Only two or three times in the five years the hand of the good fairy who has packed the box has wandered and some comedy too raw for children or some story with a criminal incident has caused a substitution from local sources of supply. It is a remarkable record of judiciousness joined to generosity—the list of pictures furnished us without cost, year after year. We appreciate the General Film greatly at Friendly House. It is no trick at all to get some pennies together for a box of cigars to send to Chicago at Christmas time or if it is a lady who packs the wonder box in the shipping department the offering of yuletide goodwill is a box of chocolates.

Our equipment has been used for other things than the Saturday pictures. "Camp Fires" have sold tickets and enjoyed benefits. The local military organization used the plant for a benefit with pictures of the state camp. The Press club of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline had an evening of professional pictures. Each year patriotic pictures furnish a portion of the program when the new Americans, naturalized during the year, are given a reception at Friendly House. The medical organizations of the vicinity had private showings of notable pictures in which they were interested. The Rotary Club has entertained audiences of children at Christmas time with the best pictures they could rent. One winter the settlement had a series of Pleasant Sunday Afternoons, two hours' programs of pictures and music by good natured professionals and talented amateurs. The pictures came from the engineering extension department of the Iowa Sate College at Ames. Pictures are likely to find some place on almost any program given in the theater at the settlement by outside organizations. Our Christmas gatherings are entertained by pictures. We believe in pictures thoroughly as a means of reaching people and influencing them for good.

What Children Like

We have learned some things since January 3, 1913, when we commenced showing pictures to children. We have had a mighty good chance to learn. At the risk of seeming dogmatic, let us write a few of them. I wish my wife were here to help me remember.

The school is the place for educational pictures; the theater is the place for amusement. If the children do not get the pictures they want they will stay away. Children care little for love stories, and not at all for the eternal triangle. Children are not impressed as much by distressing scenes on the screen as the older people in the audience, although some imaginative children suffer more. Children like funny films and have especial joy in the broad comedy, the knock-about stuff, which might seem anything but humorous to grown people. They like to see the same comedians week after week and delight in feeling acquainted with them.

They like adventure. They enjoy travel films. But the scenic—a scenic on the screen will send half the audience clattering their heels toward the bubble fountains and toilet rooms. Only once in five years have I heard our audience applaud a scenic. Otherwise they do applaud. A newly employed operator is apt to be stampeded by the whirlwind of joy that encircles him. Anybody who never heard several hundred children laugh is invited to Friendly House to get an earful. Children delight in stories in which children take part if the young actors and actresses are clever. They are no more interested in a stupid kid on the screen than anywhere else.

Runs House From October to May 2

Our pictures have begun each year October 1 and run until May 1. Our attendance sags at Christmas time and at the end of the season. No screen can compete for childish attention with the glorious outdoors in springtime. Our Saturday forenoon attendance has steadily decreased, and this coming season, if we run pictures, we will limit the showings to the afternoon from 2 to 5 and the evening from 7 to 10. The doubt in the foregoing sentence is due to the uncertainty as to whether the General Film Chicago office feels that it is up to them in any way to go on giving service for nothing.

[Editor's Note: Manager Scates of the Chicago General Film Office has stated to MOTOGRAPHY that his company will continue this free service.]

Novel Admission Prices

Our friendly House has won a fair measure of popularity in the community through its service at the points where service seems to be neded. One membership in classes and clubs was about 800 last year. We have almost reached our capacity to be useful in this plant. We have almost 100 people helping and in the busy portion of the year our attendance runs about 10,000 each month. No activity has attracted more attention or been of more lasting benefit, I am sure, than our department of motion pictures. Our attendance total on the Saturday pictures since January 1, 1913, is now 9,877 adults and 103,003 children. We have begun upon our second 100,000 order of roll tickets since we began to sell tickets at the door. By the way, we had one novelty at our Pleasant Sunday Afternoons. The admission scale ran: For adults 5 cents, for children with adults 1 cent; for families, number unlimited 10 cents; for children flying wild, 25 cents.

NEW TRIANGLERS

Departments All Augmented by Addition of More Than Twenty New Players, Directors and Scenario Writers

More than twenty new players, scenario writers and directors have been added to the Triangle Culver City forces alone since the reorganization of the company, and it is reported that negotiations are now under way to obtain the services of several more stars and production experts.

Among the most important of those recently engaged is Richard Bret Harte, grandson of the famous writer. Mr. Harte will devote his time to preparing original stories for the screen, drawing on a rich fund of experiences during his life in this country and abroad.

Texas Guinan, whose engagement was officially announced last week, is already a favorite of the public by reason of her musical comedy success.

"The Devil Dodger," a forthcoming Western drama, will present Roy Stewart as gunfighter for the first time in the Triangle program. Stewart is master of all the tricks of horsemanship, it is said, having owned and operated a ranch in Mexico prior to the disturbances there some time ago.

Belle Bennett is another "find" for whom a wide popularity is predicted. Her first appearance before the Triangle cameras was in "Valley of Fear," to be released the middle of September. She is now working on "Ashes of Hope," a play similar in locale and action to "The Flame of the Yukon," one of Triangle's greatest successes.

Arthur Hoyt, whose most recent appearance was in the title role of "Mr. Opp," has become a member of the Triangle Players' Company and will appear in roles of the type which he has interpreted with remarkable success during the past.

Claire MacDowell, featured in numerous recent plays produced by other companies, has been added to the Triangle lists for leading roles.

Ruth Stonehouse, already one of the film favorites of the day, has started work on a Triangle production, the title of which has not been decided upon.

Margery Wilson, who has attracted attention for her work in Triangle plays, comes forth as a star in "Mountain Dew," on the program for the week of September 16.

Among the other new names that appear on the roster of the stock company is that of George Cheseboro, who has played leading roles in numerous productions, his most recent being in support of Arthur Hoyt in "Mr. Opp." He will act as leading man for Olive Thomas in "Broadway, Arizona," just completed. George Hernandez, George C. Pearce, Gloria Madien, Carolyn Wagner, and others whose names are known to the film fans, will shortly appear in Triangle offerings.

The directorial staff has been augmented by the addition of Lynn F. Reynolds, Jack Conway, E. Mason Hopper, Ferris Hartman, Thomas H. Heffron and William V. Mong.

"ADVENTURER" DELAYED

Illness of Edna Purviance, Chaplin's Leading Lady, Holds Up Comedian's Latest Side Splitter—Last Scenes Now in Filming

Charlie Chaplin has resumed work at the Lone Star studio, Hollywood, California, on the last scenes of his twelfth Mutual special, "The Adventurer," which was delayed, first by the illness of the famous comedian himself and more recently by an indisposition of Edna Purviance, Mr. Chaplin's leading woman.

Miss Purviance, who had been in the Good Samaritan hospital near Hollywood since August 19, appeared at the studio looking little worse for her illness, which is declared to have been due to the strain of continuous rehearsal.

Mr. Chaplin's new play is considered by the world's highest priced comedian to be his best production.

In the new piece Mr. Chaplin has cast himself as an escaped convict who is chased from pillar to post by vigilant sheriffs who always miss him by just enough distance to make the series of escapes and pursuits highly picturesque and sensational.

In his laughable evasions of capture, Charlie is aided, of course, by pretty Edna Purviance—the same little Edna whose adventures with Mr. Chaplin have extended over the entire Mutual series of pictures.

The new film is one of the most pretentious scenically and dramatically ever produced under Mutual-Chaplin auspices. Much of the action takes place in picturesque outdoor locations, showing Chaplin climbing mountain sides, slithering through rocky gullies on tender feet, hiding in all sorts of impossible places and anon making quick attacks on his numerous enemies, vanquishing them in characteristic Chaplin fashion.

BROWN TALKS ON BOOKINGS

Says Exhibitors' Difficulty Solved Not by Program, Open Booking or Selective Star Series, but by Combination of All

By Nat. I. Brown

One man says program booking is the only rational system on which to conduct a moving picture theater.

Another man says the open booking plan is the only one to follow.

Another man says that the selective star series method only will assure success.

Another man says none of these are right; he can't state any other plan, but he is sure they are all wrong.

The truth is that each of these plans possesses essentials of right, valuable if appreciated and properly applied. Why not combine the real benefits of all plans and profit by them?

The program system is unquestionably the most logical, for it furnishes substantial assurance of the basis of a strong bill and eliminates a very important element of doubt.

No sane man would build or lease a dramatic or vaudeville house without knowing where his attractions are coming from and the general merit of what he has to depend on to draw people to his theater.

The moving picture manager who books a program is in just the same position as the vaudeville man. He puts on a good program bill, but being enterprising and desiring to give his patrons an entertainment they will apprecite and talk about, he puts in a star feature film, secured either on the open booking system or under the selective star series method.

What is the result? He has a well balanced bill and puts on a show that sends his patrons away with the opinion that he is a generous provider and is deserving of support.

The program will ever be the real foundation of moving picture exhibition, for it is certain in contract and of fixed charge. It enables an exhibitor to constantly secure the foundation of his bill under such conditions, and at such prices, as will enable him to figure with some degree of certainty just what his operating charges are going to be on the week and to what expense he can reasonably go to provide special star attractions.

The merit of program pictures, like the real merit of star feature pictures, varies somewhat. A big legitimate star may have an exceptionally strong vehicle one season and a mediocre play the next. The same condition prevails in all picture production. An absolute standard of excellence in a program cannot be maintained, but average merit can.

The open booking system appeals strongly to the man who has not experienced its uncertainties. He thinks, at first blush, that he can be a real "picture picker"; display not a little discrimination and make a big record for selecting the best productions made.

Open bookings (indiscriminate booking of pictures of various makes and subjects) will never prove successful or satisfactory to the manager of a moving picture theater, for he has nothing to gain by it as a system except an advance in rentals.

Because of lack of responsibility behind most open booking features—a program name carries responsibility which must be met in quality—a manager depending on the open booking system for success will be forced to see run a large part of what he books.

Imagine what that means! He will spend much of his time in a projection room selecting what he may desire to play, whereas, under a program booking contract he knows he will get good pictures, for the program cannot afford to kill itself by putting out bad pictures.

Many fine pictures get on the market through open booking channels. They cannot be disregarded, and here is where the wise booking manager will avail himself of conditions favorable to him in the open booking system and use them to his advantage. Combination of the valuable parts of the open booking system with the program system, wisely made through the selection of big features offered in open market, brings together two elements which are important to a well balanced moving picture theater management.

The argument for the star series selective method is also a strong one. This system makes for certainty to both producer and exhibitor. On the one hand, the producer is proceeding on that certainty which comes from knowing just what his market is and what he can get for his pictures. On the other hand, the exhibitor can secure a series of pictures of a star most popular with his patrons, under such conditions, and at such cost, that he is enabled to so figure his other bookings that he can "cut his coat according to his cloth."

The selective star series method is really a step forward, meeting public demand for constant advancement in quality of entertainment. The history of the theater, in this respect, is being repeated in the moving picture. Competitive production and public demand means constantly bigger and better things; and these can only be provided on such a basis as the selective star series method of booking makes possible.

So, instead of the adherents of any of these systems getting out in the open and shrieking his views with the vehemence of an intolerant fanatic, he would far better study in what way the other fellow's idea may hook up with his.

Peter Pan Man Reports

R. M. Vandivert, vice-president and general manager of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, who has just returned from a trip covering the distribution centers of the country, in connection with the policy of extension of the Peter Pan Organization, has made an exhaustive study of the conditions of the independent market. Mr. Vandivert is an authority on sales conditions, and his opinions on this subject are always based on a sound business judgment. In an interview in his office recently, he gave an outline of the results of his investigations:

Throughout the West and South I found that the exhibitors wish to book short features. They are coming to see the necessity of taking the likes and dislikes of their patrons more and more into account, and the desire of the public is turning toward this type of picture.

Added to this, the exchanges are demanding exorbitant prices for their long features, and only the large theater owners can afford to pay them. The small exhibitor is entirely left out. Consequently, they are making up their programs from the shorter features, primarily a number of two reelers and one reelers.

To fulfill this demand we have inaugurated our new policy, and have every assurance of success. The Motoy Comedies have already become popular, and we are adding to these, weekly releases of Miroar and Black Magic Comedies, as well as the Shadographs and the "Honeymooners," the last being the adventures of our bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Schayer, whom we are sending on a wedding trip around the world.

The young lady above asking Mr. Empty Pockets to shell out is Juliette Day as she appears in "The Rainbow Girl," Mutual release for September 17.

The Diana in the oval is Edna Goodrich. The captain of the submarine chaser on the right is Margarita Fischer in "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up," a new Mutual Comedy.

MUTUAL SCHEDULE

Margarita Fischer, Juliette Day and Helen Holmes Gleam in Mutual Offerings for Week of September 17

Mutual's schedule for the week of September 17 contains three productions of unusual interest. Margarita Fischer is starred in "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up," a five-reel comedy drama listed for Monday, September 17. Juliette Day, who deserted the footlights of Broadway for the Santa Barbara studios, is released in "The Rainbow Girl," a five-reel drama, on the same date.

"The Lost Express," the first chapter of "The Lost Express," fifteen chapter Signal-Mutual photonovel, is scheduled for first run on September 17 also. The program for the week includes "Officer Jerry," a one-reel Cub comedy, Mutual Weekly, the current events reel and Reel Life, the one-reel magazine of film.

"The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up" is a rollicking comedy and provides Miss Fischer with a role well suited to her abilities. She wears middy and trousers, and an oversized dress suit and pajamas. She is a mischievous college girl, loved by a British nobleman who masquerades in his valet's place while his valet is being lavishly entertained by the girl's stepmother and her daughters at papa's home in the mountains. The plot brings in a dozen intricate and comical situations which provide Miss Fischer with splendid chances for fast comedy action. The picture isn't all funny, for there are a lot of serious situations.

Miss Fischer's illness followed the production of "The Devil's Assistant" and she has spent most of the summer recuperating. "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up" shows that she has regained her health and her energy and that she is the same beautiful Margarita who scored so heavily in "The Pearl of Paradise" and "Miss Jackie of the Navy."

Miss Day, star in "Upstairs and Down," during its successful run on Broadway, went to the Pacific Coast early in the spring to produce a series of pictures for the American Film Company for Mutual release and "The Rainbow Girl" is the first completed for presentation.

Miss Day's value at the box office lies in her fame on the legitimate stage, but that is quite sufficient to attract the crowd. When Broadway will part with its money, night after night, to see an actress and she reaches the point where she is styled a hit, photoplay fans want to see her on the screen. Miss Day is declared to screen well, and she is known to be a clever little actress. "The Rainbow Girl" is a crack story. The picture was directed by Rollin S. Sturgeon.

The Cub comedy "Officer Jerry," released on September 20, gives George Ovey the role of a masquerading policeman in which he goes through a series of humorous situations. Reel Life No. 73, the release of September 20, carries scenes showing the making of army rifles, running an aeroplane without danger, portrays the principle of the gyroscope and animated drawings from Life. Mutual Weekly, scheduled for September 19, includes current events up to the time the reel is assembled.

New Exhibitors' Quarters

The American Exhibitors' Association has taken new quarters on the twentieth floor of the Times Building, New York. It became necessary to take new offices in order to handle the increased business of the association.

Hundreds of applications for membership are received daily, many from exhibitors who have never before been allied with any exhibitors' organization. The realization that at last there has been formed among the exhibitors of the country an association that is free from any alliance with any trade journal or any manufacturer is meeting with approval from thinking exhibitors who are expressing a willingness to join an association of exhibitors which works solely for their interests.

The action of the state bodies in Virginia, Indiana, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Michigan, South Carolina, Georgia and other states in affiliating with the American Exhibitors' Association is evidence of the fact that the exhibitors are awake to the fact that this organization means to stand for exhibitors only.

"A Rich Man's Plaything"

"A Rich Man's Plaything," a picture of strong dramatic action, will be the William Fox Special Feature release for the week of September 30.

The biggest role that has fallen to Carlyle Blackwell in some time is the title part in "The Burglar."

States Join "American Exhibitors"

"The action of the exhibitors' convention at Ocean View, Virginia, illustrates that the exhibitors of the country have awakened to the fact that the American Exhibitors' Association is made up of men who have the interests of the owners of motion picture theaters at heart," said Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the A. E. A. He continued:

Before the state organizations represented at the Virginia convention became affiliated with our organization the delegates carefully studied our plans and principles and then unanimously applied for membership in the American Exhibitors' Association.

The fact that as state bodies in Virginia, Indiana, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Michigan, South Carolina, District of Columbia, Arkansas, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Georgia, Kentucky and other states they have joined the A. E. A. speaks for itself.

Already our organizations in Illinois, New York, New Jersey, the New England States and Pennsylvania are very strong and growing rapidly.

What impresses me most is that we have succeeded in interesting men who have had heretofore no interest in exhibitors' organizations.

We realize that meeting with the approval of the exhibitors as we have, it is up to the officers of the association to merit this confidence which is piling upon us in leaps and bounds. We all recognize our responsibilities and will work unceasingly to the end that we may be able to maintain the standard of efficiency as set out in our platform, pledging the making of this organization a powerful weapon in the hands of exhibitors for exhibitors only.

I can't help but be pleased and elated over our success. It is really wonderful the way the exhibitors are responding. Their responses fully convince me that they have wanted this kind of an organization badly, else we would not have received this practically unanimous vote of approval.

Triangles for September 16

Margery Wilson's first starring play, "Mountain Dew," will be released on the Triangle program for the week of September 16, together with "Flying Colors," in which William Desmond is starred.

Being a Kentucky girl, Miss Wilson is naturally adapted to her role in "Mountain Dew," which has as its locale the Blue Grass state. Miss Wilson is seen as a wild sprite of the mountains who knows nothing of "larnin'" and is not worried over the deficiency. Her father is a grim pioneer, whom people say is engaged in an illicit traffic peculiar to the Cumberland Mountains. When a good-looking youth, in the person of Charlie Gunn, comes to the region in search of material for a novel, he meets the spirited young Kentucky miss with the flashing black eyes and fiery temper. She so attracts him that he decides to accept the position as "boss of the school" for the ensuing year. He also determines to teach Margery a little concerning the three "R's," though on one occasion he is compelled to hold her father at the point of a gun while he puts her through a reading lesson. The story is said to have not a little whimsical humor and a plot of novel twists and suspense.

In "Flying Colors" Bill Desmond has the role of a Yale athlete who puts to practical account some of the dare-devil stunts he learned at college when, in dire straits, he accepts a position as detective in the home of a prominent society matron, who has been robbed of jewels from time to time during the course of a house party. Bill is not much concerned in the detecting game until he meets a blithe young debutante. He immediately proposes, and then asks what she would consider a comfortable income. "Forty thousand dollars a year would do nicely," she chirps. Thereupon the young gentleman determines to get busy with the detective work in the vain hope of earning the amount required for the lady's sustenance. The work of apprehending the guilty guest, the athletic methods which Desmond employs in overcoming the thief, and the love affair between the embryo Sherlock Holmes and the pretty $40,000 a year girl lends excitement and thrills to the plot.

Manhattan Local Meets

The meeting of the Manhattan Local No. 1 Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, was held September 5, at the headquarters, 218 West 42nd street, New York City, President Martineau presiding. The meeting was opened with an address by one of the four minute men, who took for his subject the co-operation of the exhibitors in and around Greater New York.

The matter of expressage of film was taken up by a committee composed of exchangemen representing the F. I. L. M. Club. Mr. Chadwick acted as its spokesman. The exchangemen asked for co-operation, and a committee was appointed with power to act with a view to a final settlement of the delivery system.

After Mr. Ochs, national president, spoke of the work accomplished by the National Executive Committee, a discussion of the music tax situation was taken up. This was followed by a discussion as to the advisability of taking up new headquarters. It was suggested by one member that the local take an entire building with four floors, located between 46th and 49th streets, near Broadway, the building to be shared with the F. I. L. M. Club, thereby creating a better feeling among all parties interested. A committee was appointed with power to act, to co-operate with a committee from the F. I. L. M. Club, on these suggestions.

The meeting was well attended and harmonious. The resignation of Samuel Trigger as a member of Local No. 1 was tendered by William Hilkemeir and Morris Needles. On motion the resignation was accepted.

Essanay Taylor Holmes Plays

Essanay has completed the production of three pictures in which Taylor Holmes, the stage comedian, is featured. A fourth is now in the making. "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," the first of this series, and, incidentally, the star's initial screen vehicle, was released September 3. The second picture, entitled "Fools For Luck," will be released October 8. This production is a screen version of Kennett Harris' story, "Talismans," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. It hinges on a youth's desperate attempts to woo Dame Fortune by a rigid observance of all the omens of luck, including the horse-shoe, the rabbit's left hind foot, spilled salt, ladders, etc. This picture will be followed in November with the release of "Two-Bit Seats," and "The Small Town Guy" will be the title of the December releases. The George Kleine System will distribute these films.

Pettijohn in Canada

Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, has left New York to attend the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Canada to be held at St. John, N. B., September 8th and 9th. Mr. Pettijohn received an invitation from W. O. Golding, president of the Canadian exhibitors' organization.

Exhibitors Like Goldwyn Pictures

SIGNING UP FAST—MARGARET MAYO TO STAY BY SCREEN

COINCIDENT with the release of "Polly of the Circus" throughout North America, Margaret Mayo, its author, the famous woman playwright, announces her retirement from all active work in the theater to devote all of her time and energies in the future to the screen for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, of which she is one of the active owners and factors. Big producers in the theater have loaned their pens and attention to the screen before, but no playwright of her rank and standing has ever before bade the theater farewell to engage solely in writing and production for the cinema.

Margaret Mayo combines a trinity of talents in the theater—and even more. First, she is an author and playwright; second, she is one of the ablest and most skilled stage managers identified with the theater, with an uncanny gift for pictorial situation; third, she is herself an actress of established reputation on the American stage. It will be obvious to all who see her first picture that Miss Mayo's hand is revealed in virtually every foot of the production, even to the cutting and titling. She aided actively in cutting and assembling the picture and personally did all of the titles.

Miss Mayo is the author of many plays and four of them have been tremendous successes, not only in America but in foreign lands as well. Her greatest plays are "Polly of the Circus," now converted into photo-drama; "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds," each of which is known to audiences in many countries.

George Loane Tucker's picturization of Hall Caine's most famous story, "The Manxman," is to be distributed throughout the United States and Canada by Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. This tremendous picture is just completing a four weeks' run at the Criterion Theater, New York, where it has played to enormous business and won the praise of all of the New York newspapers, as well as the approval of thousands of exhibitors in the metropolitan territory.

It has been announced with one of the strongest advertising campaigns ever waged in the industry. Further widespread exploitation will at once be carried on by Goldwyn. One by one, it will be noticed, Goldwyn is gathering in strong attractions in addition to its own scheduled output of twenty-six pictures a year.

William Fox Books Goldwyn Pictures

Goldwyn Pictures will be presented to every theater in William Fox's chain of great amusement institutions. Under the terms of a contract made between Mr. Fox himself, Samuel Goldfish, Charles Levine, general manager of the Fox amusement enterprises, and John Zanft, managing director of the Academy of Music and other William Fox houses, all of the productions will receive the advantages of the Fox type of showmanship.

The Academy of Music, in Fourteenth street, will be the first house in its section of New York City to play the Goldwyn productions. Managing Director Zanft at once arranged to liberally display the Goldwyn stars in his lobbies and on all of his elaborate system of electric sign locations, and he also announces that the Academy of Music orchestra, one of the finest symphony organiza-

More Exhibitors "Get in at Beginning"

Exhibitors who realize the advantages to be gained by obtaining all of the benefits of Goldwyn's tremendous campaign across the nation for its stars and productions have been quick to sign contracts during the last week, before the release of "Polly of the Circus" on September 9.

During the past few days contracts have been signed for the entire chain of Rowland and Clark theaters in Pittsburgh; the Strand Theater, Seattle; the Majestic Theater, Portland; the Tivoli Theater, San Francisco, and a score of others in cities of the first class.

Goldwyn Pictures' arrival in Portland is being widely heralded by the Majestic Theater management, which will use full page space in the influential newspapers of the city.

General Western Manager Harry Leonhardt and Seattle Manager C. F. Hill closed the contract for Goldwyn's first run in Seattle at the Strand, and a heavy advertising campaign will introduce these new productions and big stars in the state of Washington.

Goldwyn by the signing of these contracts and two announcements still to be made is enabled to point out the fact that it has made a clean sweep of booking big and popular theaters along the entire Pacific Coast, beginning with J. A. Quinn's Rialto in Los Angeles and reaching northward to Vancouver and Winnipeg, where Goldwyn Pictures Ltd. of Canada has closed with the leading exhibitor and the largest theater in each city.

Other important Goldwyn contracts recently signed include the following: Washington, D. C., Strand Theater; Cincinnati, Ohio, Rialto Theater; Cleveland, Ohio, Metropolitan Theater; Youngstown, Ohio, Strand Theater; Detroit, Michigan, Globe Theater; Miami, Florida, Hippodrome Theater; Knoxville, Tennessee, Strand Theater; Chattanooga, Tennessee, Alcazar Theater; Springfield, Ohio, Majestic Theater; Memphis, Tennessee, Majestic Theater.

Mary Garden on Way Home

Mary Garden, famous opera prima donna, has taken ship from France for home. Upon her arrival at "an Atlantic port" she will go at once to the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee to begin work in the picture production of "Thais."

The script of "Thais" has been completed in the Goldwyn scenario department and awaits Miss Garden's approval. In the picturization the story of the opera has been deviated from but slightly. Special scene sets are being prepared by Goldwyn artists to make the investiture of splendid visual appeal.

Chinese Comedian Featured

Charlie Fang, the Chinese comedian, is being featured by George W. Shepard, president of the Screen Craft Company. Fang possesses a blank countenance that is irresistible as a mirth provoker. Fang's first release under the banner of the Screen Craft Company, which was recently done under the direction of Robert B. Carson, and another one-reel feature of Charlie Fang, which is American for Hung Loo, is now completed. The title is "Fang's Fate and Fortune."

Chicago Acclaims Italian War Film

Chicago has rallied to the first and only authentic Italian war pictures, "The Italian Battlefront," with audiences that have packed the big Auditorium from pit to dome at every performance.

Beginning with the initial performance, when the entire house of four thousand seats was sold out two hours before the opening, with prices ranging from 50 cents to $2.00, the picture has played to a business exceeding that of any other production ever presented in Chicago, save one.

Notwithstanding the pace set by this opening performance, which was attended by Lieutenant-General Guglielmotti, one of the highest ranking officers of the Italian army, who with his entire staff, went from Washington to Chicago for the premiere; and Major-General Thomas H. Barry, commander-in-chief of the central department, who has since left for active service abroad; together with the Italian, French, British, Belgian, Russian and Japanese consuls, the picture has consistently maintained the high level of business with which it started.

This has no doubt been due to the fact that in common with the New York, Boston and Pittsburgh reviewers, the Chicago critics have heralded the production in a manner almost unprecedented.

The presentation given the picture by William Moore Patch made an impression second only to the appeal of the picture itself. With the immense stage of the Auditorium at his disposel, Mr. Patch constructed a massive setting showing a section of the snow-clad Alps, over which the Italian armies are fighting.

A noteworthy feature of the production is the orchestra, numbering fifty men, selected from the grand opera orchestra, utilized by Cleofonte Campanini during the winter season of opera in the Auditorium.

$500 for Best Fox Review

Probably no child in America would have to be told to see "Jack and the Beanstalk," William Fox's Fairy Film, which is playing now in leading cities.

William Fox is offering prizes of $500, to be distributed in five awards of $100 each, for the best written reviews on "Jack and the Beanstalk." Any boy or girl under 14 years of age is eligible and is invited to competition in the contest, which begins with the announcement.

The reviews should be written on only one side of the paper and should be sent to the Fox Kiddies Editor, 130 West Forty-Sixth Street, New York City. All communications regarding the contest should be addressed to the same office.

The five awards will be made to those children whose papers, in the opinion of the judges, show the most originality and accuracy, and, at the same time, conciseness of expression. The reviews must not exceed 1,500 words in length.

The foregoing are the only rules and regulations which apply to the offer. There are no other conditions in the contest.

Warren Horsley Manager

G. R. Warren has been appointed to the position of manager of productions by David Horsley and will assume immediate charge of the Horsley Studios in Los Angeles.

New Vitagraphers in "For France"

September 17 is the date set for the release of "For France," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature introducing Edward Earle and Betty Howe. "For France," which is a romance of modern France with the present world's conflict as a background, is another of Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady's creations.

Although the war plays a large part in moulding the destinies of the main characters, the battle element is confined to a few flashes, romance being the predominant feature of the picture. Despite the fact that the battle flashes are but incidental to the main theme of the story, infinite care was taken in securing authentic reproductions of battles as they are being staged "over there."

In the course of production Edward Earle, as the young West Pointer in France to study aviation, is given ample opportunity to indulge in his pet diversion—flying. In private life Mr. Earle has gained recognition as an expert amateur aviator and in the picture he makes several thrilling flights, Miss Howe accompanying him on one of them.

In his debut as a Vitagraph star, Edward Earle gives a whimsical touch to his interpretation of the buoyant, airy American. Before joining Vitagraph, Mr. Earle had gained considerable prestige as a leading man and had starred under the banners of Metro, Edison and many of the big companies, and has been coming rapidly to the fore as one of the most popular players before the camera.

Miss Howe, who is co-starred with Mr. Earle in "For France," is a returned Vitagrapher, having played a leading role in the popular Blue Ribbon fetaure, "The Alibi." She also played with Earl Williams in "The Scarlet Runner" serial, and appeared in many other Vitagraph subjects. In the interim of her engagements with Vitagraph, Miss Howe was with the International Film Company and had a prominent role in the "Beatrice Fairfax" series.

Others in the cast are Arthur Donaldson, Mary Maurice and Frank Andrews.

Books "Defeat of the City"

Stanley V. Mastbaum has booked the first of the four-reel O. Henry stories, "The Defeat of the City." This is a two-day booking for General Film and is for use at the Regent Theater in Philadelphia, one of the biggest Mastbaum houses.

Scenes from "For France," Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon feature, starring Edward Earle and Betty Howe. This will be ready and O. K.'d for first run screens of the country on September 17, at eight o'clock in the morning if you want to start your show that early.

This play, "For France," should prove to be a decisive box office stimulant. France is the center of the vastest war of the ages and this powerful drama reveals modern conditions amid a captivating and thrilling love story played by unusual stars.

MAJOR'S POWER CHALLENGED

Vitagraph Suit Against Chicago Censor to Come Up for Hearing September 12—Irwin Would Free Chicago of Censor Czar

Greater Vitagraph's legal fight against Major M. L. C. Funkhouser, the Chicago censor of films, in an effort to force the complete showing of the special Blue Ribbon feature, "Within the Law," in Chicago, and also in an effort to dethrone Major Funkhouser as the censorship czar, will be called in the court room presided over by Judge Robert E. Crowe at Chicago on September 12.

Attorney Louis F. Jacobson will base his fight on the fact that it is not equitable for Funkhouser to deprive the people of Chicago from seeing every detail of one of the greatest pictures made.

It is the contention of Attorney Jacobson as well as of General Manager Irwin that Funkhouser is doing a great injustice to the people of Chicago when he attempts to cut approximately fifteen scenes from "Within the Law," and in this way make the picture incomplete and shakey, and prevent it from carrying the massage it is intended to convey.

Major Funkhouser did offer to allow the Greater Vitagraph Company to show "Within the Law" in the Chicago territory under a pink permit, with the deletion of fifteen of the most important scenes from the picture. The scenes ordered eliminated by Funkhouser showed largely the manner in which the police of this country use third degree methods in order to force persons under arrest to do the bidding of the police.

During the course of the proceedings on September 12 Greater Vitagraph's attorney will attack the legality of censorship in any form by Major Funkhouser. It is the contention of Greater Vitagraph's attorney that the Chicago censor must be an active member of the police department.

He also contends that Major Funkhouser is not an active member of the police department, that he performs none of the functions of a member of the police department and that he usurps the power to censor pictures.

General Manager Irwin has gone into this fight in a disinterested manner, not so much as to force a complete showing of "Within the Law" in Chicago, which, of course, he wants, but to do good for the industry as a whole. Through the arbitrary rulings of Major Funkhouser many pictures have been so mutilated that the producers have absolutely refused to allow them to be shown in the Funkhouser jurisdiction.

Asks Patriotic Films

Letters are being received by William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, from all sections of the country indicating the splendid support which the exhibitors are giving to the nation wide campaign to promote patriotism and loyalty among the citizens in every locality.

An interesting letter, commending this educational work, has just been received from Frank L. Crone, of the Loyalty League of Grand Forks, North Dakota, which is as follows:

Conditions in this part of the country are such that every possible means should be employed to promote patriotism and loyalty. We know of no agency that can accomplish more in this direction than the moving picture houses. We saw an evidence of this in the campaign conducted in these houses in the interests of the Liberty Loan.

We believe it is highly desirable that such an educational campaign should be continued in the interests of patriotism in general. A committee of this organization has called on the proprietors of moving picture houses here and find they are quite ready to do their part.

If the committee of which you are a member is in a position to do so, we strongly advise and recommend that suitable films representing patriotic subjects be provided for the houses in this city. You would probably find that conditions in the rest of North Dakota are somewhat similar to those in Grand Forks and vicinity.

Miss Young Owns Two Companies

Clara Kimball Young, who is now being managed by Harry I. Carson, holds the unique distinction of being the only woman star to own and control two picture producing companies.

She not only heads, owns and controls her own producing company, known as Clara Kimball Young, which releases eight big pictures a year to the C. K. Y. Film Corporation, but she also owns the controlling interest in the Fun-Art Films, Inc., a New York corporation that will release two two-reel comedies each month. The latter organization will feature Gordon Dooley and his sister Ray, beginning about September 15th. It has not been decided just how these comedies will be released, the announcement of which will be made soon, however.

Miss Young and her new organization has just completed her first picture, "Magda," and will start work immediately upon "The Marionettes," which will be followed by "Shirley Kaye."

Newspaperman Writing Scenarios

Many authors and dramatists refuse to sell the moving picture rights to their works. They say that by the time the scenario writer and producing director get through with their stories, "a literary father cannot recognize his own child".

This will not be Peter B. Kyne's complaint in relation to "A Man's Man," in which J. Warren Kerrigan plays the principal role. The scenario of this novel was made by Thomas G. Geraghty, a newspaper man who graduated from the editorial room with a hat full of brains well developed by years of observation and experience.

He followed "A Man's Man" in exact continuity and left out no incident which had a place in its actual dramatic and pictorial development. The result is that everyone who reads "A Man's Man" and then sees it on the screen, will realize that the one who translated it from cold type to motion pictures was an artist in his line.

Gigantic Set in "Man's Man"

The palace set, or the scene in J. Warren Kerrigan's Paralta production of "A Man's Man," which represents the president's palace and arsenal in the imaginary republic of Sobrante in Central America, is the largest ever constructed for a moving picture, with the exception of David Wark Griffith's Babylon in "Intolerance."

This set, with street scenes, covered in actual construction and in the development of the effect of distance, a space of nearly three acres.

Norma Talmadge has again returned to her own studio at 318 East 48th street, to make the interiors of her new picture, "The Secret of the Storm Country."

RUSSIAN STORIES GOOD

N. S. Kaplan, Promoter of Russian Art Films in the United States, Tells of Picture Material in World's Newest Republic

EDITOR'S NOTE: N. C. Kaplan of Moscow, Russia, and America, has spent much of his time in recent years in what is now the newest republic on the face of the globe. The one thing that has made the greatest impression on him since his return to New York has been the almost endless cry for motion picture scenarios with stories. If there is one thing that he has brought from Moscow, he asserts, it is stories.

By N. S. Kaplan

In Russia we have to give our theatergoers stories or they will stay away. And as a rule the stories they want are the ones they know. That is why Russian drama, stage and pictorial, is really a reflection of the literature of the country, which is in turn a reflection of the life of the people. I have no scenario writers on my staff in Moscow getting so much a week and turning out stories by the yard. I'd have to throw their stuff away if I had them, because no actor in Russia who is worth a nickel at the box office would appear in a play based on such material.

Within a few weeks I have read the statements of half a dozen heads of big film producing companies in this country, all on the universal topic: "Stories."

Russia would be a Paradise for them. There they could get a man like Andrieff, for instance, to write for them. Andrieff is writing for the stage and the same players who appear in his plays at the Moscow Art Theater would very likely create the same roles in the screen version, or would portray his characters in some play that might not be adapted to the speaking stage. And if Andrieff or his living contemporaries had no works for presentation at the present time, the producer could go to the volumes of some of Russia's foremost writers, perhaps even go back eighty years or more to the legacy left to literature by the young Pushkin, whose pen was stilled forever in a duel in 1837 when he was only thirty-nine years old.

Pushkin's vision of the future was uncanny, or else the writers of today are using "old stuff," as the phrase is. For instance, the first release of the Russian Art Film Corporation in the United States will be "The Painted Doll." This picture play was based on a poem written by Pushkin ninety years ago. It is a story of the domestic triangle, the perennial and eternal, but how differently Pushkin handles the subject in comparison with his modern successors. The screen adaptation gives adequate play for the artistic abilities of four of the best actors in Russian stage life. The author has followed his trail to the bitter end; there is no appeal to shallow minds which demand that reason and logic shall be ignored to provide one of those "and they lived happily ever afterward" endings. They don't live happily ever afterward, not always, in Pushkin's works.

The same may be said of the writings of Tolstoy, Dostoevsky, Sienckiewiecz, Turgenieff and Ostrovsky. Whatever the foundation on which they built, thereon they erected a logical superstructure. It is from the literary gems of such writers as these that the motion picture of Russia is made. Our playgoers want life portrayed, and portrayed as it is. I believe that the millions of patrons of the motion picture theaters in America want the same thing and that the cry of the producer here for stories is inspired by the lamentations of the public that pays the bills.

Anna Case in Pictures

Announcement that Anna Case, the beautiful young American soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is to enter motion pictures for a limited period, is made by Julius Steger, under whose direction the prima donna's photoplays will be produced.

Anna Case, beautiful soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who is to act for the camera for Julius Stegar.

Miss Case's first picture will be begun in February next, immediately after she completes her concert engagements for which she has been booked ever since the end of her last record-breaking tournee. The story, based upon real life experiences, will relate the struggles against great odds of a poor, but gifted American girl, who, through force of character and talents alone, rises to a position of dominance in the world's greatest opera company.

The lovely singing actress has had offers from practically all the leading film producers, and she finally elected to place herself under Mr. Steger's direction, because she felt that his ideals and achievements are surety that her photoplays will reach the highest point of motion picture art.

Miss Case has all the attributes necessary for a successful picture star—youth, beauty, dramatic ability, a wide range of emotional expression, and features and eyes which screen perfectly.

Before she would consent to sign a contract with Mr. Steger she insisted upon a series of exhaustive camera tests to assure herself that she would make no mistake to enter the new field. These tests not only satisfied Miss Case, but also confirmed Mr. Steger in his belief that as a picture personality the prima donna possesses really extraordinary qualifications, fully as great as are hers in the realm of song.

Anna Case's musical career has been meteoric. She is one of the very few American girls, American taught, who through sheer ability made her way to the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, where her magnificent voice and rare personal charm made her a great favorite.

Miss Case has no idea of retiring from concert and opera. She will have ample time for music and pictures, devoting half the year to the one and half to the other. Mr. Steger already has arranged for her first scenario. The picture, seven reels, will be shown first as a special attraction at a leading Broadway theater. Joseph M. Schenck will be Mr. Steger's partner in the enterprise.

New Branch Manager

The Mutual Film Corporation has appointed J. G. Conner, formerly a salesman, as temporary manager of the Indianapolis branch office.

New Triangle Star

Alma Rueben, whose beauty and finished delineations have attracted remarks from critics and fans, will from henceforth be featured in Triangle plays, the first one selected for her being "The Firefly of Tough Luck," in which Walt Whitman, the veteran character actor, will also have a leading part.

Alma Rueben, Triangle leading woman, to be starred in forthcoming plays.

Miss Rueben is just twenty years of age and is a daughter of San Francisco, graduating from the Convent of the Sacred Heart in that city two years ago. She is of the brunette, Oriental type and has been described by a prominent critic as "the dusk jewel of the screen" and "the most charming brune in captivity."

When Miss Rueben decided to become a picture actress she did not start as an extra but as a leading woman, and has appeared only in leading parts since that time. She recorded individual success in "The Half-Breed," with Fairbanks, "The Americano," "The Children Pay," "Truthful Tulliver," with William S. Hart, "A Woman's Awakening," with Seena Owen, and "The Cold Deck." Her latest appearance was in the role of a young society butterfly, the wife of William Desmond, in "The Master of His Home."

Possessing a dark, exotic type of beauty, Miss Rueben has been featured largely in Spanish and Chilean parts, and is admirably suited for the siren or adventuress characters.

To Fight Deposit System

"Now we are ready for our first great fight in the exhibitor's behalf, against the advance deposit system." This was the reply of Charles C. Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors Association when informed that the directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry had voted against the offer of affiliation made by the association.

Mr. Pettijohn was emphatic in declaring that the action of that body in no way affected the aims and purposes of the A. E. A. in working for the betterment of all branches of the industry, particularly more the exhibitors were concerned, and asserted that the vote of the delegation from the Motion Picture Exhibitors League clearly indicated that it was too closely allied with the manufacturing interests of the trade to be called a representative exhibitors organization.

As evidence of the stand to be taken in all questions pertaining to the best interests of the trade, Mr. Pettijohn has written William A. Brady, president of the N. A. M. P. A., pledging the support of the American Exhibitors Association in all matters that will aid the government in the successful prosecution of the war and in every movement that tends to improve the industry.

Serials for Paramount

Paramount is going in for serials. This great motion picture organization announces that it will release in October a fifteen-episode mystery drama that will reach in every detail the Paramount quality.

The first Paramount serial will star Kathleen Clifford, noted as one of the most famous of all vaudeville and musical comedy stars, who is making her motion picture debut. The story is the work of Anna Katharine Green, who better than any other American writer possesses the faculty for jamming her stories full to the brim with gasps and throbs.

This serial story is the first story Mrs. Green ever has written for motion picture production. It is not a dramatization of any of her previous works but a brand new tale with tangles and apparently unsolvable secrets. It will not be published in book form until after the release of the final episode. Exhibitors are thus protected so that the public can learn the details of the final twist in the plot only by seeing every episode through to the end.

Paramount is using every effort to make its first serial the finest production of its kind ever offered to exhibitors. The fifteen episodes are nearly completed and none will be released until it has passed every test and has met every requirement demanded by every Paramount picture. Each foot of film will be edited and re-edited, titles—all hand lettered—will be checked and revised and special trailers will be devised.

This serial will not be rushed upon the market. In order that there shall be no hurry in production, so that the exhibitor will not be forced to show pictures that have been rushed helter-skelter through the process of production, the release date of the new Paramount serial will be nearly two months after the last print leaves the studio.

Theda Bara in "Camille"

Theda Bara in a sumptuous picturization of "Camille" is the latest announcement of William Fox to the picture public.

Once more the makers of Fox pictures have delved into the masterpieces of literature and brought forth a gem of great brilliance. "Camille," the story by Alexandre Dumas, fils, has behind it a long history of successful engagements in every civilized country of the world. It has been acted on every great stage of Europe and both Americas, and, in book form, it has brought tears to the eyes of men and women all 'round the globe.

Theda Bara, as the unhappy Parisian girl who sacrifices her self on the altar of convention, has surpassed all her previous work in this production. The spirit of her Carmen, the charm of her Cigarette, the piquancy of her Juliet, all are combined in her characterization of Camille. The relentless Nemesis which pursues the famous heroine is forgotten in the fineness and sublety of her portrayal by the expert Miss Bara.

Theda Bara's "Camille" has just been completed under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. Parisian life has been followed in every detail so that the atmosphere of the story fits admirably with the acting in it.

"Camille" is the most famous French novel of the nineteenth century. Its story is known to every educated person, and it has been celebrated in song and story in every corner of the world.

The Fox version of this tremendously successful story will be released on September 30.

EXHIBITORS HOLD CONVENTION

American Exhibitors' Association at Ocean View, Virginia—Twenty-two States Pledge Support of Organization—Denies Manufacturers Membership

Exhibitors of five states have pledged their complete support of the new American Exhibitors' Association at the three-day convention held at Ocean View, Virginia, beginning August 29. In addition, seventeen other state exhibitors' organizations pledged their cooperation by wire.

As is now well known, the American Exhibitors' Association was formed by the exhibtors who withdrew from the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held in Chicago in July. Charles C. Pettijohn was appointed general manager at a salary of $10,000 per year, and has opened an office in New York City.

Oklahoma gave the Virginia exhibitors' convention a send-off with a telegram announcing that its entire state league branch has voted unanimously to join the new association.

Virginia exhibitors followed this action by voting unanimously to reorganize their state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and affiliate with the American Exhibitors' Association.

Similar steps were pledged by representatives of North and South Carolina, Maryland, Delaware, and Washington, D. C., numbering more than 100.

C. George Gheghan and other Virginia exhibitors spoke vehemently against the methods employed by President Ochs at the Chicago convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

General Manager Pettijohn, Sam Trigger of New York, and Jake Wells of Virginia were thunderously applauded when explaining the reasons for the formation of the new association.

Deny Manufacturers Membership

As a result of the refusal of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to admit the new association to membership, the latter organization will deny membership to all manufacturers. The by-laws will be constructed to this effect.

Kitty Gordon, the beautiful English star of World Pictures, led the grand march at the film ball, held in Ocean View. Sharing the honors with Miss Gordon were June Elvidge and little Madge Evans, the World kiddie star. The party from New York was in charge of Felix Ferst.

Lee's Buyers Organization Completed

With the affiliation of the independent foreign film buyers with the organization which Joseph F. Lee recently started the new organization becomes one of the strongest state right buyers combines which has been put in actual operation up to the present date. There will be three distinct classes; those who handle nothing but the large special state right feature film attractions—those who handle the commercial five-reel and single reel film, and the export department composed of the independent representatives of the different foreign concerns.

The success of the special feature film attraction depends largely on the representatives in the different territories having suitable theaters to properly exploit the special state right film attractions. The following having theaters or circuits of theaters have already signed in the special attraction class and the balance of the territory is practically closed.

The Master Producers Photoplay Co., controlling the Park Theater, Boston's Representative Motion Picture Theater; Mr. Lewis B. Mayer, controlling the New England states; Harry Samwick, one of the pioneer state right distributors, New York City and New York state; Sid Gruman, controlling the Empress Theater Circuit at San Francisco, will have California, Arizona, and Nevada; The Exhibitor's Film Exchange, District of Columbia, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia; The Greater Features Co., of which Mr. Jack Lannon is general manager, will represent Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana. The balance of the United States practically awaits confirmation.

There will be no directors. Simplicity and system will be the key-note of the organization. Each man in his respective territory will act as a selling agent. He alone shall judge what he will use and purchase. He will be forced to take nothing which he does not think is a box office winner in his territory. With the addition of the foreign organization it will be the purpose of the organization to purchase as much of the United States and Europe at one time, as possible.

Joseph F. Lee is the general manager of the newly formed buyers organization.

Paralta's First Play for September 23

Paralta's first play, J. Warren Kerrigan in a screen version of Peter B. Kyne's romance of Central America, "A Man's Man," will be released by Triangle Distributing Corporation, Sunday, September 23.

This production is a very pretentious one and an unusual success is predicted for it by those who have seen it projected. It will be screened for the critics of trade and daily papers two weeks before its formal release.

The demand for the picture is so great, sixty prints have been made. Triangle has adopted the policy of insisting that, as far as possible, every exhibitor who books this picture shall previously see it projected at some Triangle exchange. This departure will be followed in relation to all the Paralta productions.

Mr. Kerrigan's second release will be Frederic Chapin's story, "Turn of a Card." When the accident occurred at Santa Barbara recently, in which his leg was broken, he had just finished the Chapin picture.

The latest reports from Mr. Kerrigan, who is in the Cottage hospital in Santa Barbara, are very favorable indeed. The physician in charge states that the break in his right leg is progressing so favorably that he will be able to leave the hospital in about three weeks, and will be able to resume work in ten days after that. Mr. Kerrigan's strong constitution and vigorous health are contributing to a wonderfully quick recovery.

Lois Weber Production Ready

"The Time of Her Life" is the alluring title of the first of the new Lois Weber productions, which is now completed and ready for release. In her new play Miss Weber takes for her principal character two girls, working side by side in a big department store, to show how the influence of their respective homes so widely distinguishes their destinies. It is a big theme, handled with that fearless fidelity to facts and yet with that unswerving idealism in purpose which distinguish all Lois Weber productions.

BEECROFT BACK FROM EUROPE

Pioneer Film Man Returns from Study of Foreign Picture Conditions—Finds Prices Out of Proportion to Market Possibilities

Chester Beecroft of 501 Fifth avenue, New York, who has been touring Europe in the interests of his film exporting and importing business for the last four months, returned to America on the Scandinavian-American liner Oscar II, landing at his home port on August 30. Mr. Beecroft left New York on the steamer which carried General Pershing and the first American expeditionary forces to the battle front in France and enjoyed the exceeding good fortune to witness the entrance of the American commander and his staff into London and later on into Paris.

Chester Beecroft,, who has returned from investigating film conditions in Europe.

It is said that Beecroft is the only American commercial traveler, and possibly the only traveler of any class whatsoever whose passport shows the successful entrance and departure to and from England and France, a return to and second departure from England, then Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland and Russia, during the last two years of the war. In making this extraordinary voyage over more than twelve thousand miles of water, Mr. Beecroft passed through the majority of the most dangerous submarine and mine areas in the world, including two trips across the Atlantic by different routes, two through St. George's Channel, two across the Straits of Dover, one through the Irish Sea and North Atlantic, twice across the North Sea and once through the Skager-Rak and Kattegat.

In the course of these thrilling voyages, some of which were made in small freight boats under the most trying circumstances, Mr. Beecroft's vessel was twice attacked and once sunk by submarines.

When interviewed, Mr. Beecroft did not hesitate to state his reasons for risking his life in so perilous a voyage. He said that conditions in the foreign film markets had changed so rapidly and so completely during the last year that no one on this side possessed any definite knowledge of the subject and that so many mistaken impressions had gained credence here that the American manufacturers were bewildered and had no way of basing a definite policy for the foreign distribution of their pictures. So many conflicting statements had been made by those who knew a little and those who pretended to know much, that in many cases extraordinary prices, out of all proportion to the possibilities of the market, were being asked. Sometimes these prices were absurdly high and sometimes absurdly low, few people indeed having any idea as to what kind of picture was suited to the various countries in which they were endeavoring to make a sale. It frequently happened that a product which had absolutely no chance of being placed in a certain specific market at any price at all was being held at a price which a Griffith production might possibly obtain, while a line of pictures which were peculiarly suited and which consequently would net the buyer or distributor a handsome profit, were being slyly coaxed away by the "wise ones" at a figure far below their worth.

It was this state of affairs, so unfair to the American manufacturers of today and so inimical to the American product of the future, that determined Mr. Beecroft to go abroad, despite all hazards, to study first-hand and to learn from actual observation the exact conditions which obtained in the principal European markets. Mr. Beecroft found, among other things, that the film business is far from enjoying full confidence in certain official circles and that the American manufacturers should use the utmost caution and make most thorough investigation so as to prevent any unfortunate association, however innocent the action of the seller may be at the time.

While abroad, Mr. Beecroft closed several important contracts and considers his journey to have been even more successful than anticipated. He, no doubt, has many friends in the business who will be glad to hear of his safe return, as his association with the film industry dates back to the pioneer days, during which he has held executive positions with many large concerns.

A. E. A. Complaint Bureau

The complaint department of the American Exhibitors Association will be handled by Frank J. Rembusch, of Indiana. He is recognized as one of the best informed exhibitors on trade questions and will gladly answer the inquiries of the exhibitors on all questions pertaining to the industry. He should be addressed 412 Indiana Trust Bldg., Indianapolis, Indiana.

Each suggestion and complaint will receive his personal attention, and exhibitors are invited to write him regarding any angle of their business. Any movement for the betterment of exhibitors will receive his hearty support, and every communication will receive careful attention on his part. Such matters as can not easily be taken up in the Western offices will be forwarded to New York for investigation and a report made after the investigation has been concluded.

St. Louis Houses Book Comedies

Phil L. Ryan, sales manager of the Standard Film Corporation, paid a visit to the organization's St. Louis office which resulted in the securing of several large contracts from the local theater men on the Billy West comedies, which the Standard is handling throughout the Middle West.

Cella & Tate, the leading exhibitors of St. Louis, who operate the Columbia and several other theaters there have arranged for the Billy West comedies for a run of fourteen days in their theaters.

Lorimer Johnston has finished the fifth of a series of five reel comedy dramas featuring Crane Wilbur and Juanita Hansen for release through Art Dramas.

About State Rights Plays

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

General Enterprises Much Alive

THE activities of General Enterprises, Inc., have attracted considerable attention in film circles during the past few weeks and interest culminated in the announcement that the United States and Canadian rights to "The Warrior" successor to "Cabiria," had been secured at an unprecedented purchase price.

The prime movers of General Enterprises, Inc., A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, propose to allot territorial rights to the master feature starring Maciste, the Herculean lead of "Cabiria," and already startling offers from prominent buyers are pouring into headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York City. A technically planned exploitation campaign has been laid out by experts to properly assist the showmen who will exhibit "The Warrior" and many advertising novelties of a "different" nature have been devised. This thrilling and timely feature controlled by General Enterprises, Inc., has been unanimously declared by New York theatrical and film critics a worthy successor to the famous "Cabiria" and Maciste actually outdoes himself in feats of strength performed and hair raising, death defying stunts.

Of equal importance is the statement issued by A. H. Sawyer to the effect that General Enterprises, Inc., has successfully negotiated a contract for the erection of a modern film building in Washington, D. C. This deal, highly significant to the Southern film trade, was closed Saturday, September 1, with Alonzo C. Mather of Chicago. The structure to be known as the Mather Building will be a ten story affair, completely equipped with vaults, a series of projection rooms, telegraph offices, express facilities, and will be the last word in construction of this nature. Construction commenced on the new building, September 4, located at 916 G Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

The new organization is rapidly increasing its scope in the buying of film rights and in line with this pregress, the foreign rights to the McClure Series of "The Seven Deadly Sins" have been acquired. This series, starring eminent players of the silent and spoken drama, has met with sweeping success in this country and the securing of the foreign rights is considered a coup by wise film men.

The momentous contract involving the engagement of the film star, Madame Petrova, with Super Pictures, Inc., has been negotiated by Herbert Lubin.

The number of transactions of paramount business importance engaged in by Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin during the short space of time elapsing since the inception of the company which they represent, places the new film in the front rank of independent state right buyers.

New England Rights

The Boston Photoplay Company has purchased the New England rights to the Friedman Enterprise feature, "A Mormon Maid," in which Mae Murray is the star. This is the feature which created so much discussion when it was shown at the Park Theater, New York. It deals with pioneer days in Utah, and it served to bring Mae Murray into the lime light as one of the few charming photoplay stars.

In addition to owning the New England rights to "A Mormon Maid," the Boston Photoplay Company controls the New England rights to "Joan, the Woman," "The Common Law," "The Foolish Virgin," "The Price She Paid," "The Easiest Way," "War Brides," "Panthea," "The Argyle Case," "The Libertine," "Where Are My Children?" "War's Women," "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Conquest of Canaan" and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Features Exchange Moves

The Short Features Exchange which has been in operation since the latter part of April, and which has been conducting a highly successful business on the seventeenth floor of the Godfrey Building, New York, is to move into more spacious quarters. This change is necessary in order to take care of the volume of business which has been coming into the Short Features Exchange, and of the increased business which it expects to handle with its recently acquired Lion Comedies and Walt Mason Stories. They will move into their new business offices on the sixth floor of the Godfrey Building on or about the first of the month.

Buy World Rights

The Export and Import Film Company, Inc., has bought the complete world rights to the Isadore Bernstein productions, "Loyalty" and " Humility," excepting the United States and Canada, and are at present negotiating for the sale of the entire territory. Ben Blumenthal, the president of the organization, has had years of experience in Europe with the foreign market, and is one of the keenest judges of picture sales possibilities in the business. He has taken the rights to these pictures feeling that they are assured of immediate success in the foreign field.

Pathe Sells State Rights

Pathe announces that the rights for the state of New York on "Today," with Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," with Robert Warwick, have been sold to the Civilization-Pioneer Film Corporation. It is stated that the price obtained was $40,000.

Pathe reports that the announcement that the pictures would be sold on states rights has created a great interest among buyers and that many letters are being received from the states rights men.

Peerless Gets Lion Comedies

The Peerless Film Service of Los Angeles, well known in the state rights field as a "live wire" exchange, has just closed a deal with the A. Kay Company, in which it becomes the exclusive distributors of Lion Comedies for the territory embracing California, Nevada and Arizona.

New York King-Bee Office

Nat. H. Spitzer, sales manager of the King-Bee Film Corporation, states that they have decided to open their own exchange to handle the Billy West comedies for the state of New York. All the other state rights have been disposed of. King-Bee releases two comedies a month.

Helen Holmes Box Office Guarantee

Convinced by the money-making results of her last photonovel, exhibitors who booked Helen Holmes in "The Railroad Raiders" have been the first to sign contracts for her forthcoming serial, "The Lost Express,"

The girl looking into the glass and the one peering out show Helen Holmes in the death defying act of combing her hair. She is soon to appear in the new photonovel, "The Lost Express."

a fifteen chapter mystery production scheduled for release by Mutual September 17.

Elmer G. Sell, manager of the Palace Theater at Youngstown, Ohio, was one of the first exhibitors to schedule "The Lost Express" and his booking is particularly significant in view of the fact that he will show the last chapter of "The Raiders" on September 15. Mr. Sell plans to show "The Lost Express" at least two days.

"I think the Helen Holmes serials are the strongest of any serials that I have ever run," says Mr. Sell. "I have booked the new Helen Holmes serial to follow 'The Railroad Raiders,' which I finish September 15. I am going to run 'The Lost Express' two days or more."

Ernest Schwartz, manager of the Erie Theater at Cleveland, Ohio, was another exhibitor who booked "The Lost Express" within a few minutes after it was announced.

Changes in Mutual Branch Managers

The Mutual Film Corporation has announced several changes in the managership of branch offices.

J. L. Merrick, manager at Seattle, has been appointed manager at Los Angeles to succeed T. C. Malcolm, whose resignation was effective August 29.

C. P. Merwin, former booker at the Seattle branch, has been appointed manager of the office.

A. C. Field, manager of the Escanaba branch, has been transferred to the sales force of the Milwaukee office and C. K. Olson, formerly a salesman at the Minneapolis branch, has been appointed branch manager at Escanaba.

B. Whitman, formerly salesman at Winnipeg, has been named branch manager at Winnipeg, succeeding J. H. Boothe, whose resignation became effective September 2.

One of the favorite pastimes of Jack Gardner, starring in Essanay's series of Western photodramas, is a "work-out" on the horizontal bar.

GRIFFITH ON WAY HOME

Famous Director to Arrive in America Latter Part of September—Has Been Promoting "Intolerance" in Paris and London

Authoritative announcement was made yesterday that D. W. Griffith, who has been in Europe since March 17, has completed his labors on the other side and is to return to America the last week in September.

The American producer of big motion picture spectacles went to London originally to personally oversee the presentation there of his "Intolerance" at the Theater Royal, Drury Lane, London.

"Intolerance" in London proved the greatest motion picture success the British stage has ever known and crowned its triumph by being given at a gala performance in Drury Lane before King George and Queen Mary. Other occupants of the royal box on this occasion were Queen Mother Alexandria and Princess Mary and the younger sons and daughters of the Duke of Fife, members of the British royal family.

Mr. Griffith was presented to their majesties. As a result of that meeting he also grouped the royal family in an impromptu scene on the stage of the famous old theater and took many pictures of them. He has also been busy doing some work for both the British and French governments and has taken actual views of the war at numerous points along the western front.

With these activities and the great success of "Intolerance" in Europe his time has been so occupied that his original visit, which was only intended to last six weeks, stretched over as many months. "Intolerance" has been seen by nearly everybody of prominence in London, Paris and Rome, and Mr. Griffith has completed arrangements for its presentation in the principal cities of England, France and Italy.

With "Intolerance" launched upon its phenomenal run in Europe, Mr. Griffith called Robt. Harron, Dorothy and Lillian Gish to England along with William Bitzer, his camera man, and together these prominent lights of the American motion picture world have been working upon a story which will be Mr. Griffith's next presentation. The European scenes have been completed and Mr. Griffith and his forces are hurrying home to complete the production for presentation the coming winter. A studio has been secured in California and the big production will be rounded out there. As Mr. Griffith was on the battle front in France for several months, it is a safe conjecture to say that his forthcoming production will deal in a powerfully dramatic way with the present world war.

F.I.L.M. Club Outing

The F.I.L.M. Club held its last outing at Karetzonia's Grove, Glenwood, on-the-Sound. Members of the club, exhibitors and exchange men with their families and friends, attended in large numbers, a crowd of about five hundred persons enjoying a perfect day which was devoted principally to athletic contests.

It was the general opinion of all that this bringing together of exhibitors and exchange men should be encouraged, and that the F.I.L.M. Club outing be made a permanent affair. And suggestions were made for other meetings during the fall and winter seasons.

Big Circuit Books War Films

THE big B. F. Keith circuit has booked the Official Government Pictures, distributed by Pathe, for a showing of these war pictures that will be over 5,000 days and will amount to almost a quarter of a million dollars. All the theaters on the Keith circuit will show these latest pictures of the war. Beginning Monday, September 17, and continuing for three weeks, these pictures will be a feature of the Keith vaudeville houses.

E. F. Albee, general manager and half owner of the B. F. Keith circuit.

E. F. Albee, general manager and half owner of the B. F. Keith circuit, states that the B. F. Keith circuit is not being turned into a picture circuit, and that the war pictures will be shown in addition to the usual vaudeville program.

"I have booked these pictures merely as a high class feature that the people who patronize our houses will want to see," said Mr. Albee. "We believe in giving our patrons the best. I saw these pictures and was so struck with them that I immediately entered into negotiations for the first general showing of them in America in the Keith houses. Aside from the fact that it is helping war relief and probably is doing a patriotic thing, I believe that these pictures, giving a true presentation of events on the battlefield in Northern France, will be one of the biggest features ever seen in this country. These pictures will be shown in three episodes. One episode of approximately four reels will be shown each week.

"War conditions and what is really happening in Europe are uppermost in the minds of Americans today. When we see the numberless khaki clad men on the streets, and realize that our brothers, our friends and our sons will participate in just such scenes as will be shown on the screen in these pictures, you can figure out the interest there will be in such screening. They are a big feature and we intend to handle them as such, advertising them and giving them a good place on our programs.

"I want it distinctly understood, however, that the Keith circuit is not being turned into a motion picture circuit. These pictures may be the last we will show in this way on the circuit, and again they may be just the forerunner of other pictures, but we will not slight our regular acts for these or any other pictures.

"It was a special pleasure to make this booking, which totals up over a 5,000-day showing for these pictures, as the proceeds from them go to war charities and the American ambulances in France will benefit by our showing of them, as will also the Red Cross funds. I believe our patrons will want to see these pictures again and again, and I am thoroughly convinced that the showing of them will speed up Red Cross and other work that will be of benefit to the soldiers fighting our battle."

The showing these pictures will be given on the Keith circuit is stated to be the greatest showing ever given any pictures, and it is estimated that more people will see them during the three weeks following September 17 than have seen any other motion picture in the same length of time.

The Pathe Exchanges are making plans to distribute these in the regular picture houses after the showing on the B. F. Keith circuit.

Stars Appear at Clune's Theater

"Drive me to Clune's Theater and never mind the speed law!"

So saying Jack Pickford, arriving a few minutes before the time scheduled for his appearance at Clune's Theater, Los Angeles, with Louise Huff, where the first showing of their Paramount picture, "The Varmint," was being given, made a flying leap into a waiting automobile as he pulled into the station.

Over at Clune's Theater an impatient audience had been waiting for some time and the management had almost decided to have Miss Huff appear alone. The car tore up to the theater and Jack barely waited for it to come to a stop before he sprang to the sidewalk and dashed madly through the waiting line outside. Reaching the stage entrance he made his rapid way to the stage itself and calling to Miss Huff to come along, was about to appear before the now impatient audience when his co-star in the picture about to be shown, seized him by the arm.

"What's the matter? Don't delay the game," cried Jack. "We're late as it is."

Miss Huff was laughing, despite the necessity of haste.

"You can't go on like that," she said, "don't you know you're still carrying your suitcase and wearing your traveling cap?"

"So I am," admitted the young star, dropping both articles but never delaying his speed, "now we're ready, come along."

He fairly dragged Miss Huff before the audience, which sent up a loud clamor of appreciation. It was some reception. The crowd went wild and this gave Jack a chance to regain his sadly depleted wind, and when the applause had subsided he and Miss Huff made brief but effective speeches which were received with acclaim.

A slow train from Missouri, where Jack Pickford and company had been filming exteriors for "Tom Sawyer," was responsible for the delay. They had expected to arrive early in the afternoon, and all through the long hours Jack had been alternately condemning the road to the seventh level and demanding of the Pullman conductor when they should arrive.

But all's well that ends well, and both the stars are satisfied with the reception they received.

"But I don't like these close connections," remarked Jack after it was all over. "I must have looked like a tramp and I know my hair wasn't combed and that my face was dirty."

New Oklahoma City House

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, is soon to have a brand new picture house. H. C. Brice, proprietor of the Strand theater, has leased a lot and will in the very near future begin the construction of a three-story building.

This structure will house a model picture theater, which will be given a marble tile entrance of unique design. It will also have a special plate glass front. Mr. Brice is taking unusual care in making the plans for the theater to have it the acme of perfection in regard to comfort and convenience for patrons. Every detail of the arrangements, furnishing and equipment will leave nothing to be desired.

The building itself will be of brick, with a stone front. Electric elevators and all other modern equipment will be installed.

Mr. Brice expects to christen the new theater not later than next New Year's day.

The Silver Strand of Cornado

The Silver Strand Theater has recently been opened at Coronado, California. It can be said at the very outset that the Broadway Amusement Company, owners of the theater, have chosen a splendid name for it. It is distinctive and its very sound is "silvery" and slides easily from the tongue. It has all the beauty and attractiveness which the name of any house should have.

The house was opened with a special musical and picture program. The opening was under the auspices of the Womans' Section of the United States Navy League of Coronado and the entire proceeds were turned over to the Red Cross. One of the features of this opening were the vocal selections by Madam Schumann-Heink, the noted prima donna. The regular commercial opening of the theater was held on the following day, a matinee being given at 2:30 p. m.

The Silver Strand is owned and operated by the Broadway Amusement Company, of which G. A. Bush is president and K. G. Bush, secretary and treasurer.

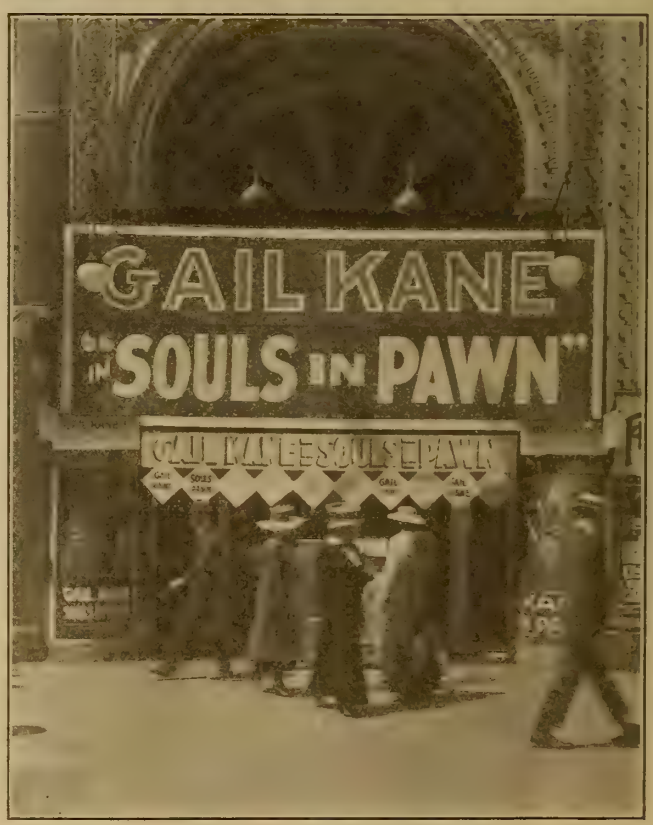
The first week's program was as follows:

Saturday—Carlyle Blackwell in "The Page Mystery"; Universal Animated Weekly; Paramount Pictograph.

Sunday and Monday—Louise Glaum in "A Strange Transgressor"; Universal Current Events; Triangle Comedy, "His Thankless Job."

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday—Alice Brady in "Darkest Russia"; Burton Holmes Travelogue; Universal Screen Magazine.

Friday and Saturday—Clara Kimball Young in "Camille"; Universal Animated Weekly; Paramount Pictograph.



The Silver Strand, erected by John D. Spreckels, is one of the finest civic improvements of Coronado. It is one of the best appointed and most modern picture theaters in the country. Nothing has been left undone that will tend to the comfort and convenience of its patrons, the very latest in equipment, projection machines, etc., having been installed to the end that the best pictures, permitted by the present state of the art may be shown.

The opening policy will be three shows each day. A matinee at 2:30 p. m. and two evening shows, beginning at 7:00 and 8:45 p. m.—change days being Sunday, Tuesday and Friday.

The best pictures the market affords are run with sufficient variety of subjects to please the picture loving public.

The prices are 10 and 20 cents; loge seats 50 cents.

Crane Wilbur's most recent picture will most certainly live up to its "western" atmosphere. Action of the wildest brand marks the story from start to finish with rough and tumble situations the cause of many a bruise and ache for those in the big cast. Mr. Wilbur has suffered two painful accidents in the course of production but none serious enough to upset the schedule established by methodical Lorimer Johnston, his director.

Front of the Bijou Dream Theater, State Street, Chicago, showing the display which Manager Sigmund Faller arranged to attract the passing crowd when he ran Gail Kane in "Souls in Pawn." State Street, like the rest of the Chicago loop, is pretty well given over to the daily change, but Manager Faller is putting it over with week runs. In addition to his lobby display, he used the picture columns of the daily papers judiciously, but he got his big bunch out of his lobby outlay. In addition to running the picture a week, Mr. Faller got 15 cents while the house next door charged 10 cents for its daily change program.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THE much heralded Afternoon Symphony Concerts will begin delighting patrons of the New York Strand this week. The orchestra has been enlarged to full symphonic strength and the concerts will be given every afternoon at 2:15 o'clock preceding the regular program of motion pictures and musical selections. "Polly of the Circus," first of the Goldwyns, will be the principal photo-dramatic feature of the week.

While moving picture men in other cities have been complaining of decreased patronage during the warm months, proprietors of nearly all Pittsburg theaters are lamenting the passing of summer. Only one or two theaters in the city have closed and these have been idle only for a few weeks. Some of them closed, too, to make much needed repairs.

Joe C. Diepenbruck, manager of the Strand Theater, Sacramento, California, has been drafted and has turned all interest in the theater over to his father, who took charge September 9. The Strand has given six of its employees by enlistment, and the manager, who was drafted in the first call, makes the seventh Strand employee to join the colors.

The Italian war pictures, "The Italian Battlefront," is proving a humdinger and, according to all reports, is pulling as hard as "The Birth of a Nation." Playing in houses where the top price is the same as the high "set-you-back" for legitimate attractions, it is still packing theaters to the gallery tops, and scalpers are heralding the attraction as a God-send. It is receiving nothing but praise from critics, populace and exhibitors, and is one of the most eloquent chapters yet seen of the great war.

So far as running pictures is concerned, it is said upon good authority that George H. Hines, familiarly known as "Daddy," controls the town of South Bend, Indiana, a city of 75,000. "Daddy" has the Auditorium there, seating 1,650. His main sources of supply are Fox and Metro. An example of "Daddy's" business and showmanship is found in the fact that on a recent Sunday Rex Beach's "The Barrier" was made to yield him $703 for the day. "Daddy" is a high class showman, and, what is more, a genial Irishman.

The Grand Theater, Green Bay, Wisconsin, has undergone a change of ownership. H. Goldman, former proprietor, has discontinued his connections with the house entirely. J. P. Scully, operator of a chain of Chicago theaters, is the new owner. A mixture of high class vaudeville and good pictures will be the laugh-producer and entertainment pabulum offered by the new management. And to make things more attractive a large and capable orchestra has been engaged to hold down the pit.

The Hardwick Brothers, proprietors of the Lyceum Theater, New Mexico, have a unique way of boosting their best plays. In the center of their neat 12 page program, of the features that are to appear at the Lyceum during the month, they have two pages of "Personally Guaranteed Attractions." These represent the films the Hardwicks consider the best on the bill. A footnote at the bottom of the page says: "'Personally guaranteed' pictures are the cream of the entire month's offerings. When a production is so advertised, you know that it is exceptionally good. It is the best your amusement money can buy."

A striking illustration of the swiftness with which a motion picture can be photographed and shown on the screen was demonstrated at the Strand Theater, New York, recently, when pictures showing the great parade of the National Guard regiments of New York were projected on the screen. The pictures, some of which were taken as late as 2 o'clock in the afternoon, were shown at the Strand at 4 o'clock.

Thieves stole "Love and Justice" and "Marriage and Failure," two motion pictures of five and one reels respectively, at Kansas City, from Joe Aimonino, an operator, who set the box containing the reels down while watching a train go by. When he turned around to get his reels, valued at $600, they were gone.

The Henry Cowell Lime and Cement Company has filed suit in the San Francisco Superior Court against the Turner & Dahnken Circuit to recover $76,000 damages for alleged breach of contract. The complaint states that the moving picture concern contracted to lease from the plaintiff corporation a theater at Stockton, California. The contract, it is alleged, was entered into in December, 1915. Construction of the theater was completed recently, but Turner & Dahnken refused to occupy it.

Al G. Shear, of New Orleans, has resigned his position as manager of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company in order to devote all of his time to his theatrical interests. Mr. Shear is actively connected with the Sobel-Richards-Shear Enterprises, operators of a chain of theaters, and in view of the fact that the company is contemplating the purchase or erection of several new suburban houses in New Orleans, he has found it necessary to withdraw from the Consolidated Film and Supply Company.

Baltimore is to have another handsome picture theater. Henry W. Webb, president of the Parkway Amusement Company, which controls the Parkway, Strand and McHenry Theaters, announces that the property at the northeast corner of Charles street and Lafayette avenue is to be improved and added to the company's chain. The new theater will have a seating capacity of over 2,000 and will rival its sister houses. Mr. Webb also announced that extensive improvements are in course of construction at the Parkway and that its seating capacity will be increased to the extent of 70 per cent.

Supervised amusement in the photoplay field, is now being tried out by the Rev. H. L. Robbins, at the Strand, formerly the Palm Theater, at Salamanca, New York. The policy of the house, as announced by its new manager, is to present only bills that can be seen by anyone without offense and that will be of an up-lifting nature. Mr. Robbins conducted a successful experiment of the same sort at Canaseraga, New York, where he had charge of an Episcopal parish. The new house is not a charitable institution, however, but is to be self-sustaining or abandoned.

Marcus Loew, of New York, is to pay $48,000 a year for fifteen years for the Stillman Theater, according to the terms of a new lease filed for record recently. A former lease, made in 1916, giving control to Emanuel Mandelbaum, was canceled at the same time. This called for a rental of $45,000 annually. Both leases were given by the Stillman Investment Company.

The American, Bannon and Dreamland theaters of Elyria, Ohio, have been consolidated under the title of the Broadway Amusement Company. John Pekros, of the American Theater, will be general manager of the new company, while Mr. Georpogle and Owen Bannon will retain their respective positions as managers of the Dreamland and Bannon houses. Chas. R. Chisholm was father of the new combination idea, which was conceived in order to enable the houses to furnish better films and cut their overhead expenses.

The management of the Elmwood Theater of Buffalo, New York, attached a sepia portrait of Emily Stevens to each of its programs for the last week announcing the star's appearance at that theater, September 10 and 11, in the stirring Metro production, "The Slacker." On the back of the photograph was the following paragraph about the play: "A patriotic drama of the times. No war scenes. No battle scenes. But it makes the old yearn to be young. It makes the young spring to the nation's call. It galvanizes into palpitating life the patriotism of all ages, in all lands."

The Fine Arts Theater is the latest contribution to the growing number of really pretentious theaters which are becoming so popular and profitable in New Orleans. This pretty house, rendered more attractive by large potted plants and palms which decorate the front, is built along Spanish mission lines, and accommodates about 750 people. Mrs. Al G. Shear is the managing director of the Fine Arts and also of the Carrollton, alternating her time between both houses. Among the factors which contribute class to this new suburban house is the fact that Mrs. Shear has all the attendants, ushers, etc., dress in immaculate white.

Laws passed by the 1917 Minnesota legislature regulating picture theaters went into effect September 1, and will be enforced by John B. Sanborn, state fire marshal. It is now unlawful for any persons to operate a motion picture machine or to exhibit pictures in any building where the public is admitted without a license. The licenses are issued by the state fire marshal only after thorough inspection and upon finding that the theater meets the rigid new requirements. The law is expected to affect only the smaller houses, as the larger theaters have already complied with the provisions contained in the regulations.

Managing Director S. Barrett McCormick of the Circle Theater, Indianapolis, is one of the exhibitors who uses an intense artillery fire that shakes the whole city before he gets ready to go over the top with a picture he knows has got the goods. An idea of the extensive advertising he does in hammering home features can be obtained by citing the space he used in putting over "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre." For that picture he used 11,642 agate lines of city newspaper space, 22,400 agate lines of country newspaper space, 1,000 one-sheet posters in Indianapolis and surrounding towns, 1,200 sheets of paper posted on billboards, 700 street car cards displayed in city and Interurban cars, 25 twenty-four-sheet boards, 2,500 heralds, electric signs, flags and other medium.

The district board at St. Louis, Missouri, has ruled that the manager of a moving picture house could not be exempted from the draft on occupation grounds. He must go and serve his country with the rest. And the records show that a great many of them are doing it. Theater owners, operators, ushers, film salesmen, exchangemen and those in the various branches of the industry who are now wearing the khaki are testimony of the fact that the film business is giving of its men to fight as well as of its films to make people forget the horrors of war.

One of the unusual features in connection with William Fox's "Jack and the Beanstalk," is that the film has opened up an entirely new field for motion pictures. Department stores are now bidding for the rights to the subject in various cities because they recognize its special appeal to women and childen. A large Western department store made overtures and secured "Jack and the Beanstalk" for one week. The management of the shop then engaged a big legitimate theater and showed it exclusively to the patrons of the store, giving a ticket of admission with every purchase of $1 or over. The firm did an enormous business, as the production was viewed by 30,000 persons during the week.

The following is a list of theaters and the plays they used last week in the loop district of Chicago:—

Alcazar—"The Ten of Diamonds," with Dorothy Dalton.
Auditorium—"Official Italian War Pictures."
Bandbox—"Should She Obey?" Drama.
Bijou Dream—"The Sin Woman," with Irene Fenwick.
Boston—"Betsy Ross," with Alice Brady.
Casino—"Who Was the Other Man?" Drama.
Castle—"The Mysterious Miss Terry," with Billie Burke.
Colonial—"Baby Mine," with Madge Kennedy.
Lyric—"Some Boy," with George Walsh.
Orpheum—"The Idolators," with Louise Glaum.
Pastime—"Tears and Smiles," with Baby Marie Osborne.
Playhouse—"A Stormy Knight," with Franklyn Farnum.
Rose—"Down to Earth," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Royal—"Sins of the Mother," with Anita Stewart.
Star—"Double Trouble," with Douglas Fairbanks.
World—"The Final Payment," with Nance O'Neil.
Ziegfeld—"Babbling Tongues," with Grace Valentine.

Things grew pretty warm recently for Deputy Sheriff A. E. Dunlap, of Dewey, Oklahoma, when he tried to arrest L. A. Ramsey, manager of a picture theater in Dewey, for operating on Sunday. The arrest of Ramsey was ordered by the county attorney and his show was stopped. The people, however, rallied to the support of the exhibitor, and when those attempting the "pinch" called for police help their appeal was ignored. The people of Dewey are for Sunday amusements and there is no ordinance forbidding picture houses operating on that day. Mr. Ramsey, besides having the support of the people, is also being backed up by other exhibitors in the county who expect to make the issue a test case. Lawyers have been retained and every preparation is being made to win the case for Sunday shows.

Patron Pulling Ad-Talks

BY THE "COUNSELLOR"

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles written by an experienced advertising man who has conducted campaigns for a circuit of picture theaters. They are facts gathered from first hand experiences. The first one is based on the value of advertising the theater itself.

A LARGE per cent of the advertising done by motion picture theaters is waste. It is, perhaps, the most short-lived advertising of any being done in any line of business. Its life ranges anywhere from a week to four hours. And this is due to the fact that practically all the advertising done is concentrated on the picture they are going to show for that week or that day.

A good percentage of this same advertising could be devoted to the theater itself, calling attention to the virtues of the show house. There are quite a number of points that could be brought out in this connection, such as the fact that "eye-strain" has been entirely eliminated. A campaign on this one subject could be conducted for a month or more. Then you could swing into "pure-air," playing up the ventilation, courtesy of employes, comfort and what has been done to make the theater comfortable. Talking points such as these would establish your theater as the leading photoplay house of the town. It would be taken for granted that the pictures you show are the best. You have already established the fact that you have installed the best equipment available and it stands to reason that the photoplays must be of the same order.

Make your theater known for more than the quality of pictures you project. When you play up the virtues of the house, you are also establishing the quality of your productions. If you are forced at some time or other to give up some of the brands or stars that you have made popular at your house in all probability it will not work harm to you. If it is presented at some other theater the interpretation of your audiences will undoubtedly be that it was not good enough to show at your theater, without your saying a word about it. We have seen this work out in this very same fashion. One of the most popular stars in pictures today had been established at a certain theater in a good sized town where competition was very keen. By an unfortunate circumstance of bookings this star's latest pictures was put into another very good theater within a block and a half of the first show house. Many people coming out of the first theater hearing that this star was at the other house remarked that there must be something wrong with the picture or it wouldn't have been put in that house.

This first theater had established itself as the finest house in the city regardless of pictures. When a popular player was taken away from them their business was not affected. It was believed that the star or picture presented must be better than the other, or this theater wouldn't show it. It had established itself as the leading show house of the town and as showing the very best pictures.

People soon tire of hearing you tell them that each play is the very best that has ever been shown. You are going to fall down too many times on your promises and they simply won't believe you. Understand, however, that they have no other means of knowing whether the picture is good or not. They simply have to take your word for it. It will not pay you to fool them too often.

You don't necessarily have to tell them that the picture is a "world beater" in order to get them in. Mix in a bit of copy about the theater itself, the fact that they are assured comfort and courtesy and pleasant surroundings.

Make your house popular, but, of course, be certain that you are showing the right kind of pictures. Keep your theater so that you can conscientiously brag about it. Keep everything clean and shined. Nobody in the wide world likes to see anything dull and dirty. Everybody you know would like to own a diamond. Radium is more expensive, still you never see anyone wear it no matter how rich they are, they prefer a diamond, it glistens. If there wasn't any luster to a diamond it wouldn't be popular.

The biggest bit of advertising you can possibly do to popularize your show house is in and about the theater itself. You could show the best and most expensive pictures in the world, and if your theater wasn't attractive it wouldn't draw much more than an ordinary production. Always remember the rule of the two "C's," Cleanliness and Comfort. You are asking people to come out of clean, neat and comfortable homes to your theater. What have you to offer them in return? Just a picture? Or, have you made the surroundings pleasant?

If you are not getting the best class of people in your neighborhood or town, it's your own fault. You are not catering to them through your advertising. You may have the class of pictures that would appeal to them, but you are using a style of advertising that draws an entirely different element. The better people do not want to crowd their way through a lobby choked with startling paper and blood dripping six sheets. Many say that this is just what secures their business for them. It gets them a certain class of business, but as a general rule where the better class of people go, the others follow.

Advertise the permanent part of your business, the theater, you own it, it's yours, it's the only part of your business that you do own. It's going to be there tomorrow, next week, next month and next year; advertise it.

Gottschalk Leaves Stage for Screen

Mr. Ferdinand Gottschalk has at last been persuaded to act for the motion picture stage and the Empire All Star Corporation is the lucky company to secure him. The artistry of Mr. Gottschalk's work on the stage is too well known to comment on, but it is interesting to note that he is not only frankly interested in acting for the camera, but is taking pains to make his performances as clean-cut and artistic as ever he did on the speaking stage.

Helen Ferguson is leading woman for Taylor Holmes in his second Essanay picture, "Fools for Luck."

Jewel Carmen in East

Jewel Carmen is now at the William Fox studios at Fort Lee, N. J. She is playing Fantine in the film version of "Les Miserables," now in the making.

Miss Carmen has been in motion pictures almost four years, but she has earned the greater part of the love which photoplay fans bear her since her advent into William Fox films about twelve months since.

Jewel Carmen, Fox star, now playing in "Les Miserables."

Immediately upon joining the Fox forces, Miss Carmen received the unusual honor of being placed in the role opposite William Farnum in "The Conqueror," R. A. Walsh's titanic American drama. Her wonderful dramatic work as Eliza Allen in this picturization of Sam Houston's life established her firmly as a player of discriminating intelligence who could always be depended upon to bring the finest shades of emotional acting to the screen.

The consequence was that the part of Lucy Manette in "A Tale of Two Cities" was entrusted to her, and the reviews of this production attest the wisdom of the choice.

Other William Fox features in which Miss Carmen has appeared in the leading feminine role are "American Methods" and "When a Man Sees Red." In both of these pictures she is William Farnum's "opposite." Miss Carmen's most recent screen performance was in support of Gladys Brockwell in "To Honor and Obey?"

Fairbanks Jumps to New York

"Only one picture in ten is worth seeing."

"Chicago needs a large and beautiful house exclusively for pictures."

These two statements by Douglas Fairbanks at the luncheon given in his honor at the Fort Dearborn Hotel in Chicago when he was on his way from California to New York last week, brought forth hearty applause and contains some real meat for thought.

The athletic comedian and an entire company including Director Emerson, Anita Loos, scenarioist, Business Manager John Fairbanks and Publicity Man Bennie Zeidman, made the expensive coast to coast trip solely for the purpose of taking in New York a few scenes needed for Fairbanks' next Artcraft production, "Reaching for the Moon." Enthusiastic receptions marked the Fairbanks route all the way. In New York he and the company were met by a party which included Al. Lichtman, general manager of Artcraft; S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto Theater; John Emerson, director-general of the Fairbanks forces; Emil Shauer of the Famous Players-Lasky offices, and Pete Schmid of Artcraft.

SCARCITY OF FILM CANS

Eastman Company's Demand for Film Cans Causes Inventory—Triangle Plant Uses 16,000,000 Feet of Film in Two Years

A good idea of the amount of money consumed in film alone in a modern motion picture plant may be gained from the following data furnished by Peter Shamray, laboratory manager of the former Triangle-Fine Arts plant, now the producing center of Triangle-Keystone comedies.

The Eastman company recently sent out a notice to the trade to the effect that they would be unable to ship film on account of the shortage of tin cans, brought about by the war, and urging all producing plants to return the empty containers they had on hand, for which a liberal price would be paid.

An inventory of the film cans in the Triangle-Keystone plant revealed the startling fact that, in a period of a little over two years, the Triangle-Fine Arts studio had used 8,142 cans of raw stock. Each can contains 2,000 feet of film, making a total of sixteen million two hundred and eighty-four feet.

Until recently, the freight on empty cans to New York was more than the containers themselves were worth, but the price of tin has mounted so rapidly that at the present time the revenue on the empties effect a saving not to be scoffed at.

Noted Skater With Commonwealth

The Commonwealth Pictures Corporation announces the engagement of Miss Charlotte of "Hip-Hip Hooray" fame, better known throughout America as Charlotte, the greatest woman skater in the world. Charlotte has been with the Hip-Hip Hooray Co. for two years and at the present time is at the College Inn, Chicago, where her skating feats are performed every night.

Not only does Miss Charlotte rank supreme on skates, but she also dances and swims beautifully.

Charlotte has already cost New York and Chicago a sum estimated at three million dollars. It is figured that that much has been spent for skates, skating shoes, skating scarfs and skating costumes and in restaurants, adjoining rinks since Charlotte started the craze.

She does as many things on ice as Pavlova does on the stage; she is even more daring, because there is more chance for the skates to slip than for Pavlova to lose control of her educated tootsies.

It is not a great surprise that so popular and accomplished young lady should make her debut into pictures, and the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation and H. A. Spanuth, its president, are to be congratulated upon their success in securing this most talented charming young lady.

It is seldom that a person can be found who has the accomplishments that Charlotte has, who at the same time is beautiful, who photographs well and who is still in her teens.

The Charlotte picture has already been begun in Chicago.

Alma Ruebens, the newest of Triangle stars, commenced her screen career for Triangle as a leading woman for Douglas Fairbanks in "The Half Breed," and has appeared in leading roles exclusively ever since.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

His Pictures Float

I am having a little trouble with my Power's 6A machine. Would you be kind enough to advise me through your projection department how it can be remedied?

Last fall I noticed that I was not getting an absolutely steady picture. There is a continuous floating of the picture from one side to the other, also an up and down motion. I wrote to the Power's company and they advised me to ship the mechanism in to them to be thoroughly overhauled. This was done with my instructions to put the same in absolutely perfect condition, but even this did not remedy the fault. The machine is securely fastened down to the floor and can not move. I thought perhaps it might be in the film, but have used films that were not over a month old and have had the same trouble.

I have written to the Powers company relative to this and they know of no reason why this trouble should exist. I have also inquired of quite a few good operators and tried to have it remedied, but up to now have been unable to remedy the fault. Is it possible to get an absolutely perfect and steady picture with a Power's 6A machine and films in first-class condition? I would greatly appreciate your kindness if in the next issue of the MOTOGRAPHY you can solve my problem.—B. H. S., New Hampshire.

I do not know that I can do very much for you in your trouble since you have had the mechanism sent to the Power's company and they did not help you. What you should have done was to send the mechanism right back to the factory and insist that they put it in the proper condition.

There is absolutely no reason why you cannot get a steady and perfect picture with a Power's 6A machine, and if you are not getting it then there is something radically wrong with the mechanism and I am sure that the Power's company would be only too glad to remedy it for you. I would suggest that the trouble as you describe it is due to one or more of the following causes:

End play in the intermittent shaft, allowing the intermittent sprocket to move sideways and thereby causing the picture to move back and forth on the screen.

Cam and star, or cross not adjusted properly, allowing too much circumferential play in the intermittent sprocket, causing an up and down movement of the picture on the screen.

Tension springs not adjusted properly, causing an up and down motion on the screen.

Worn tension springs and apeture plate, allowing the film to buckle as it passes over the apeture plate, causing an in and out of focus effect of the picture on the screen.

Sprung intermittent shaft.
Worn intermittent bushings.
Worn cam and star or cross.
Worn intermittent sprocket.

Any one or more of the above mentioned defects would or could be the cause of your trouble and I would advise you to go over the mechanism very carefully and be sure that all parts are in good condition and properly adjusted and then if you still have the trouble, then return the mechanism to the Power's company, and insist that they find the trouble for you.

Warning Device Patented

Oscar Day of the Putnam Supply Company, which manufactures the Auto Signaling Device for moving picture machines has just been granted patent right papers from the Dominion of Canada for his device. The patent papers bear the number 179047. The Moving Picture Operators Automatic Signaling Device can be attached to any make of machine and works perfectly as a warning device for the operator.

About Painting a Screen

I have an aluminum screen and I painted it about one year ago, so I want to paint it again. Please give me some information whether I can put the aluminum on the old aluminum or must I give it a coat of white paint first. Give me full instructions.—J. K., Pa.

If you have painted the screen before then you evidently know what you are doing, but my advice to any one is: Do not try to make an aluminum screen unless you are in that business, and are prepared to do the work right. I have seen a lot of home-made screens (spent a few dollars myself trying to make one), but I have never seen a good one yet.

The surface of the screens that are manufactured are put on by a special process and not painted with a brush. It is impossible to apply any kind of paint on a screen with a brush without leaving brush marks that will show when the light from the projection machine is thrown on the screen.

I mention these things to you so that you will not attempt to paint your screen and possibly ruin it. If you are going to paint it then give it one or two coats of flat white paint and then apply the aluminum surface afterward.

Allow the white paint to become thoroughly dry and then apply a coat of Japanese varnish to the screen and as the varnish begins to set apply the dry aluminum to the screen with a puff made as follows: Take a ball of cotton the size of your fist and cover it with a piece of cheese cloth, making a puff with it like the ladies use on their faces, only larger. Dip this puff in the dry aluminum and apply it to the varnished surface of the screen. Do not try to rub the aluminum on, but puff it on.

Start at the top of the screen and work clear across the screen and then work down. The aluminum must be applied before the varnish sets too much, so you will have to work fast with the aluminum to get it on at the right time. Allow the aluminum to set for three or four hours and then take a piece of heavy felt cloth and polish the surface of the screen with it. You can make a fairly good screen in this way and get better results than by trying to apply the aluminum in a liquid form with a paint brush. But the best way of all is to buy a new screen and then you are sure to have it right.

Locals Aid Soldiers

At the last regular meeting of Local No. 194 I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. a resolution was passed and a committee appointed to look after the members of that Local who are at the present time or may be later in the service of their country, either in the army or navy. At the present time Local No. 194 has six men enlisted in the army and navy. These men have enlisted since the outbreak of the war. The Local has seven men who will come in on the draft in the next few days. It is the intention of the members of the Local that they will provide the men who are away with stationery and stamps, tobacco and whatever articles, including books and magazines, that is possible to send to them.

Every member of the Local has pledged that he will write to each one of the boys who are away at least once a month and if they will do that it will give each boy who is away at least two letters a day to encourage him and to let him know that the men at home have his interests at heart. The committee that was appointed was Brother Benner, secretary-treasurer, and Brothers Latta and Bragg.

This committee has full power to act and may use whatever funds of the Local that they may need. Each and every enlisted or drafted man is to be provided with an indestructible metal tag with his name on one side and on the reverse side: "In case of accident or death notify Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., Indianapolis, Ind., U. S. A." Brother Joe Finke, who is just resigned as vice-president of the Local, is enlisted in the One Hundred and Fiftieth Field Artillery and has left with his regiment to join the "Rainbow Division," at Mineola, N. Y., and in the next few weeks will be "Somewhere in France." Brother Finke is a first class cameraman as well as an excellent operator and will, from time to time, contribute articles to the projection department of MOTOGRAPHY.

What Kind of Oil

I am a reader of the projection department and would like to have you give me a little information as to what kind of oil you think is the best to use on a Power's 6A machine. I have been using an oil that the manager buys here in town and it gets sticky on the machine and causes the machine to run hard. If you can recommend some good oil to me I will be ever so much obliged to you.—W. D. B., Oregon.

Order your oil from your local supply house or write direct to the Power's or Simplex Company and have them send you the oil that they recommend. Either one of them is good. The oil comes in gallon cans.

Associated Advertisers Meet

Arthur James again heads the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers as the result of the election of officers, held September 6, at Keene's Forty-fourth street beanery, New York. The publicity and advertising men reorganized for a new and busy year.

The following officers were elected: President, Arthur James; vice-president, P. A. Parsons; treasurer, Paul Gulick; secretary, Bernard Fineman. The new directors, in addition to the above elected officers, are Nat G. Strong, Charles E. Moyer, Terry Ramsaye, Jacques Kopstein and Julian M. Solomon.

Charles Burr was a candidate for the presidency, but the vote stood sixteen against six in favor of Mr. James. Nat Rothstein contested with Mr. Parsons for second honors and marshaled seven votes to fifteen for Mr. Parsons. The elections were then made unanimous on motion of the losers in the contests.

Mr. Parsons, chairman of the annual dinner committee, reported that this year's event will be even more elaborate than the dinner given last year. A number of new applications for membership were favorably acted upon.

EXHIBITORS FORM EXCHANGES

First National Exhibitors' Circuit Establishes Distributing Organization—Representative Member in Each District to Open Local Exchange

The First National Exhibitors Circuit at a meeting at the Hotel Astor last week formed a national distributing organization to handle the films purchased by the Circuit. Harry Schwalbe of Philadelphia was appointed general superintendent of exchanges. The representative member in each district will open up an exchange and handle the films for his territory. All will likely be directly supervised from headquarters in New York.

Many matters of importance to the circuit were enacted by the directors, including the revision of the by-laws, which will now permit for more leeway in the purchase of pictures. The purchase of two or three productions are under consideration. Several contracts with stars are believed to have been consummated, but these are being kept under cover just now.

Owing to the increased business which the circuit expects, the New York offices will be enlarged in the near future.

Another meeting will likely be held some time in November.

Keystone Comedies for October

Due to the system recently inaugurated at the Triangle west coast studios, productions are being made a month or two in advance of their release dates in order that they may be at the exchanges in time for exhibitors' pre-release showings. With new directors and players already added to its large staff, the Keystone company has been in a position to complete all October productions during August and early September.

"His Crooked Career," with the blond Keystone siren, Claire Anderson, and the character comedian, Fritz Schade, is scheduled as the first October release, the week of the 7th. Robert Milliken, who has been in pictures a comparatively short time, flashes forth as a new type of comedy species in this Keystone.

The Keystone beauties in a fashion show will be one of the features of "Pearls and Perils," released October 14. Dale Fuller, George Binns and Maude Wayne are the comedy trio appearing in a picture called "A Hindu Hoodoo," the October 21 feature.

Myrtle Lind and J. Dwiggins are the victims of "A Seminary Scandal," the comedy scheduled for the last week in October. They are supported by two of the Keystone feather-weights, Caroline Rankin and Martin Kinney. The Keystone beauty squad will be represented by Rose Carter, who gained attention as one of the prettiest of the famous Keystone bathing girls.

Mabel Normand in Straight Comedy

The thousands of motion picture devotees throughout the country who have known Mabel Normand as the exemplar of slapstick, seltzer siphon and custard pie comedy will find her a comedienne metamorphosed in her first Goldwyn picture, "Joan of Flatbush."

Mabel Normand, who has left slapstick roles for straight comedy in her first Goldwyn picture, "Joan of Flatbush."

The much abused motion picture term, "comedy," is scarcely applicable to Mabel Normand's initial effort for Goldwyn. While it is comedy—very laughable comedy—it isn't burlesque. And therein lies the distinction between "comedy" and comedy.

There will be a new Mabel Normand in the new pictures—a Mabel Normand transformed into a very beautiful young woman who will depend for her success on straight comedy situations, made funny by natural development of action.

"Joan of Flatbush" deals with the fortunes of a little orphan girl who escapes from an asylum to pit her wits against enemy spies, one of whom is the superintendent of the orphanage. Mabel Normand has never done anything funnier than the "inspired" child who hears the voices in the Forests of Flatbush.

Miss Normand and her company are already at work in the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee.

Walthall in California

Henry B. Walthall, who is now an independent star manager at the head of his own producing company, has arrived in Hollywood, Cal., to arrange the many details necessary before starting the filming of his first production. Accompanying Mr. Walthall was Miss Mary Charleson, who won much popularity as his leading woman with the Essanay Company, and who will continue in this capacity with his new organization.

The couple were met by Robert Brunton, producing manager of the Paralta Studios, who escorted them to the studios for a tour of inspection. While in New York, before leaving for the coast, arrangements had been consummated between Mr. Walthall and Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., under the terms of which Mr. Walthall's company will occupy a part of Paralta studios for the filming of his productions.

Every release will be from six to seven thousand feet in length, and will be distributed by the Triangle Distributing Corporation on the "Star Series Booking Plan."

In "Magda," a picture which Clara Kimball Young has just finished, she is said to be most happily cast, and the result has been one of her greatest portrayals. Miss Young will start to work immediately on her second picture, "Shirley Kaye."

ADDITIONS TO UNIVERSAL

More Actors, Actresses and Directors Engaged During Past Month Than at Any Similar Period During Year

More additions have been made to the acting and directing forces at Universal City during the past month than at any similar period throughout the present year.

Among the leading men who will be seen in important productions shortly are: Charles West, Frank Borzage, Casson Ferguson, Hart Hoxie, Kenneth Harlan, David Morris and Hal Cooley. The first five of these actors have already won wide recognition for effective dramatic work, while Morris and Cooley are equally well known as comedians.

Charles West, who will shortly be seen in support of Zoe Rae in "The Little Pirate," gained his first experience as a member of D. W. Griffith's famous Biograph stock company, appearing later in Fine Arts' productions when Griffith was in control of that organization.

Frank Borzage, who is also a newcomer to the Big U plant, is now appearing opposite Brownie Vernon in Allen Holubar's production of "The Twisted Soul."

Casson Ferguson, now nearing the completion of his first Universal lead opposite Donna Drew in "The Ghost Girl," directed by Jack Wells, has played with the American and other well known film companies, besides having won his spurs on the legitimate stage.

Hart Hoxie appeared in several of the Lois Weber productions made a year or more ago at Universal City. Hoxie will make his present debut to Universal patrons in Edward J. Le Saint's current production.

David Morris, who has been advanced to the position of leading comedian of Criag Hutchinson's Victor comedy company, has had a long career on both stage and screen. He was recently seen in support of Max Asher.

Hal Cooley returns to the Universal fold to take an important part in "The Cricket," the Zoe Rae play now being produced by Elsie Jane Wilson. Cooley was a member of the Universal forces a year ago, when he left to do juvenile leads with the Keystone company. He has also appeared in American productions at Santa Barbara.

Among the actresses and comediennes of achievement and especial promise who have been engaged for Universal productions during the past month might be mentioned Rena Rogers, Gladys Tennyson, Rosemary Theby, Beatrice Burnham and Mildred Davis.

Prominent Film Men Mix

Herbert Brenon, producer, and William A. Brady, president of the World Film Corporation, put lots of action in a little conversation they held at the Ritz-Carlton in New York last week.

According to the New York press, the conversation was concerning Mr. Brenon's new production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs." He had given a special showing of the drama to several hundred invited guests when he heard that Mr. Brady, who is producing a similar play, entitled "Rasputin, the Black Monk," was in the lobby criticising the Brenon play. The latter, it is said, started the fistic mixup, which mussed up both men some before a "peace without victory" was declared by friends.

ANITA STEWART ENJOINED

Vitagraph Takes Out Restraining Order to Prevent Star From Working for Any Other Company—Action Has Broad Scope

Anita Stewart has been legally restrained, by Greater Vitagraph, from working for any person or corporation until she fulfills her obligations under the contract in existence between her and the Greater Vitagraph Company.

The restraining order is in the form of an injunction issued by Justice George D. Mullen of the Supreme Court. It was issued on application of Seabury, Massey & Lowe, attorneys representing President Albert E. Smith of Greater Vitagraph.

The order, as issued by Justice Mullen, reads:

"Ordering that the defendant, Anita Stewart, is hereby enjoined from acting, appearing in, or aiding in the making or furnishing to the defendant, Louis B. Mayer, or any other person or corporation other than the plaintiff, any motion picture of any kind or character in which she is pictured or portrayed prior to the expiration of her contract with the plaintiff; and that the defendant, Louis B. Mayer, his officers, agents and attorneys are enjoined from enticing, inducing or causing the defendant, Anita Stewart, to fail or refuse to work in the employ of the plaintiff; and from employing the defendant, Anita Stewart, to act or appear in, make or furnish, to said defendant, motion pictures of any kind or character in which she is portrayed or pictured; and from, in any other manner, causing or inducing the defendant, Anita Stewart, to violate her contract of employment with the plaintiff."

The order of Justice Mullen also stipulates that the defendants are enjoined from announcing publicly, or authorizing or permitting public announcement that the said Anita Stewart is no longer employed by Vitagraph, and that the said Anita Stewart is or is about to be engaged by the defendant or any other corporation.

The restraining order is one of the broadest ever issued on an employment contract. It not only forces Anita Stewart to keep her contract with Greater Vitagraph, by preventing her from working for any other company, but it also orders her, and the persons associated with her, to refrain in any manner from doing Greater Vitagraph financial injury by announcing that Anita Stewart is no longer in the employ of that company or is in the employ of some other company.

President Smith, in behalf of Greater Vitagraph, secured the injunction proceedings immediately upon learning that Anita Stewart had signed a contract with Louis B. Mayer, of Boston, to appear for him in motion pictures.

Fannie Ward With Pathe

One of the greatest drawing cards in pictures, Fannie Ward, has signed a long-time contract with Pathe, by the terms of which she will receive one of the biggest salaries ever paid a picture star. But this is not all. Miss Ward is to have an opportunity to follow up the brilliant work she achieved as an emotional actress in the Lasky production of "The Cheat."

By an arrangement between A. H. Woods, the well-known theatrical producer, and Pathe, Miss Ward is to appear in the leading roles of the picture version of famous Woods plays, including "The Yellow Ticket," "Common Clay" and "Innocence." George Fitzmaurice, one of Pathe's most famous directors, will direct Miss Ward.

It is reported that Charles Pathe is preparing even now to open the Paris plants immediately following the close of the war to carry out many big plans.

C. R. Seelye, Pathe's business manager, who is in Los Angeles, related that he canvassed among Pathe's 200 salesmen and managers in this country, as to what actress would probably be most acceptable to the patrons of the several thousand Pathe theaters, and it was the unanimous that Miss Ward would score highest in their approbation as the lead in "The Yellow Ticket."

FARRAR SPECTACLE FINISHED

"The Woman God Forgot," Said to Be Greater Than "Joan, the Woman," to Be Released in October

The new Geraldine Farrar motion picture spectacle, staged under the personal direction of Cecil B. DeMille, "The Woman God Forgot," has been finished in California and marks the initial Farrar release through Artcraft Pictures. The last scenes for this big production were staged in the Yosemite when Director De Mille took 200 people by special train to this beautiful section for several immense exteriors.

It is confidently expected that this new Farrar spectacle will easily outshine even "Joan the Woman," which had such a successful run in New York and other cities throughout the country last season. Undoubtedly the most gigantic offering ever released by Artcraft extensive preparations are being made by this company for its exploitation.

Supporting the famous diva in "Woman God Forgot" are many of the artists who appeared with her in "Joan," including Wallace Reid, Raymond Hatton, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Long, Charles B. Rogers, Olga Grey, as well as Theodore Kosloff, the Russian dancer.

Getting Program Cuts Free

(Editorial Note: We reprint the letter below and the inserted answers to the questions as being of interest to other exhibitors who wish to take advantage of our unusual service of loaning cuts from Motography free.)

Motography, Chicago:

We wish to take advantage of your offer to loan exhibitors cuts which are used to illustrate your magazine. Are all cuts used in illustrations available in this service? [Yes.] Are they furnished for either news or book stock? [For good stock only.]

Please tell us how we should go about in ordering these cuts. [Simply send clipping of cut you want to "Motography, Chicago."] How long will we be permitted to keep them before using them [Should be returned in a week or so], and how soon can we expect to get them after ordering them? We have always found Motography a very useful magazine and this service will make it doubly valuable to us.

Wishing you all the success in the world, we are, yours truly, Hardwick Brothers, Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

George Ade Fables Begin

With the naming of the first releases in the new George Ade "Fables in Slang" series, General Film reports extraordinary attention for these comedies being manifested by exhibitors.

There will be twelve of these superlatively American humorous subjects in approximately two-reel lengths, the time of run being from 25 to 30 minutes. The releases come one a week, and the series will number twelve.

The opening number of the current series is "The Twelve Cylinder Speed of the Leisure Class." The story concerns the sudden rise to wealth of Mr. and Mrs. Basker, plain, homespun people of the middle west. A terrific pace is set them by their more modern son and daughter. The humor is not only worked out with the use of titles in George Ade's own brilliantly expressive slang, but in the action and situations. The irony developed in this story is that, although the swiftness of the high living palls upon Pa Basker, his moral courage is so subdued by convention that he cannot extricate himself. Particularly happy types for the Baskers have been found by Essanay in George Bean and Frankie Raymond. A cast that is fine throughout includes Rodney LaRock, Hazel Coats and William Brotherhood.

The succeeding subjects in the Ade series of comedies are "The Wandering Boy and the Wayward Parents;" and "What Transpires After the Wind-up."

Five Pictures Bought by Jewel Co.

A direct and comprehensive answer to the nation's demand of the showman and the public to "get away from the old and give us something new" has been answered by Jewel Productions, Inc., one of the newest factors in the film industry.

Until very recently its activities have been almost unheralded to the trade. But, for over a year preparations have been under way along those lines which will make it possible now, through Jewel Productions, Inc., to present to showman and public pictures which have attained from every possible angle, the highest degree of superiority.

Jewel Productions, Inc., announces no elaborate or set schedule of releases or subjects, nor will it pursue such a policy or program.

Jewel Productions, Inc., is in no way a producing concern. Its sole activities consist of the marketing of super-pictures which they will buy outright or book for the producer on percentage, solely on the basis of merit, and before any production is purchased or even considered it must have received the unanimous stamp of public approval during its run of at least a week in a metropolitan center, thus eliminating entirely that gambling chance which many distributors must assume in passing a production to an exhibitor.

After reviewing a great number of features, Jewel Productions, Inc., thus far, have acquired the rights to only five.

Jewel offices have been established in the principal cities of the country, and headquarters on the fourth floor of the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, New York.

Herbert Brenon at Work

The filming of Rupert Hughes' popular novel, "Empty Pockets," is now progressing rapidly at Herbert Brenon's Hudson Heights studios. "Empty Pockets" will be the Brenon production to immediately follow "The Fall of the Romanoffs."

Pleased with Ogden Progress

Albert Scowcroft, president of the Ogden Picture Corporation, left for Ogden, Utah, last week, after having seen the establishment of the eastern executive office of that company well on its way. Mr. Crowcroft, before leaving, stated that his visit to the East was for the purpose of securing a competent eastern manager of productions and general representative.

"Our eastern organization is now completed," said Mr. Scowcroft, "and the second Lillian Walker extraordinary attraction will be made in the East; the third will be made at Ogden, the fourth at Los Angeles, and the remaining four of the first year's series will also be made in the East.

"We hope to teach the photoplay public a few additional startling innovations that will convince them of the wonders that motion pictures can really perform. Several such innovations, we are advised by our attorneys, are patentable and we have already applied for patent rights on them. When I state that I hope to present to the world, through the medium of Ogden Pictures, a stereoscopic form of photography that will present the characters of the screen almost as if they were in the flesh and on the stage, you can well appreciate what I have in mind."

Sixty Cities to See First Paralta

Paralta Plays, Inc., organized by Carl Anderson and his associates has been in existence but about five months. In that time it has formed two independent producing corporate units, headed by J. Warren Kerrigan and Bessie Barriscale, established one of the largest studios on the West Coast, directed by a notable producing staff, and now has practically ready to release four star feature productions. This is considered "going some," even in the motion picture industry, where things progress very fast indeed.

The first Paralta Play to be released will be J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man," which the Triangle Distributing Corporation will present for the first time Sunday, September 23, simultaneously in New York and sixty cities throughout the United States.

First Blackton and Ince Productions

The October list of Paramount releases furnishes a striking example of the combined strength represented by the various producing forces in addition to the tremendous producing organization already built up and perfected by Famous Players-Lasky. The October schedule marks the first appearance of a Blackton production on the Paramount schedule and also contains the first of the Paramount-Ince photoplays. The stellar forces of the Thomas H. Ince organization are represented by Dorothy Dalton and Charles Ray. In the Blackton production, which is an adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker's celebrated novel, "The World for Sale," the principal roles are played by Anna Little and Conway Tearle.

Yorke Film Moves East

Yorke Film Corporation, releasing pictures through Metro, has removed its producing center from Hollywood, California, to New York City, and will resume operations at once on the production of feature films in New York starring Harold Lockwood.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate"

Artcraft Released Second Hilarious George M. Cohan Picture. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE skill with which this complicated mystery farce has been adapted to the screen from Earl Derr Biggers' famous stage play calls for a prize of some sort, to be delivered into the triumphant hands of Hugh Ford, the director. Anybody at all familiar with the requirements of the screen will realize, before much of this film has passed, what a stupendous problem Mr. Ford had to cope with, and will marvel at his success in keeping all the action clear, making all the high spots register, and maintaining the elements of comedy and mystery always at the highest tension. The George M. Cohan of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" on the screen is much more the real George M. Cohan than he was in the screen adaptation of "Broadway Jones." The thousands of admirers of the inimitable comedian all over the land will receive his second screen production with keener delight than the first.

George M. Cohan in the vigorous and unique stage play, "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" is one of the oldest stories that ever found its way on the screen. From one scene to the next the spectator doesn't know what is going to happen—there is no figuring it out at all. Seldom have the elements of mystery and comedy conjoined as well as in this play. As far as that goes, it is seldom that a plot of the kind is attempted. There are about as many surprises in "Seven Keys to Baldpate" as there are scenes. The star is freer and more natural in his second play. He seems to have become more sure of himself and of the camera's results. A very worthy cast was picked for his support. Anna Q. Nilsson, Joseph Smiley, Frank Losee, Corrine Uzzel, and others, are among its members.

A star whose drawing power is not to be doubted for a moment, a play that is as full of "pep" as the most exacting would demand, and direction that is skillful in the extreme—these are the assets of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," a screen play of hilarious fun from start to finish.

"Iris"

Five Part Gold Rooster Play Released by Pathe. Reviewed by Lapearl Waggoner

CECIL HEPWORTH produced this Gold Rooster offering, a very, very English picture, with an English cast and a dash or two of English scenery. In this English-ness lies most of its interest. The little humorous side lights and incidental by-plays that lend our feature subjects their human and natural color are absent. The entire cast attends strictly to the business of working out the naked story, getting the poor heroine where they wanted her by a direct route and getting her out again suddenly. The story is not lightened by a single luminous flash. It is drama of the sternest kind. If there is any moral to be drawn from the story it isn't visible, but the picture will be entertainment for grown-ups. It is not recommended for young people of the impressionable age, or for children.

The interior of the English houses show beautiful settings and there is a fine scene of hill-bound lakes, that might have been "made in Scotland."

The stellar role is played by Alma Taylor, who, they tell us, is like unto our Mary Pickford in point of popularity in England. She is pleasant to look at, surely, and wears some lovely English clothes. which will be interesting to the feminine contingent. The villainy villain was played by Henry Ainly, with fine discretion and Stuart Rome was the young engineer, a hero rather not like the kind that our matinee girls sing about.

The Story is by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero and concerns the fortunes of a beautiful young widow whose husband leaves her wealth on condition that she does not marry again. But she loves a young engineer who is poor and who loves her. Maldonado, a Portugese millionaire of London society, loves her, too, and the luxury loving young person cannot choose between wealth in the abstract and the material kind. Then her solicitor, as they call your real estate lawyer over there, turns abscounder and she becomes penniless. The engineer goes to Canada to seek his fortune and she promises to wait for him. When she starts out into the world the Portugese gives her a book of signed checks, just for emergency. he tells her. The emergency comes, of course, and comes again. Then poverty and a struggle against Maldonado and his riches. When she finally accepts the apartment that he furnishes for her she stops writing to Laurie. After a few months he comes to look for her and to lay his prosperity at her feet. He leaves her in anger, and Maldonado, who has been in hiding, appears to rage at her further. He orders her from the house and she goes, in her black velvet evening gown and the shabby shawl and hat she wore when she first came. Under a lamp post she hesitates for a minute and then disappears around the corner. Laurie comes back, sees her in the light of the lamp, and disappears around the same corner. Then a little fade-out scene showing the dawn of a day in the new land of Canada, and the forgiven Iris walking with her Laurie.

The exhibitor who shows this picture will find its drawing power in the beauty of the star, the name of the author, and its delineation of English people, customs and manners.

"The Little Pirate"

Zoe Ray Featured in Butterfly Release of September 10. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE is about two reels, scarcely that, of ordinary melodrama, and the rest of this picture is pleasing "kid" playing, giving little Zoe Rae plenty of opportunity to entertain and amuse. The grown-up part of the story deals with the financial and domestic troubles of Margery's parents, but after Zoe Rae, as Margery, mounts her pony and sets out to mail the letter she hopes will settle all the difficulties, there is only enjoyment for the audience. For she meets adventures of chillhood's own kind, and she and her young companion certainly have a good time, and take the viewers with them. The course of events thereafter is wholely natural and is delightfully amusing.

Elsie Jane Wilson is the director of the feature and she has succeeded very well in handling her material. The action progresses well and points of comedy and pathos are well presented. The children enact their roles naturally. Zoe Rae is already well known, and this picture will add to her fame. Burwell Hannick, as her companion, is also good. Gretchen Lederer, Frank Brownlee and Charles West have the leading adult roles.

The Story: John Baird, Margery's father, is in financial difficulties and wishes to borrow money on bonds held in trust for Margery by her mother. Mrs. Baird refuses to give her consent. This is the beginning of the quarrel, and soon Mrs. Baird leaves her husband, stating that she will not return until sent for. Margery, growing lonely for her mother, writes a letter asking her to come back, signing her father's name. Then she mounts her pony and sets out to mail the letter. She dismounts to run after a rabbit and the pony goes home. Then Margery meets a small boy playing pirate. The children spend the night in the boy's cave on a little island in the lake. Then next day they hunt for buried treasure.

In the meantime the riderless pony has set the household in a panic, and when the letter is found, the parents believe Margery is drowned, and they repent the quarrel which led to her escapade. While preparing to drag the lake for the body, they see Marjory and her companion in a leaky boat trying to get back to shore. The children are saved. Then to complete the happiness comes the message that Baird's business has weathered the panic and is also safe.

"The Rainbow Girl"

Juliette Day's First Picture an American-Mutual Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

WHAT plot material there is in this picture is good, but it is very slight and is stretched distressingly thin to cover five reels. There are a few good situations, but little real story. Draggy action and padding almost drown the good points. But Juliette Day, who is pretty and photographs well, makes an attractive heroine, in spite of her apparent camera consciousness. The settings have a real look and are well photographed. The brief sketches of events in a music publisher's office are amusing and out of the ordinary.

The average audience will be able to extract fair entertainment from this picture, though it is not equal to some of the productions American has put out recently. They will doubtless like and remember Juliette Day. George Fisher, who plays opposite her, is rather well cast as the dreamy composer and plays his part cleverly. Some of the best acting is done by the players in small parts, the music publisher, the pianist, the vaudeville "artistes," for instance.

The settings in the play are very good and the photography up to standard. Lillian Hayward, Charles Bennett, Louis Morrison, Emma Klug and Marie Robertson appear in the supporting cast. September 17 is the release date.

The Story: The play takes its name from a song written about the heroine and which brings fame to the writer. Mary Beth, the "Rainbow Girl," played by Miss Day, is ambitions for a musical career, but prevented by the poverty of her parents. When her father loses his position she decides to rent the spare room in their home, and by chance a struggling composer takes it. The love affair between the two, the composer's vain efforts to sell his productions, his final success and the clearing up of misunderstandings forms the story.

"The Amazons"

Famous Players-Paramount Features Marguerite Clark. Reviewed by George W. Graves

MARGUERITE CLARK is at her fascinating best in every scene of this, through her own efforts and the skill of the director, Joe Kaufman. The story, adapted from Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's stage play, is a lively comedy embodying a rich satire on peculiar types of people and their habits. These types are, of course, exaggerated to the limits that a farce will allow but at no time does the comedy seem forced. The story, having to do with the eccentricities of a mother who tries to bring up three daughters as boys, and the ludicrous results of these eccentricities, has Marguerite Clark figuring prominently in a delightful gymnasium prize fight and a vegetable fight (scattering the produce of a huckster to the winds) in the first reel. The plot takes an amusing surprise turn when Tommy (Marguerite Clark) meets Lord Litterly in a manner unconventional to say the least, and busies itself for the rest of the footage with the pranks the three girls play on their lovers—for lovers they have in spite of the parent's vigilance.

There is not a slow or uninteresting moment in the whole action, and this certainly speaks well for the work of the adaptor, Joe Kaufman, and the concerted efforts of the players. Marguerite Clark has the most bewitchingly delightful role she has had since "Miss George Washington," and her role is a close second to that in the former play in opportunity. As the romping tomboy, the through-and-through "cut-up," Miss Clark is supreme. The multitude of Marguerite Clark's admirers will be delighted with her appearance in "The Amazons," not only for her personal efforts, but because of her excellent support, the fine direction, good photography, handsome scenic investiture and all the smaller things that make a production measure up as thorough.

Elsie Lawson and Helen Greene are excellent as "Tommy's" sisters, and William Hinckley, Edgar Norton and Andre Bellon are "great" as the three foils and lovers. Helen Robinson had the part of the mother. Tammany Young helped to get the laughs in one or two brief scenes, and he did his little bit so well, it is to be regretted that he was not seen further.

"The Seven Pearls"

First Episode of Pathe Serial With Creighton Hale and Mollie King. Reviewed by Lapearl Waggoner

SUMPTUOUS Turkish settings and the mysteries of the Orient, with an American adventurer to give an air of romance combine to make the nucleus of an exciting serial for Pathe. The first three reels are full of swift action and by the time you come to "to be continued" you're keyed up with suspense, which is the chief function of a serial. Mollie King and Creighton Hale are the chief excitement makers, and right well they carry their roles. The scenes shift from Turkey to America, with everybody wondering how the seven pearls are all going to get back to their native land.

The Story: The Sultan's Necklace: Ilma is a little American girl who has been raised as the daughter of a former ambassador to America, Honest Bey. The Sultan leaves a valuable necklace, containing seven pearls with Honest Bey, but when he comes for it they find it has been stolen. Then he demands the return of the necklace, Ilma, for his harem, or the life of Honest Bey. Ilma begs six months to find it, and this is granted, but one of the Sultan's guards is sent as her escort. Harry Drake, a young American loitering in Constantinople, has met her through an adventure. He gets mixed up with a gang of international gentlemen crooks, and steals the necklace for them, without knowing he is stealing it. So it happens that Ilma and her escort follow the whole gang to America. The necklace has been torn apart, each of the gang has a pearl, Harry is thought to have the whole necklace, and Ilma is left in his apartment looking for it.

"Polly of the Circus"

Mae Marsh Starred in First of the Goldwyn Pictures. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

GOLDWYN'S first offering is an excellent one, as we might expect it to be. Margaret Mayo's play, translated into pictures under the author's supervision, is a charming photoplay, with a wide appeal to film patrons and many points to commend it to exhibitors. At its pre-release presentation at the Colonial Theater, Chicago, it proved a good drawing card, both because of the fame of the stage play and the popularity of Mae Marsh. And the audiences attracted were well pleased. Old and young enjoyed the circus scenes, which are so vividly portrayed, and the small town atmosphere recalled memories, humorous or poignant, to anyone who has lived in rural districts. But the play is by no means all "atmosphere." There is a fine horse-race, cleverly set forth to arouse all the enthusiasm such a scene can. And there is a thrilling circus fire and panic, in addition to the usual "thrills" which accompany circus scenes. The six reels used to tell the story are not in the least too long, according to the verdict of the patrons.

Goldwyn's intention not to let the star monopolize the picture is very evident, even when the star is the wonderful Mae Marsh. On this point the picture will meet criticism probably, for they haven't given us enough Mae Marsh. Goldwyn hasn't taken full advantage of Miss Marsh's unusual talent in this first picture. In every other respect they extracted from the material at hand its entire value.

Artistically, the play is thoroughly satisfactory. Big scenes and little scenes, emotion and humor, all are presented in a delicate but sure fashion. Beautiful sets beautifully photographed with exquisite lighting effects charm the eye throughout the picture. Acting by star and supporting cast is uniformly fine. In short the picture is worth "boosting" vigorously by any theater fortunate enough to book it.

Vernon Steele plays opposite Miss Marsh as the young minister. Charles Eldridge is Toby, the clown; Wellington Playter, Big Jim, boss canvasman, and George Trimble is Barker, owner of the show. In the large cast are also Lucille Laverne, Dick Lee, Charles Riegel, Lucille Satterthwaite, J. B. Hollis and three child players, Stephen and John Carr and Mildred Call. Charles T. Horn directed the picture. George W. Hill photographed it.

The Story: The story is too well known to need detailed reporting. In brief, it concerns Polly, a little circus rider, who is injured in a fall from her horse at a performance in a little New England town, and John Douglas, the young minister of the village, into whose care Polly is given until she shall recover and rejoin the show. Before that time comes, Douglas and Polly are in love with one another, though neither realizes it. The village people, who disapprove of circuses and circus riders, try to persuade the minister to send Polly away. Polly's friends of the circus, the clown Toby and Jim, boss canvas-man, buy Bingo, Polly's horse, and present him to her. She enters the horse in the race at the county fair and wins the purse, thereby arousing the anger of Deacon Strong, whose horse Bingo defeats. Deacon Strong makes Polly believe that she is injuring Douglas by remaining at his home, and so the girl goes back to the circus. But the next year, when the show again comes to the village, Douglas seeks an explanation from Polly and learns the truth. There is a fire and a panic among the circus crowd, and Douglas saves Polly's life. Then she promises to stay with him as his wife.

"Reputation"

Edna Goodrich in Mutual Star Production of September 3. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE isn't a great deal to commend in this offering. It is "just a picture," its story based upon a country girl's adventures in a city, and any originality the plot may contain is overshadowed by the draggy action and the padding. With John B. O'Brien as director, J. C. Clymer as author and Edna Goodrich as star, this picture should be much better than it is. It is dull and hackneyed throughout, and its only artistic merit is in the portrayal of the characters and general atmosphere of a small town. The women patrons may be interested in the scenes in which Miss Goodrich, as a modiste's model, wears a succession of beautiful gowns. The picture's moral, showing the danger of gossip, can be taken to heart in some communities.

Supporting the star are William Hinckley, Frank Goldsmith, Carey Lee, Esther Evans, Nellie Parker Spaulding and Mrs. Brunage.

The Story: Constance Bennett is reared in a small town by a maiden aunt, and is the sweetheart of John Clavering, son of the local grande dame. Constance goes to New York, where she becomes a model in a suit and cloak house. Edward Berste, her employer, forces his attentions upon her, and Mrs. Berste becomes suspicious and later wildly jealous.

Constance returns to the home town to escape the attentions of Berste and men of his type. Berste, however, follows her there. She has established a store of her own, and before a crowd of customers Mrs. Berste walks in and accuses Constance. The girl faces ostracism at home. She is turned out of the church. In despair she returns to New York. She meets Berste and visits the cabarets with him. They return to her apartment, where she traps him into an avowal of love. She has summoned his wife and exposes him. Berste seeks to retaliate and hires a woman to trap Constance. She goes to dine with them in a hotel and finds herself alone with Berste. Clavering has returned from Mexico and has followed her. She fights with Berste, and Clavering bursts into the room. A pistol is fired. Berste is mortally wounded. Constance faces trial for murder and is acquitted. She returns to the home town as Clavering's bride.

"The Fighting Trail"

First Episode of New Vitagraph Serial in Three Reels. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE story of Vitagraph's new serial, by J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady, with foreign agents versus American patriots, trying to guard an all-important war secret, as the opposing dramatic forces, is all that could be desired in point of timeliness. The first episode has been given all the care in production that the most pretentious feature would require or deserve, thus proving that the day has come when serials are to be made as substantial in entertainment and class as any of the regular feature releases. The old serials would go to any length to drag in a thrill whether it really belonged in the story or whether it did not, but improvements have been steadily made and Vitagraph's "The Fighting Trail" seems to be standing at the gate of a new era in serials, an era wherein the serial will not be known as a grotesque concoction of thrills and purposeless action, but will take its place with the carefully prepared plays which demand acting as well as action, a plausible and convincing story and good direction.

"The Fighting Trail" will be in fifteen episodes, the first, three reels in length, and the remaining episodes in two reels each. It is worthy of note that the titles of all these episodes have been prepared to catch the eye and arouse interest, as witness: "The Bridge of Death," "The Desert of Torture," "The Water Trap," and "The Trestle of Horrors."

Vitagraph proclaims its serial as "the most marvelous melodramatic serial ever produced," and the spectator after seeing the first episode is not apt to become disputatious. The brisk action, interesting plot, surprises and thrills and the splendid acting of the cast headed by William Duncan and Carol Holloway, augur well for the quality of the succeeding numbers. The two leads are exactly the types that will have popular appeal. The other parts, taken by Walter Rogers, George Hold, Joe Ryan and Fred Burns, stand out in conspicuous relief. This is a very commendable thing about the serial, that all the characters stand out and figure vitally in the action. Merely decorative characters there are none.

Judging by the first episode, Edward Montagne's scenario has some of the best written continuity that has ever been applied in serial work. It must be said, too, that William Duncan, who is director as well as lead, accounts for himself admirably in the office of producer. Atmosphere and realism constituted his goal.

The exhibitor can certainly rely on "The Fighting Trail" to do all that any other serial has done for him, and if he can not rely on it to do even more the first episode is a poor criterion. The nation-wide billboard campaigning and other advertising and publicity on the serial has given it a fine send-off. All that would seem to be needful now is a good projection machine and a comfortable theater.

A regular playroom and nursery has been established at the Essanay studios for the use of the score or more children who are members of Little Mary McAlister's company now filming comedy-dramas of child life.

"Pants"

Mary McAlister in a Merry Essanay-K. E. S. E. "Kid" Picture. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS comedy drama is interpreted by a cast "all star" in that a number of characterizations stand out for their excellence. No one player runs away with the honors (unless it be "Bobo," the puppy, who certainly is one of the stars). Although children play the leading roles, there is no touch of amateurishness in the acting. In fact, we have seen few casts of grown-up players who acted their roles as well as do these youngsters. Both director and kiddies are to be congratulated on the good work.

Mary McAlister plays the mischievous heroine in her usual charming fashion. She is as pretty and unaffected as ever, and both her talent and drawing power make her worthy of featuring in this, her first five-reel picture. The youngsters who play the poor little boy, the "snippy" small girl, and several other children in the cast are very clever. A number of amusing episodes in the lives of "real kids," whether they are rich or poor, are sure to be appreciated by all audiences.

For the most part, the picture is true to life. But the director apparently had no real story to build on, and the incident of the burglary in the last act of the picture is artificial and rather far-fetched. However, most patrons will enjoy the picture too much throughout to be very critical of this last reel. It is one of the very best pictures of child life ever offered.

The Story: Betty is so carefully brought up that all real fun is excluded from her life. Her young uncle sympathizes with her and jestingly advises her to run away. She takes his advice seriously and sets out in search of adventure. But the other little girls don't know her and the little boys won't play with a girl. Betty chances upon the discarded clothing of a group of boys in swimming, and deciding to be a boy herself, dons the ragged trousers, shirt and hat of one of the urchins, leaving her own dainty clothes in their place. The plight of the boy who is forced to go home in girl's clothes is one of the funniest scenes of the play.

The mix-up which results when Betty does not return home but instead a boy wearing her dress and a ragged girl wearing her coat and hat are brought to her home is fine comedy. At last Betty herself is located, in masculine attire, and returned to her distracted family. Later Betty gives a party to a group of youngsters she encounters in the poorer section of the town, among them the boy who had figured in her first escapade. Afterwards, when this boy's father, out of work, attempts to burglarize Betty's home, the friendship between the two children is discovered and Betty's father aids the unfortunate man instead of punishing him.

"Lorelei of the Seas"

Marine Film Corp. Five Reel Phantasy. Released State Rights. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE most remarkable things about this film are the beautiful, painting-like scenes which are to be found in abundance all the way through, and the unusual handling of the mermaid ballet ensembles,—and these are really remarkable and perhaps suffice for the picture's being. The story and acting of the piece do not measure up to the standard of quality that the picture exhibits in its outward investiture,—evidently another case of the producer's losing himself in the scenic part of his production and overlooking somewhat the essential drama that can proceed from nowhere but the story action. As a result of this the star, Tyrone Power, a through-and-through fine actor, does not stand out as he should and the other characters hold only a certain lukewarm interest. The story is a kind of phantasy uniting a modern theme with the ancient legend of "The Lorelei," part of the action taking place as the heroine's dream and part of it as the fateful coincidence in modern days when the girl, making believe she is a modern Lorelei, strolls out on the rocks at night, to have a half drowned young man cast up by the sea at her very feet. The rest of the story concerns the romance of the two. A rather uninteresting and anticlimactic finish swings way back of the main story's start, showing how the girl happened to be living with her guardian, an old fisherman.

As we said above, the extreme beauty of the picture, with its lithe mermaids, sparkling waters, etc., is its main attraction, and audiences are very likely to be satisfied with the offering because of this, especially if good music accompanies the picture. And those who like light romance will probably be content with the story. Frances Burnham, as the Lorelei, is given chances to be very attractive. Others in the cast are Jay Belasco, Gypsy Abbott and John Oaker. Henry Otto directed the picture.

"The Bride's Silence"

Gail Kane in American-Mutual Mystery Story. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris.

A MYSTERY plot that holds interest to the last flicker of film, photographed in settings remarkable for beauty, and Gail Kane in a role which calls her entire dramatic talent into play, form a combination which makes this fifth of Miss Kane's Mutual productions are unusually good five-reel photoplays. Staged under the direction of Henry King, this story by Daniel F. Whitcomb is given its full dramatic value. Miss Kane's work will win praise from all patrons, and she is given a fine supporting cast which includes Ashton Dearholt, Henry Burrows, James Lee Farley, Robert Klein and Lewis J. Cody.

The beauty of the outdoor views and the excellence of the photoplay alone would make this picture noteworthy. Their loveliness merits all the superlatives in one's vocabulary. It surpasses anything even American has done before, and this company has given us very beautiful pictures in the past.

The release date of the picture is September 10.

The Story: The son of a prominent family is murdered. The butler is accused of the murder, but the audience knows that he is innocent and that the sister of the murdered man knows who committed the crime. This sister marries the prosecuting attorney, but secretly tries to have the wrongly suspected butler freed. Finally her strange actions bring suspicion upon herself. Then she goes insane. Later she recovers but does not regain her memory. A detective on the case believes that the girl herself murdered her brother, and prepares to have her arrested. Before this happens, the real criminal, a wronged cousin of the dead man, commits suicide, leaving a confession of her deed. The sister had known the truth but feared to reveal the scandal and bring shame on the family name. When the real story is known and recalled to her mind, her lost memory returns.

Carmel Myers with Bluebird

Bluebird Photo Plays have announced a new star in the person of Miss Carmel Myers, who is working in a feature production called "The Dynast." Miss Myers is rather a newcomer to pictures, but has cherished stellar ambitions for a long time. The story of her entry into the ranks of screen players is an unusual one.

She is the daughter of a rabbi who has a world-wide reputation as an authority on Chaldean affairs. While D. W. Griffith was filming his multiple reeler "Intolerance," he sought information of Miss Myers' father, and in this way she became acquainted with the director. Shortly afterwards she found herself at work at the Fine Arts Studio. She declared that she was willing to play "atmosphere" for two years if necessary to gain experience. However, in less than two months after her first day at the studio she was given a good opportunity which she immediately improved. About a year ago Miss Myers chanced to meet President Carl Laemmle of Universal, and she confided to him her ambition to become a photoplay star. Mr. Laemmle said that he hoped to find her at Universal City on his next visit. Since then Miss Myers has played a most important role in the Jewel production, "Sirens of the Sea," now running at the Broadway Theater, New York, and her success in this photoplay led to her starring in Bluebirds.

Great Fight in Farnum Play

The movie man of might and muscle, the man who has fought his way through a hundred thousand feet of celluloid, whose man to man battles have long been the talk of millions of picturegoers the world over, has now relegated brute force to its proper place. That man is William Farnum, hero of a hundred fights, and who in "When a Man Sees Red," the William Fox picturization of Larry Evans' Saturday Evening Post story, "The Painted Lady," fights a fight such as has never before been seen on screen nor stage.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

AMONG the actors who are included in the first army draft and have reported at training camps are Jay Belasco, who has just completed a role in "The Loreli of the Sea," and Joe Moore, Grace Cunard's husband, one of the well known Moore brothers. David Kirkland, director with Henry Lehrman of Christie Comedies, has joined an officers' training camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks recently gave a dinner party in honor of Eileen Percy's eighteenth birthday. W. S. Hart, Charlie Chaplin and Theda Bara were among those invited to celebrate the birthday of Fairbanks' leading lady, who was born in Belfast, Ireland, coming to this country when a mere child.

Tom Terriss, recently head of his own corporation, has been engaged to play opposite Alice Joyce in Vitagraph productions and to direct her plays. They are now working on a Robert W. Chambers' story, "Anne's Bridge."

Rosemary Theby, who recently returned to Universal, will support Franklyn Farnum in Bluebird pictures hereafter, taking the place of Brownie Vernon, to be starred alone in another Universal Company. Miss Theby will appear first in "The Winged Mystery."

A colored child appears among the thirty youngsters in support of Little Mary McAllister in her Essanay production, "Pants." It is said that following the filming of the picture, the mother of the chocolate drop, having a highly cultivated eye for business, set up a tent down in Chicago's dark-town and hung out a sign:

"See the only colored child actress in the movies—admission five cents."

Bobby Connelly may be the youngest famous star but he has an automobile, a Reo, just as big as any of the older stars.

The theft of a $2 necktie, the property of Earle Williams, cost the Vitagraph company $3.000 and played the dickens with the making of "The Love Doctor," a Blue Ribbon feature. In several scenes Mr. William wore a tie of unusual pattern. Then he was taken ill and work on the picture suspended. On his return, the tie was missing and everybody in the Brooklyn studio took interest in the search. It was in vain and then Mr. Earle toured all haberdasheries in Greater New York vainly trying to duplicate the tie. Of course there was only one thing to do and that was to throw away several thousand feet of film picturing Mr. Williams in the lost tie and begin all over again with a new neck piece.

The Greater Vitagraph picture "A Municipal Report," contains many scenes filmed at the Galloway Stock Farms, a large estate in Talbot county, near Eaton, Maryland.

At the recent benefit given for the French Emergency Hospital Fund, Mary Pickford made the biggest hit of her career by reciting Eugene Field's poem "Seein' Things at Night," after one hour's study. She wore one of her "Rebecca" costumes.

"Fatty" Arbuckle has just sent a small volume of original verses to the publishers, and they are not limericks.

"Mother" La Varnie, character woman with Mack Sennett forces, planted an orange tree in the early spring. Carefully she tended it, watched it grow with breathless interest, talked of what fine oranges it would sometime produce. But alas—it developed into a thriving tomato plant.

A rakish, almost bandit-like air is imparted to Mack Sennett these days, by the huge straw sombero he affects around the studio where he is turning out Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies. To make matters worse he has punched a lot of holes in the crown so that the chapeau looks like the conning tower of a submarine.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle has just received through the U. S. mail a bid of fifty dollars for his old brown derby hat. The offer comes from an enthusiastic fan in Peoria. Illinois, and "Fatty" has taken it under consideration.

Richard Ordynski, stage director of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, came to California for a vacation and stayed to write a story for Theda Bara and then act a role in it. He is playing a Russian student. Richard Ordynski was the man who introduced the marvelous wordless play Sumurun to this country. He also staged Gertrude Hoffman's vaudeville version of the play. For James K. Hackett he put on the Merry Wives of Windsor, for John Cort, the musical comedy Flora Bella, for Percy Mackaye, the Masque of Caliban, which played before 25,000 people in New York City College Stadium. To finally demonstrate his remarkable versatility Ordynski staged Canterbury Tales at the Metropolitan Opera House. His entrance into picture work is noteworthy.

Did you ever hear of Pearl White's ankle bracelet? The Pathe star has worn it for several years and it is her mascot, her most cherished possession. It was given her by an admirer, a man who is on the battle line, if he has not been killed, for it was three years ago that his steamer sailed down New York harbor and no word has been heard of him since.

To all who have lived in boarding houses "The Streets of Illusion," a new Pathe feature starring Gladys Hulette, is sure to appeal, and those who haven't will see a city boarding house to the life. At first thought a locale of this sort wouldn't be considered a good field for romance but it is—the picture gives the proof.

Douglas Fairbanks is in communication with the Depot Quartermaster at New York City as to transportation of cigars, cigarettes and chewing gum for the Pershing regiment now in the trenches. It is his intention to keep the boys well supplied with these necessities, and he hopes to ship a large box of smoking supplies every month. Fairbanks recently autographed ten thousand photographs to be sold and funds used to buy bandages for our boys on the battlefields.

Louise Glaum is gathering a supply of cigarettes to add to the tobacco fund for the "Sammies" in France. She intends to launch a big drive on the California film colony as soon as she recovers from the illness that confines her to her home.

The star taking nourishment in the center is Miss Ruth Everdale, who plays the child's part in the Mutual-American "Souls in Pawn," with Gail Kane, seen as the nurse. Director Henry King is scrutinizing the script to see what scene should next be shot.

Feature Programs

Artcraft

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm (FIVE REELS)—ARTCRAFT—SEPTEMBER 3.—Starring Mary Pickford. Rebecca Randall and her large family of brothers and sisters live at Sunnybrook Farm, which is principally remarkable for the size of the mortgage it carries. Rebecca goes to live with her two aunts, Miranda and Jane Sawyer, who strive to bring up the child in the way their New England consciences dictate. Rebecca makes friends of everyone except Minnie Smellie, daughter of the minister. She sells soap to buy a lamp for Mrs. Simpson, and thereby meets Adam Ladd. She goes to the Academy and grows up a clever and lovely young woman. One of the aunts passes away and then later Rebecca learns that the railroad has purchased Sunnybrook Farm. When everyone is happy Adam Ladd reminds Rebecca that when a little girl she had told him she intended to marry him when she grew up.

Butterfly

The Little Pirate—(FIVE REELS)—BUTTERFLY—SEPTEMBER 10.—Starring little Zoe Rae. Little Margery has some bonds in trust for her, and her daddy wants to use them to raise some very necessary cash, but the mother protests, and when she overhears her husband's lawyer advising her husband to raise the money anyway, leaves the house. Margery starts out on her pony to find the mother. Captain Kidd, Jr., holds her up and adopts her as his trusty first mate. The two children live on an island, leading a life of gay piracy until they finally take part in the denouement that brings happiness to all.

The Spindle of Life (FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 17.—Gladsome and Mrs. Harrison spend their summers at Harborsport, and there Gladsome learns to know and love the fishermen of the district. The Bradshaws, father and son, Vincent, also live at Harborsport in the summer, Bradshaw being Mrs. Harrison's financial adviser. He wants to marry Vincent to Gladsome because some of his investments of her money are a bit shaky. "Alphabet" Carter, a financial power, is ordered to the seashore for his health, and there he meets Gladsome and the two fall in love. He goes to town long enough to help ruin the Bradshaws and then returns, carries Gladsome off to the minister and marries her. He climbs into her house by a rope ladder and the butler brings them up some supper. Mother gets suspicious and follows the butler. Then she learns that in spite of her social climbing her daughter has married an aristocrat and great wealth.

Paramount

Little Miss Optimist—(FIVE REELS)—PARAMOUNT—AUGUST 26.—Featuring Vivian Martin. Maizie-Rosie Carden, a waif of the streets, is a little optimist in spite of her hard knocks with the world. Dean Hendrie, a young man with musical ambitions, who has broken off with his father because he would not enter the latter's business, is penniless and half-starved when Maizie-Rosie finds him literally "in the gutter," saves him from a brusque policeman and has him sent to a hospital. She gives him a battered dime. Deal finally becomes successful as a church organist. Maizie's brother, Ben, is accused of murdering his former employer by Winter, the unscrupulous person who had been instrumental in having Ben discharged. Winter is the real murderer. He had slain his employer in a fight which was the result of the latter's discovery of his dishonesty. Although things look black for Ben, the mask is at last removed from the real murderer, whose identity is revealed through Deal's "lucky dime," which the murdered man had in his possession, and which Winter puts in the church collection plate. Deal's father, seeing his son has been successful, willingly receives him back into the family and as the story closes the future looks bright for Maizie-Rosie.

Lost in Transit—MOROSCO—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 3.—Starring George Beban. A wealthy man loses his wife when their child is born, and in his grief refuses to keep the baby, and orders it taken to a home. A couple of years pass and his empty heart cries out for the love of something, and he sends for the boy. On the way to his house it is kidnapped. Meantime a woman deposits a chubby youngster in the rags, bottles, sacks wagon of Niccolo Darini—otherwise George Beban. Then she proceeds to end her life. The kindly Italian finds the little chap, and is so taken by his winning ways that he decided to keep him. A rival for the love of Nita Lapi has seen the child with Niccolo, and when a reward is offered for the recovery of the kidnapped babe, he tells the matron of the home and the Italian is forced to give up his little charge. His heart is broken; he can no longer eat; the light has gone out of his life. Later a beggar is struck by an automobile while leading a child across the street, and in his dying moment confesses that this is the real child. The matron had lied—knowing the waif cared for by Niccolo was not the real child—to get the reward offered by the distracted father. In a judicial hearing to determine if the latter shall keep both children, the choice of a "parent" is left to the waif, who goes immediately to Niccolo; the reward is recovered from the matron and handed to the baby as a means of starting in life. Nita promises to be a mother to the little fellow by marrying Niccolo. Thus all ends happily.

The Amazons—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS—PARAMOUNT—AUGUST 12.—Featuring Marguerite Clark. This story, adapted from Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's stage play, by Joe Kaufman, and produced by the latter, tells about the attempt of an English marchioness to bring up her three daughters as boys. She even dresses them up in boys' clothes, and, of course, forbids all social intercourse with the male sex. The feminine instincts of two of the girls assert themselves somewhat, but Tommy (Marguerite Clark) is as good as two or three boys. The story goes through much interesting comedy and finally winds up with the discovery of the three girls' sweethearts by the shocked parent. But the later at last realizes that girls, even hoydens, will be girls. The mother allows her daughters to return to girls' attire and allows the love affairs to continue their sweet course. Reviewed in this issue.

Fox

When False Tongues Speak—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 8.—Starring Virginia Pearson. Fred Walton is slain in his home and the story revolves around the seeking of his slayer. Five people, any one of whom might have been responsible for his death, are in the house at the time of the murder. Mary Walton, his wife, from whom he is estranged; Platt Sinclair, the lawyer, who was to handle the divorce proceedings; Helen Lee, a young artist, with whom Walton was infatuated; Eric Mann, a young reporter covering Mrs. Walton's activities in the slums, and Jimmy Hope, a burglar, who pays a professional visit to the Walton home. The identity of the guilty person is not revealed until the final scenes of the film.

K. E. S. E.

Men of the Desert—ESSANAY—(SCREEN TIME, 65 MINUTES)—SEPTEMBER 24.—Starring Jack Gardner. Jack, a nomadic cowboy, wanders into a feud between the cattlemen and the sheepmen on the desert, and is so outspoken on the outlawry that the sheriff hands him his badge and tells him to go and do better if he can. He arrests the most recent slayer and the latter's companions immediately storm the jail and rescue him, wounding Jack in the fight. May, a girl of the ranch, finds him and takes care of him. The feudists discover Jack's hiding place, but both he and the girl escape to a canyon, where Jack holds them off until the girl goes for help. The opposite feudists come to save him, and Jack and the girl wed on the battle ground, which reconciles the feudists and restores order on the desert.

The Fibbers—ESSANAY—(65 MINS.)—OCTOBER 15.—Starring Bryant Washburn. John Cort and his wife have managed to save $300 out of his earnings as an architect. A hobo, injured in a wreck, is taken to their home and their kindness to him makes large inroads on their little bank account. In an attempt to save money Barbara tries to sell a play she wrote at school, and just at this time John gets a commission from a wealthy woman. In attempting to conceal good fortune from each other for the surprise of their glorious fulfillments, many misunderstandings arise between Bab and John. Of course, the hobo turns out to be the fairy godfather who has brought all this good fortune about and he shares in the joy of them both.

Triangle

Idolators—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE.—Featuring Louise Glaum. This story has to do with the careers of two girls, one who holds that the woman of today has to scheme her way through life to meet with any degree of success, while the other upholds the old hard work and honesty formula. The former becomes a dye-in-the-wool vampire, defying all the conventions of society, while the latter first rises to stardom on the stage and then retires to become the wife of a playwright. The author, however, is finally ensnared by Viola, the vampire, who puts him before her other admirers. He is caught in Viola's "den" by his wife, and in a stirring scene he repulses her for good. Although the wife's heart is broken, she returns to the stage and makes good. Viola and her deserter are found together by Oscar Brent, a rich old gentleman who has backed Viola in stage productions and who thinks her affections belong to him. Viola's love for Curtis turns to a flaming hate, since he has been the cause of her downfall, and she finally murders him. To escape the police she flees with her Egyptian servant, who has always loved her. After a long period of hiding, and when the police are at her very tenement door, the Egyptian kills her because of his love, and thus deprives the law of its prey.

Mountain Dew—TRIANGLE—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 16.—Starring Margery Wilson. The heroine is a wild sprite of the mountains who knows nothing of "larnin'," is not worried about it. Her father is a grim pioneer who, people say, is a moonshiner. When a good-looking youth, in the person of Charlie Gunn, comes to the region in search of material for a novel, he meets the miss with the flashing black eyes, and he decides to become the school teacher for the coming year. On one occasion he is compelled to hold her father at the point of a gun while he puts her through a reading lesson.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

For France—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 17.—Starring Edward Earle and Betty Howe. Gerald Askland, at a garden party is captivated by a pretty French girl, who wins the plaudits of the guests by singing the Marseillaise. He learns that her father keeps an art school and that she aids in its conduct. He joins the school. Here he learns to love Marthe, but he has a rival in the person of Von Glehm, but the rival is arrested and deported at the outbreaw of the war. Ackland joins the aviation corps of France, and Marthe and her father go to a little farm near Mons. Chance disables his machine near the little farm in time for him to rescue his sweetheart from the German soldiers and a battle takes place near the farm. Ackland is badly wounded, and while in a Red Cross hospital he is nursed by the faithful Marthe, who consents to become Mrs. Ackland.

Mutual Star Productions

Sands of Sacrifice—(FIVE REELS)—AMERICAN—SEPTEMBER 24.—Starring William Russell. "Big Bill" Darcey (William Russell) has no ambition on earth except his own pleasure until he meets Nora Farnes (Francelia Billington). Nora's mother's fortune has been taken by Enoch Fovle, an unscrupulous promoter, and Nora, going to his country place to force him to make an accounting, runs into a group of his friends, of which Darcey is one. Darcey protects the girl from the crowd and is alone in the lodge with her when Foyle arrives. In a struggle in which Foyle is attempting to get into the room where Nora is hiding, he is shot, and Darcey and Nora flee. Darcey keeps Nora at his own lodge all night, and to protect her name asks her to marry him. They are about to start on their wedding trip when Darcey learns that Foyle has fleeced him of his fortune. He goes to Foyle's office and finds Nora there. His faith in her is wrecked, and after turning over what money he has left to her account, he leaves for the desert with Sammy Goode, a consumptive. Sammy dies in a battle for health after making Darcey promise to return to Nora and listen to an explanation. Nora determines to wreck Foyle. She uses a woman's weapon, and on the night she has set for the trap she secrets detectives in her apartment and wins a confession from the broker. In the midst of the scene Darcey enters the apartment, and, staggered at what he sees, starts away. He recalls his promise and enters. The presence of detectives explains, and Foyle is led away to prison, while Darcey and Nora finish the dinner which had been prepared.

The Runaway—(FIVE REELS)—EMPIRE ALL-STAR—SEPTEMBER 24.—Starring Julia Sanderson. Alice Avery (Julia Sanderson) was an orphan who lived with her pious aunt and uncle. Her mother had been a stage singer and her aunt's great dread was that she would follow in her footsteps. Richard Danforth, an artist, in search of mental and physical health, comes to board at her house. When he returns to his studio in New York he promises that if she comes to the city he will care for her. She runs away from the country village and arrives at his studio. He is at a loss to know what to do with the innocent little girl. He introduces her as a distant relative and sends for Sarah, the child's maid and only friend. Nancy Arnold, a model, is in love with Danforth, and quarrels over the presence of Alice in the studio. In anger she turns on the girl, and Alice, stunned, takes the faithful Sarah and disappears. She gets a place in a chorus and works and works until she is finally chosen for the lead. Her success is instant, and she is recognized by the friends who have spent endless hours in search for her. Danforth claims her for his wife, and she gives up her stage career for life in his studio.

The Bride's Silence—American—(Five Reels)—September 10.—Starring Gail Kane. Sylvia Standish, daughter of a distinguished family, believes that a member of the family is responsible for the murder of Nathan Standish, her brother. "Bull" Ziegler, a detective, pursues his investigations privately, to her horror. Her father urges her to marry Paul Wagner, the district attorney, and her fear of exposure for the family is magnified still more. Her husband takes her to the mountains for her health and they are followed by Ziegler, who arrives in time to hear the dying confession of a girl suicide that she killed Standish, her betrayer, after secreting herself in his home.

The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up—(Five Reels)—Pollard—September 17.—Starring Margarita Fischer. Peggy Brockman and her father live happily until the father marries again, and brings home a stepmother with two daughters. Mischievous Peggy has a hard time of it. Lord Raleigh, traveling in his yacht incognito, has stopped near the Brockman home for a few days fishing, and Mrs. Brockman begins her social campaign. Peggy doesn't assist her one bit, but after several pranks and a runaway marriage she finally has the pleasure of announcing her marriage to Lord Raleigh, to the discomfiture of the family, who find they have been entertaining the valet.

The Destroyed Documents—(Two Reels)—Signal—September 24.—Starring Helen Holmes in "The Lost Express," a serial. The mysterious disappearance of the express train in broad daylight throws the railway organization into a turmoil. Light engine searching crews start from both ends of the shortline to locate "The Lost Express." They report no trace of it. The mystery grows. Meantime Valquez and his gang—the only persons who know what has become of the missing train, are in possession of General Thurston's documents and models. They discover that the principal blue print is missing. Detective Murphy, chief of the railway secret service, holds a consultation with Helen. Murphy is elated when Helen tells him that one of the robbers has a harelip. Valquez refuses to pay for the Thurston formula until it is complete. The thieves undertake to return to where they have hidden the train and find it. Detective Murphy pursues and is shot. Helen follows Murphy, rescues him in an unconscious state and takes him to a hospital. Leaving the hospital Helen sees "The Hare." She pursues him. He boards a moving train. Helen races her car to a bridge over the track. When the train passes she drops on the roof. Crawling along the car top Helen sees "The Baron" and "The Hare" sitting near a window in the smoker. Between them lies the all-important paper—the missing blueprint.

Jerry's Big Deal—(One Reel)—Horsley Comedy—September 27.—Starring George Ovey. A minister who is about to leave the city for a small country town, asking Jerry to watch his grip while he buys a ticket, coincidentally sees a squad of police seize the minister and drag him off to jail. Jerry appropriates the grip, examines its contents, and finds therein a minister's outfit. Jerry conceals himself in a box car which soon starts on its journey. When Jerry arrives in the little town, he finds a welcoming delegation. He is conducted to his abode, a rooming house. Jerry flirts wtih the inevitable lovely young girl, is discovered by Sara, and policy demands that he pay her a certain degree of attention. Surprises come to a head when Jerry, dressed as the minister, breaks in upon the deacon playing a friendly game of poker with a gathering of old cronies. Their fear is dissipated when Jerry agrees to take a hand with them. Jerry proves to be a wizard with the cards and soon has relieved them of their money and most of their personal belongings. Meanwhile the imprisoned minister has proven his innocence and makes his way to his congregation. He arrives upon the scene just as Jerry makes his getaway. The vision of a holy card hanging behind the table at which he has made his winning streak, "The Lord loves a cheerful giver," causes Jerry to make a substantial donation to a winsome Red Cross nurse.

The Lost Express—Chapter 1—(Two Reels)—Signal—September 17.—Starring Helen Holmes. Helen Thurston is the daughter of General Thurston, inventor, financier, man of wealth. Thurston owns a new invention for granulating gasoline, a mechanical invention affecting combustion, without which granulated gas is useless. Thurston's mansion is outside Capital City, near Landport. With him live his pretty daughter, Helen, and Gaston Pitts, private secretary. Thurston regards Pitts as a future husband for Helen, who distrusts the man. The representative of a foreign government, Valquez, negotiates for rights to Thurston's process. Thurston is obdurate. Valquez hires international crooks to obtain the device. In this gang are "The Leech," "The Baron" and "The Hare." "The Hare" has a harelip. He resembles Pitts but for that deformity. This gang burglarizes the Thurston place. Helen gives the alarm. General Thurston is paralyzed by a bullet wound. Helen hires an express train to transfer the invention and models to a city bank vault. The express train completely disappears between stations from a single line of rail with no switches. Helen rescues the crew of the missing train in a desperate leap from a speeding engine to a wagon pulled by runaway horses. Reviewed in last issue.

Officer Jerry—(One Reel)—Horsley Comedy—September 20.—Starring George Ovey. Jerry becomes enamoured of a pretty maid servant in the home of a newly married couple. His flirtation with her in the grounds is interrupted by the arrival of Jack and his bride. Jerry sticks around while Jack enters the house and opens a letter from Bill, a wild-eyed man who is enraged at Jack's marriage to Bess. Bill threatens Jack's life. He proceeds to write a note to the police demanding protection. He gives the letter to Tilly, who has been granted an afternoon off. Jerry meets Tilly when she leaves the house and he promises to mail the note for her. Jerry and Tilly select a seat in a park, where they expect seclusion, but the inevitable cop appears and drives Jerry from his new-found love. While searching through his pockets he comes upon the letter he promised to mail, and opening it, he reads that Jack wants police protection. At that moment a sergeant appears. Jerry peaches on the amourous cop, who is promptly fired. Jerry runs to the dressmaker's, where he steals a dummy. Returning to the park, he throws the dummy in the lake, rushes up to the now humiliated cop and points to the dummy, telling him it is Tilly. The cop discards his uniform, leaps in the lake and drags the dummy ashore while Jerry dons his uniform and applies to Jack as preserver of the peace. Bill and his chum, Pete, arrive and make matters uncomfortable for Jack. His bride covers Pete, while Jerry, roused to action, covers Bill.

Universal Program

The Pullman Mystery—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—September 18.—Paul Dustin, the secretary to Robert Cheney, owner of a large factory, through a chain of circumstances, is accused of the murder of Cheney. He finds the body of Kenneth Post, who carries a letter to Thomas Crallen, the head of a big Los Angeles factory, in the drawing room of a Pullman and changes clothes with the dead man. With the aid of the letter he joins the Crallen organization. Drake Dunn, from the home of Paul Dustin, has been made superintendent. With him he brings his bride Kathleen, of whom he soon tires. Now Drake Dunn and Paul Dustin are both in love with Luciele, the daughter of Crallen. Jean Hardy, an old suitor of Kathleen's, follows her to the city, and when Paul and Jean meet Drake knows that his suspicions are correct. He lays the matter before Crallen, who refuses to believe the accusations until they are proven. Hardy seeks to kill Drake for his neglect of Kathleen, and when caught by the police shoots himself, but does not die until he confesses to the murder of Cheney. Paul Dustin's name is then cleared and he lays aside that of Kenneth Post. Drake's love for his wife is revived by her gentle care for his wounds.

Welcome Home—(One Reel)—Nestor Comedy—September 18.—Eddie writes to his wife to meet him the next morning at 10:30 at the station. Then he forgets to mail the letter. Arrived home he finds no wife on the platform, but he does encounter a bum who wants to carry his bag for him. At home there is only the vacant and lonesome house, for wifie is out shopping. Eddie decides on a bath and while he is about it the bum enters the house, finds his clothes and puts them on. In the finale Eddie and the bum both land in the police station, where Eddie is found by his wife and whom he is mighty glad to see.

The Last of the Night Riders—Bison—(Two Reels)—September 22.—Jim Hoyle, an independent tobacco grower, and Bob Pritchard, the sheriff, are great friends, while Ted, the son of the sheriff, and Sue Hoyle are in love with each other. The night riders burn the warehouses of the company and Jim tells the sheriff he will one day join them. Hot words are exchanged and they tear the children apart. Finally the sheriff and his deputies trap the night riders into a canyon, and wait the morning. Mrs. Hoyle is very ill and Ted and Sue stay with her. Ted goes for a doctor, who sends him for Jim. When Ted arrives he finds Jim covering his father with a gun. When they hear the news Bob and Jim exchange clothes and Bob takes his mask. Ted is overpowered by the riders and locked in a shack near the tobacco warehouse they intend to blow up. Orrin Black, one of the riders, places the bomb near the shack and it goes up in splinters. They rush to the scene and find a body which they think is Ted's. Bob goes to the home of the Hoyles with the news, to find Ted and Sue at the side of Mrs. Hoyle. Ted tells him the body must have been that of Black, whom he fought with and overpowered, escaping before the explosion.

Circus Sarah—Joker Comedy—(One Reel)—September 22.—Sarah sees the pee-rade go by and thinks she might be a circus queen. She crams into her pocket all her savings, and Rudolph Ringtail, owner of the big show, sees it go into her stocking and plans accordingly. She faints into his arms, and a convenient minister performs the ceremony. When Rudolph opens her bag, there is nothing therein but a powder puff, buttons, samples, a piece of gum, etc. However, the show must go on, so Sarah must take the place of the Bareback Queen, who is sick. She is a riot in powder puff skits and tights. A disgruntled employe hitches the elephant to the big top and the animal pulls away the show by main force. Sarah comforts her husband with "We've got each other, dearie."

A Prairie Chicken—L. Ko Comedy—(Two Reels—September 19.—Mrs. De Coin and her languid daughter and more languid son receive a visit from Merta, the Prairie Chicken, who wears chaps and can shoot the fly from your forehead. They made her put on civilized clothes, but she insisted upon wearing her guns over them. She slept on the floor and insisted upon Al's giving her a ride on a tea-wagon. Count Notta Cent plans to kidnap Kathleen, the languid daughter, and just about does it, but is foiled by Mert, who beats him up and brings daughter safely home. Mother De Coin is so grateful that she consents to the engagement of Al and Mert. They celebrate at a big ball, where Mert gives everyone a good time with her antics, and further endears herself to the De Coins by rescuing their jewels from a robber.

Hawiian Nuts—Joker Comedy—(One Reel)—September 20.—Bill is rejected by the recruiting office and goes on his way feeling mighty blue, when he sees a man extract a large roll of bills from another one, after going through some strange motions. Bill tries the scheme and lands in a den of black handers. He is asked to join the gang and is given a ukelele filled with dynamite to the chief's inamorata. She is a lovely lady with a passion for Professor Jasbo, who teaches the ukelele, and the chief fears he has stolen her heart. They are in the midst of a soulful party when Bill arrives and by mistake he gives the loaded ukelele to the chief, who twangs the strings and they all go up in smoke.

The Right Man—J. Warren Kerrigan—(Two Reels)—September 20.—Frank Case, cashier, and Morgan Green, teller, are both in love with Lillian, the daughter of the bank president, Edward Manley. Case tampers with a roll of bank notes brought in for a factory pay roll and leaves Morgan's knife near. Though he is innocent, things look bad for Morgan, and through the pleading of Lillian, he is only dismissed, and leaves for a town nearby. Manley tries to persuade Lillian to marry Case, and the marriage is finally arranged for. In the meantime Fred Rose, bank messenger, forces Case to give him a vacation, because he knows of Case's work in the theft. He goes to the same town in which Morgan is staying, and while they are there Morgan rescues his little invalid sister from a runaway. Fred, in his gratitude, tells Morgan of the act of Case, and they ride wildly to Lililan's home in time to stop the wedding. A few hours later Lillian is married to Morgan.

Marathon Maniacs—Victor—(One Reel)—September 21.—Max and Whiskers both love Pearl, an athletically inclined young woman, who takes a keen interest in sports. There is to be a Marathon race in which Max and Whiskers are the favored ones in the betting. They revert to tricks to win, Max planting an automobile out on the course and Whiskers a fleet horse. On the day of the race Max puts a sharp burr under the saddle, and Whiskers puts nitroglycerine in the radiator of the car. They both ride for it and have harrowing experiences with the horse and the machine. Pearl is following in her automobile. The race finishes with Max and Whiskers arriving at the tape at the same time, but in the confusion the judges' stand is knocked down and Whiskers gets under the tape by one whisker.

Universal Screen Magazine—ISSUE No. 37—SEPTEMBER 21.—Fashions in aviation suits is the first subject, showing suits of linen, bearskin, and leather-lined muskrat skins. The making of armadillo baskets from the shell of the quaint little animal found in Texas is followed by a demonstration of a proper way to can corn. Better babies is taken up, with views of the milk stations maintained by the New York Department of Health. Women wireless operators, working in the classes at Hunter College, New York, are shown, and the magazine closes with a "Miracle in Mud," by Will Hopkins.

General Program

Selig World Library—No. 18—SEPTEMBER 12.—Harvesting beans in California. Famous Zoo at Sydney, Australia—the crane, the cassowary wild kiwies, the kangaroo, and the Australian emu. The oyster harvest in Chesapeake Bay. Fishing from an oyster schooner, schucking and canning them. Mausoleums of the Ming Emperors of China—the immense stone figures of camels and elephants are tombs of the Ming Emperors. Coal production of the U. S. A.—first mine worked in the United States was opened at Richmond, Va., in 1750.

The Voice That Led Him—(ONE REEL)—SELIG—SEPTEMBER 15.—In the jungles of Africa a naturalist photographs a wild beast in its native state. When the plate is developed his wife breaks it, accidentally, and he is so enraged that in spite of her pleadings he leaves the house. While he is away she is attacked and killed by a wild beast. The naturalist returns to his homeland, always burdened by his conscience. Later he falls in love with the counterpart of his dead wife, but after a struggle with his conscience resolves to live only for his mother, so the marriage ceremony is not performed. The balm of his sacrifice alleviates his grief, and peace comes to him.

The Victor of the Plot—SELIG—(TWO REELS)—SEPTEMBER 10.—Major Goe loves Nourmalie, only daughter of Colonel Warren. She is also beloved by Morris, and she loses her heart to him. The regiment is quartered in a distant land, and in a fight with the savages Morris saves the live of Goe, which only increases the bitterness. Goe plots with the savages for Morris' torture and death, but makes the mistake of bragging to Nourmalie, whose resourcefulness brings about the liberation of Morris and the punishment of the major.

Blind Man's Holiday—(FOUR REELS)—O. HENRY SERIES.—In the old French quarter of New Orleans Lorison falls in with a pretty girl, and they dine together in the cheap, quaint little restaurant night after night, each knowing no more of the other and going their separate ways at 8 o'clock. Lorison falls in love with pretty Norah, and during his impulsive proposal tells her that he has once been accused of theft. He is innocent, of course, but the shadow of the little affair remains. Then he is comforted by her confession, that she, too, had stolen some diamonds. Father Ryan marries them, and once again they part at the corner at 8 o'clock to meet the next evening and to part no more. As Lorison looks about him he begins to regret his rash marriage, and rushes to the priest to ask him to undo his work. Instead the priest takes him about the city, showing him the folly of what he has done, revealing to him finally his little Norah as a woman far above him, who has lied in self-sacrifice to restore his peace of mind.

Mixed Nuts—(ONE REEL)—SPARKLE COMEDY.—A. Wall Nut and his wife Hazel are a happy young couple until the shadow of gray hair threatens to mar their bliss. A. Wall Nut is sent to Europe by his firm, and before he goes makes his wife promise not to dye her hair in his absence. The wife bravely keeps the promise until the gray hair appears faster and faster, when she goes to a hairdresser to have it touched up. When she gets through her hair is dyed black, and she immediately leaves for California to spend the time with her sister until it wears off. Hubby is called back home suddenly, and the complications that follow include a telegram from his servant saying his wife had "died," one to her saying he is dead, and considerable explanation when they meet.

The Secret of Black Mountain—(FOUR REELS)—FALCON FEATURES.—In search of information about her grandfather, a gold prospector, Miriam Vale comes to California and teaches school to defray her expenses. She learns that years ago Jim Vale came to Boulder with a chest of gold bar and dust, but was beset by road agents and robbed. Suspicion was directed against Henry Stanley, a renegade, but nothing could be proven. Miriam has about decided to return to Vermont, when out of Black Mountain rides a horseman who commands her to go with him. When she refuses he uses force. Arrived at a cabin she finds a woman dying and a dead man. While her hands dispense sweet mercy her ears hear the tale of the death of old Henry Stanley, his treasure chest, the elopment of the woman, now dying, with the dead man, and she finds the clue to her own treasure. She finds friendship, too, and something dearer than friendship.

Chicago Notes

THE romance of the flickering shadows and the lure of the lights of the screen led Miss Mildred Talbott, a sweet-sixteen-year-old Chicago girl, to leave home last week to become a "movie queen." She was found later at the house of a friend. She is the daughter of Attorney Thomas J. Talbott of 4844 West Jackson boulevard.

W. C. Lamoreaux manager of Ascher's Lakeside Theater, designed the interior decorations of the new theater opened in Burlington, Iowa, recently by Martin Bruhl.

The re-organization committee of the Reel Fellows Club is making progress and before long Chicago will undoubtedly see the birth and growth of a new picture club, on a solid and permanent basis.

---

George L. Roberts, cartoonist and purchasing agent at American, has passed the strenous tests of the aviation corps and expects to be called into the air soon.

---

The case which the Vitagraph Company has instituted against the city in connection with the picture "Within the Law" comes up for trial before Circuit Judge Robert E. Crowe on September 15.

---

Robert X. McKnight, known by his friends and fellow film men as "Bob," formerly photoplay critic on the Examiner, has left his position as publicity man with the American Film Company and has enlisted and reported to Uncle Sam as a prospective aviator.

---

Another drive is being made against Major Funkhouser. Vitagraph, under the direction of Sid Abel of the Chicago office, has mobilized its forces to fight the film kaiser's ban on "Within the Law" and in connection a healthy sized petition to remove him from office has been circulated.

---

And here's another punch at the Major. Last week 250 Chicago people were given a special showing of Fox's "The Spy" at the Studebaker Theater for the purpose of obtaining their opinions as to whether or not the picture should be shown in the city in spite of the Major's contrary ruling. All approved the film and 20 signed affidavits stating it contained nothing immoral or disturbing to patriotism or peace.

Among recent visitors at the Rothacker Studios were Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick & Shaefer; Oscar Eagle, the director; Harry Sherman; W. M. Selig; Miss Peggy O'Neil; Mr. Guy McConnell; Mr. Otis Thayer; Mr. Ralph Morgan, star of "Turn to the Right;" Charlotte, the skater of Hippodrome fame; H. A. Spanuth, president of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation; Isadore Bernstein; Mrs. Bryant Washburn, and a host of other well known personages.

W. A. Bach, who has started on a tour through the country to organize and install Service Departments, arrived in Chicago on his first lap of his trip. Mr. Bach came from Canada, where his brillant and effective publicity work won him much recognition. He has had thorough training in the exploitation field, and his efforts for Universal are expected to prove of value to the entire industry. Mr. Bach expects to remain in Chicago for three weeks.

Jack Falleis, for the past eight years manager of the Poster Department of the Laemmle Film Service of Chicago, has been transferred to the head office in New York, where he will assume charge of a new department.

Leon J. Bamberger, general manager of the Jewel Productions, Inc., who has been traveling the country organizing new offices for Jewel, arrived in Chicago Saturday, and on Sunday, September 9, was married to Miss Geraldine Brinn of Chicago.

The Commonwealth Pictures Corporation has engaged Jack Rose, who has been for the past six years with the Essanay Company. Mr. Rose is conceded to be a past master in the art of motion picture photography and has done some of the most wonderful trick work that has ever been performed with the moving picture camera. The first pictures that Mr. Rose will take for the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation will be of Charlotte, the famous and world-renowned skater.

C. W. Bunn now has the entire Chicago Pathe exchange gathered under his wing at their headquarters on the 4th floor of the Consumers Building. Practically all of the effects of the recent film fire have been eliminated and in the remodeling, a number of improvements have been made.

Jack O'Toole, the genial Fox manager, states to Motography that "Jack in the Beanstalk," the big Fox production, will be put out on the road in this territory as a special attraction with a symphony orchestra. The price will be $1.00. The following cities have already been booked: South Bend, Champaign, Streaterville, Ottawa, Kankakee, Galesburg, Joliet, Peoria, Burlington, Rock Island, Davenport, Elgin, Racine and Fort Wayne. The picture has won unusual praise in New York, where it has recently been shifted from the Globe to the Lyric theater.

PICTURE CITY AT CHICAGO

A complete little city has been erected on the property west of the Rothacker Studios for the purpose of securing some special scenes in connection with the production of the Wholesome Film Corporation's "Penny Philanthropist" which is being filmed at the Rothacker studios under the direction of Guy McConnell.

Mr. McConnell is assisted in the production work by Otis Thayer. Miss Peggy O'Neil of "Peg O' My Heart" fame and Ralph Morgan, who is playing lead in "Turn to the Right," are the featured players.

Six big interior sets are in use all the time inside the Rothacker Studios in connection with this production in addition to the big exterior set which has been built and which is a reproduction of an historical section of Halsted Street, at which point a large part of the "Penny Philanthropist" is portrayed. The out-door stage is approximately 150 feet in length which conveys some idea of the magnitude of the production. In addition to the interior sets and the exterior picture city, the "Penny Philanthropist" also requires special exterior sets which have been erected on the roof of the Rothacker Studios where ample provision had been made for such contingencies.

NEW VITAGRAPH MANAGER

H. J. Bayley, former Vitagraph manager at Minneapolis and Omaha, now sits in the executive chair in the local Vitagraph branch at Wabash and Adams. He has already begun the re-organization of the entire sales force, and has placed the city in charge of Harry Rosenberg, crack salesman who came with Mr. Bayley from Minneapolis.

Mr. Bayley first became associated with the predecessor of the present Vitagraph company in New York 15 years ago. He later managed houses for both the Keith and Loew circuits and was in charge of vaudeville and road shows. For Keith he opened the Auditorium at Lynn, Massachusetts, and managed it for three years. He opened Loew's Fifth Avenue Theater in Brooklyn, and later became third owner of the Alhambra in Cleveland.

SYDNEY ABEL WITH SELECT

Sydney E. Abel has been appointed special representative of Select Pictures Corporation and begins work in the interest of Select exchanges September 10. Mr. Abel has resigned his position as manager of the Chicago branch exchange of Vitagraph V. L. S. E.

Mr. Abel has made an enviable record in conducting branch exchanges in the middle west. He started with the Cleveland Exchange two years ago after the Vitagraph V. L. S. E. organization was effected. The splendid showing which he made in selling V. L. S. E. product in the Cleveland district in six month's time brought him promotion to the managership of the Chicago exchange, which position he has held ever since. In Chicago Abel established a record for big sales. He is credited with having put over the V. L. S. E. in that territory.

With Select Pictures Abel will act as a first aid to sales—much of his time being spent on the road visiting exchanges in the various cities.

NEW KING BEE P. A.

Nat H. Spitzer, general manager of the King-Bee Film Corp., presenting Billy West in two reel comedies, announces the engagement of Ed. Rosenbaum, Jr., as head of their publicity department. Mr. Rosenbaum has resigned from the executive staff of Eliott, Comstock and Gest to take charge of this department.

For four seasons he handled the publicity of the Ziegfeld Follies, then "The Winsome Widow," Donald Brian, "Madame Sherry," Anna Held, "Very Good Eddie" and many others. Some of the stars who have received publicity through his efforts are Eva Tanguay, Mlle. Dazie, Nora Bayes, Bickel & Watson, Frank Tinney, Bert Williams, Leo Detrichstein, Dorothy Jardon, Ina Claire, Richard Carle, Victor Moore, Jeff de Angeles, Mae Murray, Percival King, Cross and Josephine, Thos. Jefferson, Gertrude Vanderbilt, etc.

SEEKING THE MOON

By Dick Willis

He is a famed comedian, a genius in his line;
He draws his thousands weekly and yet this man doth pine
For other paths to fame; says he, "I Know I'd make a name
By playing big dramatic roles; I loathe this slap-stick game"!

A well known vampire's sorrowful sick of bad girl parts.
Quoth she, "I want to act in roles that reach the children's hearts."
And tho' as vamps a tidy fortune this young thing has made,
"With half a chance," says she, "I'd put Miss Pickford in the shade"!

The Movie World adores her for her wistfulness and grace;
They love her for her girlishness, her sweet pathetic face,
Her salary is "out of sight"; is she content nay, nay;
She'd try her hand at tragedy if she but had her way.

A well known handsome leading man with bonds and coin galore
Remarks that, "all this hero stuff is getting quite a bore,"
Heroic parts have palled on him and so it seems to me,
He thinks he'd shine in "heavy" roles, a villain he would be!

And so it goes, your artist always yearns for other things;
The angel would a devil be, the devil wants gold wings;
The Ingenue would be the Lead, the Lead an Ingenue;
There's few content with what they have; 'tis pity 'tis 'tis true.

W. H. Cox has closed a deal for the sale of the Alamo Theater at Stillwater to J. E. Taylor of Oklahoma City.

Maxine Elliott Releases Are Shifted

GOLDWYN will present Maxine Elliott for her screen debut in "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb, instead of in "The Eternal Magdalene," as previously announced. "Fighting Odds" will be released everywhere October 7.

Despite enthusiastic indorsement of "The Eternal Magdalene" by the National Board of Review, censor boards in Pennsylvania and the city of Chicago raise certain objections to the production—objections which, quite naturally, Goldwyn disagrees in entirety.

But, rather than cause our exhibitor customers inconvenience through late delivery of the scheduled picture, Goldwyn brings forward "Fighting Odds" and will thresh out the points at issue in the two localities.

"Fighting Odds" is a powerful emotional drama of Big Business and a wife's loyalty and devotion to her husband, who is made the catspaw of unscrupulous financiers. This big play gives Miss Elliott the finest dramatic opportunity she has ever had, and millions of people will welcome her to the screen in this big role.

The same big campaign of exploitation being conducted throughout America for "The Eternal Magdalene" is now being duplicated for "Fighting Odds."

War Tax Exempts Small Houses

10 PER CENT TAX ON 25 CENT ADMISSIONS—CABARETS AND STAGE HIT

FATE and the United States Government, the members of the big concern which controls, more or less, all the picture theaters of the country, has done the houses a good turn. While anticipated in MOTOGRAPHY some weeks ago, this good turn is none the less appreciated by every factor in the industry because it was expected.

The huge war tax bill has passed the United States Senate and no picture house is to be taxed unless its price of admission is a maximum of 25 cents or over. Thus the senate has exempted from taxation the bulk of the film houses of the country and it is altogether probable that the judgment of the senior house of congress will be allowed to stand.

Takes Effect November 1

The special war tax on cabarets, theaters, picture theaters, ball games and other places of amusement to which charge for admission is made will go into effect November 1. This allows the amusement enterprises and the public about seven weeks in which to steady themselves for the payment and collection of the tax.

The bill levies a 10 per cent tax on every theater ticket sold, a tax of 10 per cent on patrons of cabarets based on the size of their bills, a tax of 5 per cent on ticket scalpers charging 50 cents in excess of box office prices, a tax of 30 per cent on scalpers charging more than 50 cents in excess of box office rates, a tax of 50 per cent on theaters charging more than standard prices, but exempts picture shows from the tax when their maximum charge is 25 cents.

Amendments Added to Tax

Embracing amendments added at the last minute the amusement tax section now reads

Section 700—That from and after the first day of November, 1917, there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid (a) a tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid for admission to any place, including admission by season ticket or subscription, to be paid by the person making such payment; provided, that the tax on admission of children where an admission charge for such children is made shall in ever case be one cent.

And (b) a tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof paid for admission to any public performance for profit at any cabaret or other similar entertainment to which the charge for admission is wholly or in part included in the price paid for refreshment, service or merchandise; such tax to be paid by the person paying for such refreshment, service or merchandise.

Scalpers Hard Hit

And, in addition to the above, (c) upon tickets of admission to theaters, operas and other places of amusement, sold at newsstands, hotels and places other than the ticket offices of such theaters, operas or other places of amusement, at not to exceed 50 cents in excess of the sum of the established price therefor at such ticket offices plus the amount of any tax imposed under clause (a) of this section, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the amount of such excess, and if sold for more than 50 cents in excess of the sum of such established price plus the amount of any tax imposed under clause (a) of this section, a tax equivalent to 30 per centum of the whole amount of such excess, such taxes to be paid by the person, corporation or association selling such ticket.

And, in addition to the above (d) a tax equivalent to 50 per centum of the amount for which the proprietors, managers or employes or any opera house, theater or other place of amusement sell or dispose of tickets or cards of admission in excess of the regular or established price or charge therefor, such tax to be paid by the person, corporation, partnership or association selling such tickets.

Season Tickets Taxed

In the case of persons having the permanent use of boxes or seats in an opera house or any place of amusement or a lease for the use of such box or seat in such opera house or place of amusement there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid a tax equivalent to 10 per centum of the amount for which a similar box or seat is sold for performance or exhibition at which the box or seat is used or reserved by or for the lessee or holder. These taxes shall not be imposed in the case of a place the maximum charge for admission to which is 5 cents and outdoor general amusement parks, or in the case of moving picture shows main gates, shows and rides therein the maximum charge for admission to which is 25 cents.

No tax shall be levied under this title in respect to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational or charitable institutions, societies or organizations or admission to agricultural fairs, not in respect to admissions to bona fide Chautauquas and lyceum courses which are contracted for and guaranteed by local companies, associations or individuals.

Defines "Admission"

The term "admission" as used in this title includes seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations, and the charges made therefor.

Section 701—That every person, corporation, partnership or association, receiving any payments for such admission, shall collect the amount of the tax imposed by Section 700 from the person making such payments, shall make returns and payments of the amounts so collected, at the same time and in the same manner as provided in Section 503 of this act.

Tax Paid Monthly

Every person, corporation, partnership or association liable to the tax imposed by subdivision (c) and (d) of Section 700 shall make monthly return under oath in duplicate and pay the tax imposed by such subdivisions to the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such returns shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the secretary of the Treasury, may by regulation prescribe.

"STATES" MEN ORGANIZED

Producers' Protective Association Now Complete—To Analyze Field—Central Sales Exchange to Be Established

The independent state rights producers now have a complete organization of their own. It has been incorporated in the State of New York under the title of the Producers' Protective Association. At the last meeting, William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, was elected president, and complete by-laws were adopted.

The following directors and officers were elected:

Directors: William L. Sherrill, Leopold Wharton, Harry Rapf, Jesse J. Goldburg and I. N. Chadwick. (It is expected, however, that M. A. Schlessinger, of the Mayfair Film Corporation, will be substituted in place of the present directors at the next meeting of the board.) Officers: William L. Sherrill, president; Leopold Wharton, vice-president, and Jesse J. Goldburg, secretary and treasurer. (It is also expected that Mr. Goldburg's duties as secretary will become so numerous as to require a treasurer to occupy that individual office.)

The association is to make a complete analysis and systematization of the state rights production and distribution field. The idea originated with Mr. Sherrill, growing out of the unsettled conditions in this branch of the film industry.

The business affairs of the organization will be in the hands of a board of directors of five, headed by the president of the association. The by-laws contain, among others, the following provisions, as objects of the association:

To regulate the medium of advertising, the members agreeing not to patronize any publication, lithographer, printer, slide manufacturer, engraver or any other concern unless such publication or concern has been listed with the association as one worthy of the patronage of the members of the association.

To pass upon all grievances of members against any person, concern or corporation, and in the event of the complaint being sustained, the members of the association agree not to employ or do business with such person, firm or corporation. This applies to commercial institutions, trade publications, actors, directors, as well as state right buyers. The by-laws do not provide for any hearing to the person or firm against whom the complaint is lodged.

The employment of outside brokers, for the sale or leasing of the productions of members, is prohibited.

A complete record of all transactions with state right buyers on the part of the members of the association is to be kept to the end that a commercial rating may be had, and the failure of any exchange to live up to its obligations will prevent it from doing business with any other member in the future.

Sales Exchange to Be Established

A central sales exchange is to be established. All productions of the members must be listed on the floor of the association, with territory open and price asked. All productions will be sold by the association for the benefit of its members. A print of each production with a complete line of advertising matter must be deposited with the manager of the association, who will have charge of the sales. A percentage of the gross receipts on all productions of a member is payable to the association.

Mr. Sherrill, when interviewed at his office, made the following statement as to the future intended operations of the association:

At present the disposition of state rights production is without a head or tail. We intend encouraging the state rights buyer to assist him in the operation of a legitimate business, but where any given territory is without any buyer with whom we can deal, we intend to ultimately open our own producers exchange in that territory.

Handle Big Sums

You can compute the amount in the back of this association when I tell you that the average number of productions of the present membership of eleven is a minimum of five a year, and the minimum average receipts on each production is $50,000. This makes a gross return on the productions of the members of $2,750,000 annually and the percentage due the association will amount to a minimum of $1,375,000, a sum sufficient not alone to establish exchanges, but to meet every contingency.

The membership of the association is at present composed of the following firms:

The Frohman Amusement Corporation, Ogden Pictures Corporation, Mayfair Films, Ivan Film Corporation, A. H. Jacobs Photo-Plays, Duplex Films, Cosmofotofilm, Edward Warren Productions, Arrow Film Corporation, Wharton Brothers, Harry Rapf. Application for membership has been received from two other producers.

Edna Goodrich to Head Society

Edna Goodrich, star of "Reputation," is being pushed by her professional friends for the chairmanship of the American Theatrical Auxiliary Association, the purpose of which is to promote amusement of American troops in France and elsewhere.

Miss Goodrich is already heavily interested in war work. Her splendid country place at Teddington-on-the-Thames in England has been in use by the British war department as a hospital for British wounded from the French front since the outbreak of the war.

The American Theatrical Auxiliary proposes to furnish entertainment in the form of short bits from Shakespeare, selections from some of the best known plays by other great writers, vaudeville sketches of recognized merit and song and dance sketches.

"None of us really knows precisely when our American boys will go into action on the other side, but what we would like to make sure of is that when they come off the front line trenches for a few hours at the rest stations they may find there something of the home life that they are used to. It means a lot to a man who is facing horrible conditions like those in the front line trenches, to have a little entertainment during his hours off. We hope to promote an organization that will commend itself to the war department as a useful auxiliary.

Exhibitor Gets Reward

(Editors' Note—Not only has MOTOGRAPHY'S "What the Picture Did for Me" section proved to be of inestimable value to exhibitors in making their bookings, but it has brought a number of interesting things to the theater men who send in reports on features. Witness the receipt of an autographed photograph from a star by Manager Weil of Chicago for sending in a KNOCK.)

Mr. M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.

My Dear Mr. Weil:

Miss Minter noticed your criticism of "Somewhere in America," which appeared in a recent issue of MOTOGRAPHY, and she wishes me to thank you for the little knock you gave this "has been" and to say that she sincerely hopes you won't judge her by her performance in this play.

The little lady is very much interested in the exhibitors' remarks in MOTOGRAPHY and hopes you will have an opportunity to see her two latest releases, "Charity Castle" and "Jess" which are by far the best she has yet done.

At Miss Minter's request I am sending you under separate cover one of her recent photographs which she has personally autographed and she begs you to accept it with her best wishes.

Wishing you every success, I am, yours very truly—
Charlotte Whitney, representative.

POLLY ANN, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"A very good picture. Good business."—E. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Polly Ann, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"A pretty good picture. Fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Haunted House, with Winifred Allen (Triangle)—"Not much of a picture. Fair business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Haunted House, with Winifred Allen (Triangle)—"I can't say much for this."—E. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Desert Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"This is one of the best Hart pictures ever shown here. Drew big, and everyone was well pleased."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Desert Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A very pleasing western picture."—P. F. Manley, Comet Theater, Frederic, Wisconsin.

Golden Rule Kate, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"A new style of role for this star, sort of a W. S. Hart part, where the six-shooter preserves order. We did well with this picture and the audience liked it. It is 'pink permit' (no children allowed) for Chicago theaters."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Golden Rule Kate, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"Great business. Everyone praised this picture."—J. H. McDonald, Strand Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

Cheerful Givers, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"Exceptionally good. Took well with my patrons."—P. F. Manley, Comet Theater, Frederic, Wisconsin.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"Opened with this feature on Sunday and ran continuously from eleven a. m. to eleven p. m. to capacity, notwithstanding Billy Sunday and Ringling's circus as opposition. Patrons unanimous in their enthusiastic praise for this opening Goldwyn production."—J. A. Quinn, Rialto Theater, Los Angeles, Cal.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"Played this to capacity business. Patrons more than delighted."—J. R. Muir, Dominion Theaters, Vancouver, B. C.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"All previous attendance and money records broken on opening day. The picture received a tremendous ovation."—N. L. Nathanson, St. Denis Theater, Montreal, Ont.

Polly of the Circus, with Mae Marsh (Goldwyn)—"Opened to capacity business. It's a wonderful production and a great box office attraction."—L. V. Calvert, New Garrick Theater, Minneapolis, Minn.

Master of His Home, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"A good title and a good picture. The star is well liked and is of the type that should be worked steadily in program features. Business O. K."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Flying Torpedo (Triangle)—"A good picture that played S. R. O. two days."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Wharf Rat, with Mae Marsh (Triangle)—"A fine production. Mae Marsh is a good drawing card."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Fifty-Fifty, with Norma Talmadge (Triangle)—"An excellent production. Good drawing power at any time."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Sin Ye Do, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"A good picture, an extra good subject, which played to capacity houses. Star not well known here."—L. Stevens, Bijou Theater, Alpena, Michigan.

Her Fame and Shame, with Charles Murray (Keystone)—"Just an average Keystone that got by."—W. C. Allen, Casino Theater, Antwerp, N. Y.

Her Torpedoed Love, with Louise Fazenda (Keystone)—"Fine."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Broadway Jones, with George M. Cohan (Artcraft)—"A fine picture, to excellent business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"This is the best money-getter of the five pictures Mary has made for Artcraft. It is a good production, due to Cecil De Mille's direction. All compliments on this offering."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"The most pleasing picture Miss Pickford has ever played in. Played to a packed house at a Sunday morning showing especially for the children. This picture should satisfy any audience and I would recommend it to any exhibitor as a money-getter."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Spy, with Dustin Farnum (Fox)—"It looks as though this will break the house record at the Rose. It is longer than the pictures which set the records, being in eight reels, and so we cannot run as many shows. Otherwise it would have gone far over the record. It has had wonderful success. We have held it over for another week. It is a fine picture.—E. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Mediator, with George Walsh (Fox)—"A crack rough and ready play. Good business."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Ragged Princess, with June Caprice (Fox)—"A clever picture, well liked by all."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

To Honor and Obey, with Gladys Brockwell—(Fox)—"Crude bits which could have been eliminated and a few obnoxious scenes of the husband's abuse spoiled this feature."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Love and Hate, with Bertha Kalich (Fox)—"An A No. 1 picture. Baby Lee's work is remarkable. She sure is fine."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Her Greatest Love, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"A great picture. The star has an unusual role, really out of her class."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Royal Romance, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"The beautiful star is all that got this over at all."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Wife Number Two, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Ordinary business. The majority of the patrons were disappointed."—J. H. McDonald, Strand Theater, Walla Walla, Wash.

The Innocent Sinner, with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"R. A. Walsh deserves credit for this noteworthy production, which pleased immensely."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

splendid product. Went big in a high class house. Business very good."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—High class neighborhood.

Two Little Imps, with Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox)—"This is some picture. Jane and Katherine took this town by storm. Did capacity business to an audience 100 per cent pleased."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Peggy, Will o' the Wisp, with Mabel Taliaferro (Metro)—"Fair value. Star popular here, which helped. A rather obvious plot. Scenic bits are an aid to the whole."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—In high class neighborhood.

The Trail of the Shadow, with Emmy Wehlen (Metro)—"Star has no following here. Picture just of fair value."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—In high class neighborhood.

The Hidden Spring, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"Not up to star's standard. Drew capacity because it was made in this state. The story looked as if it had been warmed over to suit critics."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—In high class neighborhood.

Aladdin's Other Lamp, with Viola Dana (Metro) "The star is fine and pleases everybody. Our patrons thought this picture great. If we could get pictures as good as this all the time we would always have a packed house."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Lady Barnacle, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"Both star and picture good. Viola Dana has made a hit here. Did capacity business."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

Sowers and Reapers, with Emmy Wehlen (Metro) —"Remarkable production. Star is great and drew immensely. Metro surely deserves credit for producing stuff like this. Here's hoping we get more like it."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Their Compact, with Bushman and Bayne (Metro) "Best feature of the week."—E. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Jury of Fate, with Mabel Taliaferro (Metro) —"Ran it with The Neglected Wife serial, and I do not know which of the two drew the crowd, but business was good. The picture is fairly good. The star plays a dual role."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

To the Death, with Mme. Petrova (Metro)— "Pretty good picture. Drew a fair crowd."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

A Self-Made Widow, with Alice Brady (World) —"Pleased a high class clientele. Star is well liked here. Turn-away business."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.

Without a Soul, with Clara Kimball Young (World)—"Returned for the fourth time and played a turn-away business all day."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—In high class neighborhood.

The Price of Pride, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"Star draws well always. Has a feminine following. Picture is not wonderful."—Jo E. Rickards, Hip Theater, Phoenix, Ariz.—In high class neighborhood.

The Beloved Adventuress, with Kittie Gordon (World)—"A fair production. Fair business."—Julius Frankel, Temple Theater, Newport, Ky.

The Marriage Market, with Caryle Blackwell and June Elvidge (World)—"Best of the program pictures of the week. The story deals with marrying for money. It has a good title for neighborhoods where the patrons like society pictures."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Maternity, with Alice Brady (World)—"A good picture to extra good business. The star always fills the house."—L. Stevens, Bijou Theater, Alpena, Michigan.

The Golden Lotus, with Regina Badet (World) —"An extra good picture. Attendance fair on account of bad weather."—L. Stevens, Bijou Theater, Alpena, Michigan.

A Naked Soul, with Susan Grandaise (World)— "One of the most beautiful productions we ever played, a production that is a 'special'."—D. M. Bain, Grand Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Tides of Fate, with Alexandra Carlisle (World)— "This did not draw. The star is not well known."— M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Faith, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"This is a picture every exhibitor should book. Star is very good and is well liked, and the picture is excellent. Pleased everybody. Did capacity business."—P. N. Planchet, Trio Theater, Bay St. Louis, Miss.

The Bride's Silence, with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"Picture is good and business was good."— E. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Pride and the Man, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—The entire picture shows Russell at his best. The photography is excellent and the story intensely interesting. The scenes, especially the fights, are realistic and exciting and never failed to draw an outburst of real enthusiastic applause. Our patrons like Russell."—Manager Rutherford, Miles Theater, Detroit, Mich.

Reputation, with Edna Goodrich (Mutual)—"A pretty fair picture, well directed. Star not well supported."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Rags, with Mary Pickford (Paramount)—"Great! Outside standing room only."—F. A. Muller, Patterson Theater, Patterson, Calif.

Straight Shooting, with Harry Carey (Butterfly) —"A dandy feature, good enough for any theater.

Pleased all."—William Thacher, Royal Theater, Salina, Kansas.

Serials and Series

The Fighting Trail, with William Duncan (Vitagraph serial)—"The best serial we ever saw."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Is Marriage Sacred? (Essanay Series)—"These are the most consistent, clean and wholesome stories I have ever seen. There is more real work crowded into these two-reel stories than in lots of five and six-reel subjects I have run, and the cast is as good as any."—Joseph A. Muller, Palace Hip, Seattle, Wash.

The Neglected Wife and The Fatal Ring (Pathe serials)—"These two are still packing my house. Pep, punch and action in every foot. Money can't buy better serials."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe)—"I am now running the fourteenth episode, and it is going over bigger with each episode, and I am sure the last instalment will break all records. The serial is by far the best serial I have ever run, and it has played to capacity business from the start in spite of the terrific heat which we have had to contend with this summer. If there are any exhibitors that have not booked this serial, I shall be glad to recommend it."—Jesse C. Jacobs, Key and Liberty Theaters, Houston, Texas.

The Fatal Ring, with Pearl White (Pathe Serial)—"We go the limit on Pathe serials and have never yet been called. This is probably Pathe's best yet—and that's saying something."—D. M. Bain, Bijou Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

The Gray Ghost, with Eddie Polo (Universal)—"Started a little weak, as the audience expected lively action immediately from Polo. I understand, though, that the action picks up later."—D. M. Bain, Bijou Theater, Wilmington, N. C.

Stingaree, with True Boardman (Kalem)—"Any manager wanting good two-reelers, try these. All are good."—William Thacher, Royal Theater, Salina, Kansas.

O. Henry Stories (Vitagraph-General)—"We have run about all of them. Very good dramas. Anyone wanting short dramas should book them."—William Thacher, Royal Theater, Salina, Kansas.

Hart Has Narrow Escape

William S. Hart narrowly escaped serious injury last week while making the last scenes for "The Narrow Trail," the first Thomas H. Ince production to be released by Artcraft. The scenario called for Mr. Hart, mounted on his famous Pinto pony, Fritz, to ride across a narrow chasm during a chase in the mountains. The means selected for passage was an old tree, half rotted with age, that was thought sufficiently strong to carry the weight of Hart and the pony; but it proved otherwise, for as the screen star was half-way across the tree gave way and horse and rider were precipitated to the bottom of the chasm. Although they rolled over Hart stuck to his mount. Both were severely bruised but no serious injuries were sustained.

VITAGRAPH WINS CASE

"Within the Law" to Be Shown in Chicago Following Successful Legal Tilt With Major Funkhouser

"Within the Law," Greater Vitagraph's special Blue Ribbon feature, will be shown without a change to Chicago people who were unable to see it as a stage production owing to the high admission price.

Greater Vitagraph has completely and thoroughly defeated Major Funkhouser, the Chicago censor. Judge Crowe, at Chicago, on September 13, issued a writ of mandamus compelling Chief of Police Schuettler to grant a permit.

For nearly four months Major Funkhouser has held up "Within the Law" by refusing to issue a permit unless Greater Vitagraph would agree to make fifteen deletions from the picture. This, Greater Vitagraph refused to do, taking the position that the deletion of the third degree scenes, as demanded by Major Funkhouser, would ruin the picture not only from an artistic standpoint, but that the deletions would lessen its tremendous intensity and consequently affect its great message.

After giving Major Funkhouser every opportunity to change his mind General Manager Walter W. Irwin went to Chicago and engaged Lewis F. Jacobson, who has successfully attacked the rulings of Major Funkhouser on previous occasions. Attorney Jacobson immediately prepared a petition seeking a writ of mandamus to force the issuance of a permit and it was upon this petition that Judge Crowe ordered Chief of Police Scheuttler to grant the permit.

When the case was called for trial Major Funkhouser was surrounded by the best legal talent in the employ of the city of Chicago. George Kandelik, an assistant corporation counsel, had direct charge of the case for the Major. He immediately attacked the petition prepared by Attorney Jacobson by filing a demurrer alleging that the petition did not set forth enough facts. The demurrer also alleged that the validity of the ordinance creating Major Funkhouser's position could not be attacked in mandamus proceedings.

Not only did Greater Vitagraph seek to force the complete showing of "Within the Law," but Attorney Jacobson also attacked the status of Major Funkhouser's position alleging that he had no authority to censor pictures owing to conflicting clauses in the charter of the city of Chicago and of subsequent city ordinances.

In overruling the demurrer while not passing directly on the contention as to the illegality of Major Funkhouser's position, Judge Crowe intimated that the Major was authorized to censor pictures and that the contention of Attorney Jacobson, that his appointment was illegal, was not based upon fact.

Michigan Joins A. E. A.

Michigan exhibitors have joined the American Exhibitors' Association in a body.

At the meeting of the Michigan Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held in Detroit recently the organization decided to dissolve the old body and form a state branch of the A. E. A.

S. A. Moran of Ann Arbor is president and Claude Cade of Lansing, secretary. The organization is, of course, temporary, as the by-laws and constitution have not as yet been drawn up. They are now in the course of construction.

DEFEATING A DEADLY RIVAL

A DEADLY feud has existed between two theater owners of a thriving Michigan city for several years.

This spring the man with the most money went over to the corner right next to his smaller competitor, purchased the lot and built a big house upon it, advertising it for months in advance.

The little fellow was knocked in the wind. But he had a live little generator system up in his attic and when the new theater was finished he remodeled the front of his house to conform exactly with the style and color of that of his rival. Then he built a whale of an entrance and lobby and made it a blaze of glory with lights.

When the big new theater came out with its advertising campaign of its opening, announced its attractions in front, and put up its sign, "Strand Theater," the little fellow startled his rival and drew the crowds into his bigger and brighter lobby by means of a mammoth sign. Upon it were the simple words, "MAIN ENTRANCE."

Anyhow, it's a fair story.

Food Administrator Hoover has ordered the real food cut out of stage productions using meals as a part of the show.

That would never do in pictures. When a boiled dinner is shown on the screen fans nowadays want to smell the corn beef and cabbage.

LOVE STORY

There is a mystery overshadowing the headquarters of the Chicago Motion Picture Exhibitors' League—a dark and romantic mystery.

It is said upon good authority that one of the factors prominent in league affairs is in love.

Little fat Cupids tag him around, it is said, and bother the life out of him.

It must be awful.

WHAT DID SHE MEAN?

The poet who wrote "Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast" might have added that it would soothe any one, savage, temperamental or otherwise—at least such is the opinion of Director Victor Schertzinger, who is staging Charles Ray's first Paramount picture, "The Son of His Father," in which Vola Vale plays the woman.

The time had arrived for the final love scenes between Mr. Ray and Miss Vale. After repeated attempts to achieve the proper emphasis in her work, Miss Vale was about to give up in despair.

"I just can't feel the emotion today," she almost sobbed.

"Never mind," soothed Schertzinger, "I'll soon fix that."

He called to the property man for a violin and proceeded to play feelingly "Hearts and Flowers," putting all the sobs in it of which he was capable. The instrument wailed beneath his chin and Miss Vale listened entranced.

"Oh, I could do anything, now," she exclaimed and went through the scenes with Ray in a smashing manner. "Hearts and Flowers" sure stirs up the emotions.

LEAVE IT TO DOC

That "old reliable" theater doctor, W. K. Hill, service man of the Chicago Paramount office, has added another little diversion to his manifold activities.

He is testing out vest pocket projection machines and is going to add the best one to his collection of instruments of flivver torture.

Then when an exhibitor wants to take a peek at a picture, or he wants to himself, he'll just swivel around in his chair, turn the buttons and there it'll be, on his wall.

That's efficiency. But leave it to Doc Hill for that.

A former employee of Motography has lost his mind. Announcement has been made of the wedding of Mr. L. J. Neiss, originator of Motography's noted "What the Picture Did for Me" section, to Miss Susanne Thein, at St. Michaels church in Chicago on September 26.

Screen Aids U. S. Shipping Board

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FORMULATES PLAN—CABINET RECEIVES FILM MEN

PRESIDENT WILSON and the cabinet have expressed themselves as highly appreciative of the telling work done by exhibitors and the picture industry for the Liberty Loan, the Red Cross and the food commission. In speaking of the value of the service of the screen to the United States shipping board President Wilson has made the following statement:

"The motion pictures are the best means for this kind of publicity because they speak to people of all nationalities through a universal language."

THROUGH the laudable activities of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, arrangements have been made which will enable the picture industry to render valuable service to the vast shipbuilding plans of the United States.

Every exhibitor of the country will be given an opportunity to help, thus making him an important factor in the attempt to bring the war to a speedy close and to provide for commercial prosperity in the country after the war is over. Theater men throughout the United States have already expressed themselves as willing to co-operate in the work in every possible manner.

Film Men at Washington

The war shipping committee of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry recently visited Washington to consult with the departmental heads as to the part that the film men can play in hastening the war plans of the United States, and has had the effect of putting a new and high value upon the patriotic services that have been and will be done by the motion picture men of the nation.

The motion picture war shipping committee, co-operating with Edward N. Hurley, head of the new National Shipping Board, has for its particular line of activity the promotion and exploitation of the vast shipbuilding plans of the Government, which are already much further advanced than the general public dreams of. The location, number, material and present status of the new ships in course of construction have been kept a secret from the public and even from the newspapers.

18,000 Exhibitors Help

As a result of the Washington visit of the war shipping committee of the motion picture industry, a plan is now approaching completion by which within a few weeks every one of the 18,617 exhibitors in the United States will be showing on their screens films illustrative of the titanic work being done by the Federal Shipping Board in the swift construction of ships of steel and wood. For prudential reasons these pictures will not disclose the location of the shipyards where hundreds of stanch vessels are rapidly nearing their launching day, and where thousands of eager ship carpenters, machinists, boiler makers, electricians and laborers are working day and night to give to the United States the fleets that must be had to carry not only our fighting men to Europe, but the weapons, ammunition and, above all, the food that is the vital need of our own men and our allies.

As yet the public at large has no conception of the miracles that have been performed in the carefully guarded shipyards where whole squadrons of seagoing vessels are springing into reality almost overnight.

"Industry Should Be Proud"

William L. Sherrill, vice chairman of the war shipping committee of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry (of which William A. Brady is chairman) and president of the Frohman Amusement Company, has returned from Washington, where, with his associates, he learned the high estimate which the President, the Cabinet and all of the war experts now assembled for important service place upon the support and co-operation of the motion picture men. Mr. Sherrill said:

I was never so proud of the motion picture business and never before quite realized what a mighty patriotic work it is capable of performing. The entire Cabinet greeted us with the most cordial interest, gave us a full half hour of close attention and impressed us all with the big and glorious field of duty that lies before us. Secretary Lane and Secretary McAdoo dwelt with special emphasis upon the helpfulness of the films in promoting subscription to the Liberty Loan. You know, besides distributing and causing to be shown over 35,000 Liberty Loan slides the motion picture industry subscribed for $5,500,000 worth of the bonds.

The particular object of the coming motion picture campaign in the cause of shipbuilding will be to inspire all sorts of men with the desire and the determination to do what they can to co-operate with the big work undertaken by Shipping Commissioner Hurley and his board, just as men in all walks of life are lending their best thoughts, their unremitting attention and their genius to the building of swarms of aeroplanes, to the perfection of training camps, to the conservation of food, to the Red Cross organizations and equipment, and to every other field of vital and patriotic service in this war. Let it be remembered that in these plans for serving the nation through the medium of the films the big producers and large city factors of the industry have the unanimous backing and co-operation of the 18,617 exhibitors scattered all over the country. For the shipbuilding crusade they have expressed themselves as enthusiastic to do their part—100 per cent of them.

The series of pictures to be shown in this campaign cannot fail to win pride and faith in our Government, its President and the Shipping Board. Mechanics, laborers, machinists, electricians, steel workers and construction engineers should after seeing the pictured prodigies which our Government is striving to accomplish in the shortest possible space of time, be keen to have a hand in the work, to get into the game. The Government should not have to seek such men. They should rush to the service, which is well paid for, as so many patriotic men in the high places of finance, manufacture and the professions have done.

For instance, there is Arthur S. Friend of Famous Players, who set his big business affairs aside to devote his whole time and energy to assisting Commissioner Hoover's food conservation campaign.

Government Has Big Task

The nation needs and expects inexhaustible enthusiasm, ceaseless effort, lofty patriotism and unselfish co-operation from all classes of citizens in this great enterprise. That will be the purpose of our motion picture service to the National Shipping Board. We will let every American citizen know and feel proud of what his Government has already done, is doing and proposes to do in this Herculean job of crowding the marine and naval achievements of fifty years into a few months of heroic and indomitable effort. It will be done, all right, but it will be done quicker and better if every man who can lend a hand or a word, joins in the work with brain and heart.

The enthusiastic reception given to the motion picture men at Washington was enough to fill them with pride and determination for the opportunity to help win this war, continued Mr. Sherrill. But we learned so many new proofs of the rapid and untiring energy of patriotic men in other lines of endeavor that we were spurred to further enthusiasm for war service. I did not know, for instance, that in every town near which there is an army cantonment, sub-committees of from one to twelve influential citizens have been at work guarding the morals of the young soldiers by providing them with sane and inspiring recreation, entertainment and sport, red-blooded fun and decent amusement.

Films for Soldiers

In addition to their classified work through committees in aid of the United States Shipping Board, the Food Commission, the War and Navy Departments (enlistment), the training camp activities and the Red Cross, the National Association of Motion Picture Industry has now completed plans to circulate the reels of all suitable moving pictures through the cantonments of the new army in this country, and on all ships of the navy in home or foreign waters; and, in addition, to supply all of the American camps on the European battle fronts with the new pictures so that the army may keep abreast of events in their own country while they are fighting the armies of the kaiser.

FILM EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

National Association of the Motion Picture Industry Incorporates Company to Serve as a General Employment Agency

At a meeting of the producers' branch committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, held on September 8, the report of a special committee, which was appointed at a previous meeting to investigate the possibility of establishing a service bureau, was received and adopted.

Gabriel L. Hess, secretary of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, as chairman, submitted the report on behalf of the committee, the other members of which are R. H. Cochrane of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and Joseph W. Engel of Metro Pictures Corporation.

After a very thorough survey of the situation, covering a period of three months, the committee recommended the incorporation of a small company to be known as the Service Bureau of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., which will serve as an employment agency for the engaging of artists and players whenever the service of an agency is required, and all members of the producers' branch committee have agreed to use this bureau in engaging their artists and studio employes. Application has been made for a license as an employment agency, and this department will be under the supervision of the license bureau of the City of New York, as well as of the state department of labor.

Negotiations have been practically concluded for the services of an expert in this line to manage the bureau, and leases have been prepared for spacious quarters in a centrally located building which will be convenient for everyone desirous of enlisting the bureau's aid.

The service bureau will be amply financed by the producer members and the net profits over and above the expense of operation are to be paid into the treasury of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The committee reported that after a very careful investigation of the situation it is confident that the bureau will not only be a paying institution, but a great source of revenue to the association for the purpose of carrying on its general activities.

There are many benefits to be derived through the establishing of an efficiently conducted service bureau, and it is contended that this new department of the national association will greatly strengthen the industry and make co-operation much more easy. As evidence of the desire of many actors and actresses to negotiate for employment directly through the producers' committee of the national association, it was stated that many applications have been received at the general offices during the past month which will be turned over to the manager of the service bureau.

Canada Joins A. E. A.

Canadian exhibitors have joined in goodly numbers the American Exhibitors' Association. General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn made a very encouraging report upon his return to New York from the Maritime Province picture convention, held at St. Johns, New Brunswick. Mr. Pettijohn is co-operating with the Canadian theater men in fighting adverse legislation.

The following exhibitors have joined the American Exhibitors' Association at the St. Johns convention, according to Mr. Pettijohn.

Walter H. Golding, Imperial Theater, St. Johns, N. B.; T. G. Spencer, Unique Theater, St. Johns, N. B.; F. W. Winter, Empress Theater, Moncton, N. B.; A. R. Tonie, Grand Theater, Moncton, N. B.; R. W. Doo, Gem Theater, Amherst, N. B.; C. E. Allan, Empress Theater, Amherst, N. B.; C. J. Gallagher, Peoples Theater, Charlottestown, P. E. I.; C. J. Gallagher, Prince Edward Theater, Charlottestown, P. E. I.; S. C. Hurley, Lyric Theater, St. Johns, N. B.; C. T. Stowe, Gem Theater, Fredericton, N. B.; R. T. Lee, Gem Theater, Fredericton, N. B.; Arch Mason, Wolfville Theater, Wolfville, N. B.; Arch Mason, Housport Theater, Housport, N. B.

The election resulted in the naming of the following executives:

N. V. Gostonguay, Halifax, president; F. G. Spencer, St. Johns, vice-president; J. M. Franklin, Halifax, secretary; J. B. G. Metzler, Halifax, treasurer; N. W. Mason, New Glasgow, vice-president for Nova Scotia; W. H. Golding, St. Johns, vice-president for New Brunswick; J. J. Gaudet, Summerside, vice-president for P. E. I.

Foreign Buyers Meet

The Foreign Buyers Association has empowered Joseph Kopfstein to transact all business for that body in connection with the screening and purchasing of productions for European markets. "Managing director" is to be Mr. Kopfstein's official title.

At the last meeting of the association, the question of the embargo on foreign shipments of American films was discussed and a committee was appointed to deal with the problem. L. R. Thomas was delegated to take up the matter with the officials at Washington and he is there on the job at present.

"Black Monk" Moves

"Rasputin, the Black Monk," can remain at the Park Theater, New York, only until September 23, owing to the fact that the house had already been leased following this date. The World-Picture Brady-Made may then be transferred to another Broadway playhouse.

Ethel Clayton plays a frontier girl for the first time in a long while as the heroine of World's "The Dormant Power."

Better Treatment for the Story Writer

THERE are only two classes of motion picture scenario writers—a few whose work is in real demand, who collaborate with the producers and get good prices; and a great many whose work is of little or no value and most of whom never will succeed. That is not true of the magazine short story writers, of whom there are all grades from those who sell all their stuff at high rates to those who sell nothing at all.

There is a reason for this difference. The short story writer gains recognition by merit alone. In spite of the opinions of those who have tried "literature" and received only rejection slips, the magazine editors are always looking for new writers, and are eager to give them all the recognition they deserve. But the scenario writer gets little satisfaction and little courtesy until he is big enough to command it.

Because even the cleverest of scenario writers cannot always put their scripts in shape for the studio floor, the producers prefer to get ideas only, without any semblance of play form. The most illiterate of manual laborers may have ideas, and can readily arrange to have them put on paper. Since there are millions of illiterate in our hundred million population, to say nothing of those with some slight education, the prospect of actually selling ideas which cost nothing has a wide appeal. So the scenario writing game becomes a great lottery, in which the gambler invests two cents (for postage) with the chance of gaining a prize of ten or fifty or a hundred dollars. That is why the mails are flooded with worthless manuscripts addressed to producing companies.

It takes some kind of talent to write short stories, and the average workingman is afraid to tackle it—if it ever ocurs to him at all, which it seldom does. But the scenario appears to demand no talent and no training—nothing but an idea, which is the common property of all human beings.

Because it is logically possible for an ignorant and illiterate person, possessed of the usual amount of perception and imagination, to conceive a worth-while picture plot, the habit of scenario writing has been fostered and encouraged for the sake of the occasional morsel in a flood of indigestible stuff. The result has been to increase the cost of handling and editing scripts, to decrease the percentage of usable matter almost to the vanishing point, and to drive the legitimate writers out of the field altogether.

Most of the sucessful short story writers, if asked for advice on scenario writing, will answer: "Don't do it!" Most of them have tried it themselves, at least once, and rightly or wrongly consider that they have been stung. This probably means merely that they did not get the considerate treatment to which they were entitled; but on that account they condemn unreservedly the whole picture business.

It is probably a good thing for the writing business that the story scribblers can be so independent; but it is not a good thing for the picture makers. So long as good writers, men trained in plot construction and the proper sequence of pictorial events, avoid the scenario, the producers will have to depend largely on printed books and the speaking stage for their "hits."

The motion picture industry should not deal in second-hand stories. To dramatize an exceptional piece of fiction is always legitimate; but to depend upon published fiction for the regular supply of studio material is a confession of inability to get good stuff first hand. And if the writers of good stuff go to the publishers first for a market, it is because they are treated with consideration and respect there, and are not so treated in the picture market.

That is why we see repeatedly the spectacle of a film producer paying thousands of dollars for picture rights to a second-hand story he could have had first hand for a hundred dollars or less—plus a little decent treatment of the author.

When it is recognized in film-producing circles that the originator of worth-while fiction is entited to the best treatment, instead of the worst, the average of picture quality will be higher and the source of future material will not be so big a problem.

The Funny Side of Censorship

EVERY motion picture censor board does things that appear ludicrous—or would so appear if their results were not so serious. We have repeatedly called attention to utterances and actions of the Chicago board, the Ohio board and the Pennsylvania board that were distinctly funny, though we did not approach the subject from the humorous side.

Now comes the Kansas State Board of Review with a printed list of films passed, rejected and altered by its orders, and constituting its Report No. 1. To our perverted sense of humor, some of those orders are really amusing.

Just picking a few alterations at random from the catalog of approvals, we find, for example, instructions to Eliminate scene where father and John joke about sister's baby.

Eliminate actual poison in reels 4 and 5.
Eliminate subtitle "Puncture me."
Eliminate expectorating scene.
Eliminate man jumping on fat man's stomach.
Eliminate scene of Fatty on bed as teacher spanks him.
Eliminate the leer of the housekeeper.
Eliminate close-up of leering countenance.
Eliminate flash of thumbing nose.
Eliminate thumbing nose.
Eliminate scene of man spiking punch.
Eliminate act of throwing statue.
Eliminate subtitle, "May All Your Troubles Be Little Ones."
Eliminate scene where girl slips tray under baby as she holds it in her lap.
Eliminate scene of girl pulling calf's tail.

And so on. There is one from "The Birth of a Nation" which instructs the film men to "eliminate close-ups of Gus's face." This is not funny—it is merely mysterious. As we remember the great spectacle, we do not recall any particular reason why Gus's face should be picked for elimination. Anyway, it is a compliment to the ability of "Gus"—Walter Long.

On the other hand there are a few jokes on the producers. Judging from the elimination orders, a favorite form of comedy is "Man losing his trousers." If this particular censorial command is funny, the humor of it certainly rests more on the film than on the censors.

We do not like censor boards, but we do not want to be unfair to anybody. Of course there may have been, and doubtless were, stronger reasons for the eliminations we have quoted than is revealed by the bare orders. To give even censorship its dues, there are many eliminations listed in the Kansas board's report that are not funny at all, but quite serious. Some of them the producers themselves, perhaps, would have made if they had taken time to look at their pictures once more before release day.

Censorship is wholly unnecessary, because long standing laws take care of all departures from decency; it is ridiculous, because authority without definite limitations and without responsibility always manages to make itself ridiculous. But the producers who study the censor boards' reports, with a due regard for their humor but also with an open mind toward their more serious corrections, will in the end make more acceptable and less offensive pictures. And that, after all, is the quickest way to eliminate censorship itself.

Story of the Music Tax

ALL PICTURE HOUSES AFFECTED—CONFERENCE WITH COMPOSERS

THE American Exhibitors' Association has made the following statement regarding the much-discussed music tax question:

The organization of music composers and publishers known as the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, comprising most of the well known composers and publishers of America, England, Italy and Austria, was established for the purpose of issuing licenses to public resorts to play the copyrighted music of its membership. This society is operating under Section 1, Subdivision E of the Copyright Act, which secures to a musical author the exclusive right to perform the copyrighted musical composition publicly for profit.

Supreme Court Decision

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Victor Herbert, the composer, against the Shanley Company, the cabaret restaurant on Broadway and 43rd street, decided that the playing of copyrighted music in the dining room of a restaurant for the entertainment of guests during meal time by an orchestra was an infringement of the composer's copyright, the court holding that whether or not an admission fee is charged for entering the place of entertainment makes no difference.

The court said in January, 1917:

If the rights under the copyright are infringed only by a performance where money is taken at the door, they are imperfectly protected. Performances not different in kind from those of the defendant's could be given that might compete with and even destroy the success of the monopoly that the law intends the plaintiffs to have. It is enough to say that there is no need to construe the statute so narrowly. The defendant's performances are not elemosynary. They are part of a total for which the public pays and the fact that the price of the whole is attributed to a particular item which those present are expected to order is not important. It is true that the music is not the sole object, but neither is the food which probably could be got cheaper elsewhere. The object is a repact in surroundings that to people having limited powers of conversation or disliking the rival noise give a luxurious pleasure not to be had from eating a silent meal. If the music did not pay it would be given up. If it pays, it pays out of the public's pocket. Whether it pays or not, the purpose of employing it is profit, and that is enough.

Decision Includes Picture Houses

The question as to whether this decision applies to picture theaters was submitted by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., to A. L. Jacobs, a well known theatrical lawyer, for his opinion. After a very careful consideration, Mr. Jacobs reached the conclusion that the decision in the Shanley case applies with equal force to picture theaters.

The Brooklyn League of Motion Picture Exhibitors, we are reliably informed, submitted the same question to Mr. Edmund Wise, another well known copyright specialist practicing in New York City, and he expresses it as his opinion that it is a violation of the copyright laws to play in any motion picture theater copyrighted music without the consent of the copyright owners.

Must Pay Tax on "Poor Butterfly"

The question was then tested in the case of Raymond Hubbell against the Royal Pastime Amusement Company before Judge Julius M. Mayer of the United States District Court, southern district of New York, involving the playing of "Poor Butterfly" in the Regent Theater, a picture house in New York City. Judge Mayer in that case sustained the complaint of the composer against the picture house.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Herbert vs. Shanley proceeds upon the theory that the owner of a musical copyright enjoys two distinct rights:

First—The right to publish and sell the composition and various arrangements thereof for different instruments.

Second—To publicly perform it for profit.

It is believed Congress intended to accord to the creator of the composition a monopoly for twenty-eight years.

The musical entertainment is an integral part of some motion picture attractions, and in a great many cases the musical program is a distinctive feature of the house.

Conference Proposed

In the American society we find such names as Victor Herbert, John Philip Sousa, Raymond Hubbell, Irving Berlin, Jerome D. Kern, Ray Goetz, Ernest Ball, Gus Edwards, Rudolf Frimi, Sylvio Hein, Edgar Leslie, Theodore Morse, Jack Norworth, A. Baldwin Sloane, Puccini, Mascagni, Leoncavallo, and hundreds of others.

These men, being artists, are not difficult to approach or to negotiate with. If we do not blink at the facts and fairly recognize that these composers are daily conceiving and creating melodies which appeal to our public and which we need in our theaters for its entertainment, then why should we not meet these men in a spirit of fairness and concede to them that they have created something we want in our business. Considering the matter in that light and relying upon the expression of their representatives as to their willingness to meet us half way, would it not be best to meet in conference and adjust our differences?

The American Society has been very active in enforcing the rights of its members and has proceeded under both the civil and criminal provisions of the law.

Fines $100 to $1,000

Under Section 28 of the Copyright Act it is a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or for a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, to willfully and for profit infringe any copyright or to aid or abet such infringement.

More than one hundred civil actions have been brought for the recovery of penalties provided for by Section 25 of the Copyright Act against exhibitors. The law provides that the damages recoverable for the infringment of a copyright shall not be less than $250 nor more than $5,000, upon the basis of $10 for every infringing performance in the case of a popular number, and in the case of an operatic composition $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent infringing performance. Costs will be allowed in all cases against the infringer and a counsel fee may be awarded, in the discretion of the court.

It has been the policy of the Government to give monopolies to authors and inventors upon the theory that by giving to them a monopoly of their works the progress of science and the useful arts will be promoted.

Goldwyn Wins Favor in Canada

Like its American parent organization, Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., of Canada is in high favor with the exhibitors of the Dominion and contracts have been signed with leading exhibitors from the maritime provinces all the way out to Vancouver on the West Coast.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director, and his associates, have devoted months of their time and energy to introducing Goldwyn Pictures to the Dominion on the same dignified and forceful scale employed by the American company.

Among the important contracts carried by Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., from the date of the first release, "Polly of the Circus" on September 9, are: Pembroke, Ont., Grand; Edmonton, Alberta, Empress; Calgary, Alberta, Regent; Regina, Sask., Rose; Winnipeg, Man., Lyceum; N. Battleford, Sask,, Empress; Swift Current, Sask., Lyric; Yorkton, Sask., Empire; Toronto, Ont., Park; Prince Albert, Sask., Strand; Midland, Ont., Opera House; Ottawa, Ont., Regent; Kitchener, Ont., Roma; Peterborough, Ont., Empire; Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Orpheum; Toronto, Ont., U-Kum; Galt, Ont., Temple; London, Ont., Patricia; Toronto, Ont., Brighton; Kingston, Ont., Strand; Brockville, Ont., New; Simcoe, Ont., Lyric; Toronto, Ont., Dundas; Toronto, Ont., Regent; Pt. ## First Blackton Paramount

J. Stuart Blackton has determined to postpone his advent upon the screen as a producer of Paramount. Accordingly, there will be no Blackton production among the Paramount October releases contrary to a former announcement, and the first Blackton photoplay will not appear until November. Mr. Blackton thereby gains a margin of a full month which will enable him to conserve to the utmost degree every detail of artistic production in preparing his adaptations of the famous Sir Gilbert Parker novels for the screen.

Violet Heming and Wilfred Lucas and Conway Tearle appear in the first Blackton production, "The Judgment House."

FORM BOOKING CORPORATION

Card Company Buys First National Exhibitors Circuit New Jersey Franchise for $32,000—To Distribute Chaplin Pictures

With the forming of the L. S. Card Booking Corporation to distribute the Chaplin pictures in New Jersey comes to light the interesting fact that Frank Hall, prominent New Jersey exhibitor, sold his franchise in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., for $32,000. Less than two months before Mr. Hall disposed of the New Jersey franchise, he paid exactly $1,750 for it.

The New Jersey franchise for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., was purchased by the L. S. Card Booking Corporation formed for the express purpose of distributing the Chaplin comedies and other productions purchased by the First National Exhibitor's Circuit. L. S. Card, whose name the company bears, has been associated with Frank Hall for the past year as manager of his Civilization Film Corporation booking "Joan the Woman," "Civilization," "The Whip," and other special features in New Jersey from its headquarters in Newark. Mr. Card is well known in motion picture circles in New Jersey, where he served the Mutual Film Corporation as manager of their Newark exchange for several years, having been the Mutual's Newark manager for two terms of service.

Closely associated with Mr. Card in the new company will be Ed Church, also of the Civilization Film Corporation, and associated with Mr. Hall in an executive capacity for the past year. Mr. Church, who was prominent in the New York office of the General Film Company from the early days of the motion picture industry until he resigned from that organization two years ago, is one of the most widely experienced exchange men in the business and is co-operating with Mr. Card in working out a plan for Chaplin distribution in New Jersey which he believes will make the L. S. Card Corporation one of the most popular exchanges in the state.

Putting Ogden on the Map

Much speculation has been engaged in by the motion picture trade generally as to the reasons which prompted the Ogden Pictures Corporation to locate its main plant, studios and laboratories at Ogden, Utah, particularly in view of the fact that so few persons are acquainted with that city, its typography or surroundings.

Mr. Lester Park, vice-president of the company and a citizen of Ogden, made an interesting statement in connection with the formation of this company. At the New York offices of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, Mr. Park stated: When the idea of forming a producing concern with the main plant at Ogden, first occurred to me, I was prompted largely by a sense of civic pride. In placing the matter before some of the biggest capitalists of the middle west, who reside at Ogden, they readily saw the opportunity of boosting their home town and while, of course, the financial backers of our institution have every natural desire to conduct our business along profitable lines, nevertheless the underlying motive that prompted their support was that Ogden would be 'placed on the map.'

Manager Weis of the Queen Theater, Dallas, Texas, has been appointed lieutenant in the United States Army.

Brenon Film on Broadway

"FALL OF ROMANOFFS" EXPECTED TO SCORE HIT THROUGHOUT COUNTRY

NOW that Herbert Brenon's latest production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," has been shown to the trade in a private showing exhibition at the Ritz Carlton, announcement is made of the Broadway run for this photodrama depicting the events which caused the recent revolution in Russia and the consequent rise of democracy in that country.

It is to be shown at the Broadway Theater, where it will have a two weeks' run beginning September 23.

The engagement will be a limited one owing to the fact that it is impossible at this time of the season to get a theater and because the bookings for the Broadway have all been made in advance.

Notables at Ritz Showing

Brenon first nights have become an occasion to look forward to, and leading members of the literary, musical, theatrical and moving picture professions invariably are found in the audiences. Among those at the Ritz were:

Adolph Zukor, Florence Reed, Madame Petrova, Margaret Mayo, Edgar Selwyn, Al. Woods, Malcolm Williams, Norma Talmadge, Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Hughes, R. E. Johnston, Constance Talmadge, Mrs. M. Talmadge, Hugh Ward, James Kirkwood, Archie Selwyn, Tyrone Power, Sam Weller, Sidney R. Riley, Herbert Bayard Swope, M. Lowenthal, Capt. Geo. V. Pictrowsky, J. Mandelkern, Sol. Rogers, E. V. Richards, A. L. Nathanson, Morris Asher, Frederick L. Niblo, Aaron Jones, Alfred Hickman, Alexander Stathopoulo, Bert Lytell.

Dr. Fred Harvey Allen, Hale Hamilton, Emmett Corrigan, Simi Silverman, Frederick Perry, Sam Harburger, Arthur F. Beck, E. Schay, Allison Smith, Daniel Frohman, Ivan Abramson, Lynde Denig, Charles Craig, Mr. Sherwin, James L. Hoff, Nance O'Neill, Charles P. Sawyer, Robert Payton Gibbs, Wm. A. Johnson, John M. Zwicki, Walter Irwin, C. F. Zittel, Barbara Castleton, Henry J. Brock, George F. Nash, Bernard M. Wood, Francis Arthur Jones, Charles J. Giegerich.

Morris Rose, Robert Welch, Wm. E. Shay, Charles Condon, J. A. Berst, Andrew J. Cabe, Peggy Betts, Allan Hawley, Whitman Bennett, Eugene V. Brewster, D. Z. Doty, Frank J. McIntyre, Randolph Bartlett, A. N. DuMaHaut, J. Roy Hunt, W. P.

Herbert Brenon, the dynamic producer of "The Fall of the Romanoffs" is glimpsed in the circle with scenes from this remarkable production below. The play stirred all New York at its premiere at the Ritz-Carlton.

Owing to the fact that the eyes of the world are now upon Russia and the newspapers full of stories of her internal struggle, this story of the fall of Russia's king is wonderfully timely.

Dewees, Nicholas Pirogoff, Bernard H. Sandler, Gerald C. Duffy, T. L. Falls, Arthur S. Kane, Albert A. Kaufman, Lesley Mason, John Logan, Hazel Dawn, Jake Wells, Mr. Kempner, Sol. Berman, Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel L. Hess, Don Levine, Hon. Marcus M. Marks.

Attempt to Screen History in the Making

"'The Fall of the Romanoffs' is nothing less than an attempt to screen swiftly moving history," said Mr. Brenon recently in discussing his play. "I realize that it is one thing to visualize past history and quite another to attempt contemporary events. The perspective is baffling.

"Yet this most epoch-making event in the development of democracy—the tumbling of Nicholas II from the hereditary throne of the Romanoffs as the Slav race throws off the manacles of despotism—fascinated me. What a tremendously human drama is beneath the bare cable that the Czar and Czarina, with their children, are en route to Siberia!

"I built my story around the Siberian moujik, Rasputin, the evil genius of the royal family. I started my photographic panorama by disclosing Rasputin as an illiterate, drunken peasant sled driver in a tiny village on the edge of the Siberian marshes. Swiftly—by trickery, luck and unscrupulous craftiness—Rasputin rises to court adviser and actual power behind the throne. Undermining the court with his philosophy of sin, Rasputin finally proved the spark to set the revolutionary masses aflame.

"Through the panorama moves Iliodor, the Siberian monk who brought about Rasputin's downfall; the emperor, a superstitious weakling; his wife, the Czarina, with German leanings; indeed, the whole court. The Kaiser himself appears briefly. I bring the story up to the murder of Rasputin and the revolutionists' arrest of the Czar in a railway carriage on March 15, 1917.

"I tried to humanize this historic panorama. For instance, I show the boyish Czarevitch bursting in upon a little conference between the Czar and his generals. Again I present the royal princesses in their playroom of marble and gold.

"I hope 'The Fall of the Romanoffs' has, at least in a measure, proven my theory of the value of the screen as a historian. The future literary historian will tell, concisely and probably accurately, the sequence of events leading up to the last of the Romanoffs. But these will be dry-as-dust facts. The motion picture can go beneath all this. History actually lives before our eyes. We stand beside the Czar as he wavers over a separate peace with Germany. A second later we get the stretch of a Petrograd street as a mob sweeps through. The screen is at once so big, so intimate, so sweeping, so personal that it reconstructs history."

In Again, Out Again

When the production following "The Man from Painted Post" was commenced the producers found it necessary to make a flying trip to New York from Los Angeles and back in order to get the actual New York scenes in accordance with the rule of Douglas Fairbanks to film a picture in the actual locale of the story.

The entire producing organization arrived in New York last week and immediately commenced work on the scenes of the new play. After a day and a half of activities in and around Broadway the company again packed up and started back to Los Angeles, where the rest of the picture will be filmed.

Gertrude Selby and Neal Burns, appearing in Horsley Comedies.

Unusual Comedy Team

Neal Burns, of the Gertrude Selby-Neal Burns Comedy Company at the David Horsley studios, has made a name for himself. He made his first hit as a musical comedy star in the East in such pieces as "Just Out of College," "A Stubborn Cinderella," "The Girl of His Dreams," and "The Winsome Widow." He then played in musical comedy stock, Burbank Stock and leads in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and "The Yankee Prince."

Miss Selby is a very attractive and fascinating young lady and is a capital comedienne. She has played before the camera with Universal and other companies.

Sales Manager for Select

Arthur S. Kane, general manager of Select Pictures Corporation, is rapidly strengthening the sales staff of that organization. He has just brought into the Select camp C. E. Shurtleff, who assumes position as sales manager of Select Pictures.

Mr. Shurtleff is well known in the trade because of the special work which he has done for the Pathe organization. As special representative for Pathe during the past year Mr. Shurtleff organized a sales system which proved remarkably effective.

Three years ago Mr. Shurtleff joined the World Film Corporation, afterwards leaving it to go with the V. L. S. E. as branch manager, being in turn in charge of exchanges at Detroit, Cincinnati and Cleveland, at which points he made a high record for sales and business transactions.

With Select, Mr. Shurtleff will devote his energies especially to producing a highly efficient sales corps, and to this end intends to make a comprehensive study of fields covered by Select Exchanges.

Harry Hilliard, leading man with the Fox Film Company, has severed his connection with that company.

A. M. P. A. Holds First Annual Banquet

HAS BECOME CLEARING HOUSE OF PUBLICITY AND ADVERTISING IDEAS

TAKING the success of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., as his text, Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the distributing section of Greater Vitagraph, made a strong appeal September 12 for closer co-operation in all branches of the motion picture industry.

Mr. Irwin, Joseph Engel, vice-president of Metro, and J. Robert Ruben, attorney for Metro, were guests of honor at the annual banquet of the A. M. P. A., which is made up of advertising and publicity experts representing virtually every large producing and distributing company. The association was formed one year ago, with Arthur James, advertising and publicity director of Metro, as president, and in the twelvemonth just concluded has succeeded in bringing together the leaders of publicity in the industry for an exchange of ideas and the general uplift and advancement of the publicity branch of the business. In addition, the organization has been an important factor in assisting the Government in recruiting, in checking legislation adverse to the industry, and in other ways has shown that it is a power for good in its relation to motion picture advancement.

The annual banquet was given at Delmonico's, President James acting as toastmaster, and invitations were extended to Albert E. Smith, William Fox, William A. Brady, Carl Laemmle, Adolph Zukor, L. J. Selznick, Richard Rowland, Edgar Selwyn, J. A. Berst, Samuel Goldfish and others important in the producing and distributing ends of the business.

Mr. Irwin, who was the organizer of V. L. S. E. and of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, made the principal address of the evening, taking as his theme the friendly association of the publicity and advertising men, who seem to have found a way to get along together, although they are in continual competition and rivalry. He said:

It has been an inspiration to see the fellowship and harmony that prevails in this organization of men who are in such keen rivalry and yet can meet as brothers for the uplift and betterment of their particular branch of this great business. I heartily agree with the statement that the publicity end of the business, which includes both the publicity writers and the conceivers of advertising, is the gasoline which runs the motor of the industry. I wish to congratulate the association and its membership on the great work that they have accomplished in the last year.

Until a few years ago there were very few men in the business who knew each other. This was due to a feeling of mistrust. Not that the men who have made the motion picture industry are any less honest than others, but simply because there was an atmosphere of suspicion that the other fellow might try to take an advantage of one somewhere or somehow.

Fortunately, that condition has been altered to a large extent and we are now coming to know each other better. So greatly has the condition been changed that I can vision a day, near at hand, when producer, distributor, exhibitor, actor, publicity man and every other factor that goes to make the motion picture the greatest medium known to man for education and entertainment will be in harmony and understanding. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has been one link in bringing about the necessary business brotherhood, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers another.

Of publicity, I should like to say this. It is the mainspring of our age and the keystone of the film industry. Unless pictures are exploited properly they will not accomplish the purposes for which they are made—revenue and entertainment. Publicity and advertising, to my mind, are synonymous. In one case a skillful writer tells a story in detail and in such a manner that the reader is brought to a realization that there is something worth while offered to him. In the other case—advertising—a skilled diagnostician grasps the kernel of a proposition and hands that kernel, sharp, strong, attractive to the reader, in such a way that he cannot fail to see the point. The beginning and end of publicity and advertising are the same, the only difference being in method of treatment of a subject.

In conclusion, I should like to say that I am glad to know that it is the consensus of the publicity and advertising experts of the industry that high class publicity, truthful publicity, the avoidance of superlative and fake stories must be the creed of the film industry. Keeping faith with the public and aiding the exhibitor are twin purposes and I feel sure that the publicity men and the producers of pictures are seeking to accomplish.

Arthur James, in his annual address, said in part:

Our organization was formed a year ago to make possible a united co-operation for our protection and advancement, and for the development of an esprit de corps, a sense of the professional element of our business, and to pull up some of the weeds that were rapidly growing high enough to cast a shadow on our business standing in the world at large.

We wanted and we have secured a real circulation test of every important trade publication in the field.

We wanted and we have secured a better grade of trade medium than we were getting. In this connection I call your attention to the splendid improvement in the makeup, the news contents, the editorial strength and artistic betterment in a majority of the journals with which we come in contact. I would not venture to suggest that the mountain has been more than half climbed, but the trend is now definitely in the right direction, and every element of the motion picture industry has been benefited.

We have co-operated with the National Board of Review in the suppression of the sex advertising in territories where perfectly decent screen plays were advertised and exploited as highly spiced and in many instances absolutely indecent. First in the state of Texas and then in the state of Washington, and later in other sections, we waged successful warfare on theater efforts of this sort, until now the instances are few and gratifyingly far between.

We have created a better spirit of generous rivalry among the men of our profession, and have been encouraged in our own efforts to better advertising performance than this industry or the show business in general ever knew before.

All these things have been quiet, well ordered family affairs, carried on in fairness and with no suppression of individuality or of effort. I have enumerated only a few of our business activities, as it is my desire to sketch rather than to draw.

When the war came, our organization mobilized in twenty-four hours and placed before the Federal authorities a detailed recruiting plan, with poster ideas, with slides, with patriotic propaganda, that was accepted by such men as General Leonard Wood, Brigadier General Walsh, Captain John F. Lucey, Alexander J. Hemphill, Rear Admiral Usher and others as the best recruiting plans and the best recruiting ideas supplied by any civilian organization in the United States. We had the patriotic satisfaction of seeing our efforts bring the results, and until this day and hour we have said mighty little about it.

Among the speakers were Harry Reichenbach, Randolph Bartlett, editor of the Photoplay; Fred Schaefer, Mr. Ruben, Maxwell Karger, Nat Rothstein, Mr. Engel, and P. A. Parsons, chairman of the banquet committee.

"The Spy" Attracts Soldiers

Particularly notable at every theater where William Fox's "The Spy" is shown is the large percentage of soldiers in the audience. The motion picture revelation of German secret service methods appeals especially to men in uniform. The present difficulty with Sweden makes the film even more timely than before and proves more conclusively than ever that the warning in the photoplay is not far-fetched.

Unusual Blue Ribbon Feature

Albert E. Smith, president, presents as the Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature for September 24, "Sunlight's Last Raid," a picturesque romance, brimful of action and daring horsemanship, set amidst the arid wastes of the cactus land.

Mistaken identity is the core around which a novel plot is developed, the unraveling of which involved many amusing and tense dramatic situations, such as the hold-up of a train by a band of outlaws, the abduction of an Eastern society girl by the bandits, the girl's thrilling escape from their mountain lair, an attack on an undefended ranch by the plunderers, in which many old men and women are murdered, and a desperate battle between the outlaws and a detachment of Government troops.

Mary Anderson is seen in the leading role, that of the pretty society girl, whose love for a dashing Westerner is not tempered by the erroneous impression that he is the notorious outlaw, Sunlight.

The story is as follows:

Janet Warned, an Eastern society girl, who is kidnaped by outlaws from the train in which she is riding to her brother's ranch in the far West, is carried into the hills and held prisoner until rescued by her father and a rancher, Jack Conway. The resemblance between Captain Sunlight, the outlaw leader, and the rancher is strong and the girl confuses the two, so that later on meeting Conway she turns him over to a posse at the point of her pistol. While still believing him a bandit she falls in love with the rancher and when his real identity is known, she promises to marry him.

Janet's father, Bill Warned, incurs the hatred of Captain Sunlight by organizing a Vigilance committee to round him up. The bandit, however, seeks to strike at the father through the daughter, making repeated attempts to capture her.

Warned's posse finally gets Sunlight's raiders cornered in the mountains and a battle appears inevitable when the bandit chief blows up the trail, making further pursuit by the vigilantes impossible. He then leads his band against Warned's ranch, hoping again to capture Janet. Only a few of the older men and women are there but they put up a desperate resistence. Many of them are killed or wounded and the outlaws are preparing to rush the house, when Janet slips away unnoticed and rides breakneck to Fort Maxey, to summon a troop of U. S. Cavalry.

She returns riding at the head of the troopers just as the occupants of the ranch house are fleeing flames to quicker death by the rifles of the bandits. There is a sharp fight and the outlaws take to the hills and are caught between the soldiers and the vigilantes.

Janet finds Conway unconscious from wounds at the foot of a cliff and is ministering to him when Sunlight creeps up and seizes her. Conway is too weak to do much but engages the bandit until Janet stuns him with a blow on the head and he rolls to death down the mountain.

Change in Fox Releases

Through a change of releases just decided upon by William Fox, Gladys Brockwell's new production, "Conscience," which Bertram Bracken made in the Hollywood, California, studios, has been advanced in the schedule to September 30.

William Stowell has the leading role in a new production entitled "Man of God," a five reel western drama.

"Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" is another of those remarkable Fox Kiddie productions. The same young stars are featured.

As in "Jack and the Beanstalk," this play appeals strongly to grown-ups as well as to youngsters.

"Aladdin and the Lamp"

A beautiful film production of "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," the most fascinating, perhaps, of all the world-classic Arabian Nights' Tales, is announced in a detailed statement from William Fox. The picture is another of the Kiddies' Feature series which Mr. Fox has sponsored, and will begin a run on Broadway soon.

Francis Carpenter and Virginia Lee Corbin, of "Jack and the Beanstalk" fame, appear in the leading roles of the new cinema—Francis as the son of Mustapha, the tailor, and Virginia as the captivating princess. The production is spectacular in the extreme and required the services of hundreds of kiddies and the making of countless costumes.

C. M. and S. A. Franklin, who filmed "Jack and the Beanstalk," staged "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp." Besides receiving a share of the credit for the children's brilliant dramatic achievements in the new masterpiece, the Franklins have devised a score of ingenious effects in the picture.

The memorable part of the story in which Aladdin rubs the magic lamp and commands the genie who appears to build him a magnificent palace, is faithfully reproduced in the photoplay version. A miracle of the screen results in the gradual appearance of a gorgeous structure on the burning sands.

All of the desert scenes are notable because of the splendid photographic record which has been made of them.

From beginning to end, the filmed "Aladdin" has a distinct charm. At the very outset the picturegoers are introduced into the wonderful city of old Bagdad. The evening is falling on the Oriental splendor of the ancient mart of the East, and Mohammedans kneel everywhere in prayer.

The Arabs on the heated desert without the gates, the devout in the mosques, the powerful in the palaces and the workers in the bazaars all turn towards Mecca with reverence. Then attention is concentrated on Aladdin.

The genie in "Aladdin" has something of the element of the giant in "Jack and the Beanstalk" and carries out perfectly the impression of being able to do whatever he cares to do.

A recently completed Alice Brady photoplay for World Pictures is now called "A Maid of Belgium" instead of "The Refugee," as at first.

ABRAMS MAKES BIG TOUR

President of Paramount to Visit and Confer with Exhibitors in All Towns Over Twenty Thousand in Population

What is probably the most extended tour of the country and the widest survey of distributing and exhibiting conditions ever undertaken by a motion picture executive was inaugurated last week, when Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, began a four months' trip to exhibitors all over the country on behalf of Paramount and Artcraft pictures. Mr. Abrams' tour has been so arranged as to permit him to visit exhibitors in all towns of over twenty thousand population.

The prime purpose of the trip is to establish a point of personal contact between Mr. Abrams and exhibitors in all parts of the country, looking toward a better mutual understanding, a more sympathetic and logical appreciation on the parts of the distributing and exhibiting elements of the trade for the problems of each other, and a greater degree of service and a higher standard of co-operation by Paramount and Artcraft toward their clients. It is understood officially that Mr. Abrams will devote the greater part of his conferences with exhibitors to the solution of their local problems and the seeking of business fundamentals upon which can be based an advanced and more advantageous code of relationship that will in the future be applied to the industry in a national way, with the betterment of the exhibitors' collective interests and the strengthening of their investments always as the desired consummation.

Comedy Beauty Squad

In "Plans and Pajamas," Greater Vitagraph's fifteen minute laugh for the week of September 24, the newly organized Big V beauty squad makes its debut.

The Big V beauty squad, which hereafter will be an institution in the Vitagraph comedies, is composed of ten of the prettiest girls obtainable. At Albert E. Smith's personal instruction, Larry Semon, the director of the Big V comedies, invaded the musical comedy and vaudeville stage for a combination of beauty and talent, and the Big V beauty squad is the result.

BRADY STANDS BY VIEW

Will Not Back Down on Contention That Best Screen Plays Are Adaptations of Legitimate Stage Dramas

"Without the faintest intention of precipitating a controversy," said William A. Brady, director general of World-Pictures Brady-Made, "I remain unshaken in my belief that the most successful and enduring motion pictures are those which reach the screen by way of the speaking theater. I observe that a previous declaration along these lines has brought out an expression of opinion very much to the contrary, supported by the names of a number of motion pictures which owe nothing to the oral stage.

"To begin with, some of the plays quoted in the list to which I refer were never conspicuously successful, and not one of them ever had the vogue of, let us say, 'The Birth of a Nation,' which came to the screen from the theater, and to the theater from a printed novel.

"Then let us glance for a moment at the record of World Pictures derived from the stage and very successful, and not one of them ever had the vogue of, let 'Alias Jimmy Valentine,' 'As In a Looking Glass,' 'As Ye Sow,' 'The Ballet Girl,' 'The Boss,' 'The Builder of Bridges,' 'A Butterfly on the Wheel,' 'The City,' 'Col. Carter of Cartersville,' 'The Cotton King,' 'The Cub,' 'The Dollar Mark,' 'The Face in the Moonlight,' 'The Family Cupboard,' 'A Gentleman From Mississippi,' 'The Man of the Hour,' 'The Man Who Found Himself,' 'Mother,' 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch,' 'Old Dutch,' 'Over Night,' 'The Pit,' 'The Rack,' 'The Social Highwayman,' 'Blue Grass,' 'The Master of the House,' 'La Vie De Boheme,' 'Husband and Wife,' 'Forget-Me-Not,' 'Bought and Paid For' and a few others.

"Without singling out any one or more of these plays, but bunching the whole lot, I can securely defy anyone to name a similar number of dramas written exclusively for the screen and produced by any one management, registering anything like the drawing power of this collection.

"It seems to me to be a perfectly plain, obvious proposition that if you go before the public with a picture version of a play that has already been seen and liked by a great number of people, you have got your patronage started before the doors are opened. If this is not the fact, then there is absolutely nothing in publicity and advertising, no use in building up the confidence of the people in the article you are about to offer."

Circuit Books Fables

One of many extensive bookings of the New George Ade "Fables in Slang" has been made by the Boston office of General Film. These clever comedies in twenty-five minute lengths have been signed for the Gordon circuit of houses for the series. The Gordon Bros. Amusement Company controls a score of theaters in New England.

"Muaual Weekly," the weekly news reel carries, in addition to pictures of the history events which are taking place in America, glimpses of the American soldiers in their camp in France.

"Polly of the Circus" Scores Big Hit

GOLDWYN BEGINS DISTRIBUTION—1,000 EXHIBITORS UNDER CONTRACT

WHILE Harold Edel, managing director, and Mitchell H. Mark, principal owner of the Strand Theater, New York, looked for big business at the opening of Goldwyn's first release, "Polly of the Circus," they were not quite prepared for what happened when "Polly" did arrive at their playhouse.

"Polly of the Circus" broke all recent Strand attendance records and kept the theater packed inside and with a lobby filled to overflowing throughout its first day at the greatest of metropolitan picture theaters.

The New York newspapers, carrying a liberal advertising appropriation for the production, placed through the Strand, had not stopped with the formal amusement reading notices, but hailed the advent of Goldwyn into actual releasing as a significant event in motion picture history.

Manager Edel had made elaborate preparations for the presentation of "Polly." For weeks the lobby of his theater had been dressed with attractive paintings to announce the production to the audiences. On the stage for the presentation he had ordered a distinctive drop which showed a circus lot and the big tent with the main entrance. Out of this entrance stepped the ring-master of "Polly of the Circus," George S. Trimble, who was soon identified by the audience as one of the actors in the picture. He wore his ringmaster costume and high hat, and, removing his hat, he announced the beginning of the production in the florid language of the circus ring, ending by expressing the Strand management's appreciation of the Goldwyn Pictures which henceforth will be shown first in New York at this great theater.

As at previous advance invitation showings, the big scenes of the picture evoked cheers from the audience and the exciting horse race in which Polly on her white horse defeats the Deacon's entry, brought the audience out of its chairs.

In the presence of a group of motion picture specialists who were watching the running of the picture, Mr. Edel said:

"This production has today made a record for The Strand, and I consider it to be the ultimate in motion picture production."

"Polly of the Circus" in Eighty Cities

"Polly of the Circus" has, in fact, scored a tremendous success in every section of the United States, having been shown in upwards of eighty important cities of the country, beginning either on Sunday, September 9, or Monday, September 10.

All existing house records, in money and attendance, were broken at The Standard Theater, Cleveland.

At the St. Denis Theater, Montreal, just taken over by M. L. Nathanson and his associates, all previous money records for a day were eclipsed.

In Columbus, Ohio, the Messrs. Dusenbury, owners of the Grand Theater, who are to play "Polly of the Circus" at a later date because of previously booked pictures, could not wait for a public verdict, but held a special showing of the production for the newspaper publishers, the Ohio Board of Censors and members of the Governor's staff, and the newspapers without waiting for the public showing of the production gave it laudatory notices.

Both in exhibitor telegrams and in newspaper reviews of the first Goldwyn production a note that is emphasized is that Goldwyn productions are even better than its press agent promises.

It is interesting to note that Goldwyn began business with a larger number of first run customers, calling for a larger number of prints of a single production for simultaneous showing than any other company operating on a fixed schedule of releases has ever had at the opening of business.

It is a remarkable statement to make, but one that is true to the letter, that the Goldwyn policy and method of film salesmanship, first devised and outlined at the formation of the new company in December, 1916, has worked out without a change or alteration from the day of its conception and that the Goldwyn method of establishing a company in the confidence of exhibitors themselves has won the approval of the theater owners everywhere.

A significant feature of the Goldwyn endeavor is that every possible attention is being paid to building up the company's business with the small exhibitors of the nation—at the very start instead of developing their business as an after-thought. The result of this campaign is that Goldwyn, besides having its big customers all over America, has more than 1,000 of the smaller exhibitors under contract from the begining. In the Goldwyn home offices the small exhibitor has his own organization at his disposal and does not find his inquires and requests side-tracked until big exhibitors have been looked after.

The mechanism of Goldwyn operated perfectly throughout the country and there were no deferred showings or hitches because of non-arrival of films or other supplies. Twenty-five Goldwyn offices reported by wire that they maintained their schedule of showmanship in their entire territory and that exhibitors have begun by playing "Polly of the Circus" to overwhelming business.

Paralta Progress Phenomenal

Carl Anderson expressed himself as very much pleased over the organization of the Paralta studios, as they have been developed since May last by Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays, Inc., and Robert Brunton, studio manager.

In that brief time one of the ablest technical staffs in the country has been brought together, accommodations for five producing units have been provided and four big star feature productions have been completed.

In addition to this, two big stages have been built, 50 by 200 feet, one open-air and the other enclosed; a great property building has been constructed, which has been filled with an immense quantity of properties of every description; portable electric lighting apparatus has been provided for the taking of night pictures in any locality, and woodcarving, plaster working and other departments for the making of special properties have been added to the original Clune studio plant, which Paralta leased.

There are now four companies established at the Paralta studios which are headed by J. Warren Kerrigan, who has nearly recovered from his broken leg, Bessie Barriscale, Henry B. Walthall and Rhea Mitchell. Mr. Anderson also took up negotiations with a fifth star, which will be concluded in a few days. This will add one more producing unit to the Paralta studios, giving it a capacity of forty feature productions each year.

R. H. Cochrane, Universal's vice-president and prize film-christener, has returned from his month's vacation very much tanned but otherwise quite fit. He claims the only way to take a vacation is as he does the trick—without leaving your address behind you.

RHEA MITCHELL WITH PARALTA

To Appear in Eight Feature Productions to Be Released by Triangle Distributing Corporation —Will Have Own Company

The recent visit of Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., to the Paralta studios, at Hollywood, California, resulted in the conclusion of negotiations which had been going on for some time between Rhea Mitchell and this company in reference to her starring under the Paralta banner.

Rhea Mitchell, who is to head her own company for Triangle-released Paralta features.

Contracts were duly signed and Miss Mitchell will shortly make her debut as an independent star at the head of her own company in a modern morality play by Hayden Talbot. Miss Mitchell's productions will be released by Paralta through the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

Miss Mitchell and her company will be accorded the same accommodations at the Paralta studios in Hollywood that are enjoyed by Bessie Barriscale, J. Warren Kerrigan and the Henry B. Walthall organizations. Miss Mitchell and company will have the benefit of the same general staff headed by Robert Brunton, production manager, R. Holmes Paul, art director, and Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta, as general supervising manager.

Miss Mitchell is 21 years of age and has been connected with the stage and screen since her fifteenth year.

In the fall of 1913 Miss Mitchell made her first appearance on the screen. She joined the New York Motion Picture Corporation as a leading woman. Her first part was in a two-reel production called "A New England Idyll," which was directed by Reginald Barker. She continued with the New York Motion Picture Corporation until 1915, when she joined the American Film Company at Santa Barbara. Miss Mitchell's last appearance was in a special production called "Whither Thou Goest," in which she made a striking personal hit as co-star with Orrin Johnson.

Miss Mitchell's greatest successes were scored in "On the Night Stage," "The Beckoning Flame," "D'Artagnan," "The Brink," and "The Devil," for the New York Motion Picture Corporation, and in "The Gilded Youth," "His Brother's Keeper," "The Overcoat," and "The Sable Blessing," for the American Film Company.

Miss Mitchell will be seen in eight Paralta star feature films each year.

While continuing the special advance slides for each O. Henry release, General Film is also providing another stock slide.

Making a Loser Pay

IF YOU are one of the thousands of exhibitors who have at one time or another had losing theaters on their hands, then you will appreciate the article which is to appear in the next issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

"Making a Loser Pay" is the title of the "story," and it is written by G. H. Ostrander, successful manager of five houses in Denver. Ostrander gets right down to brass tacks and tells something. And his experiences will be a mighty good thing to know if you have a house that shows any tendencies toward being a "lemon."

Read Ostrander's story next week and learn how to squeeze real profits from a lemon house.

Kaplan Amazed at Film Ethics

BY N. S. KAPLAN.

"I am amazed at America. That is, I am amazed at the film industry and some of the methods which appear to be sanctioned in it apparently without comment, let alone the condemnation they observe.

"Let me be specific. Several weeks ago I arrived in New York after a perilous departure from Moscow and an arduous trip across Siberia, the Pacific Ocean and the American continent. I brought with me more than fifty negatives of motion picture dramas produced by the Moscow Art Theater Company. There was no secret about my coming. My arrival in New York was generally reported and in subsequent weeks my purpose in coming, my hopes and my ambitions were duly recorded. It was announced that I came with a message from the new Russia; that I hoped to deliver this message through the medium of a repertory of photoplays 'Made in Russia.'

"It was further announced that these plays were 'actually produced in Russia by celebrated stars from stories of world renowned authors.' Also it was stated that 'in Russia the stars are personalities jealously guarded. They are known and loved for the parts they play, and their artistic sphere is circumscribed within the borders of their native land.' With my approval, my representative announced that their appearance in America was to be an event.

"I ask you to mark the quoted portions well and compare them with the following: 'Made in Russia. The first great Russian features presenting world-famous Russian artists in motion pictures. Although Russia—under the old regime—jealously guarded her many celebrated stars, refusing to allow them to leave the country, their fame has spread to all lands, and their initial appearance in America marks a new era in the history of motion pictures.'

"The name of the company which uses the phrases given in the previous paragraph resembles closely the name I have given to my company. Its address is the same. There is only one thing the other fellow has overlooked. He has not appropriated my stars. And he cannot appropriate them, because I control the motion picture production of Russia. Mozukin, Lesienko, Fetner, Colodna, Caralli, Nelska, Zovska and the others will be seen in America only in the productions of the Russian Art Film Corporation.

"Imitation may be the 'sincerest form of flattery,' but I repeat: I am amazed at America."

Triangle Siren in New York

LOUISE GLAUM, Triangle's siren star, has arrived in New York from Los Angeles for a vacation of ten days before commencing work on a series of spectacular productions at the Triangle Culver City studio.

Louise Glaum to appear in a series of lady gun fighter parts for Triangle.

This is Miss Glaum's first trip to New York since she commenced her picture work four years ago in Los Angeles. She has been with Triangle since its inception, appearing in no less than twenty features. Her latest role was that of the vanity woman in "Idolaters," released the first of this month. With the exception of short rest periods between productions, the star has had no time for anything but her work during the past two years.

"I am a stranger to the gay white way," remarked Miss Glaum, "although I am supposed to know all about it after frequenting innumerable of its cafes—in my pictures. I came to rest, which shows just how little I know of New York. I am making a tour of the shops to secure gowns for my coming plays, which will be quite different than any of the recent ones. I had not seen my last play, 'Idolaters,' until it was shown for me in the Triangle projection room the other morning. I was terribly shocked by myself!"

Miss Glaum's intention to visit the city was kept secret at her request as she did not wish to make personal appearances, but rather to enjoy a genuine outing.

"Intolerance" in Regular Houses

By cable arrangements completed within the past two days D. W. Griffith will present his great spectacle "Intolerance" this season in the representative picture theaters of America.

This means that the same care and elaborateness which were shown in the handling of the Griffith spectacles on their special tours of the country will be carried out when "Intolerance" is transferred to the regular picture field.

Great plans are being made by Mr. Griffith's forces to present "Intolerance" in a way that will further add to the popularity of the picture theaters. Limited engagements will be booked in the representative theaters of the principal cities of the country. Experts who have grown up in the Griffith organization will lay out a complete campaign and every detail looking to the success of the presentation will be attended to. This will cover the advance promotion, the advertising, the atmospheric projection and the musical accompaniment of the great four-fold story which is unquestionably the most remarkable motion picture spectacle the world has ever seen. Distributing offices for the bookings of "Intolerance" have been opened at 508 Longacre Building, New York.

Metro-Yorke Engages New Quarters

Future Metro-Yorke wonderplays starring Harold Lockwood will be made at the Metro-Super-Feature studio at 645 West 43rd street, New York. This was decided by Fred J. Balshofer, president of the Yorke Film Corporation, soon after his arrival from California a week ago. Mr. Balshofer has abandoned his California headquarters and hereafter will direct all his activities from New York.

In addition to making the foregoing arrangements for a studio, Mr. Balshofer has established business headquarters in the Metro offices. These are in charge of Wiley Gibson as business manager, who came from California with Mr. Balshofer and Mr. Lockwood, along with Richard V. Spencer, scenario writer; Lester Cuneo, the Yorke "heavy"; William Clifford, character actor; John Schronberg, violinist; and Antonio Gaudio, cameraman. He also made an addition to his staff in the person of Harry H. Poppe, whose duties will be to look after the publicity for the Yorke company's activities.

Between getting settled the matter of future homes for his acting and business organizations, Mr. Balshofer has found time to superintend some changes he desires made at the studio; to make some additional scenes requiring a New York background for "Paradise Garden," the last picture he made on the coast; to cut the negative of that subject, and to confer with his associates in the preparation of his next production.

The exchanges throughout the world handling the Billy West comedies have placed orders for all Billy West releases for the next twelve months. The West comedies are released twice monthly. "The Star Boarder," their latest release, has sold sixty more prints than any of the previous nine placed on the market.

Perfection Pictures, New De Luxe Brand

FOR EXHIBITORS OF HIGH STANDING—DEPOSITS NOT REQUIRED

PERFECTION PICTURES—representing the master efforts of three of America's pioneer producers, George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Co., Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and George Kleine—is the newest brand of film to reach the market. These attractions, it is announced, are to be de luxe motion picture productions in five and six reel lengths which are to be released one each week, beginning in September, and will be backed by one of the largest national advertising campaigns ever devoted to any motion picture project.

The resources, studio and distribution facilities, plants and properties of these three pioneer film manufacturers are united closer than ever before in this new merger of distributing interests to present Perfection Pictures—"The Highest Standard in Motion Pictures."

The literary works of the world's foremost authors and playwrights will be presented in film form through the medium of Perfection Pictures. Appropriations calling for the expenditure of several millions of dollars in productions alone during the coming year, have already been voted, so exhibitors may confidently expect the utmost in the way of stories, stage settings, costumes and properties. The new de luxe brand of films will be released one each week, for the first year, through the George Kleine system of exchanges on either the open booking plan—any picture, any time—or on a contract for the entire fifty-two pictures.

For the advertising of Perfection Pictures on a national scale during the coming year, a fund of $300,000 has been set aside.

Stories and Photography to Have Quality

Quality of stories and quality of photography will be two attributes of Perfection Pictures which the exhibitors and the public will quickly note. The stories will be furnished by many of America's greatest literary celebrities, while all Perfection Pictures will be made by the Perfection Process—a new invention for the manufacture of films which promises an evolution in the process of film making. By reason of this process, which has taken four years to perfect, clearness, brilliancy and ease of viewing will be very noticeable.

The exact details of the Perfection Process are, of course, a trade secret. An indication of the care which has been taken in developing it, however, is seen in Perfection Pictures. The results obtained by its use will be instantly perceptible on the screen. An invention of still greater magnitude that will revolutionize motion photography is also to be announced soon in connection with Perfection Pictures.

New Type of Entertainment

Exhibitors may expect to find an entirely new type of entertainment under the brand of Perfection Pictures. In the main, the productions will consist of light, pleasing comedy dramas and dramas written by the foremost authors and playwrights—the works of such leading literary celebrities as Peter B. Kyne, Clarence Budington Kelland, Kennett Harris, George Ade, Henry Irving Dodge, Arthur Stringer, Robert Rudd Whiting, George Barr McCutcheon, Samuel Merwin, James W. Adams, Lucien Hubbard and others. Every Perfection Picture will present a story of genuine literary merit—the best works of contemporary literature.

George Kleine, one of the best known film manufacturers and distributors, and head of the George Kleine system of film exchanges, in announcing Perfection Pictures, said:

Many months have been spent in planning Perfection Pictures. Already, more than eight big feature subjects are completed and ready for release. Ten more are in course of production.

Large Appropriation for Advertising

Our faith in the value of Perfection Pictures is indicated by the fact that we are backing it up with the greatest campaign of national advertising ever launched in behalf of a motion picture project. Starting September 22, full page advertisements in such leading magazines as The Saturday Evening Post will be used every month. Theater patrons will be told of Perfection Pictures through big advertisements which will appear in newspapers throughout the country. Perfection Pictures will be sold for the exhibitor to his patrons. This campaign of national advertising will, of course, mean added value for the box-office. It will mean that when an exhibitor announces that Perfection Pictures are being presented at his theater, he immediately "cashes in" on the confidence established in Perfection Pictures through his national advertising campaign.

I want to emphasize the fact that contracts for Perfection Pictures will be issued with the greatest care. Only exhibitors of the highest standing—those who can qualify for the ability to present Perfection Pictures properly—will be granted contracts. To such exhibitors ample protection will be given for exclusive territory free from competition. Perfection Pictures will be booked on open booking—any picture, any time—or on a contract for fifty-two a year, without deposit. Our sales policy is one that we believe to be liberal, broad and open. Dealing with the high grade exhibitors only, no deposits will be necessary. They will be the class of exhibitors who are real business men—men of substantiality and reliability. Perfection Pictures are the kind of attractions any theater can play for runs of from three days to a solid week.

Territory will be allotted quickly. Exhibitors seeking protection on the showing of these pictures in their vicinity will find it advisable to visit the nearest exchange of the George Kleine System without delay and make their reservations.

Lawrence Stuart, house manager of the Old Mill Theater, at Dallas, has been accepted by the draft and ordered into the service.

Barker to Remain with Paralta

Reginald Barker has become permanently connected with the Paralta Plays organization and will be sole director of Bessie Barriscale's photo dramas. During the past two months he has been directing her production of Harold MacGrath's secret service war romance, "Madam Who," on which he is now putting the finishing touches.

Reginald Barker, Paralta director.

Since last November, up to within a few days, Mr. Barker's permanent plans for the future were very much in doubt. The early expiration of his contract with another company became known and from that moment he was made a target for record-breaking offers from almost every organization in the picture industry.

Seven weeks ago, on the expiration of his contract, Mr. Barker became director of Miss Barriscale in the production of Harold MacGrath's "Madam Who," not because it was the most lucrative of the many opportunities offered him, but because it gave him a chance to carry out some of the more pretentious ideas he had long entertained.

During the recent visit of Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, to the Pacific Coast, a consultation was held which resulted in agreements under which Mr. Barker will continue permanently as Miss Barriscale's director. After the signing of the contracts under which this arrangement was completed, Mr. Barker said:

"In my arrangements with the Barriscale organization I have been entrusted with the great responsibility of making photoplays with one of the most gifted actresses of the screen at the head of the cast, and to send them away for presentation over my name without the supervision of any other authority. This means that should there be lapses anywhere, I alone shall be accountable for it. I believe this absolute authority vested in me will prove creative of greater results."

Mr. Barker is but 31 years of age and has been engaged in moving picture production but four years, yet in that time he has made a big reputation. The first, second and fourth original Triangle releases were directed by him—"The Iron Strain," starring Dustin Farnum; "The Coward," starring Frank Keenan, and "The Golden Claw," starring Bessie Barriscale. To Mr. Barker has been attributed the development of many of the present very popular stars of the screen, who would have remained in obscurity if they had not been made prominent by his superb direction.

In 1913 he determined to try his hand at directing moving pictures and was engaged by the New York Motion Picture Corporation at Santa Monica. He produced a series of Irish pictures and then was entrusted with the responsibility of filming the spectacle, "The Wrath of the Gods." This was followed by "The Typhoon," "The Bargain," "On the Night Stage," and "The Sign of the Rose," with George Beban. Among his notable Triangle productions were, "The Bugle Call," "Shell 43," "Sweetheart of the Doomed," and "Happiness."

Mr. Barker has been very much in his element in the production of "Madam Who." He has often been characterized as "the war director," because of his great success in handling intense military situations.

Fall Art Dramas

Art Dramas offers exhibitors a fall program of exceptional strength with a wide range of stars and subjects.

Crane Wilbur, Jean Sothern, Catherine Calvert and Marian Swayne, Art Dramas stars of proven ability and certain drawing power, are represented in a list of features, whose stories are original and technically perfect.

Crane Wilbur will be seen in a Horsley feature, "Blood of His Fathers"; Jean Sothern in a Van Dyke production, "Peg o' the Sea"; Catherine Calvert in "Behind the Mask," produced by the U. S. Amusement Corporation, and Marian Swayne in "The Little Samaritan," an Erbograph picture.

"Blood of His Fathers" tells an unusual story, treating of the subject of heredity. In construction, too, it is out of the beaten track of motion pictures, necessitating the portrayal of three distinct characters by Mr. Wilbur. In the prologue, laid in Civil War days, the Horsley star portrays the role of a questionable captain of predatory guerillas. In its later development, the story is entirely modern and of compelling interest.

"The Little Samaritan" is an elaborate production, in which Marian Swayne is fitted with a role similar to that which she so successfully interpreted in her former Art Dramas vehicles, "Little Miss Fortune" and "The Road Between."

"Behind the Mask," starring Catherine Calvert, is said to be the best production yet made by the U. S. Amusement Corporation. This picture, written by Charles T. Dazey, author of many film classics, is, like most of Mr. Dazey's screen stories, a marvel of workmanship.

Next in order is "Peg o' the Sea," by Winifred Dunn. Jean Sothern, star of this picture, is seen as the daughter of an old fisherman, living in a New England fishing village. In her slickers and rain hat she makes an appealing picture. Comedy is mingled with pathos and the splendid coast scenes give the picture a background of rare beauty.

Lou Marks in "Three C Comedies"

Lou Marks, a former Keystone comedian, has been placed under contract by a recently organized company and begins releases of weekly one-reel eccentric comedy subjects September 28 through General Film Company. The brand will be known as "Three C Comedies" from the name of the producing organization, the Commonwealth Comedy Co., Inc., of 1545 Broadway, New York City.

Production of "Three C Comedies" has begun at the Thanhouser studio in New Rochelle where accommodations have been secured under a long lease. Frank P. Donovan is directing Lou Marks, Pearl Shepard, Oom Paul and a large stock company in a series of one-reel pictures which will feature the laugh-inspiring personality of Marks, the piquant beauty of Miss Shepard and the exclusive facial contortions of Paul.

Julia Sanderson in "The Runaway"

Miss Julia Sanderson, one of the best known stars of the American stage, who was a big hit in "The Siren" as Lolette at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, and as Dora Dale in "The Sunshine Girl" at the same theater, makes her screen bow as Alice Avery in "The Runaway," Empire All Star productions, scheduled for release September 24 by the Mutual Film Corporation.

"The Runaway" is a comedy adapted for the American stage by Michael Morton. It had a successful run at the Lyceum Theater, New York, and is considered one of the best of the Charles Frohman offerings under a Mutual-Frohman contract, which provides for the presentation of Charles Frohman plays in photodrama with a majority of the original casts.

Miss Sanderson is the daughter of Albert Sackett, a well known American actor. She made her debut on the Philadelphia stage and later scored successes as Mrs. Pineapple in "A Chinese Honeymoon" and as Matay with DeWolf Hopper in "Wang." Her most recent speaking stage successes were as Kitty Grey in "The Arcadians" and the siren in "The Sunshine Girl."

Miss Sanderson as Alice is given a part that suits her admirably and one that permits her to display her widely recognized versatility.

There is a splendid cast, including performers as well known as Ada St. Claire, Dore Plowden, Jennie Ellison, Norman Trevor, Re McDougall and Edward Fielding.

It is a pretty story, well told and wonderfully well staged. The director is Dell Henderson, one of the foremost of motion picture wizards. The photography is in every respect excellent.

New Mutual-Chaplin Ready

Charlie Chaplin's new picture, "The Adventurer," soon to be released by Mutual, is, according to the comedian himself, the picture he has long been trying to achieve. It is an indoor and outdoor story, displaying Mr. Chaplin in the role of a mountain climber, as well as in numerous other novel activities.

The motif of "The Adventurer" has to do with the efforts of an unfortunate youth with a sense of humor to escape a horde of pursuers who seem to think it is part of their business to chase a funny man off the earth.

Edna Purviance, who supports Mr. Chaplin in most of his comedies, has plenty to do in luring the inimitable Charles into tight places, and in rescuing him after he has become so involved that escape seems impossible.

Talk about fun! Chaplin and his tender feet perambulating the sands of the seashore, with innumerable police and coast guard men on the trail, furnish all the fun that can be fixed on a film. The inimitable Charles escapes capture by the narrowest margin dozens of times and eventually emerges from his difficulties, as he always succeeds in doing, right side up with care. "The Adventurer" is now practically complete.

F. E. Garner, General Film Company, of Dallas, has returned from a trip to New Orleans, where he had conference with General Sales Manager S. R. Kent.

Meeting Emergencies

By Carl Laemmle,
President Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

We now are engaged in developing young men under the draft age to take the places of our young leading men who have been called to the colors.

For a time there was every indication that the necessity of filling Uncle Sam's wants would cripple us as far as the young leading men were concerned, but we hit upon the idea of replacing them with still younger men and we are meeting with gratifying success.

We have in our organization excellent material among the ambitious nineteen and twenty-year-old actors, quite a number of whom have been with us for several years and are familiar with the exacting requirements of cinema production. Consequently they are fitting into the leading roles in a most satisfactory manner.

Youth is a wonderful thing and we all admire it both in real life and when it is presented to our view on the screen. Young men and women blessed with good looks certainly add to the attractiveness of the picture and that is why in all of the Universal productions we make every effort to obtain a cast containing young people who we believe form the most alluring combination for our patrons—youth, naturalness and acting ability.

We are going full tilt, day and night, at Universal City now, and one of the objects of my visit to the coast at this time is to arrange for doubling the capacity of the laboratories at Universal City so that we will have no difficulty in filling the contracts that are coming in. We are doing an unusually large business with China, Japan, India and Australia just now and Universal films are being transported to twenty-one different foreign lands, our agents having met with wonderful success in the countries across the seas where American films have become so popular. It is our intention to send several companies to the Orient in the near future to film on an elaborate scale a number of pictures in the atmosphere of the Far East.

Comedy will prevail to a large extent in our forthcoming photoplays. These are serious times, and in their diversion the people must find much of the lighter side of life. That's the reason we are going to inject all the comedy we can into our future productions.

Fox Sues Mayor of Chicago

William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago, and M. L. C. Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent of police, who has charge of film censorship in the city, are virtually charged with treason in a bill of complaint just filed by the Fox Film Corporation in the United States District Court for Northern Illinois.

The bill asks the court for an injunction to restrain Mayor Thompson, Mr. Funkhouser and Herman J. Schuettler, general superintendent of police, from preventing the production in Chicago of William Fox's film drama, "The Spy."

Funkhouser, having viewed the picture, refused to give it a permit.

It has been planned to present this photoplay at the Studebaker Theater, but Major Funkhouser, whose scissors have been unusually active of late, has declined to issue a permit unless certain scenes are deleted.

Mr. Fox, however, would not consent to the elimination of the scenes desired because they were vitally necessary to the patriotic mission of the piece.

The bill for the injunction establishes the point that since the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Germany, President Wilson has specifically requested that film producers and distributors organize and mobilize to co-operate with the government in waging war and in bringing it to a successful conclusion.

In producing "The Spy," Mr. Fox has taken definite steps in this direction. He is warning America to the perils within her own gates. He is trying to assist the Government by having people ferret out the thousands of spies in this country who are obtaining information about the movements and plans in the army and navy, for use by the Imperial German Government.

Film "First Aid" Squad

No army unit for service "somewhere in France" is equipped better against danger than the big William Fox Company which is making "Queen of the Sea," Annette Kellermann's new sub-sea spectacle, at Bar Harbor, Me.

Two pulmotors are kept within reach, two local physicians are constantly within call, and there is always a diminutive Red Cross organization on the "location." Miss Eleanor Shields, a trained nurse, is in charge and has a complete supply of requisites for minor injuries and a late model stretcher for use in emergencies.

Rita Jolivet in "Lest We Forget"

"Lest We Forget!" is the title which has been selected for the great screen drama of international events in which Rita Jolivet is starred.

This picture deals with occurrences involving the beginning of the war and especially the early German invasion of Belgium and northern France and the sinking of the Lusitania.

The smile, curls and pigeon toes all belong to Mary Pickford, as she appears in her newest Artcraft picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Beauties Box-Office Asset

That Keystone beauties have taken a place in filmdom relative to that of the Ziegfeld "Follies" beauties on the stage is indicated by the demand for pictures in which they appear. Their fame has penetrated to the fastnesses of the smallest of small towns and even to places abroad.

C. A. Lick of the New Theater, Fort Smith, Arkansas, recently secured one hundred photographs of the Keystone bathing girls for lobby display and for distribution as prizes. He states his intention in a letter to the New York office of the Triangle Distributing Corporation:

"We want to make a big flash with these photographs, but do not want to advertise the bathing girls for some Keystone comedy that does not include them. If you can give us this information, we believe it will help us to get some real money."

For the information of Mr. Lick and other exhibitors who wish to feature the girls, the following list of recent Keystone and Triangle comedies in which they appear has been prepared:

"His Precious Life," a Keystone comedy released September 9.

"His Baby Doll," a Triangle comedy released September 16.

"Dark Room Secret," a Triangle comedy released September 9.

"His Widow's Might," a Triangle comedy released July 29.

"His Bitter Fate," a Triangle comedy released June 24.

Gets Color Pictures of Orient

Edward A. Salisbury, according to advices just received by MOTOGRAPHY, is returning to America on the steamer Siberia Marue after his extended trip through Japan and China for Prizma. From present indications, Dr. Salisbury has obtained valuable records in these countries, and has preserved for the first time in color the customs, habits and costumes of these interesting peoples of the Orient.

Dr. Salisbury had the good fortune to be in Pekin at the time of the recent uprising. Concerning this, he cabled Carl H. Pierce recently: "I have the only camera here. Have fine close-ups of the fighting, bursting shells, etc. Large footage," following this up with another message: "My camera is the only one in Pekin during all the trouble and I have taken several thousand feet and am still taking. It is all in color. Taken for The Prizma, Inc."

Doubtless this is the first time in the history of the world that a revolution in China or in any other country on the globe has been taken in color, and the Prizma people are enthusiastically awaiting Dr. Salisbury's arrival, because it is expected that these views of bursting shells and other battle scenes will give Americans and the public at large a better idea of actual fighting conditions as they exist than anything yet offered for the screen.

Capellani Directing Edna Goodrich

With the completion of "Reputation," "Queen X" and "A Daughter of Maryland," her first releases of the series of star productions which she is to make for the Mutual Film Corporation, Edna Goodrich is at work at her studio on Long Island under Albert Capellani's direction in "American Maid," a five reel patriotic picture.

"Reputation" was released on September 3 and met with an enthusiastic reception from exhibitors and their patrons.

"Reputation," "Queen X" and "A Daughter of Maryland" were directed by John B. O'Brien, former stage manager for Augustus Thomas, and "American Maid" by Albert Capellani, the famous Parisian director who staged "The Flash of the Emerald," "Camille," "The Imposter" and other famous productions, including Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law."

The new Goodrich plays are certain of popular success, being the last word in artistry, stage setting and direction.

"When a Man Sees Red"

Here are the opinions on the title of William Farnum's big production, "When a Man Sees Red," which William Fox will show soon:

"When a man sees red," says William Farnum himself, "he usually gets pretty hot under the collar and wants to fight."

"When a man sees red," Jewel Carmen asserts, "he usually follows it. Red's an attractive color, especially when worn by a pretty woman."

"When a man sees red," declared Lulu Mae Bower, of the company, "he knows that there's danger, and he generally walks right into it."

"When a man see red," avows Marc Robbins, bachelor, also in the cast, "there's an end to it. When a woman sees red, she says it's green."

G. F. Moves Cleveland Office

A change in location that will be beneficial has been made by the Cleveland branch of General Film. This office, formerly located at 1022 Superior avenue, has removed to 809-811 Prospect avenue, in the Standard Theater building, where Branch Manager J. E. Flynn will be in closer touch with his trade.

Easy Parts for Geraldine? Oh, No!

Expressing her delight that "The Woman God Forgot," the Artcraft superphotoplay, should have been written especially for her by Jeanie Macpherson and produced by Cecil B. DeMille, Geraldine Farrar, prima donna and Metropolitan star, added ruefully that "she didn't understand why she was not privileged to play easy parts for cinema productions."

"I always seem to get things like this," said the diva to a press representative. She pointed ruefully to a pair of nearly nude warriors, who, with arrows and spears were attacking a mob of fiery looking Spaniards on the lot nearby. Just five minutes previously Miss Farrar herself was in the melee, leading the attacking Aztecs, the air filled with flying arrows and death dealing missiles.

"You know," resumed Miss Farrar cheerfully, "that we had many strenuous scenes in 'Joan the Woman,' and that I took part in most of them. Really, I think Mr. DeMille lies awake at night scheming out blood-curdling combats for me. He has burned me at the stake, and nearly killed me in several different ways. Heaven alone knows what he has in store for me, but whatever it may be I am determined to face the music unflinchingly."

Miss Farrar added that she really enjoyed doing her bit to make "The Woman God Forgot" one of the most notable productions of the season. She said the work absolutely fascinated her. She always had had an idea that Indians lived in caves like the lower order of animals, but in this great picture of Aztec life in the days of Montezuma her conception of the Mexican Indians of that period had undergone a radical change.

"The Aztecs were in reality highly civilized," she went on with enthusiasm. "They had schools for children, seminaries for young women, public markets managed by public officials, policemen to maintain the peace, and books, not rolls of manuscripts, but real books made of bark and bound with heavy covers. Of course, they had no alphabet, but employed certain symbolic marks which were explained to the youth of each successive generation.

"The Aztecs had their own courts of law; and when I began to study their period, I was amazed to discover how far they had advanced along the road to civilization. They were pagans, of course, and worshipped idols, and they offered human sacrifices. Life was cheap in those days, but it was a public custom handed down through the ages, so that one can scarcely find fault with them. The Aztecs paid the penalty of their ignorance in blood and suffering, and God alone is privileged to judge them."

Learning to Fly

Since Congress has voted nearly a billion dollars for the establishment of our aviation service, the building of flying machines and the instruction of men to run them has progressed rapidly. The problem of teaching aviators how to fly without danger to themselves, or injury to the costly craft, has probably been solved by the ingenuity of Aviator A. C. Beech. His many years of exhibition flying and aviation instruction has enabled him to invent a stationary "airplane" which is operated by the same levers and controls as a regular flying machine. Air is forced through the wings of this machine-tutor, and when he has learned to control its wobbles, the student aviator has acquired an instinctive familiarity with the actual working of a real flier. Ever keeping in touch with the most important inventions, the Gaumont Company is featuring descriptive pictures of this machine in "Reel Life" No. 73.

Many Exhibitors Join A. E. A.

More than one hundred exhibitors who attended the state convention at Detroit took membership in the American Exhibitors' Association. Many of the men had never attended an exhibitors' convention before, but when the principles of the A. E. A. were explained to them joined at once. The platform of the new exhibitors' association was unanimously approved by the convention.

Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Indiana local of the A. E. A., addressed the convention. His remarks were well received and he was accorded an ovation at the conclusion of his speech.

Seeking Stories for Lillian Walker

The Ogden Pictures Corporation have circulated throughout the motion picture industry a request for the submission of manuscripts in synopsis form of comedy dramas that may be suitable vehicles for Miss Lillian Walker.

What is particularly desired are stories dealing with a redblooded, true American girl, but nevertheless possessing the spirit of frolicsomeness and a deep sense of humor. In short, it is stated, Miss Walker's work on the screen must contain a dramatic element, with a strong vein of refined comedy proper for a six or seven reel production that might be classed as a special. Up to this point it has been the company's greatest difficulty to secure just such a vehicle.

The Ogden Pictures Corporation control the rights of three novels, but require twelve more to cover the entire series of eight a year for the next two years.

Edward Alexander is playing "Langdon," juvenile lead, opposite Mary MacLaren in "Forbidden," a seven-reel dramatic feature.

NEWS OF THE HANDLING OF SPECIAL PRODUCTIONS

"Fall of the Romanoffs"

FOLLOWING close on the heels of its initial presentation to a big invitation audience at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, Herbert Brenon's gigantic historical panorama, depicting the collapse of the Russian autocracy and all of the developments since the abdication of the Czar, is now offered for sale on a territorial rights basis.

The trade press reviews of the production, as well as the reviews of the New York daily newspapers, are unanimous in their approval of the picture which deals with a vaster and more dramatic historical perspective than has ever been dealt with before in motion pictures.

Realizing that the new counter revolution in Russia and the likelihood of still further dramatic changes in the stage setting of a nation's governing forces would make "The Fall of the Romanoffs" of even greater value to territorial rights purchasers, Herbert Brenon on the day following his first public presentation of the picture rushed the negative to the laboratories with a heavy order for prints.

In building this great picture around the figure of Iliodor, the former spiritual adviser of the Czar, and having Iliodor in the flesh before his camera, Herbert Brenon exercised uncanny judgment in the selection of his splendid cast, utilizing such popular stars as Nance O'Neil, Alfred Hickman, Ekaterina Galanta, William E. Shay, Mlle. Marcelle and a dozen others of almost as great popularity on the screens of the world. The address of the Iliodor Picture Corporation is now 16 East Forty-second street, New York City.

U. S. Rights to Wharton Film

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., now becomes the owner of the United States rights of another Super-feature. This time it is "The Great White Trail," the Wharton picture of the North, which was purchased by Mr. Hoffman following several conferences with Theodore Wharton.

Mr. Wharton stated that he felt after a careful survey of the field that Mr. Hoffman was best qualified to handle the picture. "After our trade showing in June," said Mr. Wharton, "I found that the state right market was a very uncertain quantity, more agents than buyers. I determined then and there to investigate the field carefully before attempting anything that I might afterward regret. The result of my investigations has convinced me that in placing the picture in Mr. Hoffman's hands it has been placed to a far greater advantage than in the hands of individual operators."

The story of "The Great White Trail" is one of Alaska in the gold rush days. The direction and the picturization were both made by Leopold D. Wharton. Doris Kenyon, Paul Gordon, Hans Roberts, Thomas Holding and many other well known artists appear in the picture.

Canadian Executive Moves Over

Prominent in picture and theatrical circles for several years in Canada, Herbert Lubin, of General Enterprises, Inc., has decided to make New York his headquarters. With his partner, Arthur H. Sawyer, the original "Zone" man of the film business, he has established offices at 1600 Broadway, New York City. Prior to coming to New York, Mr. Lubin was the holder of the Metro franchise for Canada.

With Mr. Sawyer, the young Canadian film executive and promoter recently purchased the rights to "The Warrior," starring Maciste, the foreign rights to the famous "Seven Deadly Sins," made by McClure, and other big productions the names of which will be made public in the near future.

Mr. Lubin is an excellent type of the present day picture executive, well versed in every branch of the business and a firm believer in the state right plan of distribution. It was rumored this week that he was concerned with the formation of the Exhibitors' Co-operative Circuit, now in the process of organization.

Strand Books Walt Mason Story

The Short Features Exchange of New York announces that it has arranged with Manager Harold Edel of the Strand Theater whereby "Bunked and Paid For," the first of the series of Walt Mason stories which are now being made by the Filmcraft Corporation, is to be shown at that theater during the week commencing September 9th. Mr. Edel who witnessed a private showing of "Bunked and Paid For" before he booked it for the Strand Theater, expressed himself as highly delighted with the picture, and his placing it on the Strand program for the week of September 9th confirms the fact that he was well pleased with it.

The A. Kay Company, who are the universal distributors of the Walt Mason stories, recently closed a deal with the Short Features Exchange which gave the latter the exclusive rights to the Walt Mason stories in New York state.

Brings Suffrage Play

Willis Robards, actor-director and manager of the Robards Players, has recently come East with one of the most remarkable pictures yet produced. The story and scenario, which is entitled "Mothers of Men," has been written by Hal Reid, one of the ablest of the present day photoplay writers. It is on the order of a suffrage propaganda, based on the election of a woman to the governorship of a western state, and the finding herself in the position of having to pass judgment upon her husband, accused of murder.

Mr. Robards has come East with this new picture with the idea of selling it outright, as he has several large propositions on his hands, and feels that he would prefer to dispose of it entirely rather than to state-right it himself. Shepard and Van Loan of 729 Seventh avenue, are acting as his agents.

Turner & Dahnken Buy Feature

Turner & Dahnken of San Francisco, through Bruce Johnson, secretary and general manager of that firm, has purchased the rights for the territory of California, Arizona and Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands to the Ogden Film Company's release, "The Lust of the Ages."

The deal was consummated immediately after the screening of the production. Mr. Johnson is one of the originators of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and his firm is shortly to branch out in eastern territory with an exchange located at New York.

Warren Production Sold

Edward Warren reports the sale of the following territories for "Souls Redeemed" ("The Warfare of the Flesh"): Lousiana to Pearce and Son of New Orleans; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to the Ideal Film Exchange of Philadelphia; Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas to Southwestern Art Dramas, Inc., of Dallas; Michigan and Ohio to Tri-State Film Exchange of Detroit; Greater New York to Elk Photoplays; New York, and Up-State New York to Veribest Pictures, Inc., of 47 West Swan street, Buffalo.

The foreign rights have been taken over by the Piedmont Pictures Corporation so that practically the entire world rights have been disposed of.

Powerful State Rights Feature

That portion of the film-fan world who constantly decry the lack of originality on the part of their favorite screen producers is due for a pleasant shock when they view the seven-part version of "The Warrior," with Maciste, the gigantic star, in the leading role. Throughout the entire length of the great film spectacle, the United States rights of which are controlled by General Enterprises, Inc., the usual standard of picture conventionalities are set at naught by the extraordinary action of the story and the unique physical capabilities of the star, Maciste. He is not the drawing room type of film hero usually looked for and found by American screen patrons, and the felling of a horse single-handed or the uprooting of a huge tree with one pull are matters of little moment to this giant of superhuman strength. Surprise follows wonderment, only to be replaced by awe in watching the virile movements of Maciste in "The Warrior," and all traditions of the proper conduct on the part of screen actors is upset by the always interesting and many times humorous antics of the Italian matinee idol.

But it is the closing scene of the play itself which will recommend "The Warrior" to all as an unusual offering. Maciste carries the wounded Italian officer to the room where his sweetheart mourns him as lost. Seizing the girl with his free hand, Maciste places her lightly upon his right shoulder and as he stands—a heroic stature of graceful strength—the two lovers embrace across the expanse of his mighty chest.

Co-operative Advertising Plan

In the exploitation of the Aubrey series of two-reel Super-Comedies, Arthur N. Smallwood announces that his company will inaugurate a new plan of merchandising and advertising for the purpose of assisting the state rights exchanges in securing bookings. An extensive advertising campaign will be run in a large list of newspapers on each individual two-reel production, and the publishers of the newspapers will co-operate with the exchanges and the exhibitors in exploiting the product.

Trade Showings Soon

Trade showings are to be held soon, in the large cities of the country, of the single-reel subjects to be released on the state rights basis by James R. Quirk of Photoplay Magazine. The pictures are a departure as they deal with the personal side of the prominent personages of the screen, the same sort of material as is published in Photoplay Magazine itself. The pictures will appear under the title of "Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement."

Pathe Features Sold

The Civilization-Pioneer Film Corporation has bought the New York state rights on Pathe's "Today" with Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," with Robert Warwick, and All Star Features Distributors, Inc., of which Sol. Lesser is the head, has obtained the rights to these pictures in the states of California, Nevada and Arizona.

Deals Pending on Bernstein Films

Isadore Bernstein of the Bernstein Film Productions has arrived in New York for the purpose of disposing of the two big features, "Humility" and "Loyalty," which he has but recently completed.

His agents, Shepard and Van Loan, are now negotiating with several people for the sale of these features.

Harry Berg, the sales manager for the Overland Pictures Company of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, has started on a trip across the continent, covering the various film centers, in the interest of the new pictures of the Russian revolution and war. The Overland Organization is distributing these pictures for the New Russian Pictures Corporation. Mr. Berg's idea is to visit all the important film markets and screen the pictures for the various state rights buyers.

The New Russian Pictures Corporation have bought the films of the Great Russian Revolution and war pictures, imported last month by the Skobeloff committee, and the sale of which has been for the relief of the Russian soldiers and prisoners of war.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin of General Enterprises, Inc., announced this week the sale of the Canadian rights to their film spectacle, "The Warrior." The purchaser is the Globe Films, Ltd., with headquarters in Toronto and branch offices in all the important Canadian cities.

Starts Work on "Shirley Kaye"

Clara Kimball Young, who has just completed her production of "Magda," the first release by her own organization under the management of Harry I. Garson, has started filming "Shirley Kaye" at the Thanhouser studio in New Rochelle.

Joseph Kaufman, who directed "Broadway Jones," "The Traveling Salesman," and many other notable successes, will direct Miss Young in this, her second production, which will be released some time in October.

"Shirley Kaye" will be followed by "The Marionettes."

"Magda," "Shirley Kaye," and "The Marionettes" will be the only pictures Miss Young will do in the East. She contemplates a de luxe production of "The Savage Woman" as her fourth release, which she will make in the West Indies.

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM LIVE EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Exhibitor's Formula for Success

DURING the eight years Charles H. Ryan has been forging to the front as a leading picture theater manager his name has been repeatedly associated with success.

Gaining his initial experience from the bottom, he has, by his wide-awake ideas, by the character of his house, and by the ever-widening circle of his patrons, consistently maintained a steady patronage at the Garfield Theater, 2844 Madison street, Chicago.

He has adopted certain rules of his own making for the operation of his theater. First of all, he is particularly insistent upon scrupulous cleanliness in every nook and corner of the house. The first object of every manager should be to keep his house as attractive as possible physically to his patrons.

He always learns considerable about a picture before he runs it. Another point Mr. Ryan stresses in particular is that films should not be raced. Attempting to run off a picture because there is a crowd waiting at the door is a great mistake, he says.

Here are some more of his sound tips:

"Have your doorman greet your patrons with a smiling 'Good evening,' and check their packages till after the show.

"Drill your ushers to be courteous and use the word 'Please' in all addresses to the patrons.

"Don't use bunk in your advertising, because it acts like a boomerang and you suffer in the end."

Mr. Ryan is 24 years old, born in Chicago and a technical high school graduate. He has managed the Garfield Theater for Charles J. Schaefer for the past five years, succeeding Sidney Smith when the latter resigned to manage the Kedzie Annex.

Changes in Washington Houses

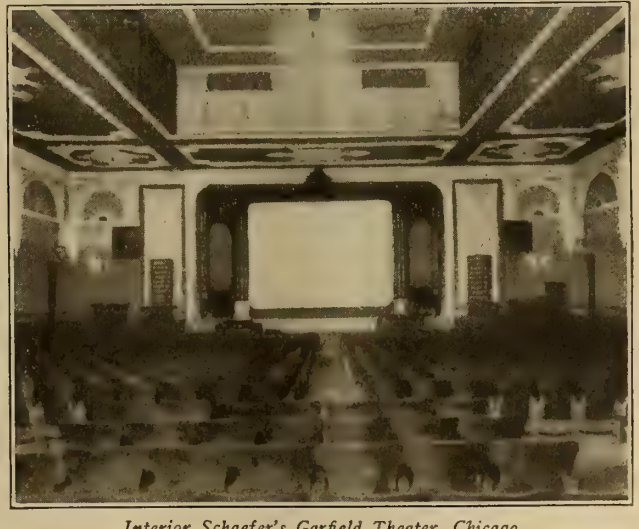
Important changes in Washington (D. C.) picture theater circles have gone into effect. They affect two of the biggest picture enterprises of the city—Tom Moore's and Harry Crandall's.

Arthur Robb, for the last five years identified with Tom Moore's amusement enterprises, has severed his relations with that organization and is connected in an official capacity with the Crandall circuit of theaters in Washington. Robb will be succeeded by George Schneider, who becomes manager of Moore's Garden and Strand Theaters.



Schneider comes to Washington from Baltimore, where he has been identified with the theatrical profession for a number of years. For the last three years he has been manager of the Garden Theater there. Prior to that he was manager of the New Theater. Both are vaudeville houses.

To Robb belongs the credit of being the pioneer publicity agent in this territory for photoplays. He instituted a regular press department in connection with the Garden and Strand Theaters. Before coming to Washington, Robb had been connected with various theatrical enterprises. Prior to that he was in the newspaper business.

Robb will become manager of the newest Crandall theater, the Knickerbocker, in the fashionable Northwest section, which will be opened the last week in September. When Crandall's new F street theater, the Metropolitan, is completed, he will manage it.

New Ohio Amusement Company

Through the efforts of Charles R. Chisholm, another theatrical deal was pulled off in Elyria, Ohio, recently. Mr. Chisholm has been working on the new proposition for some time, with the result that the Broadway Amuse-

"Hot from the Firing Line"

MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago:

I am writing to felicitate you upon the interesting department, "What the Picture Did for Me," that you have instituted in MOTOGRAPHY. This is extremely interesting to every man who desires to get the stuff hot from the firing line, and certainly it must be that your readers appreciate it.—S. E. Snyder, Director of Publicity, Balboa Amusement Producing Company, Long Beach, California.

ment Company has been formed. It has taken over the American Theater, Dreamland Theater and Bannon's Theater.

They will remain under their present managers, with John Pekros of the American as general manager of the new concern. Mr. Georpogle retains the management of Dreamland, Owen Bannon will still manage Bannon's Theater, and the statement is made that every stockholder who invested in the Bannon Theater will be taken care of financially. Bannon's Theater will hereafter be called the Broadway.

The promoters of the new deal have taken this action on the ground of economy. They expect to furnish better films, and also be able to cut down much overhead expense, thereby realizing greater profits for their stockholders. Among the stockholders of the new organization is Henry Wurst, who has been more or less identified with the moving picture business for some time, and Charles R. Chisholm, who promoted the enterprise. With the present deal, Elyrians are assured of first-class pictures, as every man interested is experienced in the business and will try their best to please the public. All of these playhouses are to be improved and the Broadway will have a new balcony so that the capacity of the house will be greatly increased.

House of Splendid Design

There is scarcely a theater man in the United States who can not learn something from the Best Theater of Parsons, Kansas. This house is extremely remarkable for its unique and handsome design. The accompanying illustration gives a suggestion of the arrangement of the front. Note particularly the beauty of the arched windows about the entrance.

The splendidly designed Best Theater of Parsons, Kansas.

The main front wall of the building is of gray pressed brick in white mortar. The arch above the windows, just mentioned, is of light green terra cotta, trimmed with dark green enameled brick. The latter material is also used as the trimming at the side of the structure and about the second story windows. The arches surrounding the third story windows are of terra cotta in the same shade of green as the other trimmings. Carthage marble lends an unusual beauty to the lobby. The roofing is of green tile and the cornices are of metal, painted green to correspond with the tile.

The lobby, while beautiful, is conveniently arranged. There are four double doors, affording easy and quick progress for patrons in and out of the house. Four mirrors are set in the lobby walls where they form unobtrusive but effective decorations. All of the glass in the windows and canopy is opal, set in lead. This also is responsible for the interesting effect in the big arch window.

It is both pleasant and encouraging to see a picture house such as the Best. Such theaters contribute decisively to the progress of the screen.

Successful Woman Exhibitor

While women exhibitors are very much the exception to showmanship rule there are few better known exhibitors in American than Mrs. L. H. Webb, owner of the Goodwin Theater, Newark, N. J. Four years ago she built a picture theater on Broad street, Newark, and named it after the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin of Newark, who is given credit for the invention of the film that is used in modern day picture taking. Rev. Goodwin is at present rector of the House of Prayer in Newark.

Mrs. Webb began her motion picture exhibitions with the desire to feature the educational side of film progress supplemented by pictures of the cleaner and more inspiring type. She was the first exhibitor in Newark to stress the musical program as a means of conveying the mood of the pictures shown in her house. Her son, William Webb, organist, has gained more than a local reputation by his interpretive scores.

Mrs. Webb has signed contracts for the entire first year's output of Goldwyn Pictures. Beginning with "Polly of the Circus," starring Mae Marsh, during the week of September 9, Mrs. Webb will exhibit twenty-six Goldwyn productions.

Resort Pictures a Success

By J. L. Ray.

The success attained through the exhibition of pictures for the season at Monteagle, Tennessee, a summer resort, has surpassed that of any former season since the custom has been established. A feature of this year's exhibition has been the presentation of high class subjects, in keeping with the highly educational atmosphere surrounding the Chatauqua, which includes such pictures as Dickens' "Great Expectations" and other famous works. The pictures have been furnished for several years by a Nashville amusement company, and have always been one of the most pleasant and popular attractions at Monteagle.

Baby Marie Osborne, winsome little Pathe star, is hard at work at the David Horsley Studios, where Harrish Ingraham is directing "The Child of M'Sieu" for the Lasalida Film Company.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THE Brooklyn exhibitors have decided upon a fight against the tax imposed by the music publishers' society, especial wrath being invoked by the news that the publishers have already taken action against twenty Brooklyn theater men. The National Committee of the Exhibitors' League was present at the meeting, at which time they were thanked for their offer of conducting the defense of the members prosecuted by the music dealers.

* * *

Picture theaters in St. Paul, Duluth and Minneapolis all have complied with the Minnesota law which requires the possession of a state license. Many of the showhouses in the smaller towns, however, have failed to make application and according to the state fire marshal are facing closing orders.

* * *

M. M. Marcus, manager of the Colonial Theater, at Cleveland, Ohio, was fined $25 and costs in municipal court for violating the state motion picture censorship law. In a recent picture, girls were pictured smoking cigarettes. Marcus was ordered to eliminate the scene, but failed to do so.

* * *

One of the classiest booklets seen in a long time as far as all 'round artistic excellence is concerned has been put out by the Circle Theater, Indianapolis. This twenty-page souvenir book published for the anniversary week of "The Shrine of the Silent Art" is to be distributed free to all patrons of the Circle during the celebration period. It is the very acme of taste and beauty.

* * *

By a vote of 6 to 2 the Hastings, Nebraska, city council denied a petition signed by ninety business men to amend the ordinance so that picture theaters might run on Sunday. The ministerial association opposed and presented a counter petition signed by 700 residents. Friends of the Sunday theater now say that they will ask the council to order a referendum vote at a special election.

* * *

The second week of the Afternoon Symphony Concerts at the Strand Theater, New York, is now under way. These musical feasts are proving again the ability of the heads of this theater to gauge the public taste and appeal to it. Capacity audiences have so far enjoyed the tasteful program, prepared by Adriano Ariani, who ably leads the large orchestra through the best works of the old masters.

The premiere of the Thanhouser version of Edward Everett Hale's patriotic masterpiece, "The Man Without a Country," was made the occasion of a gala evening at the Broadway Theater, New York, September 9.

The flag-draped boxes were filled with government and city officials, together with men of the army and navy, including Brigadier-General Eli D. Hoyle and his staff, Captain Charles A. Adams, U. S. N., and men of the U. S. S. Recruit and a large detachment of boy scouts. The patriotic fervor of the occasion was heightened by the patriotic verse of James L. Heron, secretary of the Canadian Club, one of a series of the chairs around the feasting board, which on this two weeks New York run of the timely feature.

The theatrical strike, in effect for the last fifteen months in Oklahoma City, has been settled and the stage hands, operators and musicians have returned to work. A "Klu-Klux-Klan" agreement between the theater owners and the strikers has been made to hold the terms of settlement secret. The theaters will hire both union and non-union men at will, and the union men who struck will return to work.

John R. Rippey, who has charge of the Y. M. C. A. work at Fort Riley, Kansas, sends in a letter to MOTOGRAPHY which is illustrative of the gigantic work being done by that institution in camp and cantonment throughout the country: "Work," he says, "is now going on at a great pace. I have twelve picture shows going every week and by October 15 expect to have thirty. This service is furnished through the Community Motion Picture Bureau of Boston. Our average attendance is about 2,500."

Chicago police were ordered by City Collector Forsberg to close twenty-four theaters for failure to take out licenses, September 5. The houses affected by this sweeping order, which at the last moment was deferred by Chief of Police Schuettler, for further investigation, follow:

Advance, 3948 North Robey street.
Albany, 4826 North Kedzie avenue.
Beach, 1504 Hyde Park boulevard.
Bijou, 300 South Halsted street.
Bonita, 6435 South Halsted street.
Easterly, 2766 Lincoln avenue.
Ellis, 6249 Ellis avenue.
Empress, 4109 Armitage avenue.
Ewing 10106 Ewing avenue.
Ideal, 3421 West North avenue.
Jefferson, 4768 Milwaukee avenue.
Kimball, 3318 Fullerton avenue.
Jewel, 522 West Division street.
Monroe, 1316 East Fifty-fifth street.
Montrose, 4408 Milwaukee avenue.
Palm, 4247 Irving Park boulevard.
Palmer, 3224 Armitage avenue.
Pastime, 1949 West Division street.
Pavilion, 716 West Twelfth street.
Pilsen, 3204 West Twenty-sixth street.
Ridge, 1974 West One Hundred and Eleventh street.
Royal, 1820 West Twenty-second street.
Steinley, 3010 East Seventy-ninth street.
Wentworth, 4464 Wentworth avenue.

ford.

Some of the theater men protested they had taken out licenses and said there must be some mistake.

A fight followed the efforts of the manager of the St. Denis theater to show "The Garden of Knowledge" recently in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, after being warned by a minister and deputy sheriff not to allow the picture to go on the screen. The sheriff later found the film was being run and started to tear down the lithographs that adorned the lobby. A newspaper man, employed by the owner of the theater, demanded to see the sheriff's papers giving him right to tear down the paper, and a healthy fight ensued. The officer of justice then applied for an injunction to prevent the picture from being shown and to close up the theater. Dennis Flynn, the owner, however, thought things had gone far enough and promised not to exhibit the picture in his house.

The Rialto Theater at Elyria, Ohio, was gutted September 4, by a fire that caused damage estimated at more than $25,000. Manager Phelos thinks the blaze must have been of incendiary origin as it broke out about 2 o'clock in the morning. A caretaker was the only one in the building at the time. The building will be repaired at once and extensive alterations made.

* * *

Another case where the people were left to decide the fate of the picture show in their town recently occurred in Oregon when Corvallis clamped the lid on Sunday pictures. A thousand votes were cast and the measure to close picture theaters won by the scant majority of 54. This ordinance precipitated a bitter fight between the opposing factions, the "blue" law being championed by the churches.

Patrons of the Adelphi Theater, at 89th street and Broadway, New York, were recently entertained just prior to the showing of "The Silent Witness" by a brief talk from Gertrude McCoy, star of the Hoffman-Foursquare feature. Miss McCoy will also appear at the Park Theater, 44th street and Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, on the evenings of September 23 and 24, when "The Silent Witness" is shown there.

* * *

Bingham, Crose and Cohen, managers of the Colonial Theater, Indianapolis, will present a new policy at that showhouse during the fall and winter season. In addition to the feature photoplays which they have been offering heretofore a vaudeville bill of four variety acts will be given. During the week, however, the vaudeville will be less in evidence, as the screen will be the chief source of entertainment.

* * *

Margaret Mayo, author of "Polly of the Circus," was the guest of honor at a very elaborate and sumptuous banquet given September 10 by Stanley V. Mastbaum of Philadelphia, on the occasion of the first Goldwyn picture appearing at the Stanley Theater. A host of newspaper and magazine writers filled most of the chairs around the feasting board, which on this occasion was loaded down with the gold service of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

Manager Jules H. Michael of the Academy and Regent theaters, Buffalo, is getting a good deal of publicity by co-operating with the Buffalo Evening News. Troops, stationed in the vicinity, are invited as guests of the management and the paper to attend any performance they may care to at either of the theaters, when in uniform. The advertising Manager Jules is getting in this way is invaluable. It is a scheme that has worked out in various parts of the country and succeeded well.

A tent theater, which will seat 1,000, will be erected in the vicinity of Camp Bowie, near Fort Worth, Texas, according to announcement made by army officers. The proposed show will open October 1 and the program will consist of concerts, lectures, motion pictures and first class vaudeville. Popular prices will be charged. It is understood that a theater will be erected at every place in the United States where an army cantonment is located, and that all will be conducted along practically the same lines.

The Irving Theater, a new 1800 seat house, opened at Crawford avenue and Irving Park boulevard, Chicago, September 1, is one of the largest and most modern theaters outside of the Chicago loop and one of the most completely equipped in the United States. Careful attention has been paid to every detail of construction and equipment. The decorations are dainty tints of blue and pink on a cream background. The theater cost $200,000 and will be devoted exclusively to motion pictures.

* * *

The Swan Theater, at Clarinda, Iowa, opened September 5 not only with a new name but with a new management as well. The Swan was formerly the Little Theater, but during the summer a new front and foyer were built onto it by its new owners. William Swan of Columbus, Nebraska, is the proprietor. He is assisted by J. P. Lannan. Both men are old hands at the picture business and much is to be expected from their new venture.

The following is a list of theaters and the plays they used last week in the loop district of Chicago:

Alcazar, "The Champion," with Charles Chaplin.
Bandbox, "The Fires of Conscience," with William Farnum.
Bijou Dream, "Souls Redeemed," with Sheldon Lewis.
Boston, George Ade Fable.
Casino, "The Little Pirate," with Zoe Rae.
Castle, "Exile," with Olga Petrova.
Chicago, "Open Places," with Jack Gardner.
Colonial, "The Mormon Maid," with Mae Murray.
Kozy, "The Lure of the Circus," with Eileen Sedgwick.
Lyric, "The Slave," with Valeska Suratt.
Orpheum, "Polly Ann," with Bessie Love.
Pastime, "Wild and Woolly," with Douglas Fairbanks.
Playhouse, "Sirens of the Sea," with Louise Lovely.
Rose, "The Spy," with Dustin Farnum.
Royal, "The Princess of the Dark," with Enid Bennett.
Star, "Her Double Life," with Theda Bara.
World, "Her Veiled Past," with Miriam Cooper.
Ziegfeld, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," with Mary Pickford.

Arthur Leslie, well known in the motion picture trade for his many publicity ideas, has just written and published a book, "Who's Who and Why: The One Hundred Leading Lights of the Screen," which reveals many little known facts of widespread interest in the lives of famous screen stars and raps some of them sharply over the knuckles for their screen mannerisms.

Unusual in character, it is the first biographical work dealing with film favorites, which indulges in criticism.

The management of the Garfield Theater, 2844 Madison street, Chicago, makes it a business to chat with its patrons a little on the front page of each week's program. For the week of September 10 it has the following to say:

The management of the Garfield is sparing neither time nor expense in getting attractions that will meet with the approval of the good people of this locality. We also take a great pride in keeping our house in a clean and sanitary condition. When visiting the Garfield please make yourself at home. The attendants are at your service and are instructed to see that your every want is carefully looked after. Should they not do so please notify the manager.

Patron Pulling Ad-Talk

BY THE "COUNSELLOR"

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles written by an experienced advertising man who has conducted campaigns for a circuit of picture theaters. They are facts gathered from first hand experiences. You will find something in each article that will help you to make your own advertising stronger.

ABOUT every so often the boss and I would hold a little confab on advertising. These as a usual thing brought good results. I remember one day he breezed into my office with, "Jim, I've been thinking." I knew that was the opening wedge for another bit of advertising discussion. We both enjoyed these talks. This particular chat is firmly impressed on my mind because of the important facts we brought out. He opened up with this flying argument.

Selling Advertising

"Selling amusement is selling advertising. Every time we offer a change of program we are selling an unknown quantity. Our people have absolutely no means of telling whether they are going to like our show or not until they have sat through it. They have looked to our advertising beforehand to tell in part whether our offering was going to be to their liking or not. This makes it necessary to sell them our advertising and through it our product. Advertising must at all times be made salable.

"Practically the entire picture business is a game of buying and selling of advertising. Only a few exhibitors enjoy the opportunity of seeing the pictures before they book them. They have based their judgment on the matter they have read about it in the trade journals and the advertising of the manufacturer. The public in turn is buying it through the exhibitors' advertising."

Sitting on the Safety Valve

While I had always realized this fact, it brought it home to me more forcefully, so I did a little pondering myself. My angle was advertising. I was sitting on the safety valve of the only sales medium we had. The more I thought about it the more determined I became that advertising was more important than our pictures.

A commodity without a sales force is of absolutely no value. The best picture in the world would not draw a dozen people if we didn't tell them we had it. And I realized that we would have to tell it to them in an attractive and forceful manner that it was the best. That we would have to devote as much thought and time to selling our pictures as we did to securing them, not to call each picture the best.

It was up to the booking department to eliminate the chance of a gamble on the part of our audiences as to whether they were going to see a good picture or not. While I believed that our advertising was already appealing I looked around for means of making it more so as it was a big part of what we were selling.

There was no doubt in my mind that we were selling advertising. I imagined opening our theater that night without having done any newspaper advertising, no lobby display and our electric sign not lighted. I'd venture to say our business would have dropped eighty per cent or more.

Story of a Manufacturer

This brought to my mind a story I had heard some time back which stuck in my mind. It concerned a manufacturer of one of our popular chewing gums who had made the statement that in his opinion he was selling advertising. His advertising appropriation each year ran into millions of dollars. In fact he spent much more money in advertising than he did in manufacturing his product. He was considered the most successful manufacturer of that line of goods. He was successful because he sold more than any other manufacturer. And he never claimed to have the best. He merely suggested that you buy it and told what its qualities were.

I looked around for ways of improving our ad copy, lobby display and house program. These, of course, were our standardized mediums. I was surprised at the added and appealing touches I could give them. A little more white space in my copy here and there, shorter but more pithy descriptions.

Increase as occasion demanded of newspaper space with an attractive lay-out, but at no time forgetting that white space is just as valuable as black type. We started to develop an individual line of advertising, something that was distinctive from what the other theaters were doing. Of course in a short time we were being imitated, so we made another switch.

We established ourselves as the leaders in advertising as well as in photoplay presentation. What we really did with each branch of our advertising is really a story in itself. How we developed and brought it to a certain standard. However, we sold a good deal of advertising and with it much more pictures.

Walthall Announces Initial Play

Henry B. Walthall in the future will appear at the head of his own independent producing company in screen dramas of a far greater magnitude than the program system would permit. In the future each of his productions will be of such caliber as to constitute an entire evening's entertainment and will be presented under the executive direction of Paralta Plays, Inc.

Mr. Walthall is now in Los Angeles, California, arranging for the filming of his first production under the new arrangement, which will be a visualization of E. S. and J. F. Dorrance's romantic story, "His Robe of Honor," a strong, virile portraiture of love and politics in a great city, featuring a leopard judge who changes his spots under the influence of a girl of high society.

The decision to present this story as the initial production of Mr. Walthall's new organization comes after much deliberation. "His Robe of Honor" is a bold, clever denunciation of graft-permeated, back-room politics, setting forth in telling manner the inner workings of a powerful political ring seldom exposed to the view of the average voter, which promises to give to Mr. Walthall exceptional opportunity to run the entire gamut of emotion and to present a photo-dramatic offering of exceptional appeal.

NEW MUTUAL SCHEDULE

Julia Sanderson, Sparkling Stage Star, Makes Debut in "The Runaway," September 24—William Russell in Powerful Play

Julia Sanderson, the Broadway star, makes her screen debut September 24 when Mutual releases "The Runaway," a five-reel drama produced by the Empire All Star Corporation. On the same date Mutual will release, "Sands of Sacrifice," a five real drama starring William Russell.

"The Runaway" follows from the Empire studios, "Outcast," the six-reel picturization of the stage production, and is itself based on a successful Broadway play in which Miss Sanderson appeared in the leading role.

"The Runaway" is part of the series of Charles Frohman's stage successes in motion pictures in which Miss Sanderson, Ann Murdock and Olive Tell will appear. "The Beautiful Adventure" with Miss Murdock as the lead will be the next from the Empire studios released on the Mutual schedule.

New Russell Series Opens

"Sands of Sacrifice" gives William Russell a new and interesting hero role. He has plenty of opportunities to fight and there are several fistic encounters in the course of the five reels which show the athletic picture star to the best of advantage. The scenes are laid in the mountains of the East and in the great American desert.

"Sands of Sacrifice" is the first of a new series of Russell productions under Mutual's schedule of two a week. It was directed, as were the pictures in the recent series of Russell successes, by Edward S. Sloman. Sloman and Russell have proved to be a most efficient picture producing team and the Russell productions have proved to be box office offerings of first magnitude.

Chapter 2 of "The Lost Express"

The second chapter of "The Lost Express" Mutual Signal's sensational mystery serial, will be released Monday, September 24. The second chapter bears the title, "The Destroyed Documents." It takes the story into new mysteries following the disappearance of the express train in Chapter I.

Comedy and Two Topicals

The Cub comedy released September 27 is "Jerry's Big Deal," one reel in which George Ovey impersonates the new minister in a small village. Jerry makes love to the spinster sisters of the congregation and plays poker with the deacons, much to their financial and moral embarassment. He is finally routed by the real parson, whose outfit Jerry has had thrust upon him.

Mutual Weekly No. 143, released September 26, will carry scenes from the Camp of the American expeditionary force in France, together with new pictures of the preparations for war in this country. "Reel Life" No. 74, the one-reel weekly magazine, shows the interesting method by which clocks are corrected in all parts of the country from the naval observatory. It pictures the portable bakeries which have been designed for the American army, shows the progress which has been made in the processes for manufacturing eye glasses and contains an animated drawing from "Life."

"Sands of sacrifice," the newest William Russell play. The sacrifice seems to be mostly in the upper view.

"The Warrior" Aids Red Cross

Though the courtesy of A. H. Sawyer and Herbert Lubin, of General Enterprises, Inc., the worthy cause of the Red Cross was materially aided on Wednesday, September 4, by a showing of "The Warrior," the wonderful film spectacle starring Maciste, giant hero of Gabriele D'Annucio's "Cabiria." The occasion was a special entertainment of The Nassau County Red Cross Society, an important branch of the official parent body, held at Oyster Bay Reform Church, Oyster Bay, Long Island.

The Reverend William H. Jackson, a prominent clergyman of the city, was in charge of the affair and selected "The Warrior" as a particularly fitting film for exhibition at the Red Cross gathering.

"The Man Without a Country"

Two thousand soldiers who were being transferred from Fort Slocum to Fort Hamilton took part in "The Man Without a Country," the Thanhouser film which Jewel Productions, Inc., brought into the Broadway Theater, September 9, for a two week's run. The "Sammies" are shown at their quarters, lining up for roll call and marching to the train waiting to take them to their new station.

Storage Batteries for Projection

REPLYING to your article on page 577 of Motography, issued on September 15, in answer to my letter in regards to the use of storage batteries for projection work, I wish to state that you have missed the point we were seeking to be answered. Put in concrete form it is this:

Working from a 220 D. C. current can we run this current through sufficient resistance in the shape of storage batteries to leave a current in the line at the contact point of the carbon to be of say, 55 volts or whatever voltage that we may require? The saved current we could of course use for other purposes. But what I was after was to save the current now wasted in the rheostat.

A transformer is O. K., but we have seen the voltage demand increased in our theater and how can we then make use of our transformer if same is designed to deliver the 55 volts. It seems ridiculous to me to run a transformer to create a D. C. current with a D. C. current. .To overcome our difficulty we could have a transformer built to create a 60-volt current and then tone down from this to 55-volt. Is this feasible?—*O. D., Ohio.

In your first letter I did not get the point that you were trying to bring out in regards to the storage battery, I understood by the letter that you wanted a storage battery to run the lamp from and not to use it as you state in the above letter. You can run 220 volt through a storage battery, used as resistance and cut the voltage down to any required voltage that you may want, but I would not recommend that kind of an outfit as being what you would want for projection purposes or one that would compare with the motor generator set that I recommended to you in the other article.

The original cost of the storage battery would be as much or more than the cost of a motor generator set and the upkeep of the storage battery would be considerable where the upkeep on a motor generator set would be practically nothing. Either outfit can be used, but I would recommend the D. C. to D. C. generator set by all means. The motor generator set that I speak of is not a transformer, but would consist of a 220-volt D. C. motor direct connected to a 60-volt generator. The generator has a field control and can be regulated to give you the required voltage at the lamp.

Size of Sceeen and Lens

Would you kindly advise us the correct size of a screen and lens we should have for a theater 22x90 feet with a 17-foot ceiling. We have a 90-foot throw.—*C. E. O., Ohio.

The best size screen for a 22x90 ft. room with a 17-foot ceiling, according to my idea, would be 14 ft. 8 by 11 ft. high. In a general way we figure that a theater 25 feet wide and 70 feet long requires a screen 9x12. Taking this as a basis we increase the size in proportion to the width and length of an auditorium larger or smaller, we decrease the size of the screen if room is smaller.

A theater 90 feet long generally would require a screen 12 ft. high, as a theater of that length is usually about 40 feet wide, but inasmuch as your theater is only 22 feet wide it is better to have a screen about 14 ft. 6 in., because it is necessary to have some little space around the screen in order to set it off and give it the proper appearance.

For example, if you had a theater 16 feet wide and you would put in a 16-ft. screen the effect would be that your theater would look like a tunnel and the screen would look crowded, but with a screen 14 ft. 6 inches you will have about 4 feet on each side of the screen, which will be sufficient to make a nice exit on each side or else a shadow box which ever way you prefer to arrange it. There is a general disposition on the part of the exhibitors to reduce the size of the screen.

A year or two ago some very extreme sizes were used and as consequence the pictures showed a great deal of distortion. In large theaters where they were using 15x20 they are now using 13 ft. 6 by 18 inches. Where they were using 13 ft 6 by 18 inches they are now using 12x16. In fact a 12x16 seems to be the favorite size, as more of this size are used at the present time. Some lens experts, especially the manufacturers claim, that "no picture should be larger than 12x16."

In regards to the lenses, for a picture 14 ft. 8 in. by 11 ft., with a 90-ft. throw, will require a 5¾ M. P. lens and a 27-in. stereo lens. This combination of lenses will give you a 10-ft. 7 inch. by 14 ft. 2 in. at 90 feet. on the M. P. and 10-foot picture on the stereo.

This combination of lenses will make the picture slightly smaller than the size of the screen, but after the screen is set in place and the lenses adjusted in the machine throw the white light through the lens onto the screen and with a chalk line outline the size of the light on the screen. In outlining the size of the light, set the chalk line one and a half inches inside the edge of the light.

In other words, make the chalk line one and a half inches smaller than the light shown on the screen. Next have the space outside the chalk line painted a flat black clear to the edge of the screen.

Personally I am a strong believer in the shadow box attached to the screen and I think that you would be wise in using one. A shadow box will add from 35 to 50 per cent to the effectiveness of the picture.

You do not say in your letter whether you are using one or two machines. If you are using two machines be very sure when ordering the lens to have them matched, and when you do order your lens order the best. A first class lens and screen is just as important to good projection as a first class operator and machine.

A forty dollar suit of clothes looks out of place with a dollar hat and a two dollar pair of shoes.

Motography Saves Him Pain

I received my copy of Motography on the eleventh, on which morning I was operated on, and I will say reading this helped me to forget some of the pain. I am going through another operation on my nose tomorrow at nine o'clock and another on my throat next week.

I noticed in the magazine that you had my name spelled wrong and also our Buffalo Local number wrong. The Local number is 233.

I will send you a good shutter pattern of a five-winged shutter as soon as I get so that I can handle myself again. This shutter will run twenty minutes to the reel and no flicker. This is a very good shutter for some of the boys that have to run slow on account of junk film.—Phillip J. Gnann, Local No. 233, Buffalo, N. Y.

Brother Gnann sent in a pattern and a model for a device to be attached to the upper valve of a Power's machine. The device keeps the film from jumping out of the magazine valve when the magazine door is open. A full sized drawing of the device was given on page 577 of Motography, issued September 15.

I am very sorry, Brother Gnann, that I got your name and number of your Local wrong, but if you will excuse me this time I will see that it does not happen again.

Come on in with the five-wing shutter, and I will be very glad to try it out and pass it on to the readers of the department.

I am very glad to know that some of the operators are broad-minded enough to submit drawings and suggestions to the department so that the brothers who possibly have not had as much experience as themselves may profit by their experiences and suggestions.

To Clean a Screen

I would like to have you give me a little advice on the following subject:

I am the owner of a picture theater and have what is called a "Mirror" Screen in the house. The theater has been in operation for about two years and a half and the screen has become dingy looking and streaked. I have tried to brush it off but it does not help it very much. I then tried to wash it with warm water and soap, but that has made it worse than ever. Can you tell me what is the best way to clean the screen? S. R. T.—Penn.

The Mirror screen is manufactured by Mirror Screen Company of Shelbyville, Indiana, and I would advise you to communicate with Frank Rembusch, general manager of the firm, who can advise you on the matter. The screen is cleaned by a special process. He can advise you as to what it is.

Elliott Pictures Switched

After all, Maxine Elliott's debut on the screen as a Goldwyn star will be in the emotional drama, "Fighting Odds," instead of "The Eternal Magdalene."

The latter, previously announced as the first of Goldwyn's Elliott productions, has been challenged by the Pennsylvania Board of Censors and by the Chicago censor board. Both bodies find points in the picture which they question and which Goldwyn denies constitute any violation of good taste. Nevertheless, as "The Eternal Magdalene" had been announced for release on October 7 and that date is close at hand, Goldwyn has determined to fully protect all of its contract customers among the exhibitors of the United States by substituting Miss Elliott's other picture in its stead.

This means that "The Eternal Magdalene" and the points at issue with the two censor organizations can be threshed out and adjusted without holding up any Goldwyn customers or disarranging their playing dates. Goldwyn insists that "The Eternal Magdalene" made, as it has been, into a big morality play by Arthur Hopkins, in no way tends to endanger public morals. In this contention it finds itself sustained by an enthusiastic indorsement of the picture in its entirety by the National Board of Review, which exercises the censorial function for America as a whole.

Peggy O'Neil in Wholesome Film Corporation's production, "The Penny Philanthropist."

Powerful Scene in Wholesome Play

In "The Penny Philanthropist," Wholesome Films production, there is an intensely dramatic incident founded on an actual experience of William H. Burns, the internationally famous detective.

An Italian laborer has been bribed to light a fuse-bomb in the basement of a rich man's home.

The Italian had no grievance against the rich man, but he needs money with which to bring his wife and family from Italy.

And in the picture the Italian lights the fuse, but as he is stealing away he discovers Peggy, "The Penny Philanthropist," who has been so kind to him, entering the doomed house. Knowing it means certain death, the Italian pleads with her not to enter.

Miss Peggy O'Neill in the title role of Clara E. Laughlin's master story, offers a remarkable portrayal bringing to her interpretation a wealth of talent and charm. Frank Weed, as the Italian, is most realistic and the role as presented by him will long be remembered.

The scenes between Miss O'Neill and Mr. Weed, including the planting of the bomb, were taken in the heart of Chicago's "Little Italy," with a guard of police.

First Paramount-Sennett Comedy

The first Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedy, "A Bedroom Blunder" is finished and the assembling of the picture completed. "I am very happy to state," says Mack Sennett, "that it is a real knockout—a screaming comedy from start to finish. and you can quote me as saying this."

BATTLE SCENES IN "WARRIOR"

Present Victories on Italian Front Paralleled by Fight Scenes in "The Warrior"—Writers Comment on Similarity

Almost uncanny in its similarity is the present drive which the heroic Italian forces are successfully making against the Austrian heights, and the remarkable battle scenes in "The Warrior," state right feature starring Maciste, hero of "Cabiria." Produced months before the cencentrated fury of the Italian attack was directed against the firmly entrenched enemy in their mountain stronghold, the war scenes set forth in "The Warrior" portray with startling fidelity what is now taking place on the Italian battle front. They parallel almost exactly the scaling of the well nigh impregnable mountain walls, the hand to hand fighting on the heights, and the final triumphant capture of the Austrian strongholds.

Speaking of this remarkable coincidence, A. H. Sawyer, of General Enterprises, Inc., which control the United States and Canadian rights to "The Warrior," said:

"I have been in receipt of numerous communications from prominent Italians of this city during the past week, remarking upon the lifelike manner in which events transpiring on the Italian front at present have been foreshadowed in "The Warrior." All the letter writers saw the picture starring Maciste during its run at the Criterion Theater recently and every communication contains some reference to the striking similarity of the pseudo and the actual struggle. One gentleman, whom I quote by permission, writes:

"'I have seen the majority of the war films now being presented to the public, and also follow closely the views of the present world's conflict shown in the various film weeklies. It is my opinion that the magnificent war scenes contained in your remarkable film "The Warrior" surpass greatly any of the pictures exclusively devoted to scenes of battle. The scaling of the sheer mountain walls by Maciste and his brave band of Italian soldiers, with its hairbreadth escapes and physical effort, is far more real than anything I have yet witnessed on the screen. The person fortunate enough to have seen "The Warrior" at the Criterion can visualize clearly for himself the events which are now transpiring in the terrific struggle between our countrymen and the Austrians.'"

A few scenes from the powerful General Enterprises, Inc., feature, "The Warrior," starring the great Maciste, who is well remembered as the giant of that unusually successful spectacle, "Cabiria."

NEW FARRAR PRODUCTION

Geraldine Farrar, Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie Macpherson Are Star, Director and Author of "The Woman God Forgot"

The combined talents of Geraldine Farrar, Cecil B. De Mille and Jeanie Macpherson as displayed in "Joan the Woman," last season's sensational cinema triumph, has again been assembled in "The Woman God Forgot," the forthcoming motion picture spectacle to be released by Artcraft Pictures. The success of "Joan" proved a distinct individual achievement for the star, director and author, and that the combined effort of this trio offers the result of one of the very foremost producing units in the cinema world is readily apparent to followers of the picture both in and outside of the trade. President Greene of Artcraft says:

Never in her career has Geraldine Farrar been afforded a vehicle that discloses to better advantage her wonderful histrionic talents. That this is her greatest cinema characteriation, not excepting "Joan the Woman" is generally conceded. Based on a page of the history of America when Montezuma and his Aztecs were conquered by the Spaniards headed by Cortez, this film discloses many interesting educational features. The first use of gun powder in this country is shown and greater battle scenes than disclosed in "Joan" are presented with thrilling realism. The photoplay also shows that the Aztecs were not savages, as many believe, but highly educated and civilized people with schools, seminaries, courts, laws and even barber shops.

Helen Holmes in Daring Leap

Helen Holmes does the first daredevil feat of the many which she stages during the production of "The Lost Express," new Mutual-Signal photonovel in "The Destroyed Documents," Chapter II of the serial, released September 24 by Mutual.

Helen, in an automobile, races an express train and beats it to a viaduct. Helen jumps from the machine, climbs over the rail of the bridge, and when the train rushes past drops to the roof of the moving cars. She lands feet first and unhurt.

The feat is staged as part of Helen's pursuit of "Harelip," the mysterious character in the serial.

"BARBARY SHEEP" A WINNER

Press and Public Praise New Elsie Ferguson Artcraft Offering as Notable—The Rialto Does Record Business

The first cinema presentation of Robert Hitchens' Algerian story, "Barbary Sheep," in which Elsie Ferguson made her screen debut for Artcraft under the auspices of Adolph Zukor, attracted audiences as large as they were enthusiastic at the Rialto Theater, New York.

Manager S. L. Rothapfel provided all the essentials in the way of scenic investiture, and appropriate Algerian night music, so that the atmosphere of the Saharan desert indubitably was present, lending additional charm to the great production. The critics as well as the public were unanimous in their approval of the photoplay. Some of the leading critics had the following to say:

AMERICAN—Miss Ferguson gave a charming performance, and in this representation of "Barbary Sheep" the highest Broadway standards were upheld. Congratulations must be extended to the star, the author, the adapter, Charles Maigne; the producers, the Artcraft Pictures Corporation; to Maurice Tourneur, for perfect direction, and to Manager S. L. Rothapfel for the high standard he has set for his "Temple of Motion Pictures."

MORNING TELEGRAPH.—Not only does Miss Ferguson bring to the screen her elusive beauty, but she sets new standards of character creation. Both because it introduces Miss Ferguson and because it is in itself a finely conceived production, does "Barbary Sheep" deserve to rank as one of the notable pictures of the year.

TIMES.—On the screen Miss Ferguson's sensitive beauty becomes almost Gibsonesque. The Hichens' novel is presented with a wealth of atmosphere, and the many fine pictures go far to justify the production.

TRIBUNE.—"Barbary Sheep" was presented at the Rialto yesterday and has for its central figure, Elsie Ferguson. Maurice Tourneur directed the production, which is equivalent to saying that it was beautifully done. The scenes are magnificent and the cast was excellent.

HERALD.—Miss Elsie Ferguson in "Barbary Sheep" establishes herself as one of the most captivating figures in photographic drama. Her grace and beauty were recorded perfectly by the camera, and she built up a dramatic effect far beyond what is usual in pictures. Her new Artcraft picture presented by Adolph Zukor, is what is called "gripping."

COMMERCIAL.—Elsie Ferguson's debut in motion pictures was the inspiration for the program at the Rialto. "Barbary Sheep" is capital material for the screen and in the film all of the opulence of Hichens' description of the Algerian desert has been preserved.

It is noteworthy that the advance notices in the New York press of "Barbary Sheep" exceeded in quantity and quality those given to any other photo production in many months. The popularity of Elsie Ferguson as a dramatic star, her beauty and talents were made much of and the opinion was generally expressed that she would be as successful on the screen as she has been in the speaking drama.

The management of the Rialto Theater was emphatic in its praise of the production, and the prediction was ventured that the success of "Barbary Sheep" would be brilliant.

To Handle Commonwealth Comedies

The Commonwealth Comedy Co., Inc., a comparatively new concern which turns out slapstick comedies, has won a place on the General Film Company's program. This arrangement goes into effect on September 28 and calls for a succession of fifty-two weekly releases.

Joseph S. Klein is president of the company, and is an active member of the New York bar. He has been a motion picture factor of long and favorable standing. Mr. Klein has fortified himself with a strong cast "back and front" of the camera, and an outstanding feature of the output is the introduction of a strong company of pretty maidens that are a treat to the eye.

Under the direction of Frank P. Donovan, the comedies are of the slam-bang, up-and-at-'em nature that is dear to the risibilities of movie fans.

"His Watery Waterloo," "Willie in the Harem," "His Winning Way," and "Fat and Foolish" represent the first four pieces upon the strength of which the contract was made with General Film.

Arrangements have just been completed to establish the company at its winter studio in Jacksonville, Florida.

Next Ogden Picture

A contract was signed by the Ogden Pictures Corporation with the estate of David Graham Phillips, James K. Hackett and the American Play Company, through their representative, Edgar Selden, whereby the Ogden Pictures Corporation will receive the world's motion picture rights to David Graham Phillips' most popular novel, "The Grain of Dust." Lillian Walker will portray the title role.

The screen rights to this production were purchased in competition with almost every other large producing concern and the price, it was ascertained, was $12,000.

"The Grain of Dust" is considered the high water mark of the late David Graham Phillips' novelistic achievement. The story ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

"In purchasing the screen rights to 'The Grain of Dust,' said Albert Scowcroft, president of the company, we are striving to visualize those works of literature which have met the popular approval of men and women the world over. In these days of extraordinary photoplay attractions where the release of one seems to top the unusual production of the day before, producers are hard put to it to keep pace with the rapid strides of other ambitious producers, to say nothing of excelling them, but we pride ourselves in being able to announce to the photoplay world the coming screening of such a wonderful novel as David Graham Phillips' masterpiece."

SEPARATE BOOKING FOR OGDEN

Lillian Walker Productions to Be Booked Independently Rather Than by Contract Covering Series—To Stand on Merit

Since the announcement was published that the Ogden Picture Corporation will make a series of eight Lillian Walker productions, to be released within a year, exhibitors throughout the country have requested the opportunity to book the entire series of eight productions.

While the state right purchasers of "The Lust of the Ages," the initial Lillian Walker release, are receiving an option on the remaining seven productions, nevertheless Ogden Pictures Corporation has decided that each production be booked independently, rather than by a single contract covering the entire series. This has been determined upon because of the fact that the subsequent Walker productions will, all of them, be adaptations of popular novels, screen rights to which are purchasable, and the plans of the company have been definitely determined upon so that each production will be of an extraordinary character.

The second Ogden release will be a subject in eight reels, an adaptation of a novel. The rights to this book are controlled in an option, which only awaits confirmation by cable from the estate of the author.

While the company is desirous of assisting the exhibitor in the exploitation of the Lillian Walker productions, it has been deemed a better policy to permit each production to stand upon its merits and not to require, or even allow, the theaters to commit themselves to the entire series until they shall have had an opportunity to view each individual release.

Wins Right to Show "Spy"

Fox Film Corporation has won the fight which it began in the Federal courts for the right to exhibit in the City of Chicago William Fox's stirring screen drama, "The Spy," which portrays graphically the menace to America in the sinister workings of the German secret agents.

A short time since, Mr. L. C. Funkhouser, in his capacity as official film censor for Chicago, refused to issue the permit necessary to "The Spy's" exhibition.

Fox Film Corporation immediately sought an injunction to restrain the municipal authorities from preventing the showings. In the bill of complaint, Mr. Fox established the point that Mr. Funkhouser's power to condemn a photoplay was limited to pictures which were in some way obscene or immoral, and that "The Spy" was obviously not within that classification.

Judge Samuel Alschuler of the United States District Court has just upheld this contention and has issued an order forbidding interference with the exhibition of "The Spy."

The opinion states that since Mr. Funkhouser himself concedes that his ruling in declining a permit was based largely, if not entirely, upon the impressively dramatic features of the photoplay, there was unquestionably an abuse of discretion in barring the film.

Objections to pictures are allowed and are supposed to be made only when they are of an immoral or suggestive nature.

NEXT PICKFORD PLAY

"The Little Princess," Popular Play, Dramatized From Frances Hodgson Burnett's Book, "Sara Crewe," to Follow "Rebecca"

"The Little Princess" is the next vehicle for "Our Mary." This subject has appeared with wide success both in book form and on the stage. The original book, which became popular throughout the country, is "Sara Crewe," from the pen of Frances Hodgson Burnett. In 1903 Miss Burnett dramatized the book and at the Criterion Theater the story was staged under the management of Charles B. Dillingham.

The story presents a typical Mary Pickford subject on the order of "A Poor Little Rich Girl" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and discloses "Little Mary" in a type of characterization in which she is most popular, namely, the little girl in short dresses.

Essanay Shedule for October

Taylor Holmes and Bryant Washburn are the two stars featured in Essanay's program of releases for October. "Fools for Luck" is the title of Mr. Holmes' offering. It is a comedy-drama scheduled for October 8. Mr. Washburn will follow in another comedy-drama entitled "The Fibbers" on October 15. Both these five-part productions will be distributed through the George Kleine System. In addition to these subjects, Essanay will continue its weekly release of George Ade's "Fables in Slang," which are reported to be meeting with success as two-part comedy fillers. The General Film Company, Inc., is handling these films.

"Fools for Luck" is a screen version of a story entitled "Talismans," which was written by Kennett Harris and published in the Saturday Evening Post. It is based on the inordinate superstition of a young man who looks upon his rabbit's foot as his best friend. How he meets the girl and eventually is routed of his failing forms a picture which, in story form, proved a very laughable adventure.

Helen Ferguson is Mr. Holmes' leading woman in this production. Miss Ferguson is scarcely seventeen years old. However, she has appeared in numerous Essanay productions, including the Max Linder comedies, "Filling His Own Shoes," and others.

The picture has a screen time, approximately, of sixty-five minutes.

"The Fibbers" presents Bryant Washburn in another of his well known comedy characterizations. The story is based on the struggles of a young architect and his bride to defeat the high cost of living, and in their desperation each comes to suspect the other of perfidy. The picture is somewhat on the order of "Skinner's Dress Suit" and affords the star a role equally as full of subtle humor and homey incidents. Virginia Valli takes the leading feminine role. "The Fibbers" will have a screen time, approximately, of sixty-five minutes.

These two productions are the second and third releases by Essanay on the Perfection Pictures program.

Gail Kane, American Film star, is supported by George Periolat, Spottiswoode Aitken and Lewis J. Cody in her forthcoming production of "Wit," written by Dan F. Whitcomb.

"The Mysterious Mr. Tiller"

Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford in Bluebird Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MYSTERY is the keynote of this story, which keeps its secret well concealed until the end. It concerns two rival detectives, one of them a girl, Clara Hawthorne, played by Ruth Clifford, the other Prentice Tiller, played by Rupert Julian.

The mystery is sustained until the very end.

Until the end of the story the viewer does not know their identity and since they work against each other in a jewel robbery mystery, first one and then the other comes under suspicion. This situation gives the producers plenty of chance for complications, but the trouble is that, especially at the first, one is sometimes in doubt as to what it is all about. The latter part of the picture is best and the closing scenes are especially swift and interesting. The picture as a whole will have little difficulty entertaining an audience which likes mystery stories with brisk action.

Elliott J. Clawson wrote the story, which Julian Rupert directed. In the supporting cast are Frank Brownlee, Wedgewood Nowell, Harry Rattenberry and E. A. Warren. Acting, photography and settings are up to the Bluebird standard.

The Story: Prentice Tiller, a man of mystery, meets a beautiful girl who asks his aid and tells him a strange story of her search for her fiance, whom she had come to England to meet. She asks him to deliver a letter for her to a certain address. Tiller's curiosity is aroused by the girl. Later, at a fashionable reception, Tiller is introduced to the girl as a relative of his hostess.

Several baffling robberies have been committed and detectives are on guard at this reception. The jewels of the hostess are stolen. Detectives capture Prentice Tiller as the thief, but he proves his innocence. Then at headquarters Clara reports that she has failed in her assignment to capture the thief. Later, Mr. Tiller hands the robbers over to the police. He, too, is in the secret service. But he gives the credit to Clara, with whom he has fallen in love.

"Baby Mine"

Madge Kennedy in Margaret Mayo's Comedy, Second Goldwyn Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS well-known stage farce, which Goldwyn offers in picture form, is one of the funniest screen comedies ever made. There is a laugh in nearly every scene and subtitle. A group of Chicago reviewers at a private showing forgot their professional solemnity and laughed, giggled and chuckled throughout then declared they were going to see the picture again with the audience, just to hear the merriment.

Madge Kennedy proves that her comedy is screenable, and the droll humor with which she plays Zoie, the heroine, whose various brands of "real truth" cause all the trouble, will endear her to "fans" of every variety. She acts before the camera with all the ease of a veteran and will win a high place among screen players in this, her first venture. John Cumberland as Jimmie is also very amusing and will earn the sympathy of the audience as his efforts to unravel Zoie's web of deceit only enmeshes him further. Frank Morgan as the deceived husband and Kathryn Adams as Jimmie's wife have the only other important parts.

John S. Robertson's directing is very clever. Good workmanship on the part of all concerned in the production is evident. The humor never misses fire or becomes strained. Brisk action and spontaneity characterizes the farce. The photography and settings are pleasing. We don't believe there is an audience in the United States which won't respond to this picture. It's a comedy that will call for many repeat showings.

The Story: Zoie and Alfred had been married only a short time when Alfred learned that Zoie was incapable of telling the truth. Since he was very jealous and his wife was pleasure loving, Zoie's escapades worried him. Finally in anger he left her. Now Zoie really loved her husband and she wanted to win him back. Aggie, Zoie's friend, suggested a sure-fire plan. Why not adopt a baby and make Alfred believe it was their own? Zoie agrees. Jimmie, Aggie's husband, and the innocent cause of the quarrel between Zoie and her husband, is told to select a baby from an orphan asylum and to telegraph Alfred the news of the arrival of an heir.

From that time until the closing scene Jimmie and the conspirators are in trouble. Alfred arrives too soon and Jimmie is forced to kidnap a baby. At last Alfred believes he is the father of triplets, then he learns that he has no baby at all. And Jimmie is arrested as a kidnapper and his life is endangered by an irate mother. Then Zoie tells the "real truth" and her husband forgives her.

"Flirting With Death"

Bluebird Play with Thrills and Humor, Ready September 24. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is an unusually good picture, one that will entertain any audience. It contains those elements that all patrons enjoy, good humor, clever and not overdrawn, real thrills, not artificial, and a pleasing story. It begins slowly, rather too much footage being given to the circus scenes at the beginning, but after the story gets really started, it progresses swiftly and in a fashion to keep the attention of the entire audience. Its story is original and its characters are all likeable and amusing. The plot concerns two circus "barkers" and their adventures in a small town, where one of them falls in love with the daughter of a poor inventor. Herbert Rawlinson and Frank McQuarrie play the adventurers, and Brownie Vernon is the girl. Both circus and small town types are excellently portrayed.

The thrills—and they really thrill—come about in the latter part of the play when Billy (Rawlinson) tries out the inventor's "aerochute" by leaping from an aeroplane. The views from the aeroplane, and the "close-ups" which are cut in, are very cleverly presented, and will win applause. The presence of the village undertaker, waiting below for "business," will cause laughter.

The play can be advertised as especially good. Herbert Rawlinson and Brownie Vernon will bring their admirers. If "Come Through" has been shown, Rawlinson's work in that may be recalled. In this picture, there is also a "get-rich-quick" business atmosphere, which may recall the other play, although the plot is not similar.

Elmer Clifton's directing is clever.

The Story: "Sky High" Billy Wardell and his pal, "Domino" Dominick, get arrested for fraud while they are managing a side-show with a circus. They break jail and get to the next town, where they get positions with a newspaper. Billy falls in love with a girl he meets in this town, and when he learns that her father has perfected an "aerochute," but cannot finance its manufacture, he sets to work to get the money by forming a company, villagers and farmers buying many shares. Then a rival of his learns of Billy's identity and that he is wanted for jail-breaking and shakes the confidence of the stockholders. "Domino" has gone to New York to get more capital, but Billy is forced to do something to regain the faith of the townspeople. He learns that a circus, showing in another town, is showing an aeroplane flight, and he plans to have the aviator leap from the machine in the new aerochute. When the aviator refuses, Billy himself offers to take the chance. The invention proves successful. The inventor becomes rich and Billy wins the girl.

Waldemar Young and Frank Dazey are the authors of the story.

"The Spindle of Life"

Neva Gerber in Butterfly Release of September 17. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE best part of this picture is the outdoor atmosphere, the sea views and other well photographed exteriors. This doesn't mean that the plot is not good, for it is entertaining and cleverly presented. But the picture is especially pleasing in that it takes its viewers to places they would enjoy visiting in real life. There is some humor in the story, which is generally light and carefree. Neva Gerber, as the heroine, has a madcap role, not very original, but of the type the photoplay public always seems to like. Ben Wilson is the hero and fills his role satisfactorily. Hayward Mack has a heavy role. Jessie Pratt, Ed. Brady and Richard LaReno are in the cast.

Photography and lighting effects are up to the Bluebird standard. George Cochrane, who directed, has handled the story well. Sidney Robinson is the author, and Karl Coolidge arranged the scenario. The title of the story doesn't seem to have any special significance. A more fitting one might have been found.

The Story: Gladsome (Miss Gerber) and Mrs. Harrison spend their summers at Harborsport, and there Gladsome learns to know and love the fishermen of the district. The Bradshaws, father and son, Vincent, also live at Harborsport in the summer, Bradshaw being Mrs. Harrison's financial adviser. He wants to marry Vincent to Gladsome because some of his investments of her money are a bit shaky. "Alphabet" Carter, a financial power, is ordered to the seashore for his health, and there he meets Gladsome and the two fall in love. He goes to town long enough to help ruin the Bradshaws and then returns, carries Gladsome off to the minister and marries her. He climbs into her house by a rope ladder and the butler brings them up some supper. Mother gets suspicious and follows the butler. Then she learns that in spite of her social climbing her daughter has married an aristocrat and great wealth.

"The Woman Between"

Peerless-World Drama in Five Parts, Released September 24. Reviewed by George W. Graves

ETHEL CLAYTON, cast in the part of a woman of the "smart set" who marries conveniently and learns to love her husband only when he has lost all faith in her, again shows her ability to get feeling out of this type of role. Truthfully, Miss Clayton's work is the best thing about the picture. The story holds very well at first and is very entertaining, but becomes rather strained and extravagant towards the finish, although this latter part constitutes what goes with many as a fair sort of melodrama. Curtis Cooksey, as the blinded husband, and Crauford Kent, as the inevitable third party, do very well with their parts, while the rest of the players, including Isabelle Berwin, Frank de Vernon and Eugenie Woodward, give renditions that are up to the good standard of World productions. Travers Vale gave the picture very good production. He kept the action smooth and interesting, and gave the needed "punch" to some of the tense situations. Willard Mack wrote the story.

With its talented star and generally entertaining story, "The Woman Beneath" averages as a good offering. The action moves swiftly, and there is sufficient human interest, excitement and suspense to keep the minds in the average audience well occupied.

Betty Fairchild, a girl who has been brought upto revere the superficialities of "the smart set" more than the dictates of her own heart, marries Tom Connolly, a wealthy miner, without loving him. After a brief period of deceitful happiness, Tom learns his wife's real attitude and is heartbroken. From this time on, although he loves her, he has no faith in anything she says or does. At last the spark of love is kindled in Betty's breast, but Tom is bitter and implacable. Just as things take a turn for the better a complication sets in, involving Brantley, an unprincipled society idler, who has long been angling for Betty's affections. Betty's intuition and quick action in the crisis prevents Tom from becoming a murderer. At last Betty is cleared of the false charge of infidelity, and with the passing of this cloud, the lesser misunderstandings dissolve and husband and wife commence an era of real happiness.

"Men of the Desert"

Essanay-Perfection Western Features Jack Gardner. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS Essanay-Jack Gardner feature, released by George Kleine, Inc., under the Perfection brand, is well up to the standard set by the Essanay Western plays with this star which have already been presented. There are the same well chosen locations, beautifully photographed, and the action is similar to that in the other plays, some gun-play and much riding used.

Between two fires.

The story itself has an appeal, for the leading characters hold the sympathy. In Western pictures it is too often the case that the rapid action overshadows the human appeal. This is not true in this offering. It is primarily a story of a man who sets out to avenge a wrong in spite of danger (and in this role Jack Gardner will be well liked, both because of the part in the story and because the actor plays it so sincerely), and a girl who falls in love with him against her will. This sympathetic phase of the play is strengthened by the introduction of the helpless parents of the boy whose death the hero avenges.

Ruth King appears as the heroine and Carl Stockdale is the villain. The entire cast does satisfactory work. The picture is well produced and should please generally. September 24 is the release date.

The Story: The old fued between the sheep and cattle ranchers forms the background of the play. The cattle men have the upper hand when the story opens and have murdered the son of a sheep rancher. The local sheriff is powerless to punish the guilty ones, when Jack, a cowboy, declares that he would restore order if he were sheriff. The sheriff takes him up on the jest and gives him his badge and authority to arrest the murderer. Jack does so, but the rest of the powerful gang quickly get their leader out of jail and plot to take Jack's life. In a fight, Jack is wounded, but escapes and rides away into the hills. He is found by May, a girl who owns a cattle ranch, and who is in sympathy with the cattle men. But she cares for the wounded man and keeps his hiding place, in a deserted cabin, a secret. She tries to convince herself and the man that her motives are only from pity. Then Jack is discovered, and his enemies plan to kill him. May rides for help and saves Jack's life, incidentally ending the power of the outlaw gang. And at last she admits that she loves Jack.

"The Romanoffs"

Herbert Brenon Production with Iliodor Ready for Release. Reviewed by Charles R. Condon

WHEN Herbert Brenon decided to put into pictures the story of the first Russian revolution this year and its direct causes, he challenged a mighty host, but the completed "Fall of the Romanoffs" shows that victory is his. The subject was big and more or less elusive from a dramatic viewpoint, and his success is great in the same large proportions.

The presence of Iliodor at the head of the cast is an important asset. This former monk won renown as an orator which he will never gain as a picture actor. Iliodor is an actor by persuasion rather than by profession, but he must be accredited wtih a good performance in this production. He was called upon to turn back the pages of history, and relieve the scenes of his former relations with the czar and his court, and he did it well. With his placid way and calm decision he afforded a fine contrast to the victims of ambition and fate whirring about him.

The events surrounding this great crisis in Russia formed narrative rather than plot, and they were therefore difficult to mark with dramatic points and suspense. In telling this story on the screen Mr. Brenon had additional obstacles in its being so distinctly foreign in atmosphere and in its action being confined in the main to history. Then, too, the central figure in all of this had never before acted for the camera. These things, successfully overcome, add to the glory of Mr. Brenon's achievement.

The czar and czarina in Herbert Brenon's remarkable production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs."

Because of the enormous attendance, a second showing was necessary at the initial presentation of the "Fall of the Romanoffs" at the Ritz Carlton, New York. The musical accompaniment was an added touch of excellence. The music score is an important factor in the proper screening of this picture.

In the "Fall of the Romanoffs" Mr. Brenon has produced a dramatic spectacle of almost unlimited money-making possibilities. It is a show for the enterprising exhibitor to book for a run of from three days or a week up. It has no end of advertising angles and opportunities, the greatest of which no doubt is linking it with the present tumultuous condition of Russia.

Inside information regarding the once royal household of the Romanoffs is pictured in a way that makes one marvel at its former existence, rather than be affected by the facts themselves. The story reveals much which is not common knowledge, and contains several elements of the kind to inspire conversation about the picture. The czar, although of majestic bearing and impressive in manner, is spared no fault by his interpreter, Alfred Hickman.

The characters of the story are wonderfully cast, and they are equally efficient in doing their share of the work which has made this picture one of the sensations of the year. Edward Connelly, as Rasputin, is a tricky and dangerous fanatic to his last moment. Nance O'Neil portrays the scheming czarina, and George Dunueburg plays the part of the kaiser. Ketty Glanta vampires through the roll of Anna, and Mlle. Marcelle greets a sympathetic audience in the tragic part of Somia. Conway Tearle is seen as Prince Felix, Charles Craig as the Grand Duke Nicholas, Pauline Curley as Irena, Francis Chapin as Kerensky, and William E. Shay as Feofan.

The photoplay is by J. Roy Hunt and is to his credit. The settings used in the picture are remarkable. Although few of us are frequenters of castles, literature has done much to make us familiar with their architecture and sumptuous furnishings, and a court scene or view of a castle suite in this picture is correct according to the best information. Mr. Brenon has evidently spent much time and more money making this production right.

"War and the Woman"

Florence LaBadie in Thanhouser-Pathe War Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE is little doubt about the patriotic appeal this picture will make to the average audience. A story showing the United States actually invaded, with a plucky heroine who outwits the German commander and a hero who brings about a last minute rescue in his airplane, will arouse great enthusiasm among all classes of patrons. The picture has a stirring story, very well presented. The action is swift and easily followed, and there are plenty of "thrills" which come about naturally in the plot and are not dragged in for their own sake.

There are no battle scenes. Several scenes of German brutality are shown but these are a necessary part of the story and are skillfully managed. Ernest Warde has directed Philip Lonigan's story, which is both thrilling and interesting. The photography is unusually clear and even throughout all the scenes. Florence LaBadie's acting is good, and so is that of the supporting cast, which includes Tom Brooke, Wayne Arey, Grace Henderson, Arthur Bower and Ernest Warde.

There are a number of advertising points in the offering. There are the "what might have been" episode of the German invasion, showing the terror and destruction which would follow, the many views of the airplane in action, the testing of the loyalty of the heroine, the working of the United States secret service, and the German spy plots. While many of the incidents have been used in other war pictures, they are brought in cleverly and in a logical fashion and cannot fail to reach the feelings of the average patron.

The Story: John Braun and his step-daughter, Ruth Norton (Miss LaBadie) are under suspicion as German spies. Ruth at first believes her step-father innocent but later learns that he is in Germany's employ. To avoid him and his aids she jumps from the train on which they are traveling and Braun loses track of her. Fate leads her to the place where the airplane of John Baker has been wrecked and her "first aid" methods save the aviator's life. Later Ruth marries Baker.

The German army invades the eastern coast and the Baker home becomes headquarters of the commanding officer. Ruth and the servants are trapped there. In the officer's staff Ruth finds her step-father. The Germans try to force Ruth to become a spy for them but she refuses. Instead, revolted by the treatment to which the women of the village have been subjected, Ruth carries out a plot to blow up the place by dynamite. Just before this, Baker is able to get a message through the lines to Ruth and he arrives with his airplane in time to rescue her before the dynamite blast destroys the house and the people in it. The closing scenes of the story show the downfall of the Germans and the triumph of democracy.

"The Warrior"

Improved Picture Distributed by General Enterprises, Inc. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"THE WARRIOR," (reviewed, issue of August 4), has been generally retouched, making it even a finer film than it was before. Among the changes for increased value, the picture has been re-titled, but the most important thing undertaken was the re-cutting of the whole, which has greatly quickened the action.

"The Warrior," featuring the giant Maciste, is the finest picture on the State Rights market at the present time, not only because it is individual in its novelty, but because, beside this, it is a timely picture, and a good drama. "The Warrior" is a comedy, drama, scenic, educational and novelty picture, all combined. It is genuine entertainment.

Goldwyn to Show "Manx-Man"

Prints for trade showings of George Loane Tucker's picturization of Hall Caine's most famous story "The Manx-Man," which has just completed a successful run of four weeks at the Criterion Theater, New York City, are ready for shipment throughout North America by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. Under an agreement made shortly before his death in an automobile accident, Goldwyn is to distribute "The Manx-Man" for Henry J. Brock, its owner.

Elizabeth Risdon, called "The English Mary Pickford," is featured in the production.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

Billy Sunday, the famous Evangelist, preaching in Los Angeles, recently visited Mary Pickford at the Lasky studio in Hollywood accompanied by his entire family. "Little Mary" and Director General Cecil B. De Mille showed the party of interested visitors through the entire studio including the laboratories and carpenter shops. The visit of the Sundays to the Lasky studios followed "Little Mary's" attendance at the tabernacle the day before, when accompanied by her mother and Frances Marion, she met Mr. Sunday.

Olive Tell, star with the Empire All-Star organization.

Besides Tom Moore and George Fawcett, Mae Marsh's support in her new Goldwyn production, "The Cinderella Man," includes so well known a screen figure as Alec D. Francis, long time a Vitagraph and Eclair player and recently featured in World productions.

Ella Hart and Emory Johnson, both Universal stars, were married recently.

That William S. Hart is a "bad man" in real life as well as on the screen in Artcraft pictures, is firmly established in the mind of Mary Pickford. While indulging in a nice sociable ice cream party with the fifty children which appear with her in "The Little Princess" recently, Mary suddenly faced two guns behind which crouched "Big Bill" Hart, the champion bad man of the photoplay. In short order one large plate of cream was confiscated and Mr. Bad Man departed amid howls of anguish.

Anita King has completed her first Mutual feature, in which she plays a western type of girl and in which there is much horseback riding and gun-play. Joe Ryan is her leading man.

William Russell, the athletic star of the American Film Company, Inc., is training a new valet. He does not often take the trouble to do this; but Jim, his Chinese cook, who is a character in himself and who furnishes plenty of amusement for Mr. Russell and his house guests, likes the Russell menage so well that he sent for a young son all the way to China, to train for a Russell position. He picked the valeting job himself and Mr. Russell meekly agreed, being considerably under the thumb of his Chinese cook. So young Jim is now being taught such rudiments of the English language as the elder Jim can manage and incidentally the details of valeting.

Gail Kane doesn't care especially who knows that she is fond of the noble sport of fishing. She knows all the secret trout pools in the California hills and once in a while when Miss Kane does not report at the studio of the American Film Company in Santa Barbarba, you may be reasonably certain that she is whipping a stream somewhere in a rocky spot around the Santa Ynez river. Then the American players plan for a trout dinner next day, for Miss Kane is generous in the distribution and always brings home enough for everybody who likes them.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation depends a lot on the Selwyn family. It has not only contributed Edgar and Archibald to the directorate of the company, but Mrs. Edgar Selwyn, who is better known to the world of the theater as Margaret Mayo, is the author of the company's first two productions, "Polly of the Circus," starring Mae Marsh, and "Baby Mine," starring Madge Kennedy, while Edgar comes back again with "Nearly Married," his successful comedy which is being made into celluloid for Miss Kennedy's use.

In "The Adventurer," Charlie Chaplin will be seen as a convict who escapes. Imagine the fun. This photoplay is the last one to be made for the Mutual contract.

The American Film Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara, is greatly elated over the success of Edward Wales, formerly on the American staff, and who is now an aviator. Mr. Wales was formerly private secretary to William Russell, American star. Wales has made twenty-four flights and is already trying to count his money in French terms, preparatory to a speedy trip across.

They used up almost half of the wonderful scenery around Ben Lomond, fifteen miles from Santa Cruz, California, making scenes for the forthcoming Mary Miles Minter production entitled, "Peggy Leads the Way."

Sidney Algier, assistant director of the William Russell Company for the past two years, has been called by the selective draft and upon the completion of "Lucky Jim," a western comedy-drama featuring Mr. Russell, will leave for American Lake, Washington, to receive his army training.

Charles Chaplin was a true hero recently when he jumped from a rock in his big shoes, but minus his little cane to save a seven year old kiddie from the ocean near Topango Canyon, Santa Monica. Little Mildred Morrison, daughter of a New Rochelle stockbroker, was watching Charlie rehearse and got so excited she fell in the water. Charlie ought to be more careful.

Grace De Gerro, aerial star of the Sells-Floto circus, has been engaged for Keystone comedies, and is putting the girls through a number of flying ring stunts for a new comedy being filmed under the direction of H. Raymaker.

Nell Shipman is trying to overcome family objections in regard to her going to London to engage in active Rer Cross service in the hospitals there. At present she is at her mother's home in South Pasadena, vacationing and writing occasional scripts.

These two youngsters are Mary Miles Minter, the American-Mutual star, and her mother, lunching on the lawn of their Santa Barbara property. This cut might look well in your program. You can borrow it without charge if you ask us within the next three weeks. Simply address "Motography, Chicago."

READY TO CLIP AND USE IN YOUR PROGRAM OR ADVERTISING

Feature Programs

Barbary Sheep—ARTCRAFT—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 10.—Starring Elsie Ferguson. Katherine, the beuatiful wife of a typical English nobleman, joins her husband in Algeria, and there she meets Benchaalal, an officer in the native Algerian cavalry. Their acquaintance develops into a strange friendship while her husband hunts Barbary sheep. The dark-skinned native has a strange fascination for the English girl, and one night when he serenades her she goes to him. But his eyes gleam as they see her diamond necklace. Rifle in hand, her husband watches near by, but he does not need the gun, for the Mad Marabout, a maniac who learns that Benchaalal is the murderer of his daughter, obtains his vengeance. Kitty and Crumpet later view the funeral procession and come to a new understanding and greater love.

Butterfly

The Edge of the Law—BUTTERFLY—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 24.—Starring Ruth Stonehouse. The Spider wears boy's clothes and picks pockets at the master's bidding, but she is really Nancy Glenn, a sweet little girl. Drew, with the appearance of a man about town, is a society crook. He arrays the girl in pretty clothes and would establish her in his apartment, but she flees. As she runs she is knocked down by an automobile and awakens up later in a charming bedroom, with Ralph Harding and his mother anxious about her. She poses as one who has lost her memory and is asked to make their home hers. Drew gets Ralph mixed up in some mining deal and when Drew comes to the house he recognizes Nancy. Later a detective is sent to guard valuables in the Harding home and explanations develop all around. When the others have gone Ralph asks Nancy to go back West with him.

Fox

The Yankee Way—(FIVE REELS)—SEPTEMBER 16.—Starring George Walsh. Dick Mason gets into a fight in a fair lady's behalf in a Chicago restaurant and for the adventure is exiled by daddy to Lithuania, where Mr. Mason has just purchased a share in a cattle concession. On board ship he sees the girl for whom he fought, but she shows no interest in him until the last day out, when she sends him a note of thanks. When he gets to Lithuania he finds that the Princess Alexis, ruler of the country, is none other than his girl of the cabaret and ship. She tells him to keep his cattle holdings, and Vortsky, to whom she is engaged, stirs up a revolution, but Dick and a few assistants commence a counter movement which wins the day—and the Princess —for himself.

Mutual Star Productions

Queen X—(FIVE REELS)—MUTUAL—OCTOBER 1. Starring Edna Goodrich. In a raid on the notorious Pell street district the district attorney's men capture "Queen X," who is recognized as a woman of position formerly in New York society. In her seeks for the opium she has become so familiar with the secrets of the smugglers that they keep her prisoner. During her trial she is recognized by Mary Stone, the sister of the assistant district attorney, as an old schoolmate who had rescued her from fire. She takes her home and they begin the fight against the drug. John Stone helps her in her fight and makes love to her to learn the secrets of the smugglers, but falls in his own trap and learns to love her, with the result that he becomes her protector for life.

Her Country's Call—(FIVE REELS)—AMERICAN —OCTOBER 1.—Starring Mary Miles Minter. Jess Slocum, a mountain elf, lives with her dad, Jim Slocum, in a cabin high on the mountain side. She has been reared without companions. Old Jim holds a bitter hatred of the flag and the soldiers who drill in the valley town of Flagstone. Finally Jess makes him admit that he is embittered over the fact that fifteen years before he had been drummed out of camp on the charge of being a bootlegger. Jess meets handsome young Captain Earle Neville. She begins to show an immediate interest in pretty clothes and coaxes her dad to buy her a new dress. She is happily trying it on when a bullet enters the cabin and wounds her in the shoulder. It had been fired by a member of Captain Neville's squad of secret service men who were pursuing Jim Slocum for "moonshining." Jess is taken to Captain Neville's home and nursed by his sister. The captain teaches her to love the flag and to sound the bugle calls. She is shunned as the daughter of a jailbird by the girls of the town. Jess starts back to the cabin, and on the way meets John Reynolds, who has been fomenting border trouble. She sees him tear down the flag and shoots him. She mounts a horse and hurries back to town, sounding the call "To Arms." The home guards turn out to defend the town against the outlaws. Jim Slocum, in prison, confesses that he is not Jess' father. He had stolen the child as a baby from the home of Colonel Tremaine as revenge for being drummed out of camp. She finds a father and a sister and a handsome husband.

World

The Woman Between—(FIVE REELS)—PEERLESS-WORLD—RELEASED SEPT. 24.—A story written by Willard Mack and directed by Travers Vale, telling about a woman whose marriage is a mere formality of her social set and wholly a thing apart from love—at least on her part. Her believing husband at last awakens to the true state of affairs and from then on he is cold and implacable. Having lost all faith in her, he is ready to believe that she is holding a secret affair with Brantley, a worthless society idler. Simultaneous with the arousing of her husband's jealous suspicions, Betty suffers a change of heart and does all in her power to make her husband see that she really loves him. A complication concerning Brantley is introduced here, ending in the near murder of the latter by Betty's infuriated husband. After the proving of the woman's innocence her spouse opens his eyes to her complete transformation and the story ends in happiness for both. Reviewed in this issue.

Paramount

Lost in Transit—(FIVE REELS)—PALLAS-PARAMOUNT.—Featuring George Beban. Niccolo, a happy-go-lucky junk dealer, shows his fatherliness and humanness when, on finding a strange child in his cart, he takes him home and makes him happy with the meagre means at his disposal. The little boy seems to be so happy with his "new papa" that Niccolo is loath to take the youngster to the police station. This gets him into trouble, for the authorities "nab" him as the kidnapper of the child of the wealthy John Kendall. Things look black for the Italian, but the clouds are speedily cleared when it is discovered that Niccolo's protoge is not the Kendall baby at all. The story ends with the happy Niccolo being given the custody of the little youngster he had come to love so much.

General Program

The Fable of What the Best People Are Not Doing—(ONE REEL)—ESSANAY—GEORGE ADE FABLES—SEPTEMBER 22.—In one of the countless honeycombs of an office building sat a general manager. He had come from a Tank Town, via the Shorthand College. Elmer had an aching desire to be a regular fellow. He wanted membership in a club. A boyhood friend, named Orlando, blew in. Mr. Floozey thought he was a bounder and did not like to pass up old friends. Orlando was the life of the card room, so the board of governors stretched a point and admitted the Unknown, his friend General Manager.

The Collectors—JAXON COMEDY—(ONE REEL).—Jabs runs a female gymnasium and his motto is "Get all the trust you can and pay no one." His landlord notifies him that if he does not pay the back rent it will be collected by force. Numerous collectors try and fail. Pokes finally gets the job and starts out to collect. Whether it is his winning ways, his dogged persistence or his bullet proof armor that caused his success is unknown, but the landlord is telephoned for and when he arrives at the gymnasium he finds Pokes calmly sitting on Jabs' chest, with Jabs' sweetheart on his lap counting the roll to see if it will cover the amount owed.

Hearts and Harpoons—SPARKLE COMEDY—(ONE REEL).—In a fishing hamlet Captain Peters and Captain Hankins, retired sea captains, are old cronies. Mrs. Scribbler, a widow and a writer of sea stories, comes to the town to get atmosphere. On her arrival both captains promptly fall in love with her. When one takes her sailing, the other fills the boat and rescues her. When the other takes her riding, the other plots to send a balky horse. A duel, with harpoons at twenty places, is arranged, but just before the signal is given Jack Martin, who has long courted her, rushes in and explains, and takes the widow away.

Selig World Library—NO. 10—SEPTEMBER 19.—European censorship of mails—the mail censors of England and France show the importance of their office. An odd boxing contest—blind boys attending the public school for the deaf, dumb and blind at Manila, P. I., engage in strange boxing match. The coffee industry of Java—picking, sorting, drying coffee. Famous Colosseum of the Romans—the Flavian amphitheater in Rome seated 87,000 spectators.

The Law, North of 65—SELIG—(TWO REELS)—SEPTEMBER 17.—Pierre, away in the Northland, loves Jeanne. She loves him and they become engaged. Pierre leaves for a trapping expedition and in the meantime the girl is enamored with the tales told by Niklo, an itinerant trapper. The girl's father becomes suspicious and drives the man from the cabin and orders the girl to go, too. Pierre never forgets Jeanne, and one night, while near Niklo's cabin, he hears a woman's screams, and discovers that Niklo mistreats his wife. He goes to her rescue, and is about to punish the man when Niklo accidentally meets his death. Pierre later continues his wooing of Jeanne as in the days of yore.

Vengeance Versus Mercy—SELIG—(ONE REEL) —SEPTEMBER 22.—Bob, a country lad, loves Annie, daughter of the village's richest man. Ralph Gunter, a gentleman crook, enters the village life and wins Annie. Ralph is threatened with exposure by his city pal if he does not "come through" with $500. He robs Annie's father and Bob detects him at it. In the confusion Bob is taken for the robbery and serves a term in prison. In later years he hunts out Ralph and is about to shoot him when Ralph's daughter, the image of her mother, Annie, comes to her father, and Bob cannot take his long cherished vengeance.

The Climber—(FOUR REELS)—FALCON FEATURES —William Beerdheim Van Broon, of a very old family, has come down until now he is a marker in Tom Tarne's bowling alleys. Tarney, seeing him deal a fellow a knock-out blow, puts him in training, seeing great pugilistic possibilities in the boy. Buck Stringer, the local champion, has a brother and sister in the employ of Bruce Crosby. When Bruce and his sister are motoring in the slum district they have a blow out, and Buck and his gang insult him. William appears and settles Buck for the day. Eva invites him home. Tarney signs William with Buck and Bruce is present at the fight. While Eva is not pleased at discovering that William is a prize fighter, Bruce is enraged. Eva's faith, however, remains unshaken, and she goes to William's home to tell him so. About this time William is discovered by family attorneys and comes into an inheritance.

Universal Program

A Romany Rose—STAR FEATURETTE—(TWO REELS)—SEPTEMBER 27.—Rozeska is a little gypsy dancer and when an automobile party is halted beside the road her father sends her out with her tambourine to entertain them. In the party is Carter Hargrave, the head of a vaudeville circuit. Near the camp lives Richard Lorraine, who lives in the memory of his wife and child. He adopts the little Rozeska and gives her everything her heart could wish. When her father has spent the money given him by Richard Lorraine, he seeks out Hargrave and the latter offers him $75 a week for the child to dance. The father goes after the child, but is followed by the mother who gives the alarm to prevent him stealing her. In the effort to escape, the father falls from the winnow and is killed. Then Richard, seeing the affection between Rozeska and her mother, offers the gypsy a home with her child.

Taking Their Medicine—NESTOR—(ONE REEL) —SEPTEMBER 25.—All the boys of "Circle W" ranch fell head over heels in love with the little Helen when she came to visit her uncle, the owner. The round-up was going on, and the old man insisted on everybody going out to work, niece or no niece. One by one they come in on some excuse and stayed in, with sickness as an excuse. The little niece took care of them all, and held all the hands she could until uncle came in and saw the situation at a glance. Then he fixed up some "medicine" of harness oil, soft soap, etc., and the boys were cured as if by magic.

Marble Heads—(ONE REEL)—SEPTEMBER 29.—Jasbo, the sculptor, hasn't made a sale in months, so when Mrs. Claribell Lotsadough buys his work of art and asks to have it sent home for her party he rushes out to find an expressman. Jake and Joe carry the box safely down six flights of stairs and then drop the whole thing down the last flight. Then Jasbo has an idea. He dresses Jake and Joe up in the garb of the ancient Roman warriors and gives them a coat of whitewash. Then he lures Mrs. Lotsadough away while they take their places on the pedestals. When the eats are passed Jake and Joe give the whole thing away. Jasbo, meantime, has repaired the damage to the statues, and sets them up in their places. She doesn't know what to think, while down in the garden Jake and Joe feast on cold chicken and champagne.

Your Boy and Mine—(One Reel)—Victor—September 28.—Tub's mother and Skinny's mother make them churn. Tub steals out behind the barn, where he meets Skinny. Tub's mother takes a plate of her doughnuts over to Skinny's house. Behind the barn Tub is eating doughnuts, but doesn't let Skinny in on the feed. Skinny calls him "pig" and a fight is staged right there. Soon the mothers take it up, and the village gossip, going by, runs to tell the fathers. Very soon there were three fights raging—the boys', the mothers' and the fathers'. "Let's quit," says Tub to Skinny, and they did. When the gossip returned with the sheriff the boys are eating off one doughnut, the fathers are smoking and the mothers are crying on each other's shoulders.

Episode 13 of he Gray Ghost—(Two Reels)—September 17.—Marco, rushing to save Morn Light from the poisoned ring which Hildreth was about to place on her finger, manages to elude Cecelia and enters the room just in time. The Ghost follows, and hears their plan for a speedy marriage. He goes out and when the taxi which Hildreth orders drives up it is the Ghost who occupies the driver's seat. Marco, leaving them, sees the chauffeur struggling out of the shrubbery and follows them in a taxi. The Ghost drives them to the water front, compels them to enter a boat and go to the island. Marco swims to the island after calling the Commissioner and the police. Cecelia lowers the secret room in which Hildreth and Morn Light have been imprisoned, to the basement and the house is blown up. Fire breaks out, and if Hildreth and Morn Light are still alive, their case is desperate.

The Fountain of Trouble—Joker—(One Reel) September 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Cramp are enjoying the beach, when Mrs. Cramp gets thirsty. Mr. Cramp goes to the fountain with the cup and at the foot of it he finds a little ivory elephant. He picks it up and with that he is handed a lady's purse. He is bringing the cup to the wife when he trips over a foot in the sand and the owner tells him the purse is hers. Back he goes to the fountain, for he has spilled the water. The purse is put into his hand again. Again he spills the water, and again he must go back. The next man approaches him with a warning to look out for the cops. Cramp follows him and gets into the pickpockets' den. When one of the crooks comes in Cramp dashes out. Cramp manages to get back to his wife, who asks about her drink of water. Back he goes to the fountain.

Soapsuds and Sirens—L. Ko Comedy—(Two Reels)—September 26.—Professor Thinem, one of the most successful failures in the dancing profession, sobs because he has no pupils. The janitor asks him why he doesn't take to advertising, but the poor professor has no money. Mrs. Printum was a devotee of dancing. She danced right over her husband's head, as they lived above the printshop. While she is practicing her steps she falls through the weakened floor right into the press where the announcement of the profesor-sor's studio is imprinted on the back of her dress. Hubby was furious and chased her down the street, but the ad did its work. Hundreds of ladies, tall and short, fat and thin, made a bee-line for the studio. The janitor and Mr. Printum and Mrs. Printum have all sorts of trouble and all of them finally land in the park lake.

The Dynamite Special—Bison—(Two Reels)—September 29.—Joe Brooks, the dispatcher; Jimmy, the fireman, and Ralph Carleton, the agent, and the son of the superintendent are all interested in Ruth, the pretty daughter of Bill Manville, the engineer. When Ralph's father comes to see him Joe tells him that Ruth interferes with his work, and accordingly Ralph is transferred to another station without time to tell Ruth goodbye. Carleton discharges Joe for drinking and Joe begins to think about revenge. A dynamite special is to go West the next day, and Bill and Jimmy are to pull her over. Ruth finds out from Jimmy where Ralph is and hides in an empty car on the dynamite special, clad in overalls. Here she hears Joe and Leeds plot to wreck the dynamite special and to blow up the superintendent's special at Crestmore. The men uncouple the special engine and then jump. Ruth jumps on a motorcycle, reaches the engine, shuts off the throttle and flags the supesintendent's special. Then she faints and the two fathers shake hands.

The Master Spy—(Perils of the Secret Service—(Three Reels)—September 25.—At the plea of John Gaunt, Yorke Noroy and Carson Huntley of the U. S. Secret Service undertake to get some plans into England for him. Norroy puts the plans into his driver's pockets, but when he tries to get them out is discovered. Then he strikes him quickly over the head, unhitches the horse and starts down the road at a swift pace. In an inn Norroy sees Georgio, a man whom he knows as a murderer, and threatens to expose him if he does not hide him. Georgio sends him behind a portrait, and into this room comes the Countess Irma Mailoff, who is running from her guardian and his son to join her sweetheart across the border. The son confronts her there and when she cries for help Norroy goes to her aid. He makes his way to the border in her car and finds one of his men waiting. He manages to pass the border patrol, but they see him and pursue him. He meets a band of Russian mountaineers. The peasants attacks the patrol and Norroy escapes and joins the Countess, who has met the Prince, her sweetheart.

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue 28—September 28.—Showing the spinning and weaving on the Biltmore estate of the Vanderbilts. What we eat, or the evolution of the squab, is followed by the demonstration of the bicycle speedometer. Physical exercises posed by Helen Tyler is a subject of wide interest and the apricot industry make a good subject, while a Miracle in Mud closes the reel.

Mutual Pictures

The Wreck at the Crossing—The Lost Express—(Two Reels)—October 1.—Crouching on the sloping roof of a Pullman coach, Helen sees "The Baron," "The Hare" and "The Leech" sitting near the window below her. On the table before them are the missing parts of the Thurston plans. Helen determines to destroy them. She takes a burning glass from her bag and focuses the sun's rays through the window upon the papers which curl up and are destroyed. Helen is discovered and pursued over the car roof by "The Hare." She is in the grasp of this repulsive rascal, but eludes him by jumping to the rope support of an overhead bridge guard, allowing the train to disappear beneath her and then going hand over hand to safety.

Some Nurse—(One Reel)—Comedy—October 2.—Starring Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco. Billie is the girl of Jay's dreams, but the fickle creature leaves him on the curb while she goes to ride with Jack, another suitor. Jay wanders down the street in dejection when he suddenly spies an item in a newspaper telling how a beautiful young heiress has just married a man whom she injured with her automobile. He spies Billie and Jack coming down the street with Billie at the wheel of Jack's car. He steps off the curb just in time to be struck by the machine. He is carcried into the doctor's house and put into bed. Jack, sighting a clipping which has fallen from Jay's pocket, and realizing what his rival has done, gets himself into a similar predicament and is carried into the room with Jay. Billie discovers the scheme and organizes a conspiracy with the doctor. The medic orders Jay steamed and Jack put into an ice pack. The hospital huskies have just got the treatment well started, the patients have just begun to suffer, when the doctor announces that a mistake has been made and orders the treatment reversed. The patients are finally released, and as they jump out of bed they see Billie speeding down the street in Jack's new car with the doctor at her side.

Jerry in Yodel Land—(One Reel)—Comedy—October 4.—Starring George Ovey. Jerry arrives in the Tyrol with a wallet stuffed with "moving picture money" and riding a trained and educated bicycle. He is held up by bandits and robbed of his wallet and bicycle. He succeeds in creeping away from his captors and whistling to his trusty wheel. It comes to him and he makes good his escape. He meets a gouty, retired army officer riding in a wheel chair pushed by a surly attendant. The officer is accompanied by his pretty daughter. The attendant, through carelessness, injures the old man's gouty foot and is discharged and Jerry is engaged to take his place. The bandits have, in the meantime, gone to the nearby inn to spend their ill-gotten gains and are having trouble over Jerry's bogus money. He arrives on the scene on an errand and routs the bandits. They fall in with the rascally attendant and, guided by him, make the old officer and his daughter prisoners. Jerry outwits and defeats the bandits and rescues them. He then takes the bandit chief prisoner and ties him in the wheel chair. The path is a steep one. The chair breaks away and runs off the edge of a high cliff. The chair is utterly demolished by the fall, but the chief rises unhurt from the wreckage.

JEAN DUMAR IN "GRELL MYSTERY"

Miss Jean Dumar, who will be seen in the ingenue role of "The Grell Mystery," a Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature in which Earle Williams is to be starred, won the everlasting gratitude of her studio associates and a reputation as a pastry maker last week.

When the company stopped work for lunch one day, she went with the other members to a nearby restaurant, but cautioned against taking dessert, as she had a surprise for them. Returning to the studio, she dashed to her dressing room and soon came back with a huge box. Opening it, she displayed a big chocolate layer cake, home-made by her own fair hands. Earle Williams, Denton Vane, Miriam Miles, Mabel Trunnelle, Alice Joyce and others who had been in the luncheon crowd joined in the cake party while directors Scardon and Terriss gritted their teeth at the delay thus caused. Finally, seeing there was no hope, the two bosses joined in.

KENNEDY PROMOTED

Aubrey M. Kennedy, since the middle of last winter manager of Goldwyn's studios in West Fort Lee, N. J., has been appointed to the newly created position of manager of productions, which gives him opportunity to accelerate Goldwyn's progress in the efficient production of the company's annual output of twenty-six big pictures.

As a result of Mr. Kennedy's elevation the position of business manager has been created at the studios and into this office steps H. J. Flint, a newcomer in the Goldwyn ranks, who takes over the executive and plant detail duties formerly performed by Mr. Kennedy.

Bernard Macfadden, a well-known Chicago physical culturist, is going to demonstrate his belief through the medium of the Universal Screen Magazine. In a coming issue he will show with his three-year old son the results of his theory that children trained from babyhood can be developed into health and strength prodigies.

MYRTIS MORGAN IN O. HENRYS

When the Vitagraph-General Film picture, "The Duplicity of Hargreaves," is released the public will meet a new interpreter of O. Henry characters in the person of Myrtis Morgan, who, we might remark in passing, is a grand-niece of "Raider" Dan Morgan of Civil War fame.

Myrtis Morgan, appearing in O. Henry plays.

"The Duplicity of Hargreaves" is one of the four-reel O. Henry releases. Miss Morgan plays the part of the daughter of the haughty Southern colonel whose loyalty, as well as financial embarrassment, causes him and his family to wear the clothes in vogue before the war. The action is laid in Washington.

The story is typical of O. Henry's work in its humorous turns and surprising culmination. It has been produced by Thomas R. Mills with the finesse which has marked his previous O. Henry offerings. J. Frank Glendon as Hargreaves and Miss Morgan as the courted daughter are an excellent pair for the leading parts in this story.

Chicago Notes

MANAGER WEIL of the Castle made last Sunday a "Kiddies' Day" from ten to two. Youngsters accompanied by a grownup were admitted free to view Mary Pickford in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Dick Travers is among the embryo officers at Ft. Sheridan.

Max Goldstine of Artcraft tripped up to Minneapolis on business last week.

The old Haymarket Theater was opened last week by Jos. Kessler and J. Paley with a Yiddish stock company.

The Ben Hur Theater, 306 South Cicero Avenue, has been opened by Manager Bolan.

Lee A. Ochs, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was in the city on business last week.

The Albany Theater on Montrose street, near California avenue, has been reopened by Mr. Steinberg of the National Sign Painting Company.

Aaron Jones has purchased Wm. A. Brady's big production, "The Whip," for Illinois. This will be the last picture to be shown at the Colonial.

The Ascher Brothers have booked "The Spy," "The Honor System" and "Jack and the Beanstalk," Fox Standard Pictures, for their entire circuit of theaters.

The Irving theater, Chicago's new 1800 seat house at Crawford Avenue and Irving Park Boulevard, is now running full blast. The cost of the house was about $200,000.

Exhibitors can see showings of Pathe features at 2 p. m. every Wednesday and Friday. At the same hour, every day, "Seven Pearls," the new serial, is shown.

Thomas Mieghan was in town last week to visit his better and more elusive half, Frances Ring, who is starring at the Cort Theater in "Upstairs and Down." Meighan has just signed with Lasky for another year.

In the case of the Vitagraph Company against the city in connection with "Within The Law" the film concern came out way ahead. MOTOGRAPHY has printed a complete story of the case.

Douglas Fairbanks again passed through the city last week on his way back to the film coast after having gone with a company to New York to make a few scenes for his newest play-"Reaching for the Moon."

Milton Bryer, formerly with Pathe in Detroit, has been transferred to the local office and travels northern Illinois. J. C. Reynolds now covers the Michigan and Indiana territory in the place of S. Christoph, who has joined the army.

C. B. Taylor of San Antonio, Texas, has been made assistant booker by Manager Bunn of Pathe. C. Huey now has charge of the shipping department. W. Anderson, a former salesman, is now chief booker.

The Auditorium theater, beginning September 21, is again to become a picture house. "The Eyes of the World" made by Clune, from the novel by Harold Bell Wright, begins its run there at that date with a big orchestra.

Chicago exhibitors will be interested to know that Hazel Daly, the local girl who appeared with Bryant Washburn in Essanay's "Skinner" series, has been engaged by Selig to play the leading role in "Brown of Harvard," which will be made soon at the local Selig studios.

L. C. Mann, well known by Chicago film men, has been appointed to the aviation corps at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Mr. Mann has produced a two reel film of camp life, which will be handled by the Lea Bel Company in the Schiller Building.

Klaw and Erlanger and Shubert are to furnish the attractions for the Studebaker Theater beginning October 1. A great deal of money has been spent in enlarging the stage and making other alterations in the house. Jones, Linick & Schaefer completed their lease on the house September 3.

K. M. Scoville and S. S. Straus of the Sunshine Film Corporation are in New York negotiating with a releasing organization to handle twelve Sunshine features a year. Messrs. Scoville and Straus have returned from the south where they investigated locations for a southern producing company.

Chicago's Sunshine Film Corporation announces that after October 5 it will have four companies working—all under the direction of Wm. Buckley. Three of these will be making dramatic and the fourth, comedy productions. Sunshine is now casting a seven reel feature which will be sold on state rights, entitled "The Future Generation."

"Sirens of the Sea," the six-act Jewel production, enters into second week of packed houses at the Playhouse Theater. "Sirens of the Sea" played to capacity houses last week. The story is laid in the tropics and is a water spectacle in which mermaids and water nymphs participate alluringly in aquatic pastimes.

C. W. Eckhardt, New York home office representative of the Fox Film Corporation, is holding down Jack O'Toole's place as high mogul of the Chicago Fox exchange while the genial Irishman takes a vacation. Mr. Eckhardt will remain in Chicago until Christmas.

W. R. Sheahan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, left the Windy City September 6 after several strenuous days at the local exchange. He was gladhanded by so many people that he nearly had to have his arm done up in a sling. And it was only the lucky ones who got close enough to shake hands with him at that.

Carl Laemmle arrived in town September 14 from a three weeks' visit to his coast establishment, Universal City, happy over affairs out there. Ella Hall, he explained, was still with the company. She had changed her mind about changing to another. Just now she is absent on a honeymoon vacation, having been married very recently to Emory Johnson, her leading man. Mr. Laemmle returned to New York Saturday on the Century.

Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick & Schaefer was in New York last week and arranged for the exclusive showing of "Intolerance" in Chicago. The big spectacle will first go to the Orpheum theater and will then be seen at the Ascher chain, playing three days at each house. The Orpheum, beginning October 1, will follow a split-week policy, showing big productions.

The Chicago American recently printed a picture showing the Wholesome Film Company's stars, Frank Weed and Reggie O'Neil, in connection with a story about how two detectives arrested Weed as a brother of the bandit who fought a hundred policemen after he had committed the notorious payroll robbery. The by-standers thought the arrest was a part of the story.

Dolores Cassinelli, former Essanay and Emerald star, has abandoned the picture field and will soon be heard in musical comedy. Miss Cassinelli has been signed by Madison Corey to sing the prima donna role in his new musical comedy "The Grass Widow," which opens in New York early next month. Most Chicago film men have seen Miss Cassinelli at the Reel Fellows' balls.

Charles Ziebarth, superintendent of the American Film Company factory, is a whiz at inventions.

His latest achievement is a safety device to protect life and film from two enemies, fire and dust. Mr. Ziebarth's invention is practically a fool proof affair and is arranged to automatically drop an ingeniously contrived metal cover over the boxed films in case of fire. The films, with this new arrangement are kept in metal cases away from the dust, with the exception of the one on which the operator is working.

The reorganization committee of the Reel Fellows Club held a special dinner at the Planters Hotel last Monday evening. A good sized and representative body of film men were present and plans were made for the completion of a film club for Chicago which will excel in solidity and usefulness any of the city's former organizations. A complete report will be published as soon as the plans are finished.

Harry Tague and M. Berling, respective managers of the Ashland and Madlin Theaters, West Madison street, have returned from a two weeks trip together to New York City. This was a business and pleasure trip combined. They studied amusement conditions in the east and visited the big photoplay houses to pick up new ideas in picture presentation. Both stated that the best part of the trip was the getting home, and have come back to their own theaters with new enthusiasm. "New York is a great place," said Mr. Berling, "but Chicago suits me better."

Phenomenal bookings of "The Slacker" are announced by the local Metro exchange. The big patriotic picture is still going over so strong that not a day is lost between bookings and the trouble is to supply exhibitors with the film. Four prints are being worked continuously and the only fear of the local office is that one will explode or catch fire. The 100 per cent time the film is playing has necessitated the writing in on the booking sheet of renovating days during which the celluloid is given a forced rest and cleaning.

KLEINE MAN TO WAR

J. L. Hunter, chief auditor of the George Kleine System of exchanges, is one of the latest to don a uniform. Last week he closed his desk in the George Kleine executive offices at 63 East Adams street, and left for Toronto, Canada, where he is already enrolled as a member of the Royal Flying Corps of the British army and will undergo a thorough course of training at a big aviation field before "going across."

A Canadian by birth, Mr. Hunter spent the early part of his life in the Dominion, acquired a thorough banking experience and was engaged in business at Edmonton, Alberta, when some three years ago he was summoned to New York to accept a position as assistant to Auditor F. S. Phelps, in the George Kleine offices. A year later when Mr. Phelps was made general manager, Mr. Hunter was appointed general auditor, and up till last week supervised all the expenditures of the home office and the twenty-four branches scattered throughout the principal cities of the country.
